The opening days brought telegrams from first run and neighborhood theatre managers to Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, and chairman of the New York USO Amusement, Arts, and Sports Committee. They all reported "excellent" reaction from patrons.

Victory Pledges sent Exhibitors by Paramount

Paramount last week sent Victory Pledges to the exhibitors of America to obtain wide and rapid national distribution for the company's series of four Victory films, which are being produced and distributed in cooperation with the Government and the War Activities Committee.

The pledges already have been signed by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager, and all that is necessary to complete each transaction is the exhibitor's signature. All theatres, regardless of run, will pay the same price, $1 per day per short. The shorts are available to all theatres and all intervals of clearance have been waived.

The shorts are being sold as a unit and entirely separate from the regular 1942-43 short subject program of 64 one-reel subjects. They are being produced on a non-profit basis.

First of the Paramount series, "A Letter from Bataan," is completed, and features Richard Arlen, Susan Hayward and Jimmy Lydon. The second, "We Refuse to Die," is based on the Nazi slaughter at Lidice, with Ellen Drew and Barry Sullivan, stage star. It is now in production.

The third, now in preparation, is "The Aldrich Family Gets into Scrap" with the original cast that has appeared in the feature series. The fourth will be a short based on Vice-President Wallace's recent speech on America's war aims.

Color, Music Films from Agfa

Two new developments were disclosed in part Thursday, July 23rd, at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, celebrating Agfa-Ansco's 100th year as an American company.

The developments are color film and music-on-film. The first is similar to Kodachrome, but photographers will be enabled, it is asserted, to develop the film and later to make paper prints in their darkrooms. The second process, music-on-film, is held by Agfa to have unusual interest because the emulsion is of dyes impregnated in cellophane film, therefore easier to produce and use, less susceptible to certain deleterious factors, and productive of more compactness. The name of the first process is Ansco Color; of the second, Ozaphane.

They will not be available to the general public until after the war.

Speakers at the dinner were Robert E. McConnell, president of the General Aniline and Film Corporation; Dr. Albert E. Marshall, head of its Agfa-Ansco division; Dr. Robert E. Wilson, toastmaster; Lieutenant Commander E. J. Long, Navy; Lieutenant Colonel James A. Reilly, Army; Colonel Roy M. Jones, Army; Louis Walton Sipley, American Museum of Photography; Thomas E. Brittingham, Ozalid division.

Mr. Sipley showed lantern slides, demonstrating the dissolve, fadeout, horizontal and other movements—which were used before the advent of motion pictures, it was emphasized. Three hundred attended.

Warner Dividend

Warner Bros. directors, at a meeting Monday, declared a regular quarterly dividend of 96¼ cents on the company's preferred stock. The dividend is payable September 1st to stockholders of record August 14th.

FILMS in the WAR EFFORT

Hollywood previews nine representative short subjects

Some 800 persons, representing a cross section of film makers and the 300 newspaper and magazine correspondents whose beat is Hollywood, last week got a bit of the comprehensive picture of film production being undertaken by the industry in the interests of the war effort.

Guests of the Public Relations Committee and the War Activities Committee of the industry, at a showing in the Filmarte theatre, Hollywood, they saw nine short subjects representing about every phase of shorts production for the war effort—films for Army, Navy and civilian training, both restricted and commercial, documentary and fictional.

"Vigilance," a reel sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture, Forestry Service, started the program with a pictorial appeal to Americans to exercise extreme caution to prevent forest fires. Through the War Activities Committee, it is produced without profit and distributed without charge to 15,000 theatres.

Held as representative of subjects both entertaining and thought-provoking being made by all cartoon producers, George Pal-Paramount's "Tulips Shall Grow" depicts a Holland scene over-run by the "screwball" army which is ultimately defeated.

Made for showing to both Army personnel and workers in war production plants, "The Arm Behind the Army" compares American plants with those of the Axis, and shows the ruthless forced labor system in Europe. This is described by the committee as a "war training" film, distinguishing it from those made for presentation to Army personnel only. Its special intent is "increasing the morale" in the ranks of war production workers.

Subject Cites Danger in Spreading Rumors

Using captured German film showing how France was softened by an insidious "fifth column," Warners' "Divide and Conquer" is another of the commercially distributed subjects in another phase of the industry's war shorts program. It tells of pitting minorities against one another and the creation of disruption of even armed forces by the Nazi maggots. Narrated by Knox Manning, it makes an appeal for the cessation of rumor mongering.

MGM's "Mr. Blabbermouth" is a clever concoction describing the start and growth of rumors, some started innocently enough and others planted by Nazi agents, in a large Pacific Coast city following a blackout. Incidents of false statements, opinions taken as factual by persons who repeat them, are pointed with barbed humour. Typical of this is a scene showing a subway passenger deploring our "lack of strength" on the Pacific Coast. The camera then gives a closeup of a Japanese passenger overhearing the conversation, smiling to himself and then continuing to read a book, titled: "How to Shoot Friends and Annihilate People." The script is by Walter Selden.

A Grantland Rice Sportlight, distributed by Paramount and titled "Parachute Athletes" takes the audience on a tour of the extensive training undergone by the soldiers of the air. Each step is explained, from the rigorous calisthenic toughening up process to the mass parachute descent.

An example of Walt Disney Productions' cartoon work in aiding the Navy through training films is found in "Identifying the F2A (Brewster Buffalo)," one of 25 subjects devoted to the identification of both planes and warships. Made for the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, with the aid and supervision of Naval officers stationed at the studio, the film explains how to identify the Brewster Buffalo pursuit plane through the WEFT (Wings, Engine, Fuselage, Tail) system. Action shots are used in addition to drawings.

Air Raid Warden's Duties Explained

"Your Air Raid Warden," which was produced for the Office of Civilian Defense, explains the duties of the air raid warden and the precautions taken to safeguard residents in the event of alerts and raids. This will be distributed to theatres by the War Activities Committee, having been produced at MGM. However, a three-reel version of the same picture is being distributed only for showings to air raid wardens for instruction purposes.

The showing concluded with "Combat Counter-Intelligence," a training film made under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in cooperation with the Army Signal Corps for showing to Army personnel alone to speed up training.

It warns of the serious consequences of careless talk and acts, points out that minor disobedience to orders given for the safety of troops may lead to their being wiped out. Given excellent production mounting and using name players such as John Howard and Paul Kelly, the film first warns of the dangers of carelessness and then at its conclusion shows what happened in the last war because of similar acts. Emphasized is the importance of camouflage precaution orders, with aerial photographers showing the detection of troops made possible by aerial photography after orders are disobeyed.

Total of 182 Reels Made For Army Training

The subjects generally made effective use of comprehensive stock material taken from newsreels both before and after the entry of the United States into actual conflict.

A total of 182 reels of Army training films have been made under Research Council auspices by the various studios without profit, and with writers, directors, producers and actors donating their services. The showing last week was the first overall glimpse a cross section of the production branch of the industry, as well as the press, had of the wartime effort of the motion picture in the short subjects section.

Completely restricted are the Navy training film showing the identification of the pursuit plane and the Army training film, "Combat Counter-Intelligence." With the exception of "The Arm Behind the Army," the others are straight commercial pictures, or are distributed through the agency of the War Activities Committee of the industry to every theatre in the country.

Since the first of the year, the Army training films have been sent to England to aid in the training of British troops and, in Spanish and Portuguese versions, to South American armed forces.

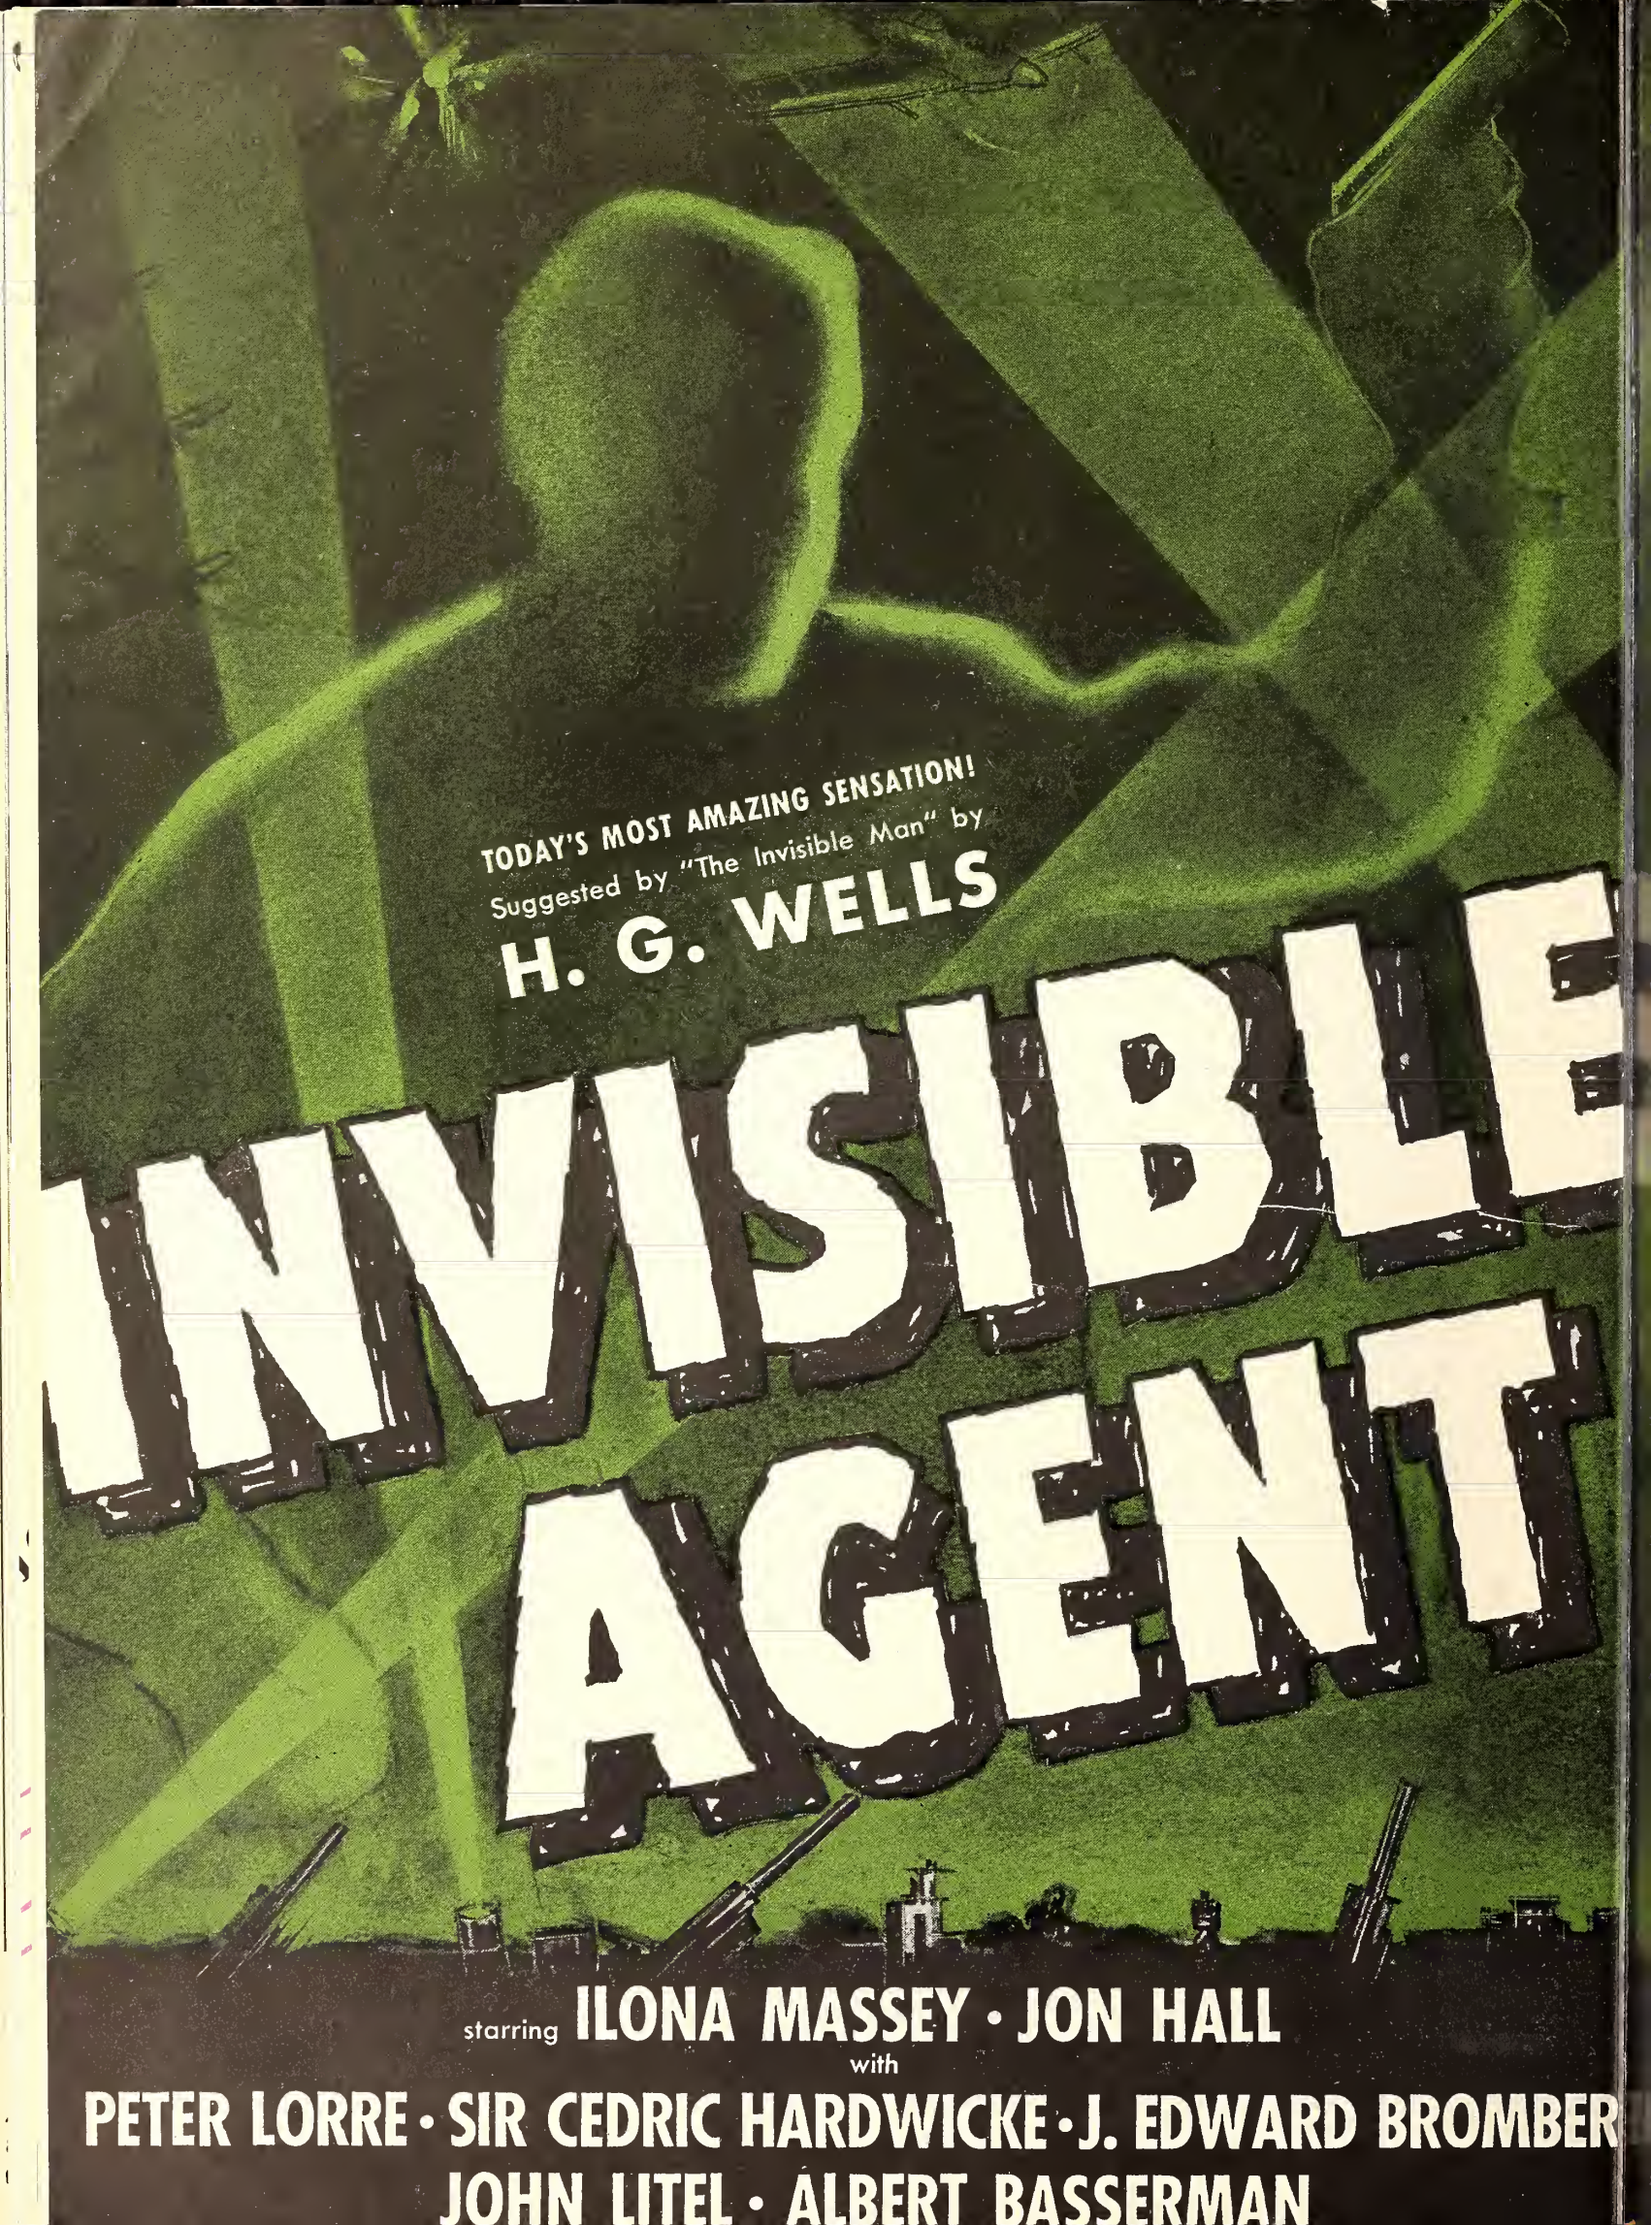
The only side of the American industry's war effort shorts activities not shown last week was the Spanish and the Portuguese language shorts for exclusive distribution in South America. These are made under the auspices of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and its Hollywood division, the Motion Picture Society for the Americas.

Helprin Succeeds Ben Washer

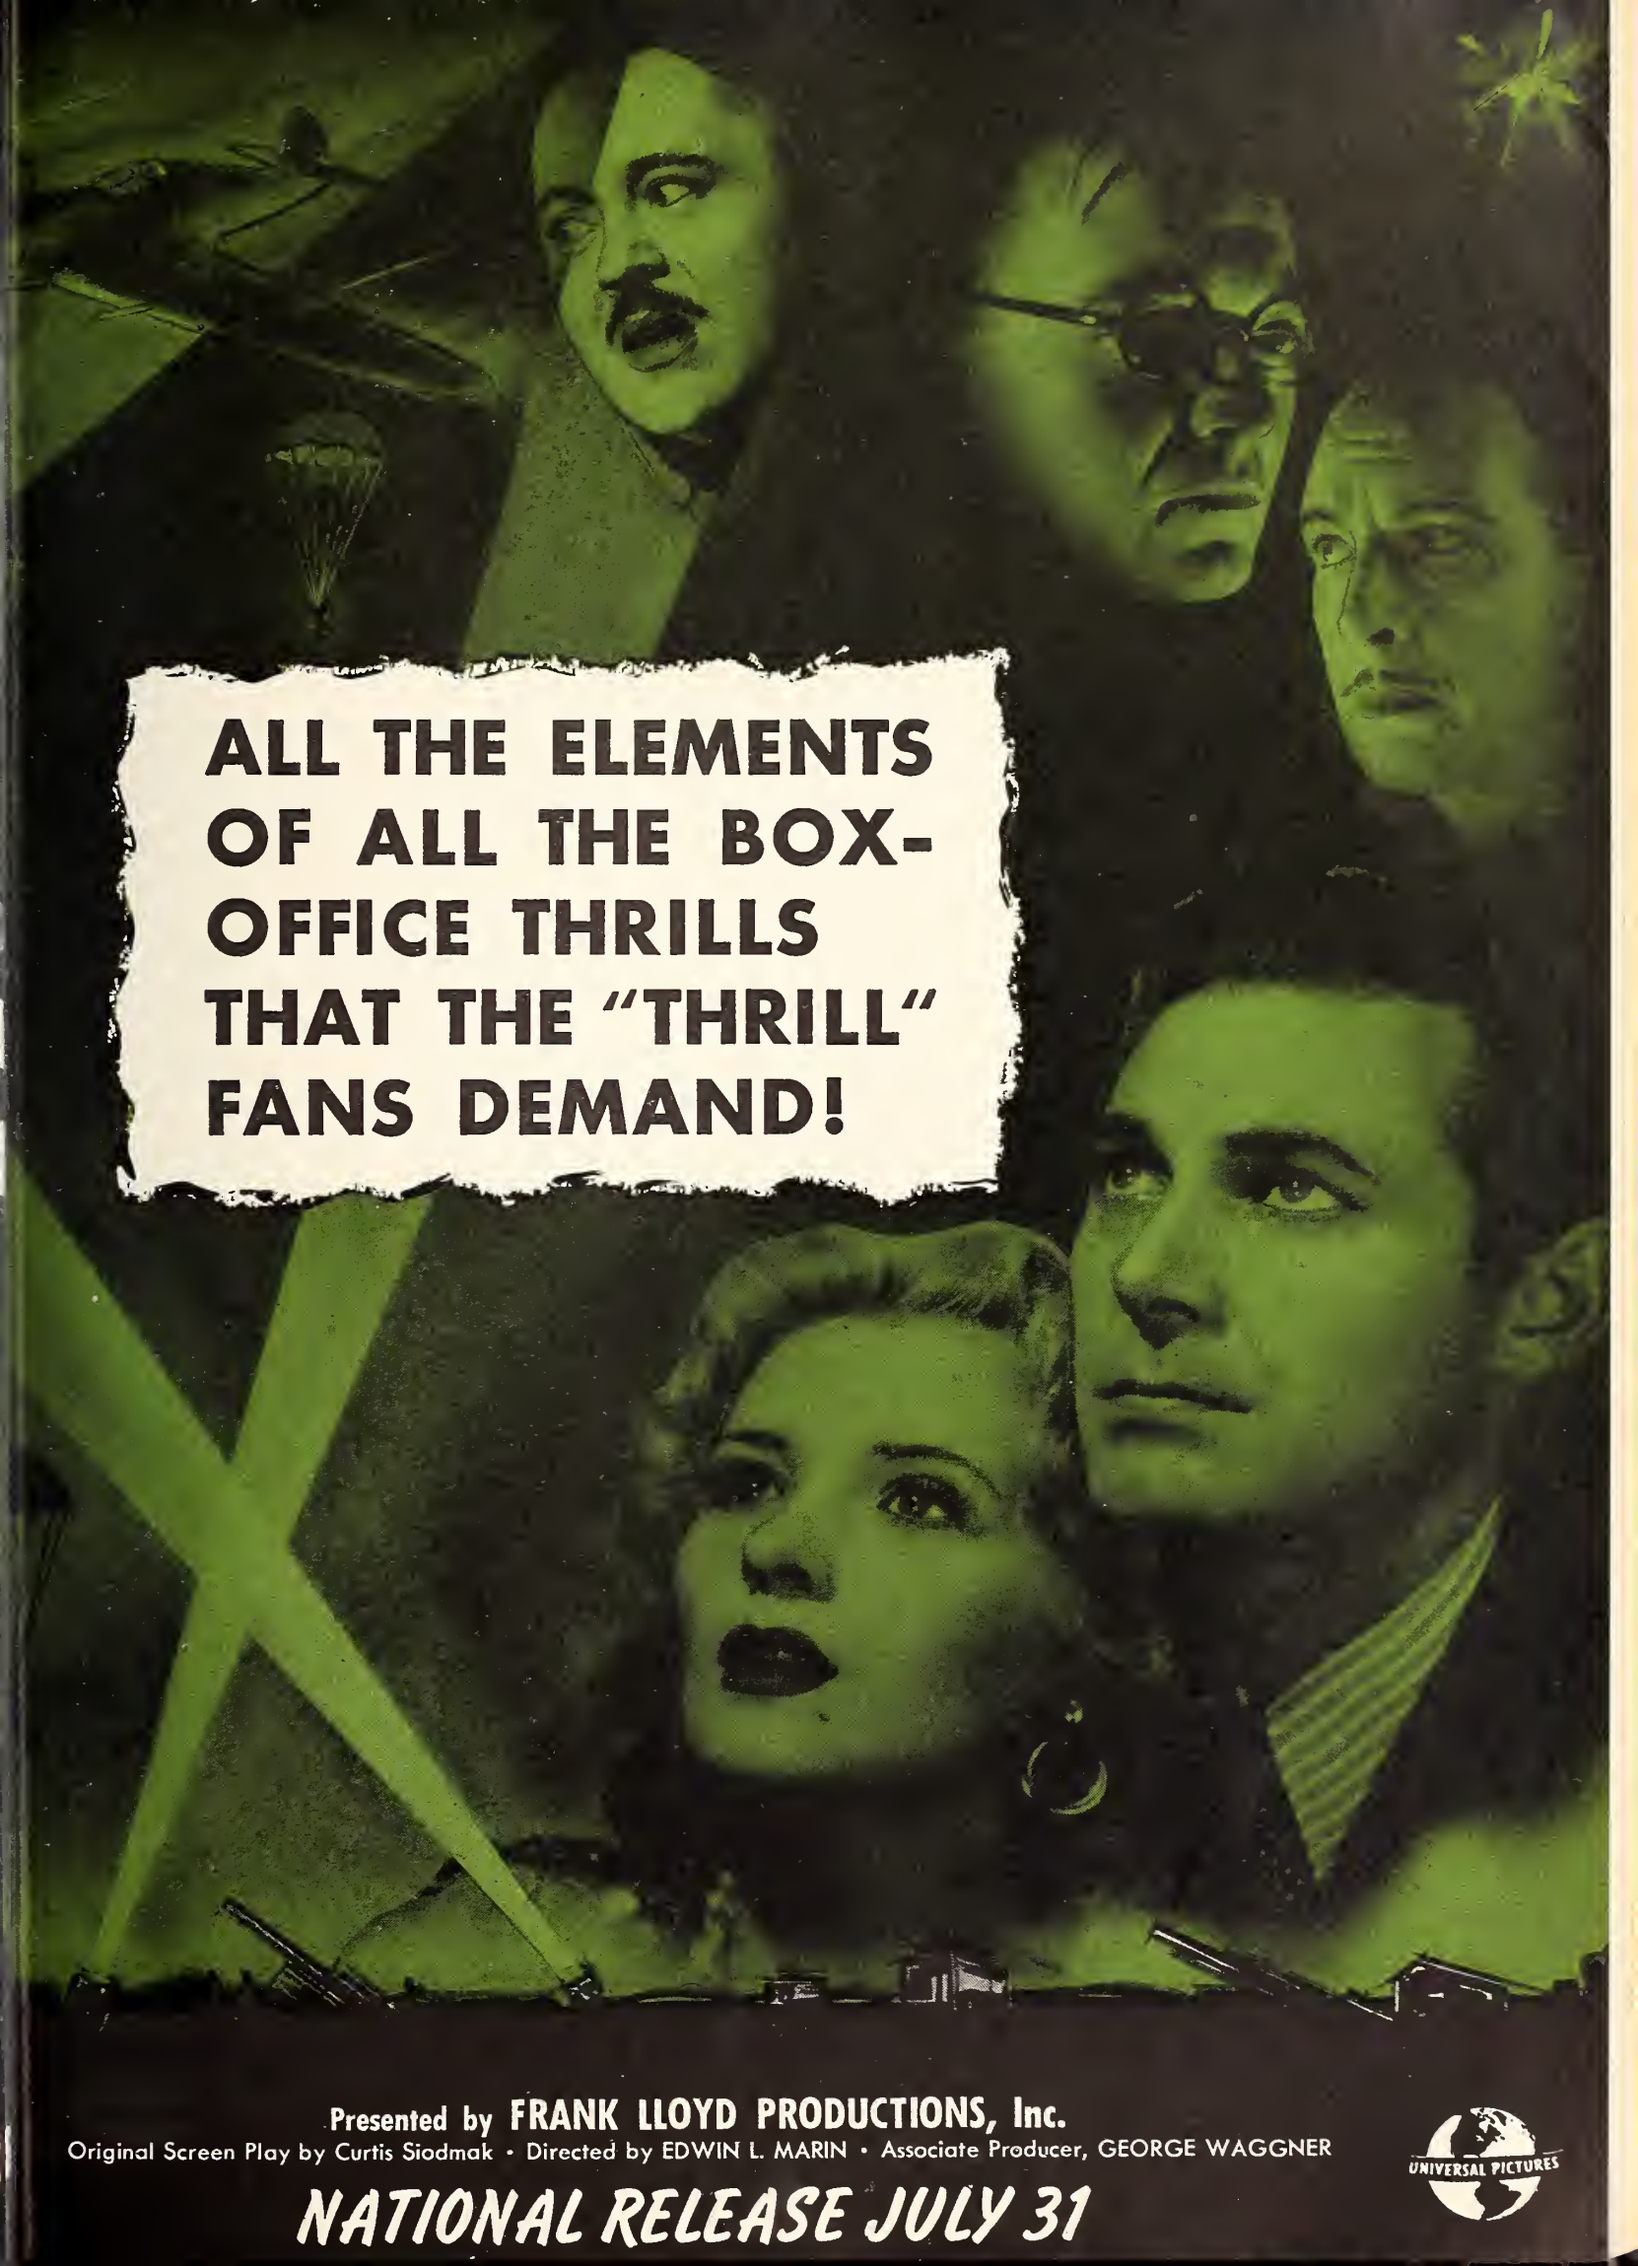
Samuel Goldwyn this week appointed Morris Helprin his advertising and publicity representative in the east, succeeding Ben Washer, who has been inducted into the Army. Mr. Helprin plans to continue his play production activities in conjunction with the Goldwyn post, with a production of "Murder in a Nunnery," by Emmett Lavery, scheduled for Broadway in the autumn.

Before joining the Goldwyn organization, Mr. Helprin was with Sir Alexander Korda as advertising and publicity representative. He was also head of publicity for United Artists and was assistant motion picture editor of the New York Times.

Goldwyn Is Host



Samuel Goldwyn was host in Chicago last week to local sport figures and writers and theatre executives at a luncheon at the Blackstone Hotel. The affair was in connection with the opening of "The Pride of the Yankees" at the Palace theatre in that city. Among theatre men present were Mort Singer, Tom Gorman, Walter Immerman, W. K. Hollander, Jack Kirsch, Edward Silverman and Sol Schwartz.



Pageant in Theatre

Occupation of Atlantic City's Convention Hall has made it necessary for the sponsors of the Miss America Beauty Pageant to look elsewhere. As a result, the beauty spectacle has been moved into a film house, the judging events and shows to be staged during Labor Day week at the Warner theatre.

Seidman Promoted

Lloyd Seidman, an account executive with Donahue and Coe for several years, has been elected a vice-president of the agency.

Theatres' Aid sought in Scrap Collection

WPB urges Cooperation of Entire Industry as Scrap Matinees are set

American theatres not only have aided the armed forces, the U.S.O., the Army and Navy emergency relief funds, and the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. They also, beginning months before the war, have been collectors of aluminum, tin cans, paper and rubber.

These collections have been voluntary—part of the desire to aid the nation's war effort.

Last week came official recognition of the theatres' value as community centers, from the War Production Board. The Board, beginning a national drive for scrap rubber, metals, fats, and other scarce materials, announced through spokesmen that theatres would play an important part.

It urged every theatre owner to cooperate with local salvage organizations. It asked cooperation from the production and distribution branch of the film industry. Studios, theatres and exchanges were told to scour their premises for materials which may be salvaged.

It did not set down a specific program for theatres because, its spokesmen noted, the theatres and the industry in general has been of so much assistance in so many ways, that directions from Washington are "unnecessary."

Scrap Matinees Are Planned

Nebraska exhibitors have been reminded of their ability to aid the scrap drive by the War Activities local committee, headed by Joseph Jacobs, Columbia manager, and Joseph Kinsky, Tri-States circuit district manager.

Plans drawn last week call for speakers in each theatre, and a special matinee before August 8th. The admission price will be 10 pounds of scrap rubber or metal.

Philadelphia area exhibitors, numbering 125, representing a majority of theatres there, met Monday at the Broadwood Hotel, and were urged by Judge Herbert Goodrich to run a "scrap matinee" before August 10th. Children bringing three pounds of scrap would be admitted free. A committee for the matinee is headed by Sidney Samuelson and Lewen Pizor.

Rubber salvage efforts in the Balaban & Katz theatres, Chicago, through a drive conducted by William Johnson, maintenance, superintendent, have resulted in the accumulation of 2,428 pounds, it has been announced by the company.

Salvage consisted mostly of old lobby mats and street runners, rubber tiles, worn-out vacuum cleaner hose, machinery foundation rubber, cuspidor mats, chair pads and worn-out rubber from seat cushions and arm rests. The managers of the Balaban & Katz circuit are now engaged in a metal salvage drive and expect to gather from 15 to 20 tons.

Shifting population on account of war work has affected theatre attendance to a considerable degree in the Carolinas, according to theatre owners there.

The Carolinas have been the center of the Army maneuvres in the southeast; and where the soldiers spend their weekends the theatres do a large business. But, long before the maneuvres began early in July, theatre attendance was made lean in those cities and towns of the Carolinas where there were no big war work plants, or far removed from training camps such as Sutton and Fort Bragg. Hundreds of young men and women left for the war work plants.

Chicago Blackout To Be Held Shortly

Chicago shortly will undergo its first city-wide blackout. Theatre executives have been conferring with Hubbard Shattuck, Office of Civilian Defense director for theatres and public buildings.

In the east, a blackout covering New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania is expected. More than 27,000,000 persons would be affected.

Many of the Lucas and Jenkins circuit's Georgia theatres have purchased special recordings for warning patrons that a blackout is imminent.

Some 245 theatres in the Los Angeles territory are being inspected by exhibitors and studio executives charged with insuring proper theatre precautions.

Owners, managers and picked staff members of all Louisville theatres have completed Red Cross first aid courses, and have qualified as block air raid wardens, according to H. R. Switow, of the Louisville Theatre Owners' Association.

Detroit theatres have put their war efforts in charge of a War Activities Board, chairman of which is David Idzal, managing director of the Fox theatre. Other members are Edward Beatty, president of the Butterfield circuit; Earl Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres; Edward C. Heiber, Universal manager; Edgar Kirchner, manager of the Family and Kramer theatres, and Carl Buermele, general manager of the Cooperative circuit.

Theatre Aids in Air Raid Test

The Olympic theatre, Providence, was chosen for an "incident" in the city's recent daylight air raid test, its first. The theatre was "bombed"; five were "killed"; a hearse took away the "bodies"; fire engines laid hose into the house to quench the "fire"; the "injured" were treated, and carted away in station wagon ambulances.

Under discussion by several Pittsburgh exhibitors is the possibility of staying open through the late night and early morning, due to changing industrial and business habits caused by increased war production schedules in the district's industrial plants. Some stores, banks, roller rinks, bowling alleys and restaurants likewise are considering changed or extended opening hours.

Night business downtown was expected to perk up with theatres as well as retailers and other kinds of firms, when Golden Triangle stores begin a schedule of 12 noon to 9 P.M. every Monday. Patterning its revised hours on the first day of the week after examples set in Cleveland, Akron, Indianapolis and other cities that report increased trade on the night stores are open, the retailers and amusement house owners expect Monday to be changed from one of the week's worst business days to one of the best.

ST. LOUIS OWNERS WON'T COLLECT SCRAP

St. Louis theatre owners will not aid the national salvage campaign. They charge the distributors will not give them, free of charge, pictures suitable for the special events they would produce for the campaign, according to Fred Wehrenberg, president of the local Motion Picture Theatre Owners, on Monday. He added plans for theatres as special collection agencies were cancelled after it was reported some film companies were persuaded only with considerable difficulty to give pictures free for a special war stamp matinee.

Krellberg, Rogers Set Picture on Norway

Sherman S. Krellberg, producer, and Budd Rogers, eastern representative of several Hollywood production units, will produce "Wings for Norway," with the story concerning Norway's betrayal by 'ts Quislings and the beginning of the fight for freedom by its unconquered people.

Working with Hans Olav, counselor for the Royal Norwegian Embassy in Washington, the producers are receiving official cooperation. This includes, it was said, not only the furnishing of actual fact and incident as material, but permission to shoot a number of sequences at restricted locales, including "Little Norway" in Canada. Michael Young, English playwright, wrote the screenplay. Negotiations are under way with two companies for release of the picture.

MGM Signs Five Name Bands

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week signed five name bands for appearances in six forthcoming musicals. The groups signed were those of Harry James, Tommy Dorsey, Vaughn Monroe, Jimmy Dorsey and Bob Crosby. Only assignment thus far is Tommy Dorsey and band in "DuBarry Was a Lady."

Stanton Reopens

The Stanton theatre, Warner Bros. first-run house in Philadelphia, has reopened following redecoration. All Warner first-run houses in Philadelphia are now operating with the exception of the Aldine, which will remain closed for the summer.

VAUDEVILLE, SWING BANDS SAVE SUMMER CLOSING

Orchestra Bookings gain 30–40% Over Last Year; Stage Boom in Midwest

An increase of 30 to 40 per cent this summer over last year in booking of top-ranking "swing" and "sweet" orchestras into motion picture theatres is reported this week by bookers of Paramount, RKO and other circuits and representatives of such talent agencies as William Morris, General Amusement and Music Corp. of America in New York. For the first time in years, film houses in key cities which ordinarily closed for the summer reopened this year, operating on a picture-vaudeville combination policy. Better grosses are reported nationwide.

Increased theatre engagements of popular orchestras are indicative of the better conditions generally this summer of film box offices in key cities, resulting from gasoline rationing, the tire shortage, war industry activity and other factors reported by both circuit and independent exhibitors in industrial areas throughout the country.

Talent agents and bookers agree that gasoline rationing, tire shortage, influx of workers to war industry centers, more money available for recreation, good weather and a great number of servicemen on leave flocking to key city theatres are some of the factors involved in the increased bookings of orchestra and variety attractions in film houses.

Several in New England Are Open This Summer

According to Harry Romm of General Amusement Corp., "this is the first summer I have ever known a shortage of name bands. The successful policy is a combination of top orchestra plus a name personality with a good film feature. Picture product this summer has been much better than that of previous years. Grosses this year are greater in general," he said, adding, "of course, the better the attraction, both on stage and screen, the greater the box office."

Edward Alperson, head of RKO theatres, reported that the circuit had increased booking in the mid-west, around Davenport, Cedar Rapids and adjacent areas, and that RKO houses in Providence, Kansas City and Cleveland, which were closed last summer, opened this year with a picture and live talent policy.

At the Paramount home office, Harry Levine, chief booker for the circuit, declared that "booking into Paramount houses of name bands is better than last summer." Among the Paramount theatres currently featuring popular orchestra and variety bills are: Shea's, Buffalo; Michigan, Detroit; Chicago, Chicago, and the circuit houses in Boston, Toledo, Omaha and Minneapolis.

According to a spokesman for Music Corp. of America, "the increase in booking this year has been country-wide. The Palace in Cleveland and Circle in Indianapolis, two houses which formerly closed down during the summer, reopened this year with film-vaudeville attractions, as did the Paramount and RKO houses in Boston. In New England, independently owned theatres such as the Metropolitan, Providence; Plymouth, Worcester, and State, Hartford, in addition to two Loew-Poli houses in Waterbury and Bridgeport, all of which usually shut down for the summer, are operating this year and are billing name bands with feature pictures."

"More booking in the mid-west this year than ever before," was the report this week from a representative of the William Morris agency in New York, "principally around Kansas City, Omaha, Minneapolis and Chicago. Booking in the east remains about the same as last year, with a noticeable increase in industrial cities of New England."

Among the name bands which are drawing the younger people into theatres this summer, according to observers, are: Sammy Kaye, Eddie Duchin, Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Ozzie Nelson, Paul Whiteman, Jimmy Dorsey, Count Basie, Emil Coleman, Al Donahue, Vincent Lopez, Duke Ellington, Ray Heatherton, Vaughn Monroe and Enoch Light, Glenn Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra, Woody Herman, Will Osborne, Charlie Spivak, Claude Thornhill and Jerry Wald.

CAPITOL, ROXY MAY JOIN "SWING" PARADE

Swing bands, ever popular with that portion of film audiences known as "jitterbugs," have hit a new peak in drawing the customers to motion picture box offices this summer, according to circuit bookers and talent agents. One indication of the rising tide of their popularity, it was reported last week, is that the Capitol theatre on Broadway, for years MGM's principal showcase in New York, may inaugurate a name band policy this autumn. It is also understood that the Roxy, now under new management, with A. J. Balaban at the helm, may change its stage policy sufficiently to feature top-ranking swing orchestras.

Midwest Trend is to Name Bands

from CHICAGO BUREAU

For the past few months more stage shows have played in motion picture theatres of Illinois and the adjacent states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa and Indiana than have played in those states in many years. The trend of entertainment is towards name bands or personalities with radio or juke box reputations. Some of the theatres have profited with straight vaudeville bills and units such as "Funzafire" with Bonnie Baker, Major Bowes' units and "The Gay 90's Revue."

At present the Great States circuit is playing shows in 19 of their theatres located in Rockford, Peoria, Joliet, Decatur, Waukegan, Quincy, Kankakee, Elgin, Wood River, Springfield, Aurora, Danville, Streator, Bloomington and Galesburg, all in Illinois, and South Bend, Marion and Evansville, Indiana, and Toledo, Ohio. From September 1, 1940, until August 1, 1941, the circuit played 142 bands, vaudeville and unit shows and 18 legitimate shows, a total of 160 shows. From September 1, 1941, to August 1, 1942, 170 stage shows and 34 legitimate attractions have been booked with an increase of 100 playing days.

The Alliance Circuit started using stage shows in six of their houses this season, and the results toward increasing their mid-week business have been very satisfactory, according to officials of the company. During the past nine months the circuit has used such bands as Clyde McCoy, Lawrence Welk, Ted Weems, Blue Barron, Henry Busse, Tony Pastor, Tiny Hill, among others at their Fond du Lac theatre, Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, and five Indiana houses, the Roxy, Peru; State, Logansport; Sipe, Kokomo; Roxy, Frankfort, and New Moon, Vincennes. Bookings average one every two weeks at these spots.

Four Mort Singer Circuit houses have been playing stage shows, more or less regularly this season. Sometimes they are booked three in a row, according to the availability of box office attractions, and then none for six weeks or so. The circuit has used approximately 10 per cent more stage shows this season than last at their Orpheum theatre, Minneapolis; Orpheum, Davenport, Iowa; Iowa, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Orpheum, Sioux City, Iowa.

Butterfield Circuit Using Stage Shows

The Butterfield Circuit is using stage attractions in 10 of its Michigan houses. According to Boyle Woolfolk, Chicago, who books the stage shows for the chain, there has been a 30 per cent increase in play dates this season over the same period last year. Name bands and units have been played in the past few months in the Michigan theatre, Muskegon; State, Kalamazoo; Keith, Grand Rapids; Michigan, Lansing; Capitol, Flint; Temple, Saginaw; Oakland, Pontiac; Michigan, Ann Arbor; Michigan, Jackson, and Bijou theatre, Battle Creek.

Warner and Standard Theatres Company theatres in Wisconsin are using stage shows every other week this season against one a month previously. They have proved an excellent stimulant to middle of the week business, according to Charles Hogan, who books the shows from Chicago, and are the only attractions that have been a satisfactory substitute for the business formerly drawn by Bank Nights, he says. Theatres on Hogan's book include the Bay, Green Bay; Oshkosh, Oshkosh; Kenosha, Kenosha; Venetian, Racine; Sheboygan, Sheboygan; Rio, Appleton; Capitol, Madison, and Capitol, Manitowoc, all in Wisconsin. The Warner circuit also is using stage shows every Saturday and Sunday at the Stratford theatre, Chicago, and every Sunday at the Paramount theatre, Hammond, Indiana.

The State theatre, Benton Harbor, Michigan, a new 800-seat house operated by Julius Fodor, and managed by Jack Linder, former New York vaudeville agent, is booking stage shows.

U. S. MOVES TO HALT PETRILLO BAN ON MAKING OF RECORDS

Justice Department to file Anti-Trust Action; sees Threat to Broadcasting

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

James Caesar Petrillo is now bucking the United States Government. The new opposition to the American Federation of Musicians' president developed late last week. The Department of Justice moved to enjoin the union from banning record manufacture by musician members. The Federal Communications Commission decided to investigate the "ban," announced some weeks ago, and to become effective Saturday.

Tuesday, Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, wrote Mr. Petrillo that his action was contrary to a December pledge of "music for morale," and that, by forcing small stations to close, it would hamper dissemination for war information. He added that it was Mr. Petrillo's "patriotic duty" to withdraw the ban.

Long a dictator on matters musical, Mr. Petrillo may find the anti-trust laws a more difficult hurdle than the opposition of the National Broadcasting Company, whose earlier acquiescence in his demand that a performance of a Michigan high school orchestra should not be broadcast precipitated a complaint by Senator Vandenburg of Michigan to the FCC.

Both the Department and the Commission felt that Petrillo's edicts threatened the security of broadcasting at a time when it was performing its greatest service to the nation.

That Government officials did not consider his orders to be patriotic was definitely intimated by Attorney General Biddle in announcing that he had authorized the injunction, and who pointed out that if electrical transcriptions are eliminated small stations in small towns and rural areas will be unable to handle various sustaining war programs essential to maintenance of civilian morale and which are broadcast without charge.

Ruling Seen Affecting Many Activities

On the same day, Thursday, July 23rd, that the Government moved to enjoin Mr. Petrillo from carrying out his threat to halt the making of transcriptions by union members, James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, disclosed that his commission had asked both the labor leader and Niles Trammell, president of NBC, for their respective versions of the cancellation of the high school program, and announced that the commission staff had been instructed to prepare a program for a broader study into other musical problems as they affect radio broadcasting.

Earlier in the week, Commissioner Fly expressed fears that the ban on transcriptions would drive many small stations off the air, a feeling shared by the Department of Justice.

"The objective of the American Federation of Musicians is to create more work for its members in an industry where mechanical improvements have made the hiring of 'live' talent partially unnecessary," the Department explained in announcing its intention to file an injunction suit under the anti-trust laws. "It is the Department's contention that such a 'made work' program places an unjust economic burden upon those making use of mechanical improvements and that it has two marked advantages in promoting the selfish interest of the union—(1) in times of unemployment, it forces employers and the consuming public to pay for a private system of unemployment relief, and (2) in times of rising employment, it relieves members of the union from the competitive necessity of learning how to do a different kind of job.

"In the opinion of the deparatment, such a policy is unjust both to labor and the public since, by keeping costs high, demand is limited, and since it places a severe burden on the public through unnecessarily increased costs."

Sees Small Stations Forced to Close

"Such stations will be forced out of business," it was declared, "since many of them are located in towns too small to provide an adequate supply of musical talent even if they could hire all the musicians needed to provide the normal proportion of music on the station schedule, which none are able to do."

Mr. Davis' letter to Mr. Petrillo was written "in behalf of" the "people of the United States" and their war agencies. After citing the dependency of small stations upon transcriptions, it stated:

"Since, as you say yourself, 'music is today one of the finest media for maintaining high public morale,' the elimination of records for home use, for use in restaurants, canteens and soda parlors where members of the armed forces go for recreation, and for use in factories where war workers use juke boxes for organized relaxation, can scarcely fail to have a negative effect on morale."

Meanwhile, Mr. Petrillo's dispute with station KSTP, St. Paul, which resulted in his order that no National Broadcasting Company dance band programs be "piped" to that station, continued to smoulder; and the KSTP president, Stanley Hubbard, charged last week the union is trying to "wreck an industry." The dispute started in disagreement over a contract between the station and the St. Paul musicians' local.

There was speculation this week over the date and place for the filing of the Government suit. It was thought the suit would be filed either in Chicago or New York.

At Kansas City about 100 front office employees from film exchanges after meeting with Felix Snow, vice-president of the IATSE, this week weighed his proposal for the organization of a union. Several applications were filed at once and a large number of the group took the union plan unedr advisement without committing themselves.

Local 306 Dismissal Motion Denied

Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard in New York last week denied a motion for dismissal of the Loew circuit's suit for an injunction against Local 306, New York projectionists' local.

The union had threatened to strike if the circuit's parent company continued to distribute films to theatres employing non-member projectionists. It was an attempt completely to organize New York, and started last summer. The suit was filed late in 1941.

Loew's asserted in the injunction petition that its 65 theatres in the New York area would face a loss of $400,000 weekly if the union struck. It also cited the Federal consent decree provisions barring withholding of product from any theatres.

Judge Goddard remarked the union pursued legitimate objectives in seeking higher wages and better working conditions. But, of the disputed demand, he commented, "the union then saw fit to inject a demand in their proposed contract which had nothing whatever to do with the terms and conditions of the employment of these men."

He added: "It is in the nature of a reverse secondary boycott, where the union, instead of attempting to coerce the retailer who carries non-union goods, here attempts to coerce the distributor of union goods to stop furnishing said materials to non-union customers.

The union was ordered to file an answer to the Loew charges. The union indicated this week that it may appeal the judge's decision.

Local 109 Signing Four Companies

Local 109 of the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, CIO, on Tuesday also signed contracts with Loew's, Twentieth Century-Fox, and RKO and Columbia. The contracts cover clerical employees in the home offices. They were signed in the New York law office of Wendell Willkie, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox. A contract covering Columbia employees was signed Monday.

The union also is seeking contracts for such workers at the National Screen Service home office and New York exchange, in the New York exchanges of the major companies and at the Paramount and United Artists home offices.

The Screen Publicists Guild, comprising advertising and publicity workers in the home offices, and also a CIO union, was to meet with Warner officials Friday on a contract. The Guild had obtained contracts from all the other leading distributors.

RULES GRIFFITH THEATRES MUST BUY SEPARATELY

Exhibitor wins Specific Run Complaint Against All 5 in Oklahoma City

An exhibitor won a specific run complaint for the second time this week when an Oklahoma City arbitrator ordered the consenting distributors to license 10 Griffith circuit theatres in Tulsa on separate contracts.

Acting on the complaint of John E. Feeney, operator of the Gem and Cozy theatres in Tulsa, Breck, Moss, arbitrator, prohibited "All Five" from hereafter licensing their features in either or any of the 10 Griffith Southwestern Theatres, Inc., houses on the fifth run requested by the Gem and the sixth requested by the Cozy other than separate contract. These separate agreements are not to be part of any circuit buying deal, or conditioned upon contracts for any other house.

Costs were assessed against the distributors.

After reviewing the competitive situation in Tulsa, and observing that the Feeney houses had been in operation for many years and had at times held second and third run positions, Mr. Moss found that in the past season the distributors had first offered every group of pictures to the Griffith circuit "for all of the runs it wanted (usually 10)." What was left after Griffith had made its choice was offered to the Gem and Cozy, he found.

Griffith Varied Runs of Tulsa Houses

The circuit varied the runs which its 10 Tulsa theatres played. "By this plan the Gem and Cozy were placed in a much lower run position than the fifth and sixth runs, respectively, as requested in their complaint," he said.

"There has been an arbitrary refusal" by the distributors to license on the runs requested by the Feeney theatres, he found. This was so, he continued, because of the Griffith theatres' circuit buying power and affiliation with more than 300 theatres in the United States.

All the conditions of the decree in regard to conditions which must be met by a Section X complaint were found to exist, and warranted an award directing separate contracts for the circuit houses. This will have the effect of prescribing the run which each theatre in the Griffith circuit in Tulsa shall play. Previously it could exhibit features in any of its theatres without regard to run position, Mr. Moss found.

The total revenue to distributors, from the evidence presented, does not appear likely to be effected, Mr. Moss added. The burden of proving that it might had not been carried by the distributors' evidence, he said.

The Gem and Cozy actions, filed separately as Oklahoma City's second and third cases, were combined at the hearings. Seven hearings were held and the arbitrator, making the longest inspection journey yet authorized by all parties, visited the Tulsa theatres.

Oklahoma City

Jacob Jones, operator of the Ritz theatre, Shawnee, Okla., on July 23rd filed a specific run action under Section X against RKO. In the complaint entered at the Oklahoma tribunal Mr. Jones, who has operated the theatre since 1915, asserted that RKO since September, 1941, had refused to sell him sufficient first run product "of the nature and quantity" required to keep his theatre in profitable operation.

RKO, Mr. Jones charged, had sold away from him to the Griffith Amusement Company, contrary to Section X of the decree. The Ritz, he asserted had been able to obtain only 12 first run RKO pictures since last September. All were Griffith rejects. At least one first run picture a week is required to maintain the Ritz' policy, he said. The Griffith company's Bison, Criterion and Avon theatres, all in Shawnee, were cited. It was the fourth Oklahoma City case.

New York

The 34th New York case, a clearance action of Louis Martin, operating the Majestic theatre in Paterson, N. J., was dismissed on Thursday by Samuel W. Tannenbaum, arbitrator.

In dismissing the case Mr. Tannenbaum held that no contractual relations existed between the complainant and the five defendant distributors in that the theatre played their pictures on a "spot booking" basis.

The demand by Mr. Martin sought "the arbitration of any and all clearance and right to play the product of defendants day and date with the State theatre, Paterson, under Section VIII of the decree."

At issue, Mr. Tannenbaum said, was the question of whether the contractual relationship contemplated by Section VIII existed under spot booking. The relationship contemplated by the decree, he said, "would appear to be a course of conduct existing for some reasonable period of time proximate to the dates complained of."

A complaint against the inability to obtain pictures would have to be filed under Section VI, he said, accepting motions to dismiss presented by distributors' counsel. Costs were divided among all parties.

An appeal in the award of Robert Bruce in the 23rd New York case restricting the clearance of the Apollo theatre over the Cameo in Jersey City, N. J. was filed last week by RKO.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee's first specific run complaint, and the city's third case, has been filed by the Menasha Theatre Realty Company, operating the Brin theatre, Menasha, Wis. naming all five distributors, and the Neenah theatre, also in Menasha. The complaint was entered June 25th but returned to attorneys for resubmission in proper form.

It asserted that Twentieth Century-Fox refused to license any first run in Menasha to the complainant; that MGM refused to license half its product on this run, and that Warners and RKO refused to license all and half their pictures, respectively, on second run after the Neenah.

Albany

Arbitrators and hearing dates have been set at Albany for the three actions by William Smalley against "All Five" and the Schine circuit. They are Albany cases 5, 6 and 7.

Harold B. Slingerman, Delmar attorney, will hear the action of Smalley's Delhi, N. Y. theatres, case 7, on August 17th. Joseph J. Casey, Albany lawyer, will hear the sixth case, for Smalley's Johnstown on August 18th.

Chicago

The Oriental theatre case No. 6, scheduled for rehearing on July 28th, has now been set for September 9th, by agreement.

The Annetta theatre, Cicero, Ill., clearance case, No. 12, has been postponed from August 4th until September 15th. No reason was given for the deferment.

San Francisco

Twentieth Century-Fox Monday appealed the award to Murray Draper in the fifth San Francisco case granting clearance reduction to the Cerrito theatre in El Cerrito, Cal.

Clearance Between Intervenors Unfair, Appeal Board Holds

The Appeal Board modified the award of William A. Wiedersheim, Philadelphia arbitrator, on Tuesday, acting on the appeal of the complainant, Lewen Pizor, for his Tioga theatre. It ordered Paramount to grant a maximum of 21 days clearance over the Tioga to the Warner circuit's Strand in North Philadelphia. The judges directed that clearances of the Strand over the Keystone, the Keystone over the Great Northern and the Great Northern over the Tioga be sufficiently short as not to restrict the right of the Tioga to exhibit 21 days after the Strand.

In overruling the award of Mr. Wiedersheim, which set a 25-day maximum, the board found the Tioga now is subject to three clearances aggregating 21 days in addition to the time taken by the Great Northern and Keystone to play and book. This was declared unreasonable as there is no competition between Tioga and Keystone and a clearance to Keystone over the Great Northern should not have the effect of extending the non-competing complainant's waiting time. Costs were divided equally. It was the Appeal Board's 30th opinion.

'Miniver' gets Ninth Week at Music Hall

Continuing to establish a long-run record at Radio City Music Hall, New York, "Mrs. Miniver" began its ninth week at that theatre on Thursday. Prior to the MGM feature, which began its run on June 4th, no film had run more than six weeks in the 10-year history of the theatre. Total attendance figure as of late Wednesday was 1,200,907.

During the eighth week ended Wednesday the management reported an attendance of 140,200 and a gross of about $97,000.

MGM reports that not only in New York but throughout the country "Mrs. Miniver" has beaten attendance records on "Gone With the Wind." In key cities where the two pictures have played the same theatre on the same policy, the film version of Jan Struther's novel shows a marked lead. In St. Louis, according to the distributor, attendance for three weeks, totaling 159,860, was 16,614 ahead of the David O. Selznick production.

Prices for "Mrs. Miniver" were raised at Loew's Century, Baltimore, from 44 to 55 cents.

'Miniver' Opens In Hollywood

"Mrs. Miniver" had its west coast premiere at the Carthay Circle theatre, Hollywood, last Thursday night. Proceeds of the opening were donated to the Voluntary Army Canteen. The audience included Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer, Gen. Maxwell Murray and Mrs. Murray, Lt. James Stewart, Greer Garson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Arnold, Lieut. Col. Jack Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. DeMille, Mary Pickford and Norma Shearer.

The picture held for fifth weeks at Cincinnati, Cleveland and St. Louis, and third weeks in Richmond, Houston, Memphis, Providence, Syracuse, Oklahoma City, Nashville, New Orleans, Denver, Atlanta, Louisville and Kansas City.

The Canadian Government announced last week that official endorsement will be given to the MGM film during its Canadian engagements. "Mrs. Miniver" opens shortly at Loew's in Toronto.

Heavy rainfall on Monday in New York and the metropolitan area did not prevent Broadway first run theatres from doing strong business. Weekend receipts fell off, it was learned, due to the extremely high humidity in the city. According to police estimates, 3,000,000 New Yorkers visited city beaches on Sunday.

Holdovers for the week include:

"Priorities on Parade," Paramount: began its second and final week at the Paramount, New York, on Wednesday.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros.: started its 10th week at the Hollywood, New York, on Friday.

"The Big Shot," Warner Bros.: held a second week at the Strand, New York.

"Eagle Squadron," Universal: now in its fifth week at the Globe, New York.

"This Above All," 20th-Fox: following its nine-week run at the Astor, was held over a second week at the Roxy, New York.

"Syncopation," RKO: held a second week at the Music Hall, Seattle.

Twentieth-Fox Sets Test Runs for "Manhattan"

A series of test engagements at advanced prices for "Tales of Manhattan" was announced in New York on Monday by Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution at Twentieth Century-Fox. On August 6th, the day following its world premiere at Grauman's Chinese in Hollywood, the film will be shown day and date at four other first run houses in the Los Angeles area: United Artists, Loew's State, Wilshire and Carthay Circle.

Other test dates include August 9th: Fox theatres, Bakersfield, Cal., Phoenix, Ariz., and at the Wilson, Fresno, Cal.; August 11th: Fox and State, San Diego; Denver, Denver. August 14th: Esquire, Uptown and Miller, Kansas City.

The picture is scheduled to go into the Radio City Music Hall, New York, some time in August. It will be trade shown in Denver, Kansas City and Los Angeles on August 3rd. Screenings in other territories will be announced later, according to Mr. Connors.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 Films

Of 11 pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, five were found unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part.

Merge Panoram Sales

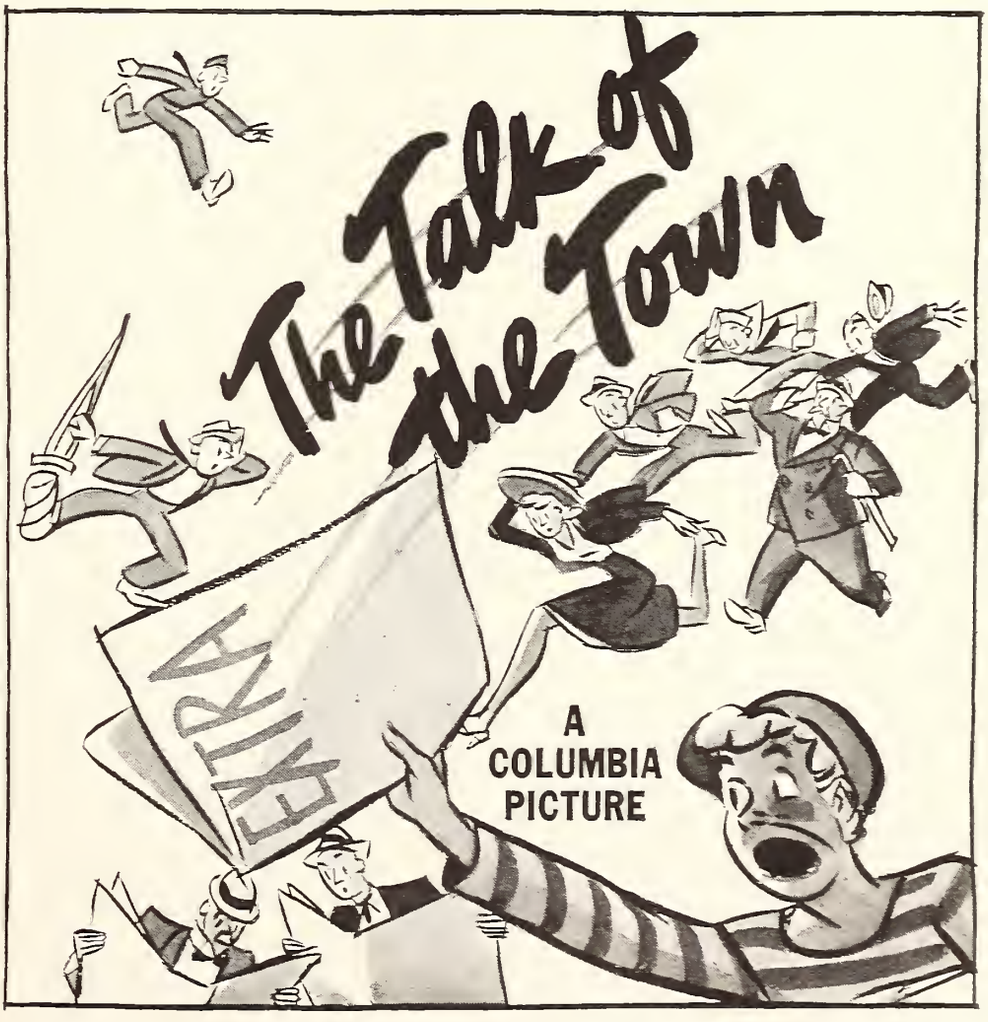
Mills Novelty Company has merged the Panoram sales department with its general machines division, under the direction of A. E. Wilson, sales manager. A new selling plan, it is said, is being developed for Panoram.

SMPE Autumn Meeting set

Plans for a three-day meeting in New York, including eight technical sessions, beginning October 27th, have been completed by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

The meeting for the most part will be spent in reading and discussing technical papers dealing with recent advances in the motion picture field, and applications of the new developments to help the war effort and further national morale.

The gathering is the 52nd semi-annual meeting of the society and will be in charge of William C. Kunzmann of Cleveland, convention vice-president. The meeting is subject to cancellation if such action is later deemed advisable in the national interest.



The 52nd semi-annual banquet and dance will be held Wednesday, October 28th, at headquarters in the Hotel Pennsylvania. Presentation of the Progress Medal and the society's Journal Award will be made at the banquet.

Held on Extortion Charge

ALLIED CALLS INDEPENDENTS TO FIGHT RENTAL INCREASES

Directors name Committee to lead Resistance; Also Condemn Double Bills

by MORT FRANK in Pittsburgh

Independent exhibitors of the country are urged "to resist in all legal and effective ways the demands of producers-distributors for excessive film rentals, and also their demands that theatres increase film prices," in a strong resolution passed by National Allied directors at their annual summer meeting in Pittsburgh last Thursday and Friday.

Asserting that "ruthless policies of distributors have increased their profits," while running counter to national policies of the United States in war time, and claiming that the policies eventually will spell the ruination of exhibitors, the resolution attacks distributors' demands for higher film rentals, more percentage deals, higher percentage deals, preferred playing time, forced increases in admission prices and extended runs.

The directors appointed a committee including Morris A. Rosenberg, chairman; Col. H. A. Cole, and Sidney Samuelson, to create machinery for making the resolution effective, after ratification by the boards of the regional associations.

Three other conclusions, as released by Abram Myers, general counsel, were:

1. A resolution against double features, contending that their elimination would conserve films and other vital materials, and shorten operating time.

2. A resolution that, on matters in the UMPI program in which UMPI has not functioned or has refused to function, Allied will feel free to take matters into its own hand.

3. Authorization of Col. H. A. Cole, as Allied UMPI representative, to seek a full meeting of UMPI to learn whether distributors will continue to support the movement, as the result of the Allied directors' doubt over its future.

Following is the complete resolution on film prices:

Text of Resolution On High Rentals

"WHEREAS, the board of directors on May 1, 1942, issued a solemn warning in the matter of high film rentals which was addressed to the "United Motion Picture Industry" (an industry body known as 'UMPI'), and to the distributors not represented in that body; and

"WHEREAS, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors was informed by 'UMPI' that the subject of film rentals, and the policies and terms of individual companies could not be considered on a national basis through that organization; and

"WHEREAS, the statement was ignored and, in most cases, not even acknowledged by the companies which were not cooperating with 'UMPI'; and

"WHEREAS, demands for higher and still higher film rentals with attendant evils such as demands for more and more pictures on percentage, higher percentages, preferred playing time, forced increases in the admission prices charged the public, and extended runs, have continued since that date; and

"WHEREAS, as a result of the ruthless policy of the distributors the net earnings of the producing and distributing companies have grown steadily during the past year, notwithstanding greatly increased federal taxes, while during the same period the earnings of many of the theatres, especially the subsequent run and small town houses, have fallen off alarmingly; and

"WHEREAS, the profiteering policy of the producer-distributors runs counter to the public policy of the United States and is a scandalous abuse of the special consideration granted the industry by Congress in exempting motion pictures from the "Price Control Act"; and

"WHEREAS, the high film rentals, terms and conditions being demanded and imposed by the producer-distributors not only are a burden under present conditions, but will inevitably result in higher admission prices to the public and spell ruination for the exhibitors if carried over into the depression period which certainly will follow the end of the war; and

"WHEREAS, exhibitors are demanding action by their national and regional associations and, if need be, by the Government, to curb the relentless demands of the producer-distributors for an unfair and unwarranted proportion of the box office receipts and for control over the operating policies, including admission prices, of the theatres; now, therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that the board of directors of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors shall issue an appeal to the independent exhibitors of the United States to resist in all legal and effective ways the demands of the producer-distributors for excessive film rentals and also their demands that the theatres increase their admission prices."

Connecticut Allied Holds Meeting

Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut held a luncheon-meeting on Monday, July 27th, at the HofBrau Haus Restaurant in New Haven with Dr. J. B. Fishman presiding. Joseph F. Reed, regional vice-president, and Maxwell Alderman, executive secretary, who attended the Allied executive board meeting in Pittsburgh, reported on the proceedings there.

MGM Signs Laurel, Hardy

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy for the lead roles in "Air Raid Wardens," comedy by Martin Rackin, Howard Dinsdale and Jack Jevne. B. F. Zeidman will produce.

Theatre Robbed

Frank Riley, assistant manager of Warners' Paramount theatre, Hammond, Ind., was forced to turn over $450 to a bandit last week.

Schine Reports Three Houses Reacquired

The Palace theatre, Clifton Spring, N. Y., has been reaquired from the Schine circuit by its former owner. The leases on the Clazel and Lyric theatres, Bowling Green, Ohio, have been surrendered to Clark and Hazel Young, former leaseholders.

Negotiations for sale of the State and Appalachia theatres, Appalachia, Virginia, are on between Schine and certain parties, inasmuch as the preference granted M. K. Murphy, former owner, has expired.

The changes were indicated in a second report by the Schine circuit to the Buffalo federal court last week, in the two-year "standstill" settlement of the Government anti-trust suit against it. The settlement provided resale to former owners if possible of 16 Schine theatres.

Mr. Murphy is seeking return of a $3,500 deposit reportedly given in reacquiring the lease on the Viv theatre, Corbin, Ky.

The report added the former owner of the Scotia theatre, Scotia, N. Y., does not wish to reacquire it.

Brandt, Cohen in Plea To Dismiss Suit

Max Cohen and William and Harry Brandt last week filed an application in the New York supreme court for a dismissal of the anti-trust suit brought against them and the eight major companies by Jules Joelson, theatre circuit owner. They contend no cause of action is set forth in Mr. Joelson's complaint, charging violation of the state's Penal Law and General Business Law in the alleged maintenance of a theatre monopoly in the Times Square area.

The suit is the first to test the right of a theatre owner to recover for alleged violation of New York State monopoly laws. Joelson, owner of the Times theatre, asserts that the income of his theatre dropped from $125,000 to $75,000 annually because of his inability to obtain product.

Companies Incorporated

The following companies have been incorporated at Albany, New York:

Sea Cove Corporation, Hempstead, Long Island, to conduct a motion picture business, with 50 shares of stock, no stated par value. Directors are Adam Hoffman, Leon Shor, and Morris Bunderoff, Jamaica, L. I.

G. H. R. Theatres, Inc., Manhattan, by Mendel Zucker, filing attorney; Sol Deutsch and Sylvia Reingold, New York.

Renacolor Film Corporation, 1,000 shares, by Herman Green, Frederick Braun and Gertrude Richter, New York.

Dodeka, Inc., by R. F. Spagna, Antonia Rossi and Ann Nicholls, New York.

Close Theatre Lease

Berk and Krumgold, theatre realty specialists, announce that they have closed a long term lease for the Kimball theatre, Yonkers, N. Y., with a corporation headed by Max Farkus. The Kimball theatre property is owned by Leo Silver, Bronx.

NBC, Mutual to offer Discounts

The National Broadcasting Company and the Mutual Broadcasting System, following the lead of the Columbia Broadcasting System, which previously had offered a discount program, this week announced discount plans.

NBC's plan for sponsors using the entire network provides for an overall discount of 10 per cent, while Mutual announced a plan which would offer discounts up to 50 per cent on stations in basic markets, up to 60 per cent in lesser markets and up to 75 per cent in the remaining areas.

Niles Trammell, president of NBC, said that many sponsors were now using hookups of from 80 to 100 stations and that it was hoped those companies with products which have national distribution would use the entire network of 125 stations. He emphasized that there would be no increase in present rates for sponsors who continued to use the same number of stations they have been using up to now.

Mr. Trammell pointed out that the new 10 per cent discount was being absorbed entirely by NBC. He said that small stations, rural audiences and sponsors would therefore benefit considerably by the discount.

The 204 Mutual stations are divided into three groups, those in major markets, those in cities over 30,000 population but not major markets, and those in cities of less than 30,000. In order to earn the 50 per cent discount, the sponsor must buy five periods weekly for 52 weeks, using 36 basic stations in "A" markets, plus at least six other stations in "A" markets which may be selected from a listing of 39 Yankee network and Don Lee stations, plus 14 stations in "B" or "C" markets.

This 50 per cent discount, however, is available only when the program is broadcast 260 times in a year using the minimum of 56 stations. The frequency discounts range from 20 per cent for 13 times annually to 25 per cent for 26 times; 35 per cent, 52 times; 40 per cent, 104 times; 42½ per cent, 156 times, and 45 per cent, 208 times. Additional discounts are available on the basis of more stations used.

Bingo Gross $199,903 In Cincinnati for June

Despite warm weather and outdoor amusements, Bingo in Cincinnati continues to do an active business, with theatres, particularly in the outlying districts, feeling the competitive effects.

According to the report of Police Chief Eugene T. Weatherly to City Manager C. O. Sherrill, who issues the playing permits, the figures submitted by sponsors showed gross for June as $199,903.91, prizes, $46,774.40, and net of $153,129.51 to the sponsoring organizations. Total attendance for the month was 275,224.

Warren Wade, executive program director for the television department of the National Broadcasting Company has been called to active duty with the U. S. Army Signal Corps. Captain Wade has been assigned to the motion picture branch of the photographic section at Astoria, Long Island.

Assigned to Features

George Sherman, producer-director of the Roy Rogers westerns for Republic, has been assigned to features, the studio has announced.

Appoint Heft

Ralph J. Heft has been made Monogram's branch manager in Kansas City. He had been at St. Louis.

"THE MORE THE MERRIER!"

"You can't make me mad by keeping me busy selling tickets in hot weather," says the gal at the machine. "I like to see people having a good time, and judging by their grins when they come out of this one, Paramount's made another 'summer fun special'!"

That's about as good a label for Paramount's "Are Husbands Necessary" as any—unless you want to put it the way Boxoffice did. "Comedy quotient high enough to send any audience away with a light heart!" Boxoffice said. "Potentially good grosser in first runs and down the line!"

Report 22,839 Projectors in U. S. Schools

There are 22,839 16 mm. projectors, both silent and sound, in 17,500 colleges and high schools and 25,703 elementary schools in the United States which answered a questionnaire prepared by the Department of Commerce, it is reported by Nathan D. Golden, industrial consultant in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington, outlining the results of the Department's survey.

Of the total of projectors, 12,092 are silent projectors and 10,747 are sound. The most recent phase of the general survey, to ascertain the total of school projectors for possible war use, indicated that elementary schools have 6,055 silent 16 mm. projectors and 4,373 16 mm. sound projectors, totaling 10,428.

The earlier survey of high schools and colleges indicated there were 6,037 16 mm. silent projectors and 6,374 sound projectors, for a total of 12,411 in such institutions.

Mr. Golden points out that the survey may be used to good advantage by civilian and military agencies whose pictures may be distributed through the school system of the United States, and he cites the necessity of postponing visual education development by such schools as are not already equipped, since the war need has caused the curtailmennt of the production of 16 mm. apparatus except for military use.

The questionnaire on elementary schools was sent to 40,000 institutions. Replies were received from 25,703, of which 7,845 have either 16 or 35 mm. equipment, 6,602 are serviced with equipment from central distributing points within 709 school systems, and 11,256 must rent or borrow projectors from commercial or private sources. The first two groups include 14,447 elementary schools either owning or being serviced with projectors.

Projectors located in the 7,845 elementary schools in the first group consist of 4,846 16mm. silent and 3,518 16mm. sound projectors; 700 35mm. silent and 142 35mm. sound projectors, and 1,757 35mm. silent slide-film and 322 35mm. sound slide-film projectors.

A total of 2,788 projectors are circulated among the 6,602 schools in the second group. A breakdown by number and type shows that 1,209 16 mm. silent projectors go to 4,103 of these schools; 855 16 mm. sound projectors go to 4,990 schools; 90 35 mm. silent projectors go to 800 schools; 23 35 mm. sound projectors go to 316 schools; 603 silent 35 mm. slide-film projectors are used by 2,126 schools; and eight sound 35 mm. slide-film projectors are used by 323 schools.

Civilian Defense Films Seen by 325,000

Since February of this year, 325,000 persons have seen motion pictures distributed by the film bureau of the Greater New York Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, it was announced by the bureau this week. The pictures are illustrative of civilian defense activities and are provided without charge by the organization. The bureau reported that if audiences number 150 or more, it also provides a projector and operator. The films are available for showings in schools, churches, fraternal, patriotic and other organizations, in addition to air raid warden groups.

British Films shown as Samples of Home Front Propaganda

Six of the most recent wartime films produced by England's Ministry of Information, through the Crown Film Unit, were presented by the British Library of Information in New York Monday for the lay and trade press as examples of British morale-building pictures. No plans for theatrical distribution in the United States have been made. The British Library plans to screen them at special showings.

Produced during the past year, the films have been playing in theatres in England and throughout the Empire. No professional actors are employed. All the players are the seamen, masons, firewatchers, soldiers, sailors, shopkeepers, housewives, clerks, farmers and industrial workers of England, whose lives these past years have been changed by the war.

The most forceful of the group is "Merchant Seamen", which, in 16 minutes, does a magnificent job of translating the horror of warfare at sea. The action is confined to the daily life of men who serve on convoy vessels. The dangers they face hourly, the courage and heroism with which they perform their tasks are realistically transferred to the screen.

Humphrey Jennings, who directed this film, also directed "Listen to Britain", an 18-minute short produced by Ian Dalrymple, recently appointed director of the Crown Film Unit. This picture is the most ingenuous and imaginative of the six. The sounds of England at war, from the chirping of the native lark to the roar of the anti-aircraft guns, are synchronized with forceful scenes dramatizing the effort of all the British people to beat back the Nazis.

No less important for the stories they tell, and the method of telling, are the other four films: "The Builders", 8 minutes, depicting England's bricklayers, ditch-diggers, carpenters and others in the building trades who constructed the nation's new war-industry plants; "Tale of Two Cities", 8 minutes, which shows how the people of London and Moscow perform in common the tasks which, through combined effort, have kept the Nazis from taking their cities; "Diary of a Polish Airman", 8 minutes, is the story of a young Polish lad who has lived through Hitler's invasion of his native land and has found his way west to join the RAF, and "Ordinary People", 10 minutes, portrays in compelling fashion the drama of the "Minivers" who are bombed out of their homes but who return to their work with greater determination and renewed vigor in the fight against their common enemy.

Wooden Is Named ASCAP Supervisor

John C. Wooden was named supervisor for the mid-western district of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, it was announced in New York on Tuesday. Mr. Wooden succeeds R. W. Rome who is serving in the U. S. Navy.

Former district manager for ASCAP with headquarters in Des Moines, Mr. Wooden will be succeeded in that city by Martin Meltzer of ASCAP's New York staff. Lieut. Rome went to Chicago early this year from Boston where he was in charge of the Society's office covering New England.

Cook Named Critic To Succeed Boehnel

Alton Cook, radio editor of the New York World-Telegram for the past eight years, succeeds the late William Boehnel as motion picture critic. Mr. Cook, prior to his association with the World-Telegram, was drama and film critic for the St. Paul Daily News for five years.

Wright Leaves Rivoli

John C. Wright, managing director of the Rivoli theatre, New York, for many years, has resigned. No successor has been named as yet. The house, which is closed for the summer, will reopen late in August or early in September depending upon the availability of product. The Rivoli is operated by the United Artists Theatre Circuit.

Yorke evolves Film Process

The peculiarity to audience view, dating from the earliest motion pictures, of wheels apparently going backward as the vehicle of which they are a part moves forward, has been eliminated in a series of eight films on radial drill and shaper practice produced by Emerson Yorke for the U. S. Office of Education.

The backward rotation of wheels, known as stroboscopic action, has been eliminated, according to Mr. Yorke, through the use of a newly developed mathematical determination of the ratios between rotational speeds of particular objects, camera shutter speed and the depths of focus of a particular lens.

The eight films, designed for use in the training of machine shop workers, show drills cutting into steel while rotating in the proper direction, shaping tools moving into cuts with exact timing, and drills reversing themselves properly at the right time to back out of the holes which have been drilled.

Mexico takes Control of Raw Stock

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS

in Mexico City

Government regulation of all handling of raw film for pictures has been instituted with the assignment of the Ministry of the Interior in exclusive charge of this work. This film is to be parcelled out on quotas to the producers, so that each shall be served on the basis of what the Government considers to be his requirements.

This rationing of raw film, made necessary because of war conditions that are steadily limiting Mexico's supplies from the United States, is intended to assure all producers service and to prevent gambling with this material. Paucity of this film and this control are expected to bring about a drastic change in Mexican production, with ragard to the number of pictures produced and the length of films. However, Mexico's production for 1942 is expected to reach the record number of about 80.

Two more war pictures are to be made in Mexico, both dealing with the peril to this country of the German U-Boats operating in the Gulf of Mexico. One is to be titled "Espionaje en el Golfo" ("Espionage on the Gulf") with Raul de Anda producing and Rolando Aguilar directing. The other, to be produced by Alonso Sanchez Tello, "Un Drama en el Mar" ("A Drama on the Sea") concerned with the sinking of the Government's oil tankers. Both pictures are to be released about September 16th, Mexico's Independence Day.

"Simon Bolivar," life story of the Venezuelan patriot, called "The Liberator," produced at a cost of $210,000, the highest for any Mexican picture, by Miguel Contreras Torres and Jesus Grovas, had its world premiere to good response on July 15th at the Cine Palacio.

Exhibition was delayed because of the necessity for reducing its 30 reels to 20. Mr. Torres is arranging to make another biography, this one dealing with Father José Maria Morelos, the Roman Catholic priest, who was the best military leader in Mexico's war of independence from Spain, 1810-21.

Historical Religious Film Planned

Gabriel Soria, the young Mexican producer and director who served his apprenticeship in Hollywood and has won several prizes for his work in Mexico, has started production here of a pretentious historical religious picture, "La Virgin Morena" ("The Brunette Virgin"), Our Lady of Guadalupe, patron saint of Mexico. The picture is based upon the religious drama written by Father Carlos M. de Heredia, a Jesuit priest who is famous throughout Mexico.

This picture is scheduled to be released on December 12th, Guadalupe Day, Mexico's greatest religious holiday.

Manuel Reachi, for some time the Mexican Government's representative in Hollywood, who recently organized a production company here, Promesa Films, S. A., has arranged to start his first production, "Yolanda," a light comedy, on August 10th. The film is to cost $75,000. Fanny Anitua, celebrated Mexican operatic singer, is to make her screen debut in "Yolanda," playing a comedy part. Irina Barronva, prima donna of the Ballet theatre, also will be in the cast.

Mario de Lara, 46, prominent director, was killed in a serious accident with his wife, Consuelo, 30, and her brother, Miguel, 16, when the car in which they were riding and which Mr. de Lara was driving, was swept into a flood stream as lightning struck the bridge they were crossing during a torrential storm on July 5th. Mr. de Lara had directed more than 50 pictures.

The militia that the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union has formed and is training here, has an American-trained chief, Pedro Armendariz, the actor. He attended an American military school. He is the Militia's commander.

The Rodriguez Brothers have asked the U. S. Naval authorities at San Diego, Cal., to lend them a submarine for use in their forthcoming war picture, "El Grito de Guerra" (The War Cry"). The script was written by Alvaro Calvez y Fuentes, noted radio announcer. Mexico has no submarine.

Producers who are making exteriors in and about this city are experiencing much difficulty from the exceptionally heavy current rainfall. It is so rainy that work is limited to only a few hours a day. This expensive experience has prompted some producers to arrange all their exteriors during the dry season.

The Cines Palacio Chino and Insurgentes, leading local first run theatres, collected $2,400 of the $3,000 that was raised for the benefit of the families of the four city firemen who were killed during the explosion and fire believed to have been caused by saboteurs at the national war materials factory here in May.

Pittsburgh Club Benefit Held

For the first time in local history, a vaudeville show featuring 190 people from theatres, radio stations and night clubs was presented Monday, July 27th, as part of an event that began as a set of boxing matches and wound up as a benefit affair co-sponsored by the Variety Club and the Dapper Dans.

Sponsored as a benefit attraction for the Variety Club's Camp O'Connell for underprivileged children, and other charities aided by the Dapper Dan Club, the sports and vaudeville show ran four hours outdoors at Forbes Field, 35,000-seat home of the Pittsburgh Pirates National League Baseball Club.

Moe Silver, Warner district manager, and Variety's Joseph Hiller, Variety Club chief barker, owner of the National Theatrical Exchange, arranged the entertainment lineup, including Sknnnay Ennis, the Calgary Bros., Ruth and Billy Ambrose, Don Cummings, Everett Hoagland's orchestra, Bernie Armstrong's orchestra, Buzz Aston, the Kinder Sister, Maurice Spitalny's orchestra, Mary Martha Briney, Elaine Beverly, Dick Ross, the Belmont Bros., Bob Carter, Helene and her Violin, Marie Austin, and the Andrini Bros. Rosey Rowswell and Brian McDonald were masters of ceremonies.

On August 7th, the Variety Club will sponsor a rally at Camp O'Connell, and award $1,000 in War Bonds as prizes, as the feature of an event to raise funds to complete Kalmine Hall, recreational center at the camp.

Archives Film Division Active in War Effort

An important contribution to the work of the motion picture in the war effort is being made by the National Archives at Washington, whose Division of Motion Pictures and Sound Recordings is under the supervision of Captain John G. Bradley.

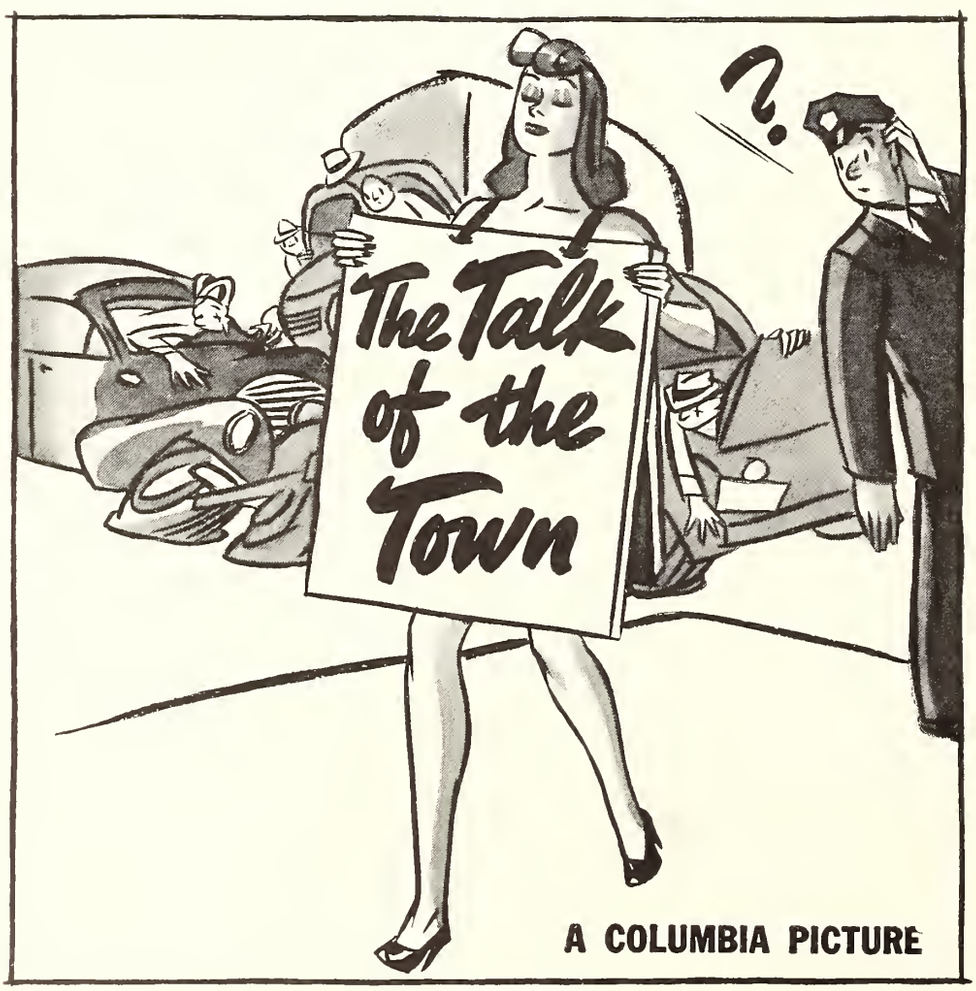
Captain Bradley points out that an increasing number of producers, directors, writers and technicians are making use of the film material in the Archives in furtherance of their war work.

The Archives is not a producing or distributing agency. The National Archives Act states that the Archives may accept, store and preserve motion pictures pertaining to and illustrative of historical activities of the United States. Under a broad, modern interpretation of the phraseology of the Act's provisions, the Archives accepts any motion picture material which reflects the American way of life, or which may help to preserve evidence of American civilization.

The Archives has set up seven classifications of material considered eligible for permanent preservation. These are: factual, factual-expository, re-creations, art-craft, historic, propaganda and entertainment.

About two years ago the service aspects of the National Archives film collection began to take shape, when the March of Time borrowed 65 reels of the Signal Corps collection for use in "The Ramparts We Watch." From that time, Captain Bradley reports, requests for the use of Archive film material has increased steadily.

Also, the Archives projection facilities are being utilized widely for the screening of material involving current problems in connection with the film activities of the war effort. The Archives has become active not only as a source of motion picture reference, but also in supplying technical material to a dozen other Government agencies.



Captain Bradley expresses the hope that the National Archives will increase the volume of its acquired material, particularly as related to Government-produced or Government-sponsored films, and to preserve such material for future use. Already the total footage of Government film in the District of Columbia has passed 60,000,000, the eight vaults originally provided in the National Archives Building are filled, and the Motion Picture Division is seeking additional storage space.

Ohio Fair Managers Adopt War Program

A seven-point program for the 68 county and independent fairs to be held throughout Ohio has been adopted by the Ohio Fair Managers' Association, meeting in Columbus. The fair boards were requested to promote the sale of War Bonds and Stamps, collect salvage materials, stage victory parades, display war work materials, hold patriotic programs, stress increased food production and honor local war heroes. Twenty-seven of the 95 fairs have been cancelled, as requested by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal director of transportation.

Balaban Takes Roxy Post August 28th

The new management of the Roxy theatre, New York, introduced itself to the trade press Tuesday. A. J. Balaban is general manager; Jack Partington, associate general manager; Irving Lesser, managing director. The new regime begins August 28th, when the Twentieth Century-Fox contract with Fanchon and Marco expires. Mr. Balaban signed his contract last week. It awaits signature by Twentieth Century-Fox officials.

Mr. Balaban will continue his interest in several Illinois theatres, but will have as main interest the Roxy and will reside in New York.

Mr. Partington will continue his interest in Fanchon and Marco, devoting most of his time however, to the Roxy. Mr. Lesser remains the Roxy's managing director. The three thus will comprise the theatre's executive staff. They said Tuesday, however, they planned an "advisory staff," including executives who had been with the theatre for several years.

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

. . . the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box-office performance of product—providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.

Columbia

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Laurence Olivier—Splendid picture and pleased above average business on Sunday and Monday. Think I'll bring it back for one day. Played June 21-22.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP: Jackie Gleason, Jack Durant—Disappointing—not worth playing if you can get something else. Played July 3-4.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—This was not especially well liked here. Musicals are just no draw in my situation. Business was not up to average.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main—Beery always goes over well here, and this picture is up to standard. Played July 17-19.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—This is a great little picture that everyone should see. Had a lot of very good compliments on this. Played June 30, July 1.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—One of the best this season from MGM. Also drew up to expectations. Fair enough.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—This was a good picture, but could not pull them in. The last two Taylor pictures have failed to click, which was no fault of the pictures. Taylor must be slipping in my spot. Played July 10-12.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn—This picture was liked by only a few I thought it was good. Did not do much at the box office. Played June 19-21.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn—To date this was MGM's best draw for me this year. Certainly unexpected. A rather high class show for a small town but most of the comments were favorable. A few said they didn't care for it. Hepburn is staging a real comeback.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD: Laraine Day, Barry Nelson—The title on this brought in plenty of extra business. It is a fair action picture, but nothing big. Play it up big, and you will get good results. Played June 23-24.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

Monogram

CORPSE VANISHES, THE: Bela Lugosi—Doubled with Paramount's "Among the Living" to SRO business. It turned out to be an ideal combination as both features are very good. Played to adults only, so every seat counted. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 11.—E. A. Lindenau, Arthur Theatre, Lemont, Ill. General patronage.

PRIVATE SNUFFY SMITH: Bud Duncan, Edgar Kennedy—I guess a lot of people read the comic strips because all classes turned out to see this swell little dish of fun. A lot came, all stayed and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. It's really well made. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 27.—E. A. Lindenau, Arthur Theatre, Lemont, Ill. General patronage.

Paramount

AMONG THE LIVING: Albert Dekker, Susan Hayward—For review on this picture, see "The Corpse Vanishes." (Monogram) Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 11.—E. A. Lindenau, Arthur Theatre, Lemont, Ill. General patronage.

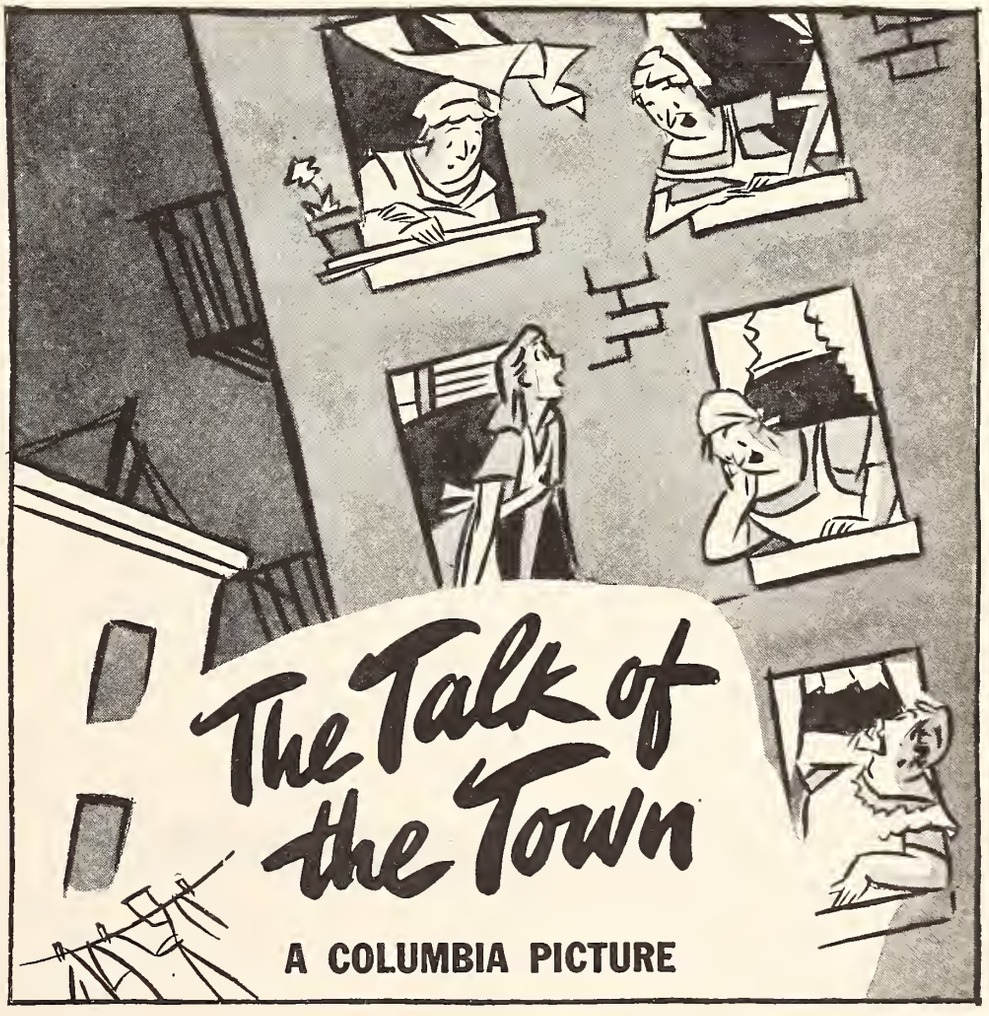
LADY EVE, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Picked up this picture late, but it was very well liked, and was a good picture for Bank Night. Played July 14-15.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE: Bob Hope, Vera Zorina, Victor Moore—This had a lot of laughs and that is what we need. Moore is very good. Played June 26-28.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PARSON OF PANAMINT: Philip Terry, Charles Ruggles—Picked this one up late, but is a very good action picture, and was well received by the few that did come out. Played July 3-5.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

STICK TO YOUR GUNS: Bill Boyd, Andy Clyde—Good action picture that was well liked. Boyd is well liked here. Played June 16-17.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio



BASHFUL BACHELOR: Lum n' Abner—Not the big draw their first picture was, but still did way above average. Pleased everyone. Played June 29-30.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FANTASIA: Stokowski—I did a very nice business on this. The music lovers liked it, the others walked out. Not a small town show, but it certainly is something different in entertainment. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

HEART OF THE RIO GRANDE: Gene Autry—Back to the old Autry standard and a very great improvement on some of his recent productions. Popular songs which the country folk love to hear. Can fully recommend this for any spot where the cowboys roam. Running time, 70 minutes. Played

MEET THE MISSUS: Roscoe Karns, Ruth Donnelly—Corny, but OK for the Saturday night folks. They really loved it, too, if the roars of laughter meant anything. Republic certainly has the toilers of the soil in mind when they plan their product.—L. V. Bergtold. Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Donald Barry, Fay McKenzie—This title is a natural and will draw them in the picture is really one that will please, so don't be afraid of advertising it. Business above average for Tuesday and Wednesday. Played July 7-8.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara—Our biggest draw in 1942—and we play all product except one of the minors. Comments were somewhat divided. Quite a number remarked that it was a good show but they didn't care for it. Others said, "Great."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

MAD MARTINDALES, THE: Jane Withers, Alan Mowbray—Good picture from Jane, which pleased. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T DIE: Lloyd Nolan, Marjorie Weaver—Good little action picture which pleased on family night. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BROOKLYN ORCHID: William Bendix, Joe Sawyer—I haven't had a poor streamliner to date. They certainly round out any program and give your patrons that bit of zany fun they seem to crave. Keep 'em flying, Mr. Roach. Running time, 50 minutes. Played June 25-26.—E. A. Lindenau, Arthur Theatre, Lemont, Ill. General patronage.

FIESTA: Ann Ayars, George Negrete — A Hal Roach Streamliner that is certainly the worst of the lot. I used it with an Autry so did business anyway. There is nothing to this one but a lot of color and Mexican music.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

HAYFOOT: William Tracy, James Gleason—On a par with "Tanks a Million." Very poor draw and this is true of all the Roach Streamliners. The end of this comes on so suddenly that the audience is left with a kind of lost feeling.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

TWIN BEDS: Joan Bennett, George Brent—One of the funniest we've played this year. A big relief from war pictures and played to good business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town.

Universal

BUTCH MINDS THE BABY: Broderick Crawford, Virginia Bruce—Well, it is a nice little picture that managed to get laughs and seemed to please. Of course, it is nothing wonderful at the box office when run single, but it paid its own way well enough. I only wish they would all do that. Played July 16-17.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

HIRED WIFE: Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne—Just an average picture for this beautiful star. Would not recommend this for an audience such as mine in a rural community. Some good comedy, but very little action. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Small town patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Lou Abbott and Bud Costello—Right down the alley for a small town audience. Up to their usual brand of entertainment. Would recommend this one if you have not already played it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played July 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada.

Warner Brothers

ALWAYS IN MY HEART: Gloria Warren, Walter Huston—I gave this to the Ladies' Auxiliary as a benefit. Went over very well and drew many fine comments. A fine all-around show for the family.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS: James Cagney, Brenda Marshall, Dennis Morgan—Beautiful scenery, the right amount of action, and business very good. A profit is not hard to take and this one pulled me out of a very bad week. Running time, 113 minutes. Played July 2-4.—E. A. Lindenau, Arthur Theatre, Lemont, Ill. General patronage.

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS: James Cagney, Brenda Marshall, Dennis Morgan—A grand show that will please as close to 100 per cent as any picture produced this year. Terrible weather conditions cut our take in half.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS: James Cagney, Brenda Marshall, Dennis Morgan—Absolutely tops in entertainment. Drew well and I am sure I'm going to repeat it this fall during cool weather. Dennis Morgan received lots of good comments. Played July 12-13.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KINGS ROW: Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Robert Cummings—This is such a heavy drama I was afraid of it, but it drew well and seemed to please. Played on Sunday and Monday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

GENERAL NUISANCE: All Star Comedies—If you want to hear your patrons laugh get this two-reel comedy. It's good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAR AND THE BEAVERS, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Here's a nice little color cartoon that got some laughs. It is a little different from the usual run. W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Paramount

HEDDA HOPPER'S HOLLYWOOD, NO. 4: Entertaining reel showing Jane Withers' birthday party and Bob Hope making a broadcast.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KEEPING IN SHAPE: Robert Benchley—Average Benchley comedy—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUIZ KIDS: We have played two of this series, but they do not seem to go over.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ARGENTINE QUESTION, THE: March of Time—One of the poorer issues of this series, but educational.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Small town patronage.

RED SKINS AND RED HEADS: Ray Whitley—Good two-reeler with singing and playing cowboys.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

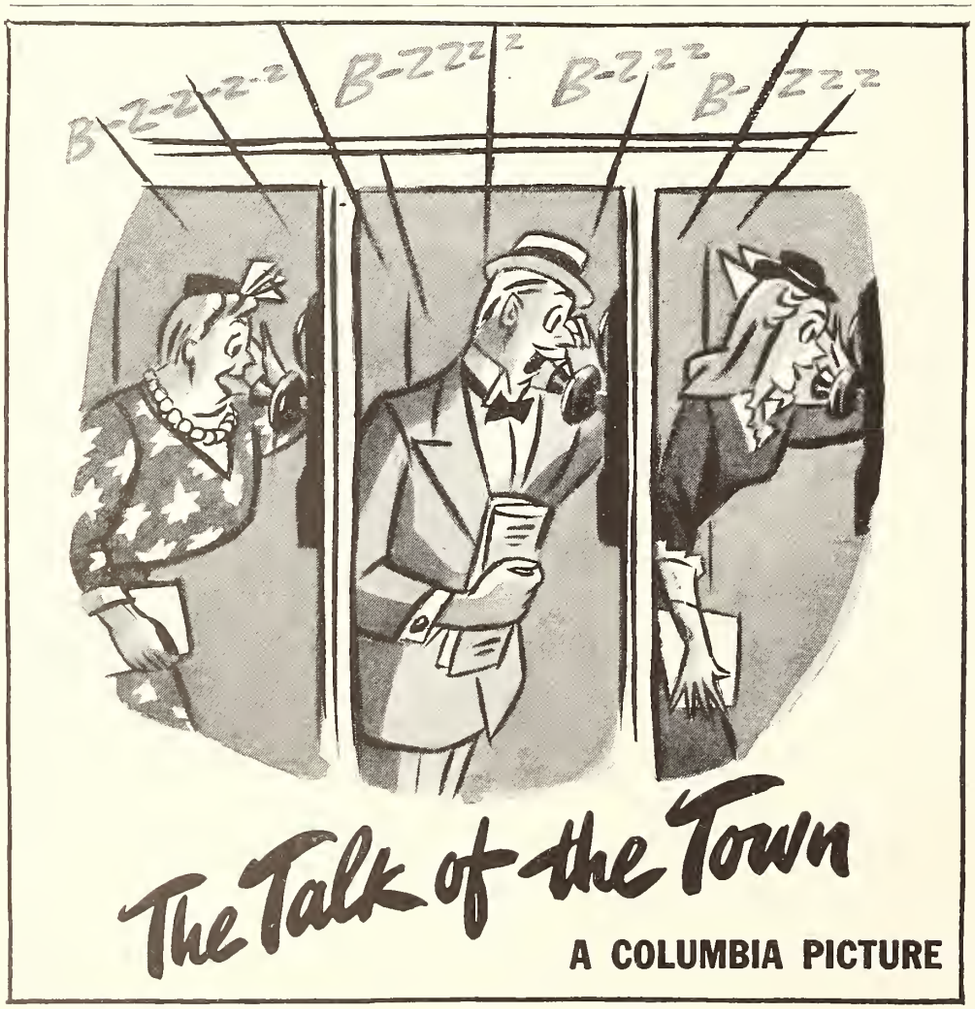
Twentieth Century-Fox

ALL ABOUT DOGS: Terrytoons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

JUMPING JIVES: Musicals—Good musical short subject with excellent tap dancing and jugglers. Play it.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Small town patronage.

ONCE UPON A SUMMERTIME: Musicals—A very goood musical short much enjoyed by my patrons. Good comments on the singing numbers.—A. L. Dove. Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Small town patronage.



Victory Films

ANY BONDS TODAY: Victory Films—Three-minute cartoon furnished free to help sell bonds. It's worth running.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CALLING ALL GIRLS: Broadway Brevities—Dance numbers from former great pictures that are well worth seeing again. Your patrons probably will thank you for showing them this picture, as mine did.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

An Exhibitor Talks Back

For a long time, it has been common practise for distributors to deplore the lack of showmanship in exhibitors; the exhibitor didn't get his money's worth out of the picture; if he had sold it the picture would have stood up for another week; the exhibitor failed to realize the selling possibilities in the picture.

We showmen are a pretty meek bunch apparently; no one ever bothered to contradict these contumelies with sufficient vigor to command attention. We tacitly admitted that all this was so. Sometimes we even reproached ourselves for our lack of foresight.

Now a real showman, Harold J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Fox Wisconsin Circuit of 70 theatres, rises to the defense of the exhibitor. In an article on page 63 of this issue he takes issue with the critics. He first spoke these words before an MGM Exhibitor Forum in Milwaukee. Since he was the last speaker, there was no time for the approbation of the attending showmen or for any discussion of the question. But the Round Table will be glad to act as a forum for any one who has a point of view on the subject. Here is what Mr. Fitzgerald has to say:

"From our own observations, we believe that theatre owners and managers are not adequately supplied by distribution with intelligent facts pertaining to their company's individual and future releases, and, if necessary, they should even insist that information of this type be absorbed by the exhibitor.

"There is lacking at present that thrill of anticipation—the awaiting of the day when you play that attraction. Information and ideas are the very life blood of our business, and it is essential that we have constant stimulation in order to prepare the proper sales appeal, and in turn create the desire on the part of the public to want to see that advertised attraction.

"You can rest assured that when the exhibitor has been properly informed and is in the proper frame of mind, he can hardly wait to play a picture—not because of its box office earning power, but because he has been so sold and informed on the merits of the attraction that he sincerely wants to have all of his patrons see it. When that job has been done you won't have to worry about the exhibitor selling the picture short."

Well, Mr. Distributor, that's beautifully put, isn't it. It epitomizes what so many exhibitors have been saying for a long time. They eagerly devour the trade paper ads and the publicity stories. They read them over and over, they're that hungry for news about pictures. But as a recent Round Table visitor put it, "What do we get?" Exhibitors in Mr. Fitzgerald's own bailiwick complained, "All we get is that each picture is more super-colossal than the previous one; that it was directed by so-and-so; the story was written by whozis; the screenplay by what's-his-name; that it's greater than the stage play, about which the exhibitor knew nothing; that it's mightier than the book, which had a total circulation in his good sized city of about 500 copies. And, finally, it is Producer John Smith's most stupendous hit."

But the theatremen want to know much more. What is there in it that they can sell? What is the picture about? Why don't the trade paper ads break more than two weeks in advance of release? Why doesn't the advertising on a picture start while it is still in production, building up the interest of the theatreman so as to reach a crescendo with the release of the picture, and then maintaining that peak through the first, second and subsequent runs? Wisconsin exhibitors voiced their thoughts—they asked why it was that the very moment they began to get interested in a picture, the distributors dropped it like a hot potato and started advertising their next attraction, being careful to point out that it has more super-dupers and more whatzis than the one they were just beginning to get excited about.

It's the theatremen—managers for the circuits, independent exhibitors and publicity men—who sell the picture to the public. And those are the chaps who say that the distributors must give them some meat; the distributors have to get enthusiastic themselves before they can accuse the theatre men of falling down on the job and dissipating good product.

Mr. Fitzgerald, because of the importance of his position in the exhibitor world, has said these words with more effectiveness than they have been said before; the weight of his prestige behind them should have a salutary effect. The exhibitor, here personified by Mr. Fitzgerald, has thrown the challenge back at the challengers.

The floor is now open for discussion by the readers.

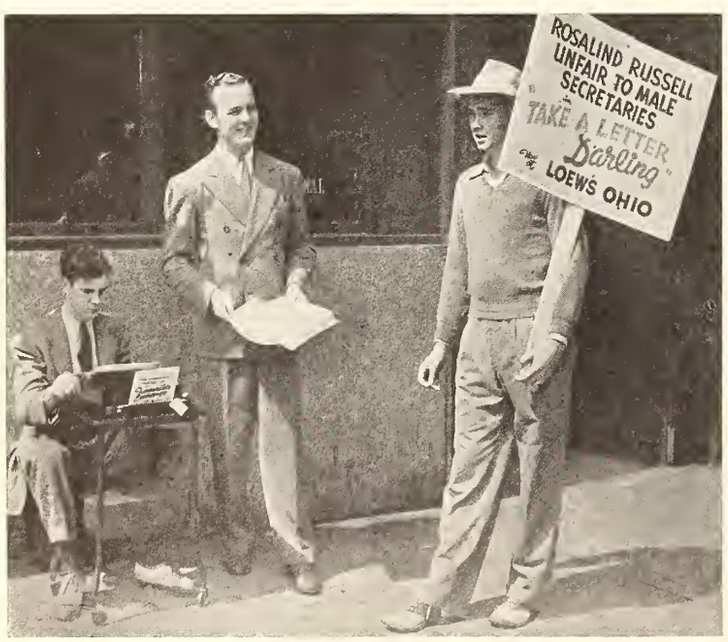
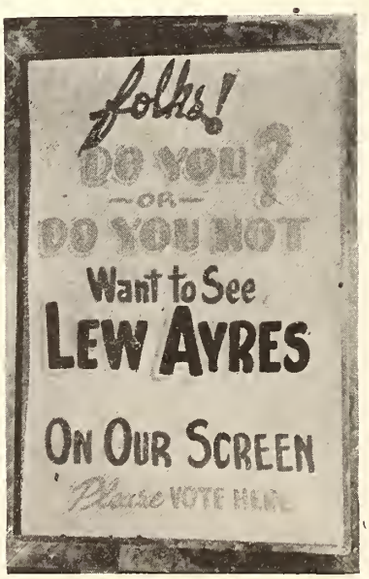
OUTSIDE IDEAS

Street Ballyhoos and Fronts Aid Selling; Matlack Fosters Votes for Ayres

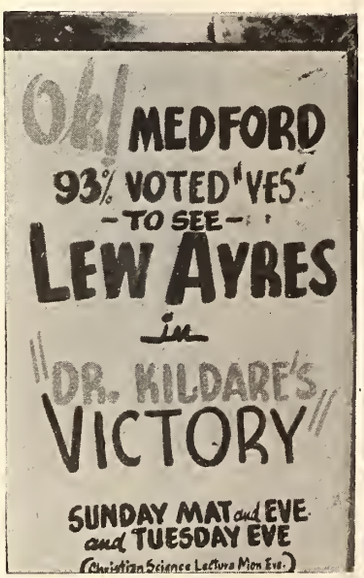
Jack Albertson ran a midnight horror show at the Indiana Theatre, Indiana Harbor, Ind. He broke a lot of laws to put a double 24 sheet board on the sidewalk but got away with it. On the left is the effective street ballyhoo Albertson erected for the occasion.



Paul Burke (right) Orpheum Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Penna., strung a line of diapers across the lobby to make sure his patrons didn't miss learning that "Butch Minds the Baby" was coming.



This is one of the 10-foot elephant cut-outs which Ben Cohn used in front of the Hamilton, Chicago.



Louis Charninsky of the Rialto Theatre, Dallas, had this front specially built for his double bill. That's Louis sitting at a desk there signing up recruit for the Navy. He got 28 in three days.

This street ballyhoo was arranged by assistant manager Charles Kennedy of Loew's Ohio Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

Jack Matlack, exploiteer for the George A. Hunt Theatres in Medford, Ore., used the left-hand sign in the lobby, and the same idea in the newspaper and on the radio before his showing of "Dr. Kildare's Victory". Six thousand people voted, so he used the second sign as well as the same material again on the radio and in the newspaper.

DISTRIBUTORS DON'T SUPPLY ENOUGH FACTS—FITZGERALD

By HAROLD J. FITZGERALD
Fox Wisconsin Theatres

The article on this page is a speech delivered by Harold J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Fox Wisconsin Theatres, at the MGM Exhibitor Forum held in Milwaukee. Mr. Fitzgerald's talk was prepared some time before the Forum, so that in no way is it an answer to anything said there. It is, however, an expression of his general views on the question of showmanship.

At present we have increased freezing of equipment, and unfortunately the available personnel for theatres is not up to former standards. It is, therefore, more important than ever that we personally supervise and scrutinize our operations with increasing care.

Harold J. Fitzgerald

We must daily determine to give the public the maximum amount of comfort and safety. Our patrons are paying, and, regardless of our problems, are entitled to what the Navy would classify an "E" operation.

We have experimented with a plan that our American banking system has found so successful. This experiment has helped us to provide an answer to increased efficiency by the installation of an "auxiliary" managers' office in the lobbies of our theatres. After transacting his report business in the theatre office the manager is in a position to occupy the "auxiliary" office and give attention to his patrons.

We believe that definite and direct contact must be again reestablished with the patron, as it is necessary for exhibition, distribution, and production to see that this one contact with our ultimate market is maintained.

We feel that there is an urgent need for surveys, and are taking steps to install such in our respective communities.

In our opinion, statements such as "I think" or "my experience tells me" are outmoded, and in the near future will no longer be accepted by our business as an answer to a problem.

We feel it is up to us to attain directly, or train our people to substitute facts in place of personal theories. We should not be satisfied with giving an individual opinion. We should know, through the institution of intelligent surveys, in the same manner that any other business proceeds in order to ascertain facts.

Find the Weakness—Then Correct It

After we have found the weakness we can then take the next step and correct it, by the constant application of plans, until we secure the necessary improvement.

If you go to a doctor for an examination he doesn't attempt to cure you before he diagnoses your ailment. Should we not first diagnose the ailment before we endeavor to apply the cure?

We believe that courage to embark on new experiments, to try new ideas and encourage new plans, regardless of their results, should be applauded. We should consistently encourage any and all individuals for their willingness to explore new fields of merchandising.

If there is any one in this room who can not point to new ideas he has contributed to the industry, you will agree, I am sure, that he has no right to call himself a "showman."

Let us therefore adopt the creed of using more and more in the future the expression "We Did," rather than the expression "The Picture Did."

To those of us who are engaged in exhibition, it might be well to reflect on the fact that no law has been passed that compels Hollywood to furnish our theatres with pictures—but, on the other hand, we must have pictures to stay in business.

Hollywood is definitely aware of the self-imposed obligation which they have placed upon themselves. They are taking the world-wide changes as they affect production in their stride, and as a challenge.

Knowing full well the future will bring an increasingly greater lack of advertised personalities, I look forward to seeing the result of this challenge in greater idea productions—in greater entertainment than ever before.

Is it not logical that we, as the merchandising outlet, should accept definite obligations to vigorously apply and encourage new selling methods?

I should like to make a further comment, which is particularly applicable to the selling of motion pictures. Yes, selling motion pictures as a whole to the public. This is a definite weakness that exists in our great industry.

There are so many splendid reasons why people should go to motion pictures. No other business has—what we should take greater advantage of—the world's greatest writers, whose talents should be utilized to further acquaint the public with the merits of screen entertainment.

Distribution Branch at Fault

From our own observations, we believe that theatre owners and managers are not adequately supplied by distribution with intelligent facts pertaining to their company's individual and future releases, and, if necessary, they should even insist that information of this type be absorbed by the exhibitor.

There is lacking at present that thrill of anticipation—the awaiting of the day when you play that attraction. Information and ideas are the very life blood of our business, and it is essential that we have constant stimulation in order to prepare the proper sales appeal, and in turn create the desire on the part of the public to want so see that advertised attraction.

You can rest assured that when the exhibitor has been properly informed, and is in the proper frame of mind, he can hardly wait to play a picture—not because of its box office earning power, but because he has been so sold and informed on the merits of the attraction that he sincerely wants to have all of his patrons see it. When that job has been done you won't have to worry about the exhibitor selling the picture short.

Sales conventions are held to acquaint the exchange's selling force with detailed facts pertaining to his respective company's product and plans.

We believe it is even more important that the salesman be fully informed, so he can furnish the exhibitor with detailed selling information. When this is accomplished the word Salesman will not mean what it now does—one who sells the exhibitor terms—but will mean one who sells the picture through the exhibitor to the ultimate consumer on whom we are all so dependent—the American public.

Ideas Vital to Our Existence

We must secure ideas from every channel because ideas are vital to our existence, and if there exists in any position a man or woman so aloof that he or she is not stimulated by the appeal of a motion picture, that person does not belong in this exciting business.

Let us adopt the resolution that if something is worth while doing, it is worth while giving it all we have with showmanship.

Let me tell you further that exhibitors can proudly hold their heads high—they've done a job, and I am sure they will continue to do even a greater job.

Some of us have different ways of showing how much we love our flag—yes, some even die for it. What measuring scale exists that can weigh a wound on one side and contribution of time or money on the other?

It always has been and always will be the practice for a few to take the responsibility of all, in any business or in any movement.

Show People Get Job Done

You know, there is a very special knack that show people have of getting a job done. Show people know what others do not—that mere announcement and publicity attendant to an occasion will not insure its success.

Half-hearted attempts behind any worthwhile patriotic endeavor will not be tolerated by showmen. We are in the world's biggest business—War—and this is no time to arbitrate, and no time to spar to gain a point.

Let us do everything that we can, and be glad that we can.

I'd like to leave this thought with you. At the present time this is your business—keep it your business.

WAR SHOWMANSHIP

Ray Parker's booth at the Avalon Theatre, St. Louis. Total cost was $2.98.

Jupie, the Wonder Duck, who is a doll to three Brooklyn kids, sold bonds at the Sheepshead Theatre in Dodgertown. Paul Binstock, manager is standing at the left.

Manager Clyde Brown of the Fox Theatre in St. Louis arranged this collection of old silk stockings, aided by the AWVS.

Dave Kaplan (left), manager of the Stanley Theatre, Atlantic City, congratulates J. Blackburn of Philadelphia on the latter's purchase of a $10,000 War Bond from the theatre. This is believed to be the largest single sale at a motion picture theatre.

Joe Nevison (right), manager of the Bromley Theatre, Philadelphia, staged a "Slap-a-Jap" machine gun lobby display. Uniformed majorettes of the P. O. S. of A. Drum and Bugle Corps sold stamps and solicited contributions for Army and Navy Relief.

Manager Ed Harris of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., stands in front of the tremendous pile of rubber paid for at the rate of a cent a pound in War Stamps.

Don Kuhn, manager of the Palms State, Detroit, set aside a portion of his lobby for the jitterbugs during the run of "Syncopation".

Helm Lands Plane Contest On "Captains of the Clouds"

Walter Helm at the Avon Theatre, in Stratford, Ontario, sponsored a Superman plane contest with the local radio station for his advance on "Captains of the Clouds." The station gave away model flying kits of planes and a five dollar War Savings Certificate to the best model received. The theatre also gave a Certificate and 20 passes to see the picture to runnersup. The radio show was Speed Gibson of the International Secret Police and a dandy program for kids and adults alike.

A two-page cooperative ad was landed and numerous window displays were promoted, one of which featured a "Captains of the Clouds" game. Woolworth's and the Kresge stores tied in with aviation books and cutouts.

Jolley Sells Kids on "Reglar Fellers"

Concentrating his campaign for "Reglar Fellers" on the kid patronage, Mel Jolley at the Columbia Theatre, in St. Thomas, Ontario distributed promoted gliders with copy on the wings a week in advance of the opening. At the Saturday matinee, dubbed "Fun Day" for the occasion, Jolley distributed prizes donated by leading merchants. Additional publicity was gained by the theatreman, who invited the kids from the Children's Aid Society as his guests on opening night.

Tie-Up for Exhibitors

Major Horton Edmunds, who is recruiting for the Woman's Auxiliary Army Air Corps throughout New England, would be a valuable contact for managers playing "This Above All." Through arrangements made at an initial recruiting drive at Springfield, Mass., arranged by Loew's Poli Manager George Freeman and Jack Goldstein of 20th Century-Fox, Major Edmunds, who may be reached at 1065 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, will try to make similar arrangements in other New England cities.

Window Stunt for "West Point"

A lass in a 1942 super bathing suit called all of Charleston, W. Va., from a main street store window to tell folks about the arrival of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" for the campaign set by Roland Coleman for the Kearse Theatre.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

YANKEE DOODLE DANDY (Warner Bros.): The patriotic angle as well as the many other obvious selling points were stressed in the New York campaign, and they may all be used for other engagements, too. One idea may be applied in any city as many times as there are war plants in the city. This entails using a bulletin board on which every one who has entered the service from that plant has his name in one column; in the other column appear the names of those who supply usable production ideas for the plant. There is plenty of space left over on the bulletin board for posting of routine notices, etc. Dominating the whole thing are the words: "Be a Yankee Doodle Dandy". The first contingent of high school boys being inducted into Naval Aviation has been called the "Yankee Doodle Dandies". The recruiting office nearest your city and local women's clubs will participate in a ceremony in your theatre where you can give the local group their banner and obtain newspaper and radio publicity. The music is on Victor records, and, of course, there are the usual covers on which publicity can be obtained. Music stores' cooperation can be enlisted to obtain the fullest benefit from the popularity of the songs. A quartet of youths dressed like Yankee Doodle Dandy can parade around town singing the tunes; the audience can be asked to sing some of the numbers for a couple of weeks before opening date; prizes can be offered for the best war song to match "Over There" from the last war. Yankee Doodle Dandy ties, Yankee Doodle Dandy evening gowns, and Yankee Doodle Dandy face powder are among the national tieups of which advantage can be taken locally. The cooperation of merchants may be obtained to run a cooperative ad page. One can tack the title on to any group of people: for example, those who carry their own packages, who contribute to the U.S.O., who act as air raid wardens or who conserve tires. Taxicabs in New York carried copy during the engagement there reading, "Be a Yankee Doodle Dandy. Buy War Bonds". This idea can be duplicated anywhere. The radio can be used not only for the usual spot announcements and plugs for the songs with mention of the picture, but also for interviews with people who remember some of the George M. Cohan shows. To intrigue the kids, Yankee Doodle Dandy hats, buttons, license plates and picture frames are available as giveaways. There's a contest suggested in the pressbook which requires identification of certain historical figures who were Yankee Doodle Dandies. There are also a number of illustrated newspaper features with which to aid your publicity campaign.

CROSSROADS (MGM): The title suggests a number of ideas using the word: for instance, a photographer could be stationed at a specified crossroads to take pictures—anyone whose picture was taken would be awarded a pass. Patrons not too mathematically minded would be intrigued by cards bearing the old stunt of adding the birthdates and ages, as well as year came to power and number of years in power of a number of famous men, and then dividing by two; of course, the answer is always 1942. Signs can be placed at various crossroads with arrows pointing to your theatre. There is a puzzle mentioned in the press book in which pieces of a picture are scrambled like a crossroads and the contestants are required to reassemble them. This can be used in programs or newspapers. There are still available, which will make it easy to obtain window displays in various types of stores. Much of the action of the picture takes place in a courtroom; it might be a good idea, therefore, to circularize lawyers and judges, advising them that the picture shows how a French law court is conducted. Cards with one of each of the ten letters of the title on them, plus some good selling copy, can be distributed to stores to give away with each purchase; a pass is awarded to those whose cards spell the whole title. To cut down on the number of winners limit the cards with one of the letters. There's one song in the picture; title cards can be used in windows to plug the film.

Air Force Aids Preston

Through the cooperation of the local Airforce headquarters, Les Preston for his date on "Captains of the Clouds" at the Capitol, in St. Thomas, Ontario, had officers and men together with their band march to the theatre opening night. Special window displays were secured in a promotion with various merchants, each of which gave prominent mention to the picture.

War Showmanship Now Recognized By Additional Quigley Award

THE Quigley Awards, long recognized as the symbol of showmanship, have taken special cognizance this year of the efforts of many showmen to do their part in the prosecution of the war; a special award will be given to the showman who does the most for the war effort.

As stated in the original announcement in the issue of April 18, the conditions do not limit themselves to any special category of endeavor. The award may be won by one single spectacular presentation, or by a continuous and long policy and practice.

The original announcement further stated:

"It is contemplated that the basis of judgment at year's end will be the standards and aims for the industry which have been made manifest by the industry's own War Activities Committee.

"Primarily the indications are that the winner of this special award will be one who most effectively puts the available screen materials pertaining to the nation's war effort on the screen. There is an automatic presumption that this will include particularly those official and semi-official pictures which pertain to the cause of the nation in war.

"The war is still in the process of being 'sold'. It will so continue until the war's end. It is the screen's share in that which is the subject of this special award."

It was further stated at that time that the competition for this special Quigley War Showmanship Award for 1942 is neither inclusive nor exclusive of the other Quigley Awards (i. e., the annual Silver and Bronze Grand Awards and the Quarterly Plaques, Medals and Citations).

For the benefit of those who may never have seen one we reproduce herewith a Quigley Award Plaque and a Quigley Award Medal. Three Plaques are awarded each quarter for the three best campaigns from consistent contributors; five medals are given to the next five best campaigns from consistent contributors. Citations, which are individually inscribed on sheepskin, are presented to those whose campaigns, in the opinion of the judges, are considered worthy of the honor.

Ingenuity Gets Attention in Newspaper Ads

The special appeal of the Drive-In Theatre is played up in the top ad in the center column. Jack Hess is the publicity director of the Drive-In in Chicago. This is actual size.

Top right is another all type ad which measured eight inches on two columns. Leo Haney and the Bucklen Theatre are in Elkhart, Ind. The caption as well as the personal endorsement attract attention. In fact, the entire ad is remarkably clever in effect.

Bottom left is Harry MacDonald's three-column by 14-inch ad in the Milwaukee Journal. That headline has a double emphasis—not only does it characterize the picture but also the action depicted in the illustration shown herewith.

We can't all obtain the services of cartoonists to draw our ads but when it is done the results are excellent. Two of a series made by Maxwell Weinberg of the Little Theatre, Baltimore (bottom centre) shown in actual size, give an idea of their effectiveness.

Rosenfield Prints Mayor's Blackout Proclamation

Measuring approximately 11 by 17 inches was the herald gotten out by Joe Rosenfield in advance of "Mrs. Miniver" at the Palace Theatre, in Milwaukee. One side featured six large scene stills from the picture together with picture copy, cast, and playdates. The reverse carried in full Acting Mayor John L. Bohn's proclamation on "Blackout and Air Raid Protection Regulations."

Burke Snaps Passersby For "Woman of Year"

Promoting the services of a local photographers, Bill Burke ahead of "Woman of the Year" at the Capitol Theatre, in Sarnia, Ontario, had the man snap a street scene every day, circling some woman appearing in the picture. To those properly identifying themselves at the theatre, guest tickets to the show were awarded.

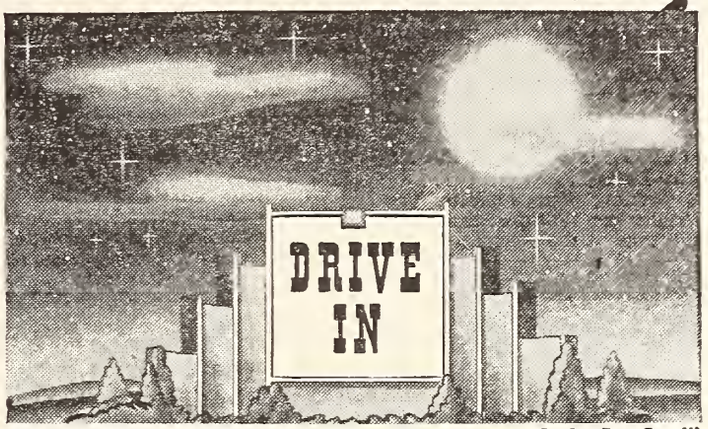
HOLLAND
BELLEFONTAINE—OHIO

MARCH 31, 1942

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE BOSS!

DEAR BOSS:

Just a few lines to alibi my way out of not running an ad in to-day's paper on "The Vanishing Virginian." I know that you told me not to keep it a secret that we are playing it to-night, Wednesday and Thursday here at the Holland. The reason is simply this: the few of us who attended a run-off last night are so crazy about the picture that nobody in town will dare miss it after we get through talking about it.



News it is, too, Boss. What a swell story. And what a terrific job that old trouper Frank Morgan does. For me, his performance is absolutely the best I have ever seen. But you know how Frank Nolan is, Boss. He agreed that all I said about Morgan was true, but that I was committing a sin not to heap as much praise on that delightful hit of femininity, Kathryn Grayson (Andy Hardy's Secretary) and he hasn't stopped yet raving about the way she gives out with the beautiful, lilting songs in the film. Well just as Frank and I were getting warmed up on this subject in walks Harold Slifer, and says, "You guys are off your track. The thing that makes 'The Vanishing Virginian' great is not any of the cast, including Spring Byington, who I think is marvelous, but that superb story! It's better than the Hardy stories." He had a lot in his favor, on this point, all right. "The Vanishing Virginian" is a true story of Cap'n Bob Yancey, and his family, of Lynchburg, Virginia. They sure are a grand family, Boss. You'll love them even more than the Hardy's. M-G-M can't be beat when it comes to making these family movies.

I guess I better sign off, Chief, because the phone has been ringing like mad with people calling up asking about "The Vanishing Virginian." We are going to open the box office early to take care of the crowd.

I'll write you more later.

Very truly yours,
F. L. Williams, Mgr.,
Schine's Holland Theatre,

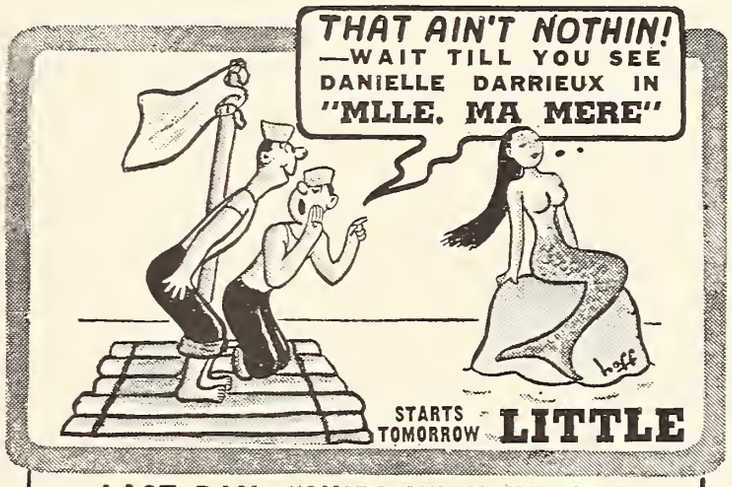
Several weeks ago I requested a return showing of what I have always considered one of the most comical hits ever to hit the screen!

I made this request partly out of a selfish motive—the fact that I wanted very much to enjoy it and laugh at it again!



However, I sincerely believe that many Elkhart show-goers feel the same way that I do—that a truly outstanding hit lives forever—and can be enjoyed again and again.

They will also want their friends to enjoy and will urge them to be sure not to miss this last opportunity to see it! No, I think I'll have plenty of company when I see

Ed Wiethe, a Kentuckian, Now Manages Cincinnati House

Edward Wiethe, manager of the Westwood Theatre, 3118 Harrison Ave., Cincinnati, has held this post for about two and a half years. Ed was born at Bellevue, Ky., June 17, 1913. He started as manager of Louis Wiethe's Bond Theatre in Cincinnati when it was first opened. Two years later he was transferred to his present post.

O. L. Byrd Fills Every Theatre Job in His 18-Year Career

O. L. Byrd

Versatile is certainly the word for O. L. Byrd, who has worked in every position the theatre has to offer in his 18-year career in motion picture exhibition. Among the posts he has filled are those of janitor, usher, chief usher, doorman, cashier, organist, projectionist, advertising manager, bill poster, booker, assistant manager and finally manager. It isn't likely that O. L. handled all of these jobs at once, but at any rate he had a go at them at one time or another. Right now, he is working as manager in the Webbo Theatre at Harriman, Tennessee, for the Crescent Circuit. He is married and has one child. Previously he has managed the Lyric, Jonesboro, Tenn., the Palace at Morristown and the Palace in Harriman.

"Hours Mean Nothing To Me," Said Shapiro Asking For Job

"Hours mean nothing to me," said Hyman J. Shapiro in a letter of application for a job addressed to Harry Fried. The latter took him at his word and Hy worked for Harry for four years. He left to join the William Goldman Circuit as manager of the Terminal Theatre at 69th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. Hy uses those long hours he puts in to do a deal of promoting. Among his promotions have been a trip to Europe, a trip to the Grand Canyon, a flying trip to the Coast and a personal appearance of George Jessel. Among his most interesting presentations was that of two members of the crew of the American steamer City of Flint which had an adventurous voyage early in the war.

The Talk of the Town

Problem Comedy

Comedy is the thing that makes this picture sparkle through 118 minutes of excellent entertainment. It is a commodity in heavy demand by the box office customers these days.

George Stevens, producer-director, sets this equiangular triangle of Jean Arthur, Cary Grant and Ronald Colman in a problem story. But the question of whether Grant as Leopold Dilg, a mill town radical, should hang for arson and murder never seems quite as important as whether he or Colman will get the girl. The quick repartee, and the way Miss Arthur handles her men overshadows the picture's debates on the meaning of the law.

Dilg, hunted on a trumped-up murder and arson charge, persuades Nora Shelley, "the prettiest girl in town," to hide him in the house she has just rented to Michael Lightcap, bearded, austere law school dean. Colman, as the dean, plans to spend a quiet summer writing, in anticipation of a Supreme Court appointment.

His summer is less than quiet. He becomes involved with Dilg, first in argument, then as his attorney. Nora makes the dean realize that justice is not always in the letter of the law and he undertakes Dilg's defense. He also shaves his beard and undertakes an offensive to capture Nora.

Both men play hard to get, but Miss Arthur gets them both. Which one she keeps is not disclosed until the final moment. Stevens had difficulty deciding this himself and filmed two endings. But it is not important. The getting provides the engaging and laugh-crowded entertainment.

Sidney Buchman and Irwin Shaw contrived a sustained series of surprise situations for the screenplay. Stevens directs with the pace he set in "Woman of the Year." Not until the last scene is there a lag. Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell and other supporting players do their work well.

It is a picture customers and showmen should welcome for its laughter and complete detachment from wartime problems.

Previewed on a midweek evening at Loew's 83rd St., New York. The crowded house responded with many laughs and applauded at the end. The guests in the reserved seats, reviewers and showmen, also followed the action with attention and laughter. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—JOHN STUART, JR.

A Night for Crime

(Producers Releasing)

Exploitation Feature

In addition to the names of Glenda Farrell, Lyle Talbot and Lina Basquette to sell, this Lester Cutler production supplies showmen a variety of materials for featuring in exploitation.

It is a picture about Hollywood, written by a Hollywood columnist, Jimmy Starr, and includes himself and three other columnists, Edwin Schallert, Harry Crocker and Erskine Johnson, in the cast, portraying themselves in plain view of their readers. It returns Miss Farrell to the role of newspaper woman, this time a Hollywood newspaper woman, and it ensnares her in a series of distressing incidents which impede for a proper length of time her ultimately successful effort to unravel the mystery of a disappearing film star suspected of murder.

Although the Starr story, written by Arthur St. Claire and Sherman Lowe, does right by the murder mystery addicts, it is as an exploitation attraction affording showmen opportunity for specialized campaigning that the picture stands apart from others in its budgetary category. Direction by Alexis Thurn-Taxis is successful for the most part.

Previewed at Talisman Studio to a turnout of some 200 press and professional guests who indicated approval. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

"Uncensored"

(Gainsborough - General Film)

Belgian War Drama

The field of war is still being widely explored by British film producers and this time the scene is Belgium under the Nazi yoke. The drama is woven around the underground movement and concerns itself with the revival of La Libre Belgique, the Free Belgian newspaper produced by patriots, and distributed under the noses of the Nazis. It is an exciting and inspiring theme, with the ultimate result making as much appeal on lines of melodramatic excitement as on patriotic fervor. The scene, too, is far enough from the shores of England not to be too sombre, and in Eric Portman, the Nazi submarine skipper of "49th Parallel," British audiences have at least one name which may draw them in. Although there is a discernible ennui with war subjects on this side of the Atlantic, this is not likely to be dismissed merely because it is a war subject.

The film is unduly long and there are sequences which do not seem to assist the narrative. Many of the Belgian patriots have a very BBC flavor, and some passages show more allegiance to dramatic tradition than to historical plausibility. Anthony Asquith's direction is sympathetic and sincere if at times a little self consciously "arty," and the picture has the general appearance of having been photographed under the Fuel Restriction Order.

Portman has the role of a Belgian soldier who revives the illicit sheet which came out regularly during the last war, and the picture tells of the secret band which made it possible, of the vain efforts of the German Army to suppress it, of the unspoken kinship of priest and publisher, sewage worker and cabaret artiste. There is a bit of romance, shootings and escapes, military pomposity, and some very poor quality music. Although the yarn is exciting at times there are flat patches which cutting might eliminate.

Portman is excellent as the cabaret artist by night and patriot by day, Frederick Culley nearly steals the picture as the aged editor playing a double game, Raymond Lovell reads his lines as the Nazi Commander with a burlesque flavor, and there are small parts very well handled.

Previewed in London. Reviewer's rating: Good.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Down Rio Grande Way

(Columbia)

Western

Here is a western that has action a-plenty. It is a rare moment when the principals are not engaged in fist fights or gun play, especially the former. The story has to do with the entry of Texas into the Union and a side issue that develops in the "Bayou" country which almost results in Congress voting down the Texas annexation, or so the story would have us believe. At any rate the abortive insurrection is put down by one man, a Texas ranger.

The ranger is played by Charles Starrett.

Other principals are Russell Hayden, Britt Wood, who carries the comedy; Norman Willis and Davison Clark, the villainous element, and Rose Ann Stevens, the girl in the story.

Starrett arrives in the "Bayou" country with "orders" from Sam Houston to find the reason for and to stop the lawlessness in the territory, said lawlessness being a sore point in the final Congressional approval of Texas as a state. With the help of the ranchers and particularly a hot-headed young man, played by Russell Hayden, the ranger accomplishes his mission. The film was produced by Jack Fier and directed by William Berke.

Hello Annapolis

(Columbia)

Academy Drama

This Naval Academy drama, despite the release date has all the pre-Pearl Harbor Annapolis cliches in its plot structure. The story is about the rich boy who despises the Navy but who eventually winds up in Annapolis over love of a girl. He becomes an Academy problem and is generally detested by his classmates. A series of incidents convinces the boy of the error of his ways and he reforms. It is the sort of plot done time and again and in this particular instance unconvincingly.

The players are Tom Brown, the rich boy who finally makes good; Jean Parker, the girl he does it for; Larry Parks, a poor boy who befriends the rich one because he, too, is in love with the girl and Phil Brown, Joseph Cherhan, Thurston Hall, Ferris Taylor and Herbert Rawlinson. Charles Barton directed and Wallace MacDonald produced the picture.

Seen at the RKO Jefferson a rainy Monday. It is a large house and was at near capacity. The reaction was poor, the audience appearing to dislike the "old school tie" treatment. Reviewer's Rating: Mediocre.—P. C. M., JR.

Parachute Nurse

(Columbia)

Women in the War

Another slice of life in war, this time it is the aerial nurse whom Columbia depicts, in training, in trials and in romance. A crop of newcomers are here. They are pretty, earnest, and together with a natural script, they give realism to such an extent that in certain degree this feature approaches the category of a documentary.

Portrayed is a group whose patriotism makes them enlist as nurses who will, after training, descend by parachute to the aid of troops in remote areas. They are trained to drill, to make their beds, to be orderly, to make parachutes, and then to jump from airplanes. Marguerite Chapman is one whose ability is patent, but then is handicapped by the suicide of a girl of German descent, and by the jealousy of a member of the group, Louise Albritton. The latter ties a knot in Miss Chapman's test parachute ropes, and she develops a phobia against jumping.

However, on the eve of being transferred to a ground nurses' division, she is informed that William Wright, personable lieutenant, and their instructor—and her romance—has been trapped in inaccessible terrain, in a smashed plane. She is taken over that terrain, jumps, lands ready to give nursing aid, finds the wreck a "plant," and that Mr. Wright framed it so she could be made to jump from a plane.

The screenplay is by Rian James, from Elizabeth Meehan's story. Charles Barton directed. Wallace MacDonald produced.

Riders of the West

(Monogram)

The Rough Riders

The Rough Riders—Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton—stumble over a script lacking momentum, dialogue sprinkled with anachronistic slang and direction which propels this Western melodrama aimlessly toward a foreshadowed finale. It's a letdown for the series.

The tale told this time is a revamping of the one about the plot to steal the land from the settlers, via the rustling and mortgaging route, and it is not an improvement upon the original. The three murders thrown in to give the narrative some power fail to overcome a fondness for conversation, shared by all the players, and a lack of animation. Scott R. Dunlap produced, Howard Bretherton directed and Jess Bowers wrote the screenplay.

Sons of the Pioneers

(Republic)

Western

There's a new twist to the standard western plot in "Sons of the Pioneres" with the introduction of microscopes and viruses, but the action which Roy Rogers fans have come to expect has been sacrified to the cause of science.

Both hero and villain know their way around a laboratory—Roy is an entomologist and Frank Bennett a chemist, specializing in cattle-poisoning—but shooting is left to "Gabby Hayes" and the Sons of the Pioneers. The latter are vigilantes for the ranchers whose cattle is suffering sudden and unaccountable disease diagnosed as "hoof-and-mouth." Roy Rogers, a grandson of the town's founding father, is called from the city to take the position of sheriff and round up the raiding bands. His seeming diffidence makes a poor impression on the townspeople and Louise Harper, who is urging them to fight the menace, but turns out to be a cloak for unsuspected investigation. After some experiments by flashlight, his supposed death in a bunk-house fire and a pitched gun battle behind rocks between opposing forces, he creeps up Indian fashion and captures the raiders without firing a shot.

The film was produced and directed by Joseph Kane

Orders from Tokyo

(Almo)

War Melodrama

Made in France some time before the Nazi occupation and completely re-dubbed in English, "Orders from Tokyo" stars Danielle Darrieux and Anton Walbrook in a melodrama dealing with the Russo-Japanese war of 1904. Miss Darrieux plays the role of a half-Jap, half-Russian woman who marries a Russian naval officer and is accused of espionage because of the activities of her brother, who becomes a Japanese agent.

Refurbished with a prologue and an epilogue narrated by Knox Manning, the picture is an attempt to get attention from a war-conscious public. It points up the treachery of the Japs, their infiltration activities even then, and emphasizes the bravery of the Russians. Nicolas Parkas directed from a script to which Pierre Frondale, Henri Decoin, Nicolas Farkas, Arnold Ripp and Steve Passeur contributed.

Seen at the Hawaii theatre, Hollywood, where the audience was noticeably unimpressed. Reviewer's Rating: Mediocre.—V. K.

Priorities on Parade

(Paramount)

Swinging for Victory

Once you're over the initial improbability of a swing band booking a defense factory and signing up for the assembly line to practice in their free time, you'll find "Priorities on Parade" an entertaining little musical with some tuneful songs, clever dances and ingratiating performers.

The "Solid Seven" were down on their luck and had hoped to work in the plant at their own trade. They accepted other work, except for Ann Miller, who decided to sing for a neighborhood night-club, strictly from hunger. Johnnie Johnston, their leader, is apprenticed to a tough welder who turns out to be an attractive woman. His attempts to counteract their first impressions of each other, her rivalry with the songstress and the band's gradual awakening to the bigger job to be done make up the plot. The finale is an elaborate entertainment staged at the factory, providing opportunities for Ann Miller to dance, Betty Rhodes to sing and the band to "send."

Producer Sol. C. Siegel has wisely given the song and dance numbers prominence, while Albert Rogell has kept a light touch in the direction.

The audience at the Paramount Theatre in New York was largely of the younger generation who appreciated the swing fargon and laughed loud and often at the antics of Jerry Colonna and Vera Vague. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—E. A. C.

THE BIG JOB

WITH preparations of impressive promise and the typical zeal of militant showmanship, the motion picture industry from New York to Hollywood moves toward spectacular effort for the September billion dollar War Bond and Stamp campaign.

This time our showmen are selling a show now going on—with the curtain up on all the fronts around the world. Our public already has its admissions, but it is asked to buy a share in writing the last act and happy ending.

Foremost, inevitably, it is the concern of the showmen of the motion picture to do a job for the nation. But in doing that they are doing, too, a job for the institution of the motion picture and its repute as an instrument of service.

In this drive, too, it may well be remembered that the people are not being asked to give but to invest in security for their country and for themselves and the American way of life—the happiest way the world has ever seen. For more than a generation the motion picture has been part of it.

IT is relevant to record that a news letter from the Public Relations Committee of the Motion Picture Industry just issued records that a total of $1,243,000 has gone to the United Service Organizations through the facilities of the industry; that an additional $2,000,079 was collected in screen theatres for Army and Navy Relief, with many theatres yet to be heard from; that for the twelve months ending the last of June the 33,000 persons employed in the studios of Los Angeles County contributed $1,782,572 to war and related causes.

The motion picture and its people long have been exceedingly aware of the war, and responsive. The task now is to communicate that awareness and responsiveness to the whole people. The showmen of the motion picture know how.

BRASS SECTION

ONE must view with mingled emotions of admiration and dismay the belligerent antics of that militant trumpet player from Chicago, Mr. James C. Petrillo, in his functioning as president of the American Federation of Musicians. As the dictator of a labour union, dictating to consumers, he has achieved mark. As a musician he seems to be practising an art in the spirit of a trade, thereby moving his issues against recordings for public phonographs and radio station record libraries into the realm of sheer commerce and determination by duress. He seizes opportunity in a period of ascendant favour to labour, in a land beset with war politics, and that is generalship, if he wins.

Mr. Petrillo's public relations job in this controversy is especially inadequate. All that a reader of his press can find is his demand which amounts to "Gimme, because I want". That is not entirely satisfactory to a public which is hearing just now so much about what it cannot have, and the many who may not even elect what they shall do.

In the broad sweep of experience, endeavours of the handcraftsman, if that is what a piccolo player is, against the development of the machine and the advance of technology have not been successful. Once, in its fashion, the stage held out against the screen.

When Jimmy-the-Trumpeter decides to try to say who may go on the air with sweet noises, and when and how, he is taking in a lot of territory. Also, if he gets away with it, we shall know something about this country we did not want to believe.

ARNOLD MARCHES ON

IN the realm of the motion picture, which depends so much on technology and the endlessly developing processes of invention, there should be an especial interest in Mr. Thurman Arnold's current movement to have government take over a closer control of patents and traffic in patents.

It is reported that the Assistant Attorney General would ask for the Department of Justice the power to void a patent "found to have been used illegally to limit the supply of any article in interstate commerce".

The vital word there is "illegally". It used to be considered legal, and an encouragement to industry, for a man or a company to invent and develop something and sell it as was thought most profitable. It was his because he made it. He could use it, sell it, swap it, throw it away or hide it in the attic. American technology and our whole mechanical civilization grew up under that notion.

Now it appears Mr. Arnold would have all patent assignments and licenses filed with the Attorney General. So, by another step, another and vital phase of industry, and the applied sciences, would be delivered to the continuing surveillance of lawyers, along with trade practises and finance. It is a progression toward applying to the machinery the same devices of state control now taking over the distributors and the products, in many fields.

SIPPING coffee and dunking doughnuts with the late Mr. Samuel L. Rothapfel at the dawn end of a busy night, your editor heard him remark across the cups: "There'll come a time when it will be possible to put up a circuit of about twenty or thirty key city theatres and support a line of top rank production from them alone." That was ever and ever so many years ago when the Rialto and Rivoli dominated Broadway. As this is written, "Mrs. Miniver" goes into the tenth week at the colossal Music Hall, downstairs, and will have taken more than a million dollars at the box office. That is, remember, one picture playing a single engagement. Roxy was a dreamer, of course. He made some of his dreams come true. Others will be coming true long after him.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

'Entertainment First'

FIRST job of motion pictures in war as in peace is to entertain, three prominent Hollywood figures told radio listeners Sunday night in a CBS Pacific network forum.

Donald Gledhill, executive secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences; Dalton Trumbo and Mary C. McCall, Jr., film writers, were emphatic in their declarations that the screen's entertainment mission takes precedence over information, propaganda or other functions.

"But in making entertainment pictures it is possible to portray the world of 1942, the world in which we live, so that there will be an understanding while there is entertainment," Dr. Raymond McKelvey of Occidental College, the interlocutor, summed up.

Miss McCall called for honesty in entertainment. Honest pictures, she said, "are those that don't misrepresent races, that don't cater to race prejudice, that are free of all jingoistic nationalism, that don't glorify rascality, that don't set getting ahead at any cost as a goal." Mr. Trumbo added that the terms "entertainment and ideals are not mutually exclusive" and urged the screen to portray the objectives and present facts of the war candidly.

"Entertainment does not need to be limited to trivial entertainment," Mr. Gledhill commented. "It can be surcharged with emotion and inspiration; it can be just as worthy as anything else we might imagine."

Pictures produced during 1942 cannot avoid locales or references related to the war, was the forum's opinion. "You cannot think nowadays of a picture in which you saw a young man without wondering what his draft status is . . . you cannot show pictures as if there were no war existing," the Academy executive added.

Free U. S. Feature

"AMERICA AT WAR," the screen "white paper" prepared by the Office of Emergency Management film unit, will be released to all theatres without charge under the auspices of the War Activities Committee. Two versions of the compilation of news and documentary footage made by Samuel Spewack, scenarist on leave from Hollywood, will be distributed through national exchanges in September.

A seven-reel, feature length version will be offered to theatres that play double bills. A four-reel edition will be played by single feature houses. The WAC was to meet Thursday to decide on a release date and mechanics of distribution.

The OEM unit is now part of the Office of War Information's bureau of motion pictures, headed by Lowell Mellett and Arch Mercey. They are preparing a program of brief, factual reels on the war effort. Longer, dramatized screen reports will be left to Hollywood, Mr. Mellett has indicated. This ruling left unfinished several OEM pictures, including "Night Shift," with music by Marc Blitzstein and direction by private Garson Kanin, and "Fellow Americans," written by Wallace Russell.

MGM has announced it will sell its first Victory short, "Mr. Blabbermouth," at regular rentals, all profits to go to the Red Cross. Paramount is selling the first four of its subjects at $1 per day per reel.

Accompaniment

JAMES CAESAR PETRILLO's order to his American Federation of Musicians halting the making of records, and barring students and non-union musicians from the radio (see page 30) has brought him a storm of publicity. But the editorial comment is not calculated to make any press agent envious.

"Mr. Petrillo's high handed actions are indefensible from the economic viewpoint," the New York Times wrote. "But we see it as the perfectly logical outcome of some of the economic and labor notions and policies that have dominated the Administration."

"Petrillo's arrogant order reeks with restraint of trade," the New York Herald-Tribune observed. But the courts, it continued, may have trouble reconciling the Attorney General's injunction suit with the supreme court's Hutcheson decision "that virtually nothing a trade union might do in pursuit of a labor dispute could be considered a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law."

"Since when, it is asked, isn't there room for amateurs in the broadcasting field?" the Helena (Mont.) Independent, asks.

"More than one American will be wondering whether our happiness, convenience and ultimately, even our safety, should be at the mercy of conflicting groups whose rule is the rule of economic force."—Raymond Moley, in the Wall Street Journal.

Out of Vichy

"GET OUT!", all American film companies were ordered Monday by the Vichy French Government. The companies must cease business there by December 31st.

"Business" there had consisted of rental of old films, since no new American film had been imported since the Germans took over. However, these old pictures had done good business, and some money had been remitted.

The American companies have offices in Lyon, Marseilles, Toulouse, Algiers.

Carl E. Milliken on Wednesday said the MPPDA had "given the text of the cable to the State Department and asked them to inquire." What that department—concerned mightily for myriad reasons with maintaining relations with Vichy France—would do was a matter of much speculation.

The French regime has been piling up many straws. Monday's action, possibly, might be the last.

Deny Fox Appeal

WILLIAM FOX's appeal for a new trial in the Government's conspiracy case against him, Morgan Kaufman, Scranton attorney, and J. Warren Davis, former circuit court judge, was denied Tuesday in Philadelphia by the circuit court of appeals.

Mr. Fox pleaded guilty and was Government witness in the case, which involved alleged bribery to influence litigation in his 1936 bankruptcy. However, after two jury disagreements, the case against Mr. Kaufman and Judge Davis was dropped.

Mr. Fox was sentenced this spring to one year and a day, and fined $10,000. His final recourse would be appeal to the United States supreme court. His plea brought his sentence, despite a subsequent demand he be given a trial, and his contention the jury disagreements entitled him to acquittal.

Welles Dept.

WEDNESDAY afternoon the newspapers and press associations in New York were having rather a time trying to confirm a report that RKO Radio Pictures Corporation, or some agent thereof, had been taking advertising space in South American newspapers to disclaim responsibility for the current South American operations of Mr. Orson Welles. In New York the report had seen print in Danton Walker's column in the Daily News, and it had appeared in the West. Ned Depinet, president, and Phil Reisman, foreign manager, said they knew nothing of the matter, and the New York office of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, while expressing no marked surprise, professed no knowledge. Mr. Welles, himself, as might have been expected, could not be reached for a statement, which he doubtless would have made if reached. On Monday, Mr. Welles was reported to be in Santiago, Chile, "still en route" to the U. S. Hollywood reported Mr. Welles was due back August 15th. In Hollywood there was no evidence of any change in the somewhat confused, and perhaps fractured, relations between Mr. Welles and the RKO studio. An RKO official of high status observed, over-all, that "Mr. Welles is a man of great ability, but is at times perhaps slightly difficult." (to be continued)

"Gay Sisters"

"THE GAY SISTERS," Warner Bros. picture, gives evidence that it may develop into what is known in industry parlance as a "sleeper." The picture opened at the State theatre, Cumberland, Md., last Saturday in one of its first engagements and grossed more than "This Above All" which did one of the biggest grosses the house has had.

While the picture was sold as an "A" production, it did not give promise previously of shattering any records.

F. K. O'Kelly, manager of the State, which is a Schine-operated house seating over 2,000, says that the picture had a great appeal to his feminine patrons and that they were largely responsible for the big gross. Mr. O'Kelly's engagement, day and date with that of the Earle theatre in Washington, Warners' own key house in the capital, is the first to be reported. The Earle, too, reported a big business on the picture, although it was originally scheduled for only two weeks, an ordinary run at the Earle.

RKO goes to Boston

RKO was to get new blood this week. A $3,000,000 transfusion was reported arranged through the First National International Company, Boston. The deal has been negotiated. It awaited signatures on Wednesday. It is reported the money is loaned for three years, at four and one-half per cent, with provisions for a sinking fund to secure payment. Certain RKO theatres are collateral, it was said.

RKO now has short term loans outstanding totaling approximately $1,000,000. Part, or all, of this may be repaid from the new money. The picture company's new film budget, submitted by Charles Koerner, production head, is estimated at $11,000,000. This is $1,500,000 under the budget originally planned.

Meanwhile, Wall Street circles this week reported that Floyd Odlum, Atlas Corporation chief, might be chairman of the RKO executive committee and board member. N. Peter Rathvon, newly elected RKO president, was the committee chairman before his election.

Don't Shove

NEWSREEL editors are unhappy enough at the sparse material which they are getting from the fighting fronts and through the Army and Navy censors. When their cameramen are pushed about Washington by officious guards they feel it is too much. This week they appealed to Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information asking (1) that Government press agents and guards be instructed to respect their credentials. Most of their camera staffs have been investigated in triplicate by the FBI, Army and Navy. (2) They again asked Mr. Davis how about some war footage.

Last week Marine guards at the Navy Department in Washington grabbed J. T. Baltzell of RKO Pathe and Hugo C. Johnson of Paramount as they took pictures of Admiral William Leahy leaving his car. The Admiral previously had given his approval on the telephone. The cameramen were detained in the provost marshal's office until rescued by a Navy press officer.

Third Thaw

WELL thawed, $5,000,000 was received from Great Britain last week by American major film companies. It was the third payment from frozen revenues in the monetary agreement with Britain, whereby the distributors here were to draw $20,000,000, in four installments.

The final payment will be late in October. The agreement expires November 1st. Last week's payment covered the three months ended August 1st.

The companies received another $18,000,000 during the spring. It represented 50 per cent of their monies frozen at the beginning of this year's pact. With accumulations since then, the eight distributors are estimated to have an additional $50,000,000 still frozen in Great Britain.

In London, shortly, negotiations for a new contract will begin. There have been preliminary talks in Washington.

Busy Buskins

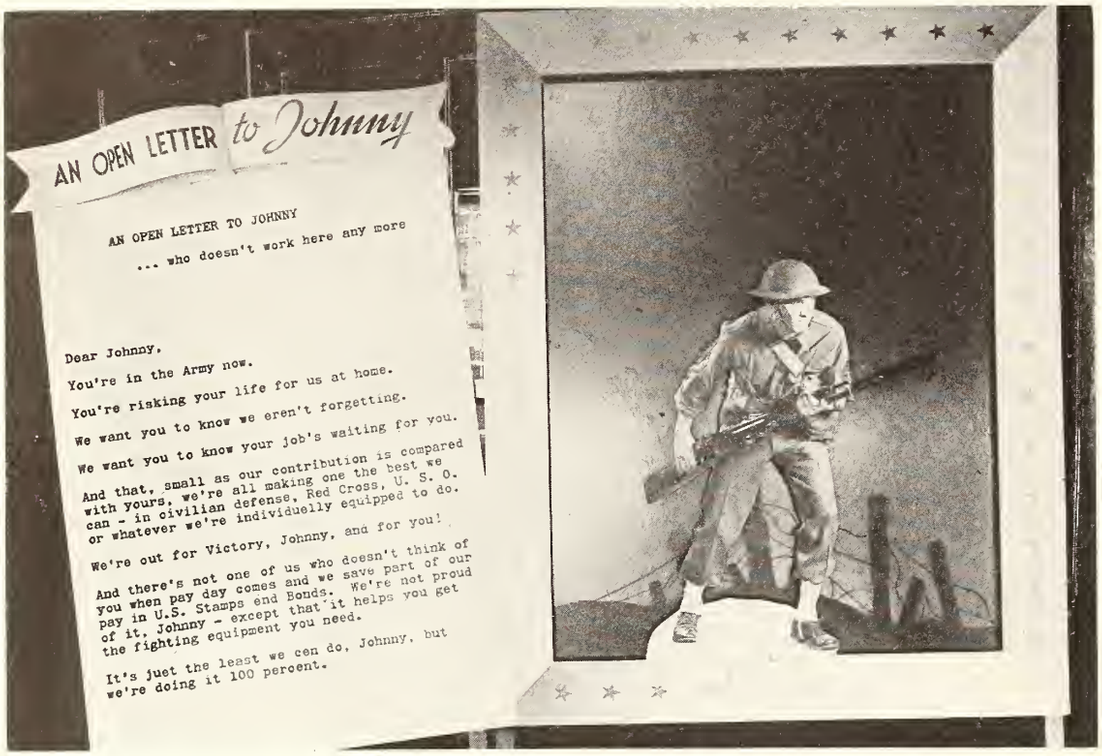
LEGITIMATE theatres, like the films, in New York are experiencing a summer boom, the best in 10 years.

Eighteen are open, and are crowded. Last year, only 12 were open, and not crowded. Some "hits" are "This Is the Army," "Sons O' Fun," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "My Sister Eileen," "Junior Miss," "By Jupiter," "Star and Garter" and "Life With Father." Hollywood has bought the first five.

Russia on Broadway

RUSSIA has arrived in the "big-time," as a motion picture producer. For the first time, a Russian picture is to play on Broadway—in a first run house.

It is "Moscow Strikes Back," from Artkino, the Soviet film agency. It will follow "Eagle Squadron" at Harry Brandt's Globe theatre, 46th Street and Broadway, on August 15th.



However, the picture, for its glamour showing, has been glossed by the hand of Hollywood. There, a commentary, spoken by Edward G. Robinson, written by Elliot Paul and Albert Maltz was added. A score was arranged by Dimitri Tiomkin; editing and montage were contributed by Slavko Vorkapich. Some scenes have been inserted, showing Moscow in peace, for contrast.

Douse 'Em

LIEUTENANT General John L. DeWitt, commanding the western defenses of the United States, on Wednesday ordered a drastic dimout of the west coast from Mexico to Canada. A partial dimout of certain coastal areas has been in effect for some time. The new order affects all advertising signs, theatre marquees and outdoor lighting of all kinds including night shooting by studio crews on location.

PRODUCERS AGREE ON 10-24% REDUCTION IN RAW STOCK

ODT exempts Film Carriers from Stringent Rules on Loads, Routes, Pooling

A voluntary rationing formula to reduce the consumption of raw film stock by all producers by amounts ranging from 10 to 24 per cent of past consumption has been agreed upon by the conservation committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

Exhibitor worries over film supply were eased partially on Monday when the Office of Defense Transportation exempted over-the-road common carrier film trucks from its most stringent load, route and pooling orders.

The film allotments, calculated on pre-war consumption, are expected to save at least 20 per cent of 1941 film footage when added to other economies now in effect. The formula is based on the total needs of each company.

It has been submitted to the War Production Board at Washington.

The slashes were represented as the maximum raw stock reduction which each of the companies could make and still maintain present quality and service to exhibitors.

Proposals to end double features as a conservation measure meanwhile were reported again under discussion. At least two companies are known to be in determined opposition to such a plan and several others were said to have joined them in the opinion that it would not save an amount of film proportionate to possible losses.

Hopper Takes Plan To Washington

Harold B. Hopper, chief of the Motion Picture Section of the War Production Board attended the meetings at the Hays office and took the plan back to Washington. It was reported that he would submit it to Donald Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, with a recommendation for approval. It was not known whether the voluntary plan would be implemented by giving it the status of an official WPB ration order.

The cuts are based on consumption of film during 1941 and bracketed according to the total footage used by each company.

United Artists, Monogram and Producers Releasing Corporation, with past annual consumption between 20 and 50 million feet pledged 10 per cent cuts. Other reductions according to the formula are:

Republic, 50 to 70 million feet, 12½ per cent.

Columbia, Universal and RKO Radio, 70 to 100 million feet, 17½ per cent saving.

Warner Brothers, 100 to 125 million feet, 20 per cent.

Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox, 125 to 150 million feet, 22½ per cent.

MGM, above 150 million feet, 24 per per cent cut.

GET TO MOVIES ON SHANK'S MARE

The Under-Secretary of War, Robert Patterson, this week called on the American public to get there on foot. "Eliminate all unessential driving," including, "night trips to the movies," he urged in a statement warning that the rubber shortage is critical. The public in most instances can reach recreational facilities, including theatres, on foot, he said. Asserting automobile mileage must be cut 40 per cent, he said, "Unessential driving on Sundays, holidays, vacations and night trips to the movies has got to be a thing of the past for some time."

The reductions are expected to save approximately 200,000,000 feet.

The schedule was the industry's answer to a Government warning that at least 20 per cent of last year's consumption of film must be eliminated. In the event that the industry was unable to agree on a voluntary plan WPB officials were said to have worked out a ration order limiting the number of features which each company could make and setting ceilings on picture length and number of prints.

If the Government disregards the committee plan to set its own limits on film footage it is expected to include a maximum of 150,000 feet of negative per picture and a maximum of 275 prints for each picture. It would allow 36 features a year to Paramount, MGM, RKO, Warners and Twentieth Century-Fox. Columbia and Universal, with larger western and serial schedules, could make 50 features. United Artists would be limited to 24, it was said.

Home office officials were hopeful, however, that the voluntary plan would be accepted. It would become effective September 1st and probably be implemented by a WPB directive.

Cuts to be Applied to Features or Shorts

The voluntary formula permits companies to apply their percentage reductions as they see fit, either to short subjects, features or both. The plan does not mention foreign print requirements. It is understood that the Government has expressed its anxiety to maintain the fullest possible circulation of U. S. films overseas and has promised priority assistance if necessary.

Newsreels also are not included in the limitation orders as the Office of War Information and other U. S. agencies have urged their increasing employment as a medium of information and propaganda. All the newsreels, however, are participating in plans to economize on both negative and print consumption.

The demands of the armed services, and other U. S. agencies for raw stock were reported to be keeping both the Du Pont and Eastman factories at maximum output. It was indicated that it would be impossible to meet increasing Government orders while still supplying the industry with the 1,800,000,000 feet of positive and the 100,000,000 feet of negative stock which it consumed in 1941.

Trucking Regulations Waived by ODT

Trucking regulations which were to become effective on over-the-road film carriers on Saturday were waived by an Office of Defense Transportation order Monday. Long haul delivery services will be permitted to maintain existing schedules to a large degree as a result of the ruling.

The amended order exempted the carriers from hauling none but capacity loads and from registering with joint information offices or checking with other carriers before making an empty or partially loaded run. They also may operate over circuitous routes to serve all customers.

Film delivery trucks were first exempted in general ODT orders, but later the exception was dropped from over-the-road regulations. They were required to carry full loads outbound and 75 per cent loads on return. These had been eased to require a "considerable" load on return.

Although the new order grants an exception from these regulations the film carriers must observe 40-mile speed rules and general regulations to eliminate excess mileage.

"Over-the-road" carriers are defined as those making hauls of 25 miles or more from exchanges. Most film trucks are in this class. Local deliveries are still limited to one call a day, no callbacks, and a 25 per cent saving in prior mileage.

Meanwhile in all exchange centers, theatre men, carriers and distributor representatives were reported continuing their efforts to eliminate excess mileage and to simplify schedules. Sunday deliveries, and in some instances Monday calls, are being eliminated in several cities.

The Cincinnati Office of Defense Transportation is formulating plans for the immediate enrollment of every truck driver in the Greater Cincinnati area, as members of the Truck Drivers Conservation Corps, pledged to give their trucks every possible care and attention.

No More Zinc For Cameras

The War Production Board has banned the use of zinc in cameras, projectors and other photographic machinery in an order affecting more than 100 manufactured commodities. It is effective on September 1st. Until then manufacturers may use only 50 per cent of the average weight of zinc used during the same period in 1941.

Motion picture and still cameras, projection machinery, sound equipment, developing machines, enlargers, printers and other motion picture equipment are affected.

WAR BLOCKS CONSTRUCTION OF 50 DRIVE-IN THEATRES

Business at 70 Units holds Level of 1941, Despite Travel Restrictions

Drive-in theatres, lusty modern revival of the old outdoor shows which were achieving an important place in the exhibition field when the war clouds broke, are maintaining the level they reached last year. There are fewer cars, by far, on the road but there are just as many customers parked on the ramps of the 70 open air theatres scattered across the country, conserving gas and rubber, incidently, while they watch the show.

Expansion of the field, however, is at a complete standstill for the duration. At the close of a remarkably good season last year, during which the success of the theatres had brought important circuit operators into the field, construction plans were laid for approximately 50 new operations, some of them on a vast scale. Priorities and the war blocked all but the six or seven of these which were nearly completed when the Government banned all new construction.

The drive-in theatres have become an eslished branch of exhibition and indications now are that construction in the field will boom as soon as materials are available. Willis Warren Smith, head of Park-In Theatres, Inc., owners of the patent on technical features of drive-in theatres, said this week that three major circuit operators who now run 14 of the theatres were preparing plans for a number of others.

It has been pointed out that when the ban on materials is lifted the auto theatres, because of their ease of construction and comparatively low cost, will offer a means of rapid expansion of operations in likely territories.

Shut-downs in New England Reported

Present business, meanwhile, is holding a remarkably high level even though the effects of tire and gasoline rationing have been felt in some situations. In general, the theatres in war industry areas where the workers continue to use their cars report business as good or better than last year. New England appears to have been affected more than any other territory and the only shutdowns reported this year are from that area.

In the south and on the west coast, where year-round operation is possible, the records of the Park-In corporation on royalty payments show a slight decrease early in the spring followed by a high level of receipts as the fear of immediate bombing attacks wore off.

Locations near Army training camps were reported to be doing very well, one location in the south showing a $250 weekly gain over last year.

Among the new units opened this year were one near Rochester; another between Hamilton, O., and Cleveland; one covering 14 acres outside of Lexington, Ky.; the ninth unit of the Midwest Drive-In Theatres, Inc., near Kansas City, Mo., and two in the south operated by E. V. Richards.

Business at the Drive-In theatre, western Pennsylvania's only outdoor theatre, is up about 10 per cent over last year to date, according to Norbert Stern, owner. The July 4th gross was a record, Mr. Stern said.

DRIVE-INS POPULAR WITH LATE SHIFTS

Because thousands of workers in war industry areas drive to their jobs and because most of the factories are working on a continuous shift basis, many drive-in theatres find late shows profitable. Two units near Detroit, only slightly affected by the gas and tire shortages, start shows at 11:45 P.M. on Fridays and Saturdays for these workers. The Drive-In theatre at Montgomery, Ohio, near Cincinnati, runs a complete extra show at 1:15 A.M. every Sunday for employees of the 87 Cincinnati industries engaged in war work. The extra show is billed as the "Victory Workers' Show."

Business Up 10% In Pittsburgh

Located about eight miles from downtown Pittsburgh, on Route 88, near South Park, the Drive-In would be showing even greater gains, Mr. Stern believes, except that tire shortages have confined potential trade to city theatres. This area is not subject to gasoline rationing yet. Increased payrolls in the several hundred war production industrial plants in the Pittsburgh district have influenced the boxoffice rise. Downtown and theatre houses likewise report slight gains.

George Stern, the owner's nephew, is manager of the Drive-In. Owner of a loan firm, a chemicals plant, realty, and other properties, Mr. Stern contemplated building outdoor theatres in other Pennsylvania and Ohio cities, until war conditions and priorities on construction materials changed his mind.

Gas rationing has cut into the Drive-In theatre business in the Florida territory from Monday through Thursday. Business picks up slightly Friday night and on Saturday and Sunday nights there are lineups each week.

War Time has hurt the business of the Drive-In theatres more than the gas rationing. Prior to Daylight Saving Time it was possible to squeeze in three shows nightly unless the feature ran unusually long. Now it is practically impossible to put on the first show much before 9 P. M. in any of the Florida Drive-In theatres. The last complete show starts at 11 P.M. and closes around 1 A. M.

Saturday and Sunday nights the Drive-In theatres play to capacity and long lines of cars waiting for the second show on both nights are common sights. Good showmanship has been displayed by the Drive-In theatre in Jacksonville in plugging heavily unusually good pictures with extra newspaper and other advertising. One example is "Ball of Fire," which was held for four days and then brought back again for another three-day run for good business.

There is only one Drive-In theatre in the Jacksonville field. This is operated by George Wilby and associates, who also have Drive-In theatres in Orlando, Savannah and Atlanta. The Florida State Theatres operate two Drive-In theatres, one in Tampa and one in St. Petersburg.

Not Affected In Charlotte

The Drive-In theatre in the suburbs of Charlotte, on Wilkinson Boulevard, has not been adversely affected by war and gas and tire rationing, according to employes who say that attendance runs around 350 per show. Two shows per night are given, at 8:55 and 10:30.

There are four principal drive-in theatres in the Carolinas-Charlotte, Greensboro, Durham, and Columbia, S. C. A survey made over a month ago showed that during the first weeks of the gas rationing there was a falling off of 18 per cent in attendance. According to recent information, this has been cancelled out and business now is at the level of pre-rationing days.

Good Crowds at Birmingham Drive-In

Although worried over curtailed driving, the only two drive-in theatres in the Birmingham area continue to operate to good crowds. One of these is Auto-Movies No. 1 between Birmingham and Bessemer and the other No. 2 at Montgomery, both operated by Auto-Movies Amusement Co. of Bessemer. Each can take care of 75 to 100 cars. Lewis C. Worthington of Bessemer is the proprietor.

Automatic counters show highway traffic in Alabama is off 10 to 15 per cent, but Birmingham and Montgomery are centers of immense war activity and hence the drive-ins have not yet felt the impact of the rubber rationing program. That they will be up against it in 12 months is conceded by the management.

The Pacific Northwest's only drive-in theatre, the Motor-In, on the Pacific Highway between Seattle and Tacoma, is only three months old, but business is reported very satisfactory. Close proximity of the theatre to both cities, as well as suburban defense industries, results in practically full attendance at the two nightly shows, beginning at 9:30 and 11:30 P. M. Attendance is made up very noticeably of war industry workers, however, rather than the regular citizenry of the two cities. The theatre is operated by J. H. Johnson.

So far rationing and the war have had little if any effect on the drive-in theatres in Texas. Gas is not scarce there as in the north and east, and the majority of the public attending the outdoor theatres still own good tires. Only about 10 per cent of the people in this state have had to discontinue their private transportation on account of rubber.

Warmer weather than usual in San Antonio has brought an influx of patrons to the Drive-In operated by J. B. Underwood and Claude Ezell.

The new open-air theatre in Corpus Christi and the older one are owned and operated by Sam Newman. These stay open all year as does one in Austin, operated by John Joseph. There are two in Dallas which only operate in the summer, as the climate is colder than in San Antonio.

No Effect Seen In Cincinnati

A check of the four drive-in theatres in operation in the Cincinnati exchange territory shows that business has not been appreciably affected by the war. While a certain percentage of car owners have curtailed or eliminated driving, their number is comparatively small and, from outward appearances at least, the majority of motorists are continuing to use their cars for the present.

At the two drive-in theatres which were in operation last summer, business on accasion is somewhat in excess of the 1941 curve. These are the Drive-In, at Montgomery, Ohio, adjacent to Cincinnati, operated by the New England Drive-In Theatre Co., where "in-car" speakers recently were installed, and where 1:15 A. M. Saturday night shows were inaugurated a few weeks ago for the benefit of late shift workers in war production plants, and the Riverside Auto Theatre at Dublin, a suburb of Columbus, Ohio, owned by local interests.

Two new open-air theatres have been opened this year, the initial construction having started before priorities on the Drive-In at Dayton, Ohio, owned by Herbert Ochs, of Cleveland, and associates, and the Outdoor Theatre, located approximately midway between Cincinnati and Hamilton, on the much-traveled Dixie Highway, this one being owned by Mrs. L. Winig and others of Cincinnati. Both situations report attendance at a satisfactory level, with no apparent lessening as restrictive conditions develop.

Business Off Slightly In Chicago Area

Chicago has only one drive-in theatre, located in the Morton Grove-Skokie suburban section northwest of the city limits. So far the war and tire situation have had no material effect on the boxoffice. Business to date, compared with that of last year, has been off slightly, but the management attributes this entirely to several days of inclement weather at the beginning of the season.

Operators of the theatre have observed two changes in their patronage this year. There are less cars admitted this season, but each has an average of five persons, against two in a car last summer. Last year, autos were driven from all sections of the city, even from the far south and southwest sides and beyond. Patrons this season do not come from such distant points and are mostly from areas nearby, patronage that did not come last year.

The theatre was opened last June and is owned by the Illinois Drive-In Theatre, Inc., headed by N. S. Barger, who operates the Rialto Theatre, a combination burlesque-movie house in the Loop. Originally it had a car capacity of 1,100, which was increased to 1,500 shortly after the opening. This year it was opened on May 1.

Operator Abandons Construction on Two

The B. A. Lucas Theatre Corporation planned to build two drive-in theatres this year, but the projects were abandoned because of lack of building material and essential equipment. Land had already been purchased and graded. These were to be located on the Dunes Highway, between Gary and Michigan City, Indiana, and on the Southwest Highway in the southwest section of Chicago.

The only two drive-ins in the New Haven territory, the Milford Drive-In operated by E. M. Loew's and Larry Lasky, and the Agawam, operated by Eddie Carroll, have not been as hard hit as expected, it is reported. Although gas rationing has cut down travel, many defense workers in the area have no worry about gas, tires, or auto priorities, and have been using their cars more than ever. Also these defense workers have more money to spend on amusements. The Milford Drive-In has a capacity of 550 cars and an individual speaker system. Agawam is smaller.

The only drive-in theatre in the Milwaukee area, located just west of the city and now in its third year of operation, reports a drop in business over previous seasons, but continues to attract fair sized audiences despite tire rationing and daylight saving time. Following the opening of the Milwaukee Drive-In, reports were prevalent that at least two more such theatres would open in this area. These plans have failed to matrialize, however.

The war and rationing have cut deeply into the drive-in theatre business in Indianapolis. The city has only two drive-ins, both of which were in operation last year and are still going this year. They are the Drive-In, managed by Charles Zack, and the Out Door, managed by Joe Million.

Mid-week business has been hit rather heavily, according to Mr. Zack, but the week-end trade has held up well. Mr. Zack said he believed the business situation now prevailing would continue without much change during the summer.

There were no drive-in casualties in that city. The two which were in operation last year opened their gates again this summer.

ROADSIDE STANDS ABANDON FILMS

Free showings of old-time two-reel motion pictures at drive-in restaurants near Sacramento, Cal., have been abandoned because the managements found that the customers enjoyed the films so much they sat through several showings and crowded the parking area.

Two Drive-Ins on Florida Gulf Coast

On the Gulf Coast of Florida there are two elaborate drive-in theatres. One is at Tampa and the other at St. Petersburg. Both of these houses are owned and operated by Florida State Theatres, Inc.. Business at both of these theatres was very satisfactory until the car and the tire rationing went into effect. Then business dropped off some in both spots. When the first gas rationing went into effect the business at the St. Petersburg houses dwindled to such an extent that the company was forced to hang out the "Closed for the duration" sign. The Tampa Drive-In, in a more thickly settled section than the St. Petersburg house so the customers do not need as much gas to drive in, has "done a little better than we expected," said J. L. Cartwright, district manager of Florida State Theatres.

Tire and automobile rationing have had an adverse effect on the only drive-in theatre in the St. Louis territory, but what has hurt it more is the necessity of starting each performance at 9 o'clock each night because of the war time schedules.

The theatre, situated about 12 miles west of the city limits, owned by the Mid-West Drive-In Theatre Corporation, and managed by Arnold Berger, has had only one good crowd since it opened in May—the night of July 4. Like all other houses in the area, it played to capacity crowd that night. Last year, Mr. Berger said each week was marked by two capacity crowds on at least two nights.

Sharp Decline in Troy-Albany Areas

Business has fallen off 10 per cent as compared to last year, said Mr. Berger, adding that he expected it to fall to 35 per cent by September. The manager said it was likely he would be forced to close his house shortly after Labor Day instead of operating until November, as he has in the past two years.

Business in the Albany territory for the drive-in theatres has slumped sharply since July 22, when the new gas rationing went into effect. Previously this summer, business was off approximately 40 per cent during week-days, with weekends from 10 per cent to 25 per cent off from last year.

A survey of drive-in theatres in the Albany-Troy-Schenectady area showed that both weekend and midweek business were more than 50 per cent off grade. Operators indicated that defense workers seeking night recreation were their principal patron source, with non-industrial communities suffering greatly.

DISTRIBUTORS MARKING TIME ON 1942-43 SELLING PLANS

Five Decree Signers have 102 Films Ready; await Decision on UMPI Plan

With at least 102 features "in the can" and awaiting release or near the final production stages, the sales departments of the five consenting distributors are still marking time on their 1942-43 selling. The product inventory of MGM, Paramount, RKO, Warners and Twentieth Century-Fox is at an all time high with an investment of approximately $115,-034,123 in product for the new season, which starts September 1st.

But, all are waiting to see what's what on the United Motion Picture Industry selling plan, now pending before the Department of Justice.

If the plan is approved by the Department of Justice anti-trust division and is made a formal amendment to the Consent Decree, the companies stand committeed in the United Motion Picture Industry unity conferences to sell in blocks of 13. They are pledged to tradeshow five pictures in each block and to identify the balance. They have promised cancellation privileges in new contracts, based on the average rentals paid last year.

But none has as yet sent salesmen into the field with contracts for autumn delivery on this basis. Most are busy cleaning up sales on the 1941-42 schedule and several have their representatives in the field working on deals for special pictures.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which started its new season on August 1st, is now selling one block of five pictures and has trade shown a second block for September release.

MGM and RKO Have Set Trade Shows

MGM and RKO also have announced trade showings of next year's pictures, and plan to show at least five this month to exhibitors in their exchange centers. This will make it possible either to include the five in the block-of-13 or to sell them as a block of five or less. If the five are included in the larger block, as specified under the UMPI plan, product could be listed and identified from stock on hand and sales begun almost at once.

Warners has listed 10 pictures for release early next season. Paramount has made no announcement nor given an unofficial indication of its plans. Reportedly they have been changed several times within the last month.

All is contingent on what happens to the unity selling plan within the next week or 10 days.

If it is aprpoved by the court or the Department of Justice the consenting distributors will start selling the blocks-of-13 immediately, accoridng to present indications. If no action is forthcoming within a few days, spokesmen for most of the companies indicated that they could not afford to delay longer.

Probably, it was said, they will sell in blocks of five or less as they did last year under the Consent Decree, if no action on the unity plan develops this week.

Can Defer Selling Only to August 15th

The consenting distributors are known to look favorably on continuing to sell under this formula. At conferences with the exhibitor members of UMPI last spring, and to Government representatives, they have asserted that they were willing to sell in blocks-of-13 only as a concession to theatre operators, made in the spirit of the unity movement.

August 15th has been set as the last possible date to which they can defer new season selling by four of the consenting distributors. Twentieth Century-Fox already is at work, on a contingent basis, with blocks of five.

The pictures which RKO will have tradeshown by that date include: "The Big Street," "Journey Into Fear," "They Flew Alone," "Mexican Spitfire's Elephant" and "Highways by Night."

Spy Trial Delays Government Action

MGM is expected to have shown "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," "Apache Trail," "A Yank at Eton," "Tish," "Somewhere I'll Find You," "Seven Sweethearts" and "Panama Hattie." It was unofficially indicated that MGM will have cancellation clauses in its contract in either event.

A decision from the Department of Justice approving or disapproving the blocks-of-13 formula meanwhile was understood to have been delayed by the preoccupation of the Attorney General, Francis Biddle, with the trial of the eight Nazi spies. Thurman Arnold, his assistant in charge of the anti-trust division, indicated last week in New York that the department would take no action on the plan until he had conferred with Mr. Biddle.

With the trial at an end on Monday it was hoped by industry attorneys and exhibitor leaders that the Attorney General would be able to give the matter his early attention, ending the industry confusion as to how pictures are to be sold.

Able to Sell As Desired After September 1st

Technically the distributors, by the terms of the escape clause in the Consent Decree, are free to sell pictures after September 1st as they wish. The section permits them to return to blocks of 50, or to sell singly if prefer, inasmuch as a Consent Decree was not reached by June 1st with Columbia, United Artists and Universal, the "little three" defendants in the original U. S. anti-trust suit.

The sales managere of the Big Five, however, and other officials, have expressed their belief at various times recently that they are "morally bound" to the agreement with exhibitors reached in the unity conferences. Exhibitor leaders also have asserted that they feel the distributors are obligated to sell in the groups of 13 as agreed. They also insist that cancellation clauses should be a part of the new contracts.

Opposition to the new selling plan is still being heard from several quarters, however. This week Nathan Yamins, president of the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., New England group which dissented from the unity meetings, asked the Department of Justice to continue blocks-of-five selling for another year. See page 16. The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and other groups also are said to have filed protests with Robert Wright, head of the Justice Department's motion picture unit.

Letters and telegrams to the Department of Justice, Mr. Biddle, Mr. Arnold, Mr. Wright and other U. S. officials also are reported to have arrived "in substantial number" within the last few weeks from exhibitors urging that the unity plan be made "official."

Warner Chicago Meet Discusses Product

A product discussion confined to an outline of new pictures and terms, with details about blocks and release dates in abeyance until the UMPI situation is clarified, opened the first session of the Warner regional sales meeting at Chicago on July 30th.

Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, said there was no indication as to when official decision will be forthcoming on the UMPI selling plan. Meanwhile the company reserved decision on its product plans.

Paul S. Wilson, branch manager of Twentieth Century-Fox in Atlanta, will represent distributors on the Georgia Tax Committee of the United Motion Picture Industry. He succeeds Jack Price, former Paramount manager in Atlanta, who has been transferred to New Orleans. Oscar Lam is chairman of the George committee, which also includes Willis Davis of the Lucas and Jenkins circuit.

UA, Bogeaus to Produce Story of Sister Kenny

Arrangements have been concluded by Benedict E. Bogeaus, president of General Service Studios, and United Artists Corporation for the production of a feature based on the life of Sister Elizabeth Kenny, Australian nurse who is famous for her 30-year fight to acquaint the medical world with her methods of treating infantile paralysis.

Rosalind Russell will play the lead in the picture, which will be produced by Mr. Bogeaus and distributed by United Artists. Mary McCarthy has been assigned to the script.

Miss Bergman Tested for Role

Ingrid Bergman was tested Monday for the role of "Maria" in Paramount's forthcoming feature, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Zorina had been chosen, but it was reported scenes in which she appeared were unsatisfactory.

NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS FIGHT DECREE REVISIONS

Yamins fears Return of Block Booking, in Letter to Department of Justice

Numerous objections to the proposed amendments to the Federal consent decree were handed the Department of Justice this week by the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, a former affiliate of the Allied States Association—and one which broke with it in disagreement over the decree.

The objections, from this representative group of independent theatre owners, led by Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., followed those made previously to the Department, and to the public, by the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and by individual producers.

The main thesis is that the amendments bring back block booking, chief concern of the Government's anti-trust suit against the eight distributors in New York—which resulted in the decree.

The communication from the Yamins group remarked of the proposed amendments providing in substance that the distributors may sell in groups not to exceed 13 pictures, five of which must be trade-shown, that, "in the first place, it obviously increases block booking from five to 13, an increase of 160 per cent—and is therefore a step backwards."

The New England unit added that "this restores and increases the inequality of competition between the exhibitor and distributor, because the block is so large that the exhibitor cannot afford to pass it up, whether or not the pictures shown are attractive to him. There are too few pictures made, to make it safe for an exhibitor to pass up a block of as many as 13.

Claims Blind Buying Is Restored

"It also restores blind buying to the industry. The argument that eight of the pictures are 'identified' is ridiculous when the provision as to identification is examined. It is so elastic that a picture 'based on the Bible' would be sufficient identification. As a practical matter, it must be admitted that there is no identification, and that these eight pictures are as 'blind as a bat'."

Independent Exhibitors also charged that distributors "strangely" refused to identify pictures so that exhibitors might determine their suitability—"when they have now over one hundred pictures which could be trade shown."

The letter to the Department, over the signature of Mr. Yamins, chairman of the exhibitor organization's executive committee, praised the decree, thus:

"The decere absolutely eliminated the evils of blind-buying by requiring a trade showing of motion pictures, and to this extent is a great accomplishment and of great benefit, not only to independent exhibitors, but to public groups as well. It compromised block booking by requiring that pictures be sold in blocks not to exceed five after trade showing, which, in my opinion, is a reasonable compromise although the Government is placed in the position of sanctioning block booking to a certain extent. There are other matters in the decree which are not pertinent to the discussion and, therefore, for the sake of brevity are disregarded."

Mr. Yamins assailed the "cancellation" allowed in the proposed changes saying:

"To offset the objections to block booking and blind-buying there is offered a privilege of cancellation. It is submitted that this "privilege" is inadequate. In the first place, only the exhibitor paying less than $200 per picture has any cancellation privilege, and the exhibitor who pays more than $200, as well as the public who attend his theatres, receives absolutely no protection. In the second place, it is submitted that experience has indicated, and it is admitted by the representative of one of the consenting companies, that the value of the pictures that may be cancelled is always added to the face of the contract so that the distributor loses nothing and the exhibitor who cancels loses the pictures cancelled but pays for them. I further want to point out that the cancellation privilege, for whatever it is worth, is not as liberal as what was offered by the distributors in trade conferences in 1939."

Mr. Yamins' letter said further:

"The proposed amendments, nor the decree itself, do not include the exhibitor's contract that the exhibitor must sign in order to get pictures to keep his theatres open. The terms and provisions and clauses of any contract are left solely in the hands of the distributor, and the exhibitor cannot change a single provision; he must sign on the dotted line if he wants the pictures. It would be possible, if the amendments are approved, for any distributor to change any clause he desires that may benefit him although it may injure the exhibitor, and thereby create even greater inequality in competition between the exhibitor and distributor.

"One major company, though not one of the consenting companies, has so changed the clause defining the meaning of the word 'release' of a picture that it has actually refused to deliver to exhibitors a picture contracted for in an entire block unless the exhibitor agrees to increase the cost of admission during the run of the picture. The effect of this is that established availability and clearance is destroyed if the exhibitor thinks that his patrons are paying enough for admission to his theatre.

"If this non-consenting company can write the terms of the contract as it pleases, and since there is nothing in the Consent Decree nor in the proposed amendments that prohibits this, an approval of the proposed amendments would be construed as governmental blessing for distributors to write the terms of exhibitors' contracts to benefit themselves even though it may be detrimental to the exhibitors' interests.

"I submit on behalf of the Independent Exhibitors of New England that for the above considerations the Department of Justice should not consent to the proposed amendments. The industry is now enjoying prosperity in spite of the Consent Decree. One comany has already sold a block-of-five after the trade showings to be delivered at the end of the current selling season, and other companies are about to do the same thing. It is said that the new plan is for one year.

"It would be far better to continue with the present plan for another year—at least the United States Government would not be a party to a retrogressive step in the motion picture industry that is fraught with so much danger and is objectionable to a substantial group of independent exhibitors and the public groups as well."

Allied sees Significance in St. Paul Theatre Decision

Allied States Association saw great significance in a recent decision in St. Paul Federal appeals court, in the suit by the White Bear Theatre Corporation against the State Theatre Corporation—both operators of theatres at White Bear Lake, Minnesota.

Allied's bulletin said: "The importance of the decision lies in the ruling that one exhibitor may maintain an action under the Sherman Law against another exhibitor, for monopolizing the product on a particular run in a competitive area—without alleging or proving a conspiracy between the offending exhibitor and the distributors, and without even joining the distributors as defendants."

Allied added: "The decision also indicates that eventually the exhibitors who are the victims of local film monopolies enjoyed by the circuits or other preferred competitors will seek effective remedies in the courts instead of invoking the milk-and-water remedies provided by the Consent Decree."

The White Bear theatre suit had charged the State theatre with monopolizing all product, in endeavor to follow its threat to put the plaintiff theatre, new, "out of business inside a year". A St. Paul Federal court found for the defendant. The appeals court reversed this finding. There may be a new trial.

Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel—whose initials are on the Allied bulletin—believes the appeals court decision should "spell the end of local monopolies based on hoggishness and built by unfair and abnormal means".

Only One Case in Arbitration for Week

The docket of the motion picture arbitration tribunals administered by the American Arbitration Association dropped to a new low of inactivity this week. Only one case was filed.

Action on another case, a dismissal in the Cincinnati tribunal, was reported this week to the administrative office of the AAA in New York.

Stanley Matthews, arbitrator, dismissed the specific run action filed in May by the Alpine-Belle Theatre Company, operators of the Alpine theatre at Belle, W. Va. The case, the tribunal's seventh, named the five consenting distributors, Warners, MGM, Paramount, RKO and the "Little Three," Universal, United Artists and Columbia. The Black Diamond Theatre Company was listed as an interested party.

Mr. Matthews dismissed the action on the motion of distributor defendants after the complainant by his own admission conceded that the complaint did not meet the provisions of Section X of the consent decree. He had filed the case on the grounds that he had been deprived of first run in Belle when the Black Diamond Company started erecting a new theatre. It was under construction at the time of filing of the action.

During July only four new cases were filed in AAA motion picture tribunals. Two were clearance demands in Philadelphia, attacking the margins enjoyed by Wilmington theatres.

A specific run action was filed at Oklahoma City and Indianapolis received one new clearance case.

No new cases were filed at New York, heretofore the busiest of the 31 tribunals. Charles Wall, manager of the local office there, also disclosed that no hearings have been scheduled for August. He attributed the lack of action on the 13 cases still pending to the fact that attorneys and parties are on vacation.

An inclination by exhibitors to delay starting arbitration actions until they see what changes in the decree might be recommended by United Motion Picture Industry committees, and what effect the new selling season will have on their competitive status was said also to be responsible for the relative quiet on the arbitration front.

Tuesday, Chicago's 19th case and the first complaint in the tribunal since early June, was filed by the Madlin theatre, 800-seat house at 1910 Madison Street, on Chicago's West Side. A clearance action, it named the five consenting distributors an dasked reduction of the 14 days held by the Essaness circuit's American theatre.

Condon Becomes Booker

Donald Condon has resigned as assistant district manager for the United States Army Motion Picture Service, to accept the position of booker for the Evergreen State Theatres, Seattle, succeeding Jack Rosenberg, who recently enlisted in the U. S. Coast Guard.

New Sales Promotions At 20th Century-Fox

The new sales management at Twentieth Century Fox, under Tom Connors, now vice-president in charge of distribution, made further personnel changes this week.

The promotions are: Harry G. Ballance, Southern district manager, to Southern division manager with headquarters in Atlanta; Paul Wilson, Atlanta branch manager, to manager of a new Southeastern district; F. Dodson, Florida sales manager, to Atlanta branch manager; H. R. Beiersdorf, Dallas manager, to newly created post of Great Lakes district manager, to Dallas manager; C. P. Peppiatt, appointed New Orleans branch manager.

Also, E. X. Callahan, formerly Boston manager, to New England district manager, succeeding Tom Bailey, resigned; Moe Grassgreen, Albany manager, to Boston manager; Harry Alexander, Boston sales manager, to Albany branch manager; J. M. Connolly, Masachusetts salesman, to Boston territory sales manager; Frank Drew, formerly with MGM and U. A., added to Boston sales staff; Clair Hilgers, appointed Oklahoma City branch manager, succeeding Charles Clark, resigned. Art Abeles, formerly with Warner Bros., appointed special home office representative.

Vaudeville Performers' Union Holds First National Meeting

The first national meeting of national representatives and locals' executive secretaries of the American Guild of Variety Artists, was held at the Netherland-Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, Saturday and Sunday.

Among resolutions passed was one requiring a uniform national scale for all traveling vaudeville units.

Presiding was Walter Greaza, national administrative chairman, whose term expires August 25th. It was reported the parent actors' union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, from whom Mr. Greaza was "loaned" until the variety performers' union obtains financial stability, be asked to extend Mr. Greaza's appointment several months.

Western Electric to Receive "E" Award

The new combined Army-Navy "E" for "exceptional performance" will be given Western Electric the last week of this month. The award will coincide with the 25th anniversary of the first demonstration by company engineers of two-way radio telephone between airplane and ground.

Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, in announcing the award, commended WE's Hawthorne, Kearny and Point Breeze plants for "making an outstanding contribution to victory."

In acknowledging Mr. Patterson's letter, C. G. Stoll, Western Electric president, commented that "the company's sales to the Government during July of this year practically equalled those for the entire year of 1941."

Atlas Confident of RKO Future

The semi-annual report of Atlas Corporation, large stockholder of RKO, among other corporations, issued Tuesday, disclosed an asset value for the common stock of $11.01 per share after deducting for all outstanding preferred at $50.25 per share, its par value plus accrued dividends. Total assets at June 30, 1942, were $45,911,358.50.

A dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock amounting to 75 cents pershare were declared for payment on September 1, 1942.

Floyd B. Odlum, president, in his letter to stockholders, praised executives and public officials alike for the war production results to date.

Mr. Odlum stated that the two major holdings of Atlas Corporation were in Ogden Corporation and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. The report showed an ownership of 44 per cent of the voting stock of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, carried at $6,216,978.

As to Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Mr. Odlum wrote:

"RKO has three major divisions, i. e., theatre operations, picture productions and picture distribution. The record of the production division has not been good during recent months. Steps have been taken which it is believed will correct this. The other two divisions have done well. Your management is optimistic as to the future of the motion picture industry due to its recognized essential nature during the war period and because it represents one natural and desirable outlet for pent-up spending power of the people."

Atlas earnings from interest and dividends of $684,501.36 were reported for the six-month period, leaving an excess from dividends and interest over expenses of $245,495.78.

Chicago Operators Union in Spotlight

The affairs of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators Union were in the spotlight again following the announcement that a committee headed by Smith King, operator of the Granada theatre, is working toward the amendment of the by-laws and constitution of Local 110.

Taking this fact and the recent trips of Peter Shayne, president of the union, and John Smith, business manager, to New York, where they were reported to have been questioned by United States Attorney Matthias Correa, the Chicago Tribune last week in a front-page story said that members of the union were seeking to crush an alleged permit racket indulged of the local.

In part the Tribune story said, 'For the first time in 25 years the rank and file of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators Union, one of the richest and most powerful of the city's labor organizations, is to have a chance to vote for new by-laws. The new rules, as proposed, would end a permit racket that has poured $200,000 a year into the pockets of gangsters lurking in the background of the union and would make mandatory regular financial reports to the membership."

Changes in Buffalo

Carl Spavento has succeeded C. S. Williams as manager of the Twentieth Century, Buffalo. Nelson Blosat has resigned as manager of the Varsity theatre. Charles McKernan has replaced Fred Ziemer at the Niagara theatre.

INDUSTRY SPEEDS PLANS FOR BILLION DOLLAR BOND SALES

Hollywood Victory Committee organizes Itineraries of Star Tours of 300 Cities

Plans for the industry's "billion-dollar" War Bond drive in September got under way at full speed this week. The campaign, which is sponsored by the War Activities Committee with the cooperation of the Treasury Department, has as its general title "Salute to Our Heroes Month."

In Los Angeles, the Hollywood Victory Committee is organizing itineraries of the stars who will appear at huge rallies planned for 300 cities throughout the nation. Monday, at a meeting of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, its directors voted a plan to place curtain speeches plugging the sale of War Bonds and Stamps on the endings of at least three important pictures of each company. Studios named advance publicity men for the bond selling tour, which is under the direction of S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising of Warner Bros. Oscar A. Doob is national publicity director of the campaign.

National and regional exhibitor organizations in addition to individual theatremen are organizing at top speed for greater effort in behalf of the campaign. To help the exhibitors spurt wartime securities' sales, War Activities Committee prepared and sent out to 15,000 theatres over the week-end a campaign book called "Showmen at War." The book also is going to state chairmen, state administrators, film editors, Washington officials and others.

Film theatres throughout the country are scheduled to make a four-minute halt at 9 P. M. September 1st, to salute the nation's heroes with the opening of the drive. War Activities Committee estimates that a maximum of 11,000,000 people may be in theatre audiences to participate. They will be asked to rise and give three cheers for America's fighting forces, and with radio pick-ups, the salutes will be carried to many camps and by shortwave to distant fronts.

Advance Men Meet In Hollywood

On Tuesday, in Hollywood, studio publicity men who will act as advance agents for the "Stars Over America" rallies, met with Carlton Duffus of the Division of Motion Pictures and Special Events, War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department, to discuss itineraries. Publicity men chosen were: Mervin Houser, Paramount; Connie Krebs, RKO; Gene Murphy, Universal; Dick Hyland, Warner Bros.; Robert Doman, Twentieth-Fox; John Del Valle, Columbia. MGM's representative was to be announced shortly.

A gala premiere of the September campaign is being planned for Hollywood, it was reported, and another large demonstration in New York will close the drive, according to present plans. Kenneth Thomson of the Hollywood Victory Committee is expected to arrive in New York next Monday, August 9th, to discuss the star tours with WAC leaders. A "strategy committee" was to meet in New York on Monday to plan for nationwide events. Where cities are not slated for a visit of film personalities, the demonstrations would be in the form of "hero rallies," "War Mothers' rallies" and other special events, it was said.

Twelve fan magazines and two others will devote free advertising for the drive in their September issues, through arrangements of the Eastern Public Relations Committee of the industry, it was announced. At a meeting of the latter group in New York last week, at which S. Barret McCormick presided, almost the entire session was devoted to the September drive. Oscar A. Doob, Perry Lieber, chairman of the committee's western division, George Bown, also a member of the western group, and Glendon Allvine, executive secretary of the Committee, were present.

Meanwhile, national and regional exhibitor groups are polling their state affiliates and members on whether they prefer to have the parent associations act for them as issuing agents for War Bonds on a group basis or to be certified individually as agents for the September campaign. The polls are being conducted among regional organizations affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association by Edward L. Kuykendall, president, and among Allied States Association units by M. A. Rosenberg, president. Robert H. Poole of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners is canvassing members of that organization. Max Cohen, president of Allied of New York, an MPTOA unit, and Harry Brandt, president of Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, have expressed preferences for individual certification of theatres.

S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising for Warner Bros., was appointed field director of the 300 nationwide rallies to be held in connection with the industry's September billion-dollar War Bond drive, it was announced last Friday by the War Activities Committee.

Mr. Einfeld will have a staff of leading publicity men from each studio, home office and field publicity departments who will act as advance agents for the Hollywood stars and accompany them on the seven different tours routed for the rallies. The Hollywood Victory Committee is now recruiting prominent players for the September tours.

3,000 Theatres Are Bond Agents

More than 3,000 theatres already have been listed with the Treasury Department, grouped according to Federal Reserve districts, and it is expected that the total will exceed 5,000 by the start of the campaign on September 1st.

Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres' advertising director, has accepted a special assignment to take charge of all screen promotion work. Ernest Emerling, acting advertising and publicity head of Loew's Theatres, was named by Oscar Doob to prepare a special broadside for use of theatres. Silas F. Seadler, advertising director for MGM, was named to handle display advertisements in trade papers, magazines and newspapers.

George Skouras, whose 66 theatres in New York were the first to become official War Bond issuing agents, said last week, at a meeting of the city's committee on arrangements for the September drive, that he believed a number of his theatres had shown an upsurge in box office returns traceable to the Skouras circuit's method of selling bonds for immediate delivery.

Skouras Cites "Public Service"

"Any exhibitor who feels that the trouble and effort he puts into War Bond and Stamp selling is a burden, is overlooking something," he said. "Theatres are making it easy for the little people, the workers, to invest their money in War Bonds and Stamps. We are 'bond banks' that are open at night and on Sundays and holidays. These people find it very inconvenient to leave their work and go to banks or post offices to buy War Bonds or Stamps. We fill their need. They appreciate it. We are doing a genuine public service that is reflecting goodwill upon us. Any exhibitor who doesn't go all-out in this drive isn't a good showman—or a good American," he said.

Large rallies have been promised by A. H. Blank, Iowa chairman, if stars are sent to Des Moines, Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Burlington, Moline, Fort Dodge, Mason City, Ames, Iowa City, Clinton, Marshalltown and Dubuque.

See July Bond Sales Better than June

First reports of July sales of War Bonds and Stamps sold at theatres received at the War Activities Committee headquarters, forecast a much higher return for this month than for June. Last month, sales totaled $18,000,000, according to WAC. July figures thus far are: 790 theatres sold $865,968 in bonds and stamps.

Theatres reporting included:

Virginia, Portsmouth, Va., sold $34,647 in bonds and stamps; Park, Reading, Pa., $15,000; Centre, Salt Lake City, $15,451; Capitol, New London, Conn., $25,000; Corona, Corona, L. I., $10,640; Ogden, in the Bronx, $5,735 in stamps, $5,175 in bonds; Virginia, Somerset, Kentucky, had a $51,522 sale; Allyn, Hartford, Conn., reports a $12,000 sale; George Mefford, manager of the M. & P. Olympia Theatre at Chelsea, Mass., reported a sale of $139,425.70 in bonds and stamps during July.

Coast "Dandy" Bond Debut

The west coast premiere of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," August 12th at the Hollywood theatre, will be sponsored by the Treasury Department in the same manner as the Broadway opening which brought $5,750,000 in War Bond sales, it was announced last week by Warner Bros. Designated by Treasury officials as a "Build Ships" premiere, the Hollywood opening aims to raise at least $5,000,000, enough to build three Liberty ships, it was said.

Scale of admissions for the debut will be the same as the New York opening—from $25 to $25,000 in War Bonds. With the Hollywood theatre seating 2,764, it was estimated that the sales probably would exceed the $5,000,000 quota.

Henry Ginsberg of the Motion Picture Committee for Hollywood, and Fred Beetson, representing the Association of Motion Picture Producers, are among those on the premiere committee.

'Holiday Inn' Nets $15,000 for Navy Relief

More than $15,000 was raised for the Navy Relief Society, when Paramount's Irving Berlin musical, "Holiday Inn" made its debut at the Paramount theatre, New York, on Tuesday night, at a "sell-out" premiere performance. On Monday all but 200 of the 3,600 seats had been sold and the rest were sold before curtain time. Military and Government officials, stage, screen and radio personalities attended the opening, at which Admiral Lemar Richard Leahy, U.S.N., Retired, and Mrs. Leahy were guests of honor. Mayor LaGuardia, representing New York officials, also was present.

A special stage show was presented for the premiere, in which Broadway and Hollywood stars contributed their services in addition to purchasing blocks of tickets. Admissions were scaled from $1.10 to $5.50. Paramount also arranged to put on a half-hour radio show over 86 stations of the Blue Network, starting at 9 P.M. The coast-to-coast program offered new hit tunes of the film, which co-stars Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire.

Those scheduled to appear in the stage show

Those who appeared in the stage show included Connie Boswell, Irving Berlin, Jan Peerce, Benny Goodman, Phil Harris, Phil Spitalny, Skinny Ennis and their bands, and Betty Hutton and Majorie Reynolds, who has the leading feminine role in "Holiday Inn." Miss Hutton and Miss Reynolds sold tickets on Monday and Tuesday in the Paramount theatre lobby. They also took turns selling bonds and stamps from a booth in front of the theatre.

Among the industry leaders and others who were expected to attend the premiere were: Stanton Griffis, Y. Frank Freeman, Adolf Zukor, Barney Balaban, Spyros Skouras, Jules Stein, Jack Cohn, Leonard Goldenson, Edward Alperson, John Hertz, Jr., Joseph Bernhard, Ben Kalmenson, Neil Agnew, Walter B. Cokell, Maurice Bergman, Oscar Morgan, Deems Taylor and Alfred McCoskor.

Stars join Camp Tour for USO

Screen-radio comedians George Burns and Gracie Allen head a USO-Camp Show company which this week toured six Army and Navy posts in the New York area. They appeared at Ft. Hamilton on Tuesday and ended their tour on Friday at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Bing Crosby is touring camps in Western States this week, accompanied by Phil Silvers and Rags Ragland.

Constance Bennett is on tour in the south and Carole Landis is completing a southern tour for USO this week. Bob Burns, radio-screen comedian, will be on the road for USO in the midwest and east this week and next.

Kate Smith, radio singer, this week completed her first Columbia short, "America Sings with Kate Smith," the net proceeds of which will go to USO. This was her first screen appearance in 10 years. The subjects, in addition to general theatre release, will be printed in 16 mm for Army and Navy posts overseas.

Seidelman in London On Newsreel Mission

Joseph Seidelman, Universal's foreign sales manager, was in London this week, on Universal business, and also on a mission for the United Newsreel being distributed abroad by American newsreel companies.

He is chairman of the foreign sales managers' subcommittee of the film industry's War Activities Committee.

Hold Party for Harman

Milwaukee's theatre row gave a farewell party July 31 at the Schroeder Hotel for Milton H. Harman, theatre executive, who has resigned from the Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corp. to join the White Tower System of restaurants at Stamford, Conn. Mr. Harman started in the theatre business in 1920 as doorman at the Savoy.

Ambassador Reopens

The Ambassador, downtown first run house operated by Fanchon & Marco in St. Louis, reopened last week after a two-month shutdown, at advanced prices. The attraction was "Eagle Squadron," and the theatre, which customarily had a scale of 30, 40 and 50 cents, went to 40, 50 and 60 cents for the week.

Shooting starts on 'Commandos' Film in Canada

by PAT DONOVAN
in Montreal

Filming of a feature, "The Commandos Come at Dawn" began in Victoria, B. C., recently when Paul Muni, one of the stars, arrived at the Empress Hotel to join the rest of the Hollywood production unit. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Merle Oberon and Maureen O'Sullivan, whose husband, Lieut. Com. John Farrow, R. C. N., will direct the film, have been mentioned in connection with other roles in the film.

"The Commandos Come at Dawn" is a script adapted from the war story by C. S. Forester, and is being produced by Columbia Pictures, with the cooperation of the Canadian War Office. Units of the Canadian Navy, the Air Force and the Commando forces of the Canadian Army are taking part in the film which, when released, will be the representation of a Commando raid on a Nazi-occupied Norwegian port.

Gordon Wiles, production designer for Columbia explained that the decison to make the film in Vancouver Island, B. C., was prompted by the marked resemblance of the island coastline to that of Norway. The Empress Hotel at Victoria was the headquarters for the 250 in the film party.

Stage Relief Fund Received $340,000

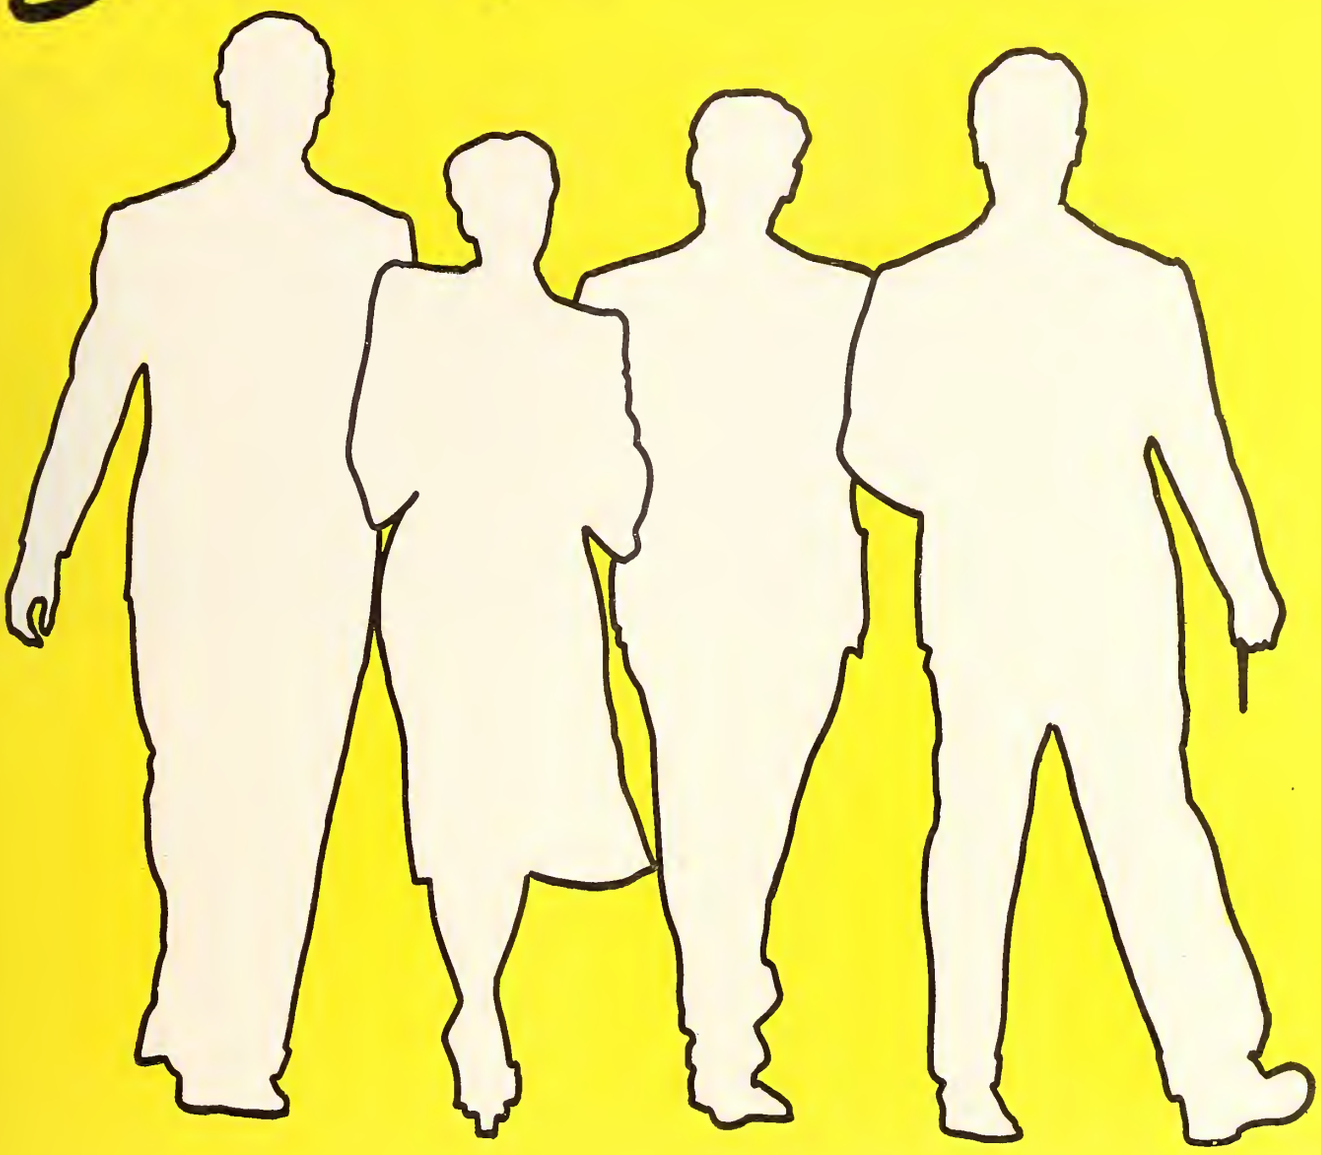
A total of $340,000 was received from 182 benefit performances in legitimate theatres during the last 10 years for the Stage Relief Fund, it was reported by that organization in New York on Monday. The past season was termed the most successful financially for the Fund, according to a report issued by the executive committee.

Ten benefit performances were given solely for the Fund and a special performance of the Experimental Theatre's "Yours, A. Lincoln," was staged for both the Actors' Fund and Stage Relief. The average gross was $2,366, estimated as an all-time high.

OSS Takes Office in New York Laboratory

The Office of Strategic Services has taken part of the facilities of the Producers Laboratory, 1600 Broadway, New York.

It is collecting and collating film, still and motion picture, showing foreign terrains. Its prepared films then are distributed to the proper agencies.



Urges Massachusetts Fairs

Earl S. Carpenter, secretary of the Massachusetts State College Extension Service, has requested the revival this autumn of the old-time Yankee fair in towns throughout the state, with the proceeds to go to war relief agencies. Government officials have requested that fairs not be held because of the transportation problem.

Scholarship Offered

The J. H. Cooper Foundation, owner of the Lincoln, Nebraska and Stuart theatres in Lincoln, Neb., has established a $500 scholarship at the University of Nebraska. The award is in memory of the late Sidney R. Kent and will be given to an outstanding student of medicine for research.

U. S. THEATRES MOBILIZING TO PROMOTE SALVAGE DRIVE

Follows Request of WPB; Greenthal granted Leave to serve as Consultant

The motion picture theatres of the nation this week swung into action as focal points in their communities for the collection of scrap materials of all kinds, following the request of the War Production Board in Washington that the theatres assume local leadership in the nationwide campaign for the collection of materials useful in the war effort.

The country's theatres previously had given considerable assistance in local drives for the collection of scrap rubber, aluminum and other metals, paper and the like.

At the same time, it was disclosed on Monday in New York that Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, was granted an indefinite leave of absence to serve as consultant to the WPB in the national salvage campaign. He reported in Washington Tuesday. Industry leaders and his asociates at United Artists were to tender him a dinner Friday night at Toots Shor's Restaurant, New York.

Mr. Greenthal's duties were described roughly as informational. Working through the Office of War Information, he will explain phases of the campaign to the public. He also will aid the WPB in expanding and improving the drive. It is a full time position.

Swinging into line, theatres in many sections are conducting "scrap matinees," with specified amounts of scrap as the price of admission.

Omaha Theatres Hold "Scrap Matinee"

Seventeen Omaha theatres were to hold a "scrap matinee" Friday, with salvageable rubber and metal the admission.

All Wilkes-Barre, Pa., theatres are cooperating. Many are running trailers and are using posters.

The Rialto, Plymouth, Pa., ran a "rubber matinee." At special shows, three other houses in the Wilkes-Barre area collected several tons of aluminum.

Seattle theatres have cooperated fully. Much of the work has been without suggestion, and at individual theatre owner's expense.

Monday, Philadelphia houses will hold special matinees. Three pounds of scrap will admit a person. Heading the theatres committee are Sidney Samuelson, business manager of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and Lewen Pizor, president of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Pennsylvania exhibitor organization.

Many houses in Connecticut have held "rubber shows." Fifty-two of the E. M. Loew circuit held a special matinee.

More than one ton of rubber scrap was collected by Warners' Stanley, Camden, N. J., managed by Joseph Murdock.

One thousand children brought 4,000 pounds of scrap rubber to the Warner, Wilmington, Del., managed by Lewis Black.

Charles Moyer, manager of the Warner State, Hanover, Pa., reported collecting a ton and a half of rubber from 1,500 children attending a special matinee.

The circuit's Majestic, Gettysburg, Pa., managed by Sidney Poppay, held a rubber collection show sponsored by the Boy Scouts.

Such shows are now being held in the Des Moines territory, among others. Circuits, like the Central States Theatres, and independent exhibitors are cooperating.

Roy Lepowitz, owner of the Iowa theatre, Madrid, Ia., has been accepting rubber in the equivalent of two cents per pound, towards purchase of tickets at any time.

M. A. Fauver, operator of the Broadway, theatre, Brooklyn, Ia., admitted without charge persons bringing old automobile tires.

From Chicago, it was reported that while the Balaban and Katz circuit is organized for the salvage campaign, the city's exhibitors are not yet effectively coordinated, although most theatres ran a trailer urging public cooperation with the drive. Some theatres held "rubber matinees," and the Balaban and Katz circuit collected 2,428 pounds, and 20 tons of scrap metal from theatre audiences.

Theatres also are aiding the scrap phonograph record drive. Warners' Earle, Philadelphia, last week arranged a Dorsey Victory Dinner, in conjunction with the appearance on its stage of Tommy Dorsey and orchestra. Invitations were sent to every person turning in 200 scrap records. The Bartlestein circuit, Chicago, recently admitted each child who brought six old or broken records.

Monroe W. Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, has been granted a leave of absence to take a post with the War Production Board at Washington as consultant on the salvage and conservation campaign. David E. Weshner, director of exploitation at UA, succeeds Mr. Greenthal. Mr. Weshner joined United Artists a year and a half ago. He previously was associated with Warner Bros. for 13 years in various executive theatre posts and was national director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros. Theatres.

Theatres Not Hit by New York Blackout

New York's 25-minute "surprise" black out Friday, July 31st, beginning at 9:50 P. M., did not affect box offices. The public was well informed, special theatre announcements advising that the "raid" was only a test, were found unnecessary. At the hour of the blackout, most of the theatre ticket sales already had been completed for the evening.

Erie County, including Buffalo, this week awaited a "surprise" blackout.

Chicago is to have a blackout next Wednesday.

In that city, the Army this week took over the Eighth Street theatre. The men now in training at the Stevens and other hotels in that city will use it. The Army took over the hotels last week as training centers.

Milwaukee underwent a blackout last week, with Chicago Office of Civilian Defense officials watching. Theatres reported varying effects. Some said their receipts dropped as much as 20 per cent. Theatres advertised: "Put out your lights and go to the movies."

ASKING SCREEN TO AID WITH LATIN AMERICAN PROGRAM

U.S. to use Distributors' Facilities for Improved Coverage of Hemisphere

Latin American theatres and the U. S. industry's distribution system in South America are being recruited by the Motion Picture Division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Greater participation in the Coordinator's project for the cultural interchange of films is being sought from the organized industry as a further aid to hemisphere solidarity. The Government, convinced that the screen is one of the most effective weapons against Axis propaganda in South America, wants to use to the fullest possible extent the medium which for many years has supplied over 85 per cent of South America's film entertainment. There are approximately 5,400 theatres in South America.

Foreign managers of the major distributors met recently with Francis Alstock, director of the film work of the U. S. agency headed by Nelson Rockefeller, to discuss means of closer cooperation in South America between the Government and the commercial industry. A subcommittee of foreign managers was appointed last week to act as liaison for the industry with the Coordinator's office.

Serving on it are Phil Reisman of RKO, Walter Gould, United Artists, and Laudy W. Lawrence of Twentieth Century-Fox. Mr. Reisman also is the advisory director of the Coordinator's non-theatrical film distribution system.

Two-Way Cooperation Is Basis of Plan

The project under discussion envisions two-way cooperation. The U. S. agency would assist Hollywood in maintaining an uninterrupted supply of commercial product to South America, interceding for it to obtain shipping facilities, film stock and production priorities from other government agencies. The Rockefeller office has undertaken this function in behalf of many other industries.

In turn the Coordinator would seek increasing cooperation from producers and a theatrical screen outlet in South America for at least some of its ideological short subjects. These are now being prepared from scripts written for the Coordinator by leading film writers. They would be produced by Hollywood studios, in some instances with Government money.

The project would be entirely supplemental to the non-theatrical program which the Motion Picture Division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs has been working on for over a year. Under the latter program pictures on health, education, U. S. scenery, industry, agriculture and a few "ideological" subjects related to the war and United States military power have been sent southward.

These have been distributed entirely through non-theatrical channels. However, in many cities, representatives of U. S. film companies have served on local committees and otherwise assisted in arranging the exhibition of these pictures. The cultural attaches at American diplomatic and consular missions are in charge of this phase of distribution.

The new project calls for direct circulation of pictures, with entertainment value, through American film company exchanges in South America.

The Coordinator's production staff, headed by Kenneth Macgowan and Philip Dunne, now has about 25 scripts by Hollywood writers in work. Titles were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on July 18th. On such subjects as "Army Nurse," "If Hitler Should Die," "Italy Is Sorry," "Nazi Biographies," and "Nazis and Catholic Youth" they point out directly the Axis threat to the American nations.

Distribution Details Not Yet Completed

These would be offered to the Hollywood studios for inclusion, without cost, in their own production plans. If accepted the stories would be distributed in the customary commercial manner. Non-theatrical circulation in 16 mm by the Coordinator would be delayed until they have played theatres in South America. In other instances the pictures may be produced directly by Mr. Alstock's division, under contracts with major studios.

Details of how these pictures are to be distributed have not been worked out. Possibly they will be sold to Latin American theatres as part of established short subject programs. They also may be offered at nominal cost, or a plan may be arranged for free distribution along lines similar to the Victory shorts shown in U. S. theatres under the auspices of the War Activities Committee.

Sound tracks in Spanish and Portuguese would be made for all of the pictures, as in the case of the 16 mm non-theatrical pictures which the Government is now shipping.

The second, and most immediately important object of the closer liaison between the Rockefeller office and foreign managers is to insure speedy distribution of U. S. films in South America. The Coordinator's film division said that there are a number of pictures on forthcoming release schedules which it is anxious to see on South American screens as quickly as possible. It is said they bear important evidence of the United States' determination to fight for hemisphere solidarity and to resist totalitarian aggression. Also, and equally important, they show what the people of this country are doing to win the war.

The Coordinator's office was reluctant to single out any pictures by title, but reminded that its west coast representatives, through the Motion Picture Society of the Americas, and through the Production Code Administration Latin American advisor, had advised producers on the inter-American aspects of a number of forthcoming pictures.

Some Films Set in Latin America

Typical of the pictures planned for next season, which are considered of special interest to Latin American audiences are those about the U. S. military services, the civilian war effort and national morale, and those which depict the shape of Axis agression. A number of pictures also have Latin American settings and several, including Orson Welles' "It's All True" and Walt Disney's "Saludos" include material made in South America under the Coordinator's auspices.

The Government reportedly has ruled that the overseas distribution of U. S. films must be expedited as much as possible, and the companies assured of the means of maintaining and increasing their export footage.

The Coordinator's staff will assist the industry, through the New York foreign managers' committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and through the Hollywood Motion Picture Society for the Americas. It will pass along requests for shipping space, special film allotments, or special production needs, with official recommendation, to the War Production Board, Board of Economic Warfare, Maritime Commission, State Department and other Government agencies concerned with film export.

It also is expected to arrange the speediest possible censorship clearance, here and abroad, on films for South America.

The Coordinator's office in no way will conflict or compete with the theatrical film business in South America, a spokesman said. He declared the arrangement should be of substantial benefit to the industry here and to South America's 5,400 theatres, now and after the war.

SOUTH AMERICA IS IMPORTANT MARKET

Foreign departments of the distributors say that with the virtually complete loss of Continental European markets the South American theatres have become one of the most substantial outlets for U. S. product. They estimate that the Latin American trade accounts for approximately 14 per cent of all foreign revenue. According to the last official estimate of the number of theatres in South America, prepared in 1940 by Nathan Golden, chief of the Film Section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, there are 5,400 theatres in South America. Distributors, however, estimate that the correct total is now nearer the 6,000 mark. Argentina, Mexico and Brazil are each said to have more than 1,200 theatres in operation.

PETRILLO HALED TO COURT TO ANSWER TRUST CHARGE

Action in Chicago Alleges Conspiracy to Restrain Trade in Recording Ban

James Caesar Petrillo's American Federation of Musicians was called into court Monday by the United States Department of Justice. On that day in Chicago Federal court the Department filed its injunction suit against the Federation.

The Government charged that the union's July 16th demand that the National Broadcasting Company cancel the broadcasts of high school orchestras from the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich., and its order of July 28th for a boycott of all southern California stations of the Don Lee Broadcasting System as a move to force Station KFRC, San Francisco, to hire a larger and more expensive orchestra were part of a conspiracy to restrain trade and commerce, of which its ban on phonograph records and transcriptions was but one factor. The boycott was rescinded Tuesday.

Named in the complaint were the AFM and Mr. Petrillo, C. L. Bagley, Los Angeles, vice-president; Fred W. Birnbach, Newark, secretary; Harry E. Brenton, Boston, financial secretary-treasurer, and Chauncey A. Weaver, Des Moines; J. W. Parks, Dallas; Oscar F. Hild, Cincinnati; A. Rex Riccardi, Philadelphia, and Walter M. Murdoch, Ontario, members of the executive committee.

Government Charges Are Listed

The Government charges that the defendants are engaged in a "wrongful and unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of . . . trade and commerce in phonograph records, electrical transcriptions and radio broadcasting," in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, and that "for the purpose of restraining and destroying all interstate commerce in phonograph records and electrical transcriptions; of procuring, monopolizing and controlling all performances of musical entertainment; of eliminating competition entirely between socalled 'transcribed' or 'canned' music and music produced through live musicians, the defendants have arranged and agreed among themselves to do the following things:

"(a) to prevent the manufacture and sale of all phonograph records and electrical transcriptions;

"(b) to eliminate from the market all manufacturers, distributors, jobbers and retailers of phonograph records and electrical transcriptions;

"(c) to prevent radio broadcasting stations from broadcasting musical compositions recorded on phonograph records and electrical transcriptions;

"(d) to prevent the use of phonograph records in socalled 'juke boxes' located in hotels, restaurants and dance halls;

"(e) to prevent the use of phonograph records in the home;

"(f) to prevent the sale of phonograph records to radio, broadcasting stations and 'juke box' operators by requiring manufacturers to boycott all distributors, jobbers and retailers who sell such records to radio broadcasting stations and 'juke box' operators;

"(g) to eliminate all musical performances over the radio except those performed by members of the American Federation of Musicians; and

"(h) to require radio broadcasting stations to hire unnecessary 'stand-by' musicians, members of the AFM, whose services are neither necessary nor desired, by requiring radio networks to boycott affiliated stations which refuse to meet defendants' demands for the hiring of 'stand-by' musicians."

This conspiracy, the court was told, has been effectuated by the refusal to renew licenses of record companies for employment of union members in making musical recordings, the demand on NBC for cancelation of the high school broadcasts, and the California boycott.

Says Working Conditions Are Not Involved

The complaint further charged that the conspiracy "does not involve or grow out of any dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, and is not intended to be, and is not, in aid of collective bargaining, higher wages, shorter hours or better working conditions of labor, including members of the AFM and its affiliated locals, or in aid of any other legitimate or normal object of a labor union, but was formed and has been and is being carried out for the purpose of eliminating entirely from the market the manufacture, sale and use of musical compositions mechanically recorded on phonograph records and electrical transcriptions."

The Government charged further that the conspiracy has the effect of "unlawfully destroying all manufacture and sale in interstate commerce of phonograph records and electrical transcriptions; of eliminating all competition between music produced by mechanical means and music produced by live musicians; and of depriving the public of an inexpensive means of entertainment over the air, in restaurants, hotels and dance halls, and in the home."

Earlier Hints of Action by U. S.

The department asked that the defendants be enjoined from entering into any agreement, conspiracy, contract or combination to carry out any of the offenses charged.

The AFM ban on manufacture of recordings by its members became effective 12:01 A.M. Saturday. It was regarded in New York musical and union circles as the spark which touched off the Government suit. Broadcasters and record manufacturers earlier had hinted a Department of Justice action was forthcoming. Previously, James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communication Commission, had ordered an investigation, mainly to determine whether the FCC had the power to act. Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, had written an open letter to Mr. Petrillo, in the cause of patriotism, asserting that smaller stations, dependent upon electrical transcriptions, would be forced to close by the AFM ban, and that these closings would hurt the national morale by preventing the widest possible dissemination of important war information.

Discuss Settlement of Warner Strike

Settlement of the strike by Warner home office clerical employees, in New York, was broached at a conference Tuesday morning among the company's executives and those of the American Federation of Labor's office employees' union, Local 23,169.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Elinore Herrick, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board. Wednesday, the union continued the picketing of the home office and the exchange, which began Wednesday night, July 29th. Members of the IATSE's Exchange Workers' Union, Local B-51, stayed out of the exchange. Members of the teamsters' international, also AFL, refused to cross picket lines. The Sign Pictorial and Display Painters' Union, Local 230, threatened to refuse work for Warners. Shipments of scenery to the company's Strand theatre on Broadway were halted.

The strike was called after authorization by union members, because, they said, the company reneged on an agreement for a two-year contract.

Columbia Pictures Signs Contract

Warners, in a public statement, outlined terms of the contract which it said it was willing to sign, and stating that "in acceding to the demands, we believe we have gone the limit permitted by sound business judgment." To its employees, it said the union "from the beginning" asked "us to discriminate against employees who are not members. . . . The company has refused such requests, and will continue to refuse them."

In New York, Columbia Pictures on Friday, July 31st, signed a closed shop contract with Local 109, CIO Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild. It was similar to that signed earlier in the week by RKO, Loew's and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Home office employees of the RKO circuit this week were given 10 per cent salary increases, retroactive to May 29th, similar to that for the employes of RKO Radio Pictures, under the Local 109 contract signed last week.

The campaign by the IATSE to enlist exchange clerical workers in the international's "B" exchange unions was reflected last week in the claim by Sam Laminskey, president of the Chicago local, that 80 per cent of the clerical employees of the city's Paramount, RKO, Warner and Columbia exchanges have signed for IATSE jurisdiction.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

MOVIE STARS PARADE, a "fan" magazine, presents to the American Public this week what is purported to be "a little test" by Hollywood's Gene Tierney, as to whether the "dear readers" have sex appeal—"I certainly don't pose as an authority on sex appeal; frankly, the subject somewhat embarrasses me."

Anyway, Miss Tierney, "when the editor of Movie Stars Parade asked me just how a girl knows whether she's got it and how she would begin to acquire it," made up this little test as her answer:

1. Are you completely feminine?
2. Candidly, now, do you make the most of your figure?
3. Are you making the most of your face?
4. Is your hair well groomed?
5. Is your posture good?
6. Do you move and walk gracefully?
7. Are you physically and mentally fit?
8. Are you friendly?
9. Do you act intelligent?
10. Have you a reputation for sex 'appeal'?

Eighty percent "yes" to the answers, advised Gene and MOVIE STARS PARADE, "means you have no trouble holding your own. Seventy passes. If you're below seventy, better check up on yourself."

An important event in the life of Alvin C. York, of New Germany, Nova Scotia, has come and gone. The famous Alvin C. York, of Tennessee, distinguished himself in old Germany, as a soldier, whereas his namesake has his habitat in New Germany, a small town in Nova Scotia, where he operates the York Theatre, seating 230 and catering to a farming countryside.

Exhibitor York had been yearning for a chance to play Sergeant York ever since the production was mooted by Warners, at Hollywood. After about two years of waiting, the picture finally arrived at New Germany, and was given a two-day showing at the York, with the local Alvin C. York and his son, Alvin C. York Jr., on the scene. It was one of the biggest days in the lives of the New Germany Yorks.

There's a priority order on pigeons, too. And it nearly wrecked the stage appearance of Rosita (stripper) Royce at the Gayety Theatre, in Montreal, last week.

Rosita started across the Canadian border with the handful of white pigeons which she uses to 'drape' her in her 'Dance of the Doves.' She was stopped by border officers, until one of her entourage negotiated an okay by telephone, from the War Department at Washington, to release the birds for Rosita, the Gayety Theatre, Montreal and international unanimity.

Broadway columnist Leonard Lyons observed, on Tuesday, that the White House ('bridge') Club, a few blocks north of Times Square, had been 'Closed for Alterations.' The White House Club, on Monday, was the scene of that double murder of Broadway gamblers Greene and Wolenski.

Alterations?

At this time, when plans for a second front are foremost in the nation's headlines, and in those of the Allies, it is encouraging to hear of the work being done in one of the conquered countries that will be a base for a landing in Europe.

On a recent broadcast over New York radio station WOR, an unnamed person most active in that Belgium's underground, gave several interesting sidelights to the work being done there.

He told of a recent order for seven million shells for German guns to be filled by captured Belgian factories. When they were unpacked in Germany, they were found to be one one-thousandth of an inch too large—and unusable.

Tanks for German use are manufactured by slave labor in Belgium, but in each one there is a concealed weakness. Maybe it is just a loose bolt or a part that should have been soldered more solidly. In any case there is a flaw that will cause each machine to break down.

On the speaker's word, there is not a gun type, a tank design or a German training center within the boundary of Belgium that has not been photographed and sent to the proper authorities in England through the immense underground system.

Congress, the press and the nation have been asking for word, and more word about what's what in the Aleutians. Unexpectedly, they got a little more than an inkling, on Monday, when Hollywood's Colonel Darryl Francis Zanuck suddenly bobbed up at Seattle.

Fighting men as tough as Britain's famed Commandos are waging the war's most difficult campaign against the Japanese in the Aleutian Islands, Colonel Zanuck said after his return from the scene of operations.

"There's a hell of a war up there," Colonel Zanuck added. "Two wars really—one against the Japs and the other against the weather."

Colonel Zanuck, chief of the Army Signal Corps photographic section, asserted that American soldiers and sailors in the Aleutians have "the most difficult job of any men in the armed forces.

"I'd rather fly to Berlin nightly than to Kiska once," said the Colonel, who observed English Commando operations in June. "To bomb Kiska they must fly farther than from London to Berlin in weather that has no equal in the world.

"People think our men are sitting around up there. But they are flying in weather that fogs their wing tips from view and live in a land barren of trees, where there is not one civilian. Anyone who hasn't seen the country has no idea of the hardships."

Colonel Zanuck said the British Commandos are the best fighting men in the world, but Americans in the Aleutian theatre, he reported, are their equal. Despite hardships, he said, morale is high and the Americans are "itching for a fight."

In those four minutes, the entire motion picture industry is to be called to stage a salute to the war heroes of the nation in camps in the U. S. and the fighting forces abroad.

And with the industry will join millions of moviegoers seated in theatres on that Tuesday night of September 1—opening day of the billion-dollar war bond and stamp drive in which the movie industry is to be the spearhead.

If every seat is filled that night, 11,000,000 moviegoers will be in the celebration! They will be asked to rise and vociferously cheer America's forces. In many localities the four-minute ceremonies in theatres will be picked up by radio—and the moviegoers' cheers should well up into a mighty roar that short-wave will carry to the men abroad.

Note to theatre owners outside the area—and don't crowd: 40,359,345 persons, or 30.7 per cent of the 131,669,275 population of these United States, live within a 350-mile radius of New York City. And more than half of the wealth of the nation also is 'crowded' within the same area. So says the Commerce and Industry Association of New York, Inc.

SMALL CANADIAN THEATRES FACING PATRONAGE LOSS

Houses in Some Localities are run without Profit by Board of Trade or Legion

by ED BAKER
in Winnipeg

Film salesmen traveling in one of the largest territories on the North American Continent, stretching over three Canadian provinces from Fort William, Ont. to North Battleford, Sask., report "small town" exhibitors are finding it increasingly difficult to keep open. With every available young man of military age drafted and young girls leaving for larger cities either to enlist in the women's auxiliary services or to take up well-paid positions, theatre patrons in small towns have decreased sharply.

However, in small towns spread throughout this territory, where individual exhibitors cannot continue operation with a deficit, theatres have been taken over either by the local Board of Trade or the Canadian Legion in conjunction with the owner and now operate on a non-profit basis. Such local organizations are operating solely for community entertainment and bolstering of civilian morale and escape the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax.

Since the winter of 1940 distributors' statistics in this territory show that 54 theatres have closed and never reopened, and in the last two years 31 theatres in small towns have been taken over by local Canadian Legion or Board of Trade groups and operated on a non-profit basis. Ten of these theatres have been taken over since the first of the year.

Towns like Rose Valley, Elm Creek, Semans, White Fox, Arcola, Milestone, Maryfield, Kipling and Herbert, in Saskatchewan, and Kenton in Manitoba, to name a few, are all operated on a non-profit basis by local organizations. Most of these theatres operate only nine months a year, beginning April 1.

Although business in the small town is adverse, theatres in larger cities or centers near airfields or military training camps have shown large increases over previous years. Exhibitors in small towns say they are hopeful, however, that business will show an improvement around harvest time when many soldiers may be released by the Government for gathering the Autumn crop.

Film salesmen traveling in this territory also report that the scarcity of licensed operators is providing a distressing situation for some exhibitors.

Speculation Over Trade Board Policy

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Rumors galore have been flying around regarding the policy to be followed for the new season by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board but there is every indication that the talk has no foundation in fact. Officially, the Board has stabilized theatre admission prices and has made a number of rulings covering individual cases with respect to film runs and operation adjustments.

Orders-in-Council have been passed by the Federal Government providing for almost unlimited power over the exhibition of films and rental contracts but actually little has happened except the freezing of admission prices and the issuing of the somewhat segregated rulings. At the same time, it is true that many feelers have been thrown out by Board officials with regard to intended restrictions on giveaways, Sunday midnight shows, the stabilization of film outlets (sometimes called the freezing of runs and priorities), consumption of electricity and the number of performances in a theatre. The reaction, which is probably what the board administrators sought, has been tremendous—particularly, it is said, from the independent theatre group.

New Order Awaited On Restrictions

Apart from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, there have been orders from other Government bureaus, however, which have restricted building construction or alterations beyond certain minimum costs, oil heating units for fuel conservation and the installation of air-conditioning systems. It is true that the Board has put into effect an order which prevents the reopening of any theatre which was dark on January 31st except by special permission but this move was in cooperation with the Controller of construction and really a part of a general step affecting all classes of buildings.

Now that the Board has obtained the reaction on many proposals the situation is shaping up for the passing of a comprehensive Order-in-Council which will affect all theatres and the film exchanges. This may come before the new season gets under way, according to word in well-informed circles. How widespread this "new order" would be can only be left to conjecture for the present. Distributors and circuit officials say they do not know what will happen. They should know, if any one does, because they have direct representation on the Advisory Council which discusses matters with R. G. McMullen, Administrator of Theatres and Films. At the moment, only one thing appears conclusive, and that is that Mr. McMullen has gathered all possible data, plus opinions and suggestions.

What the independent exhibitor bloc has done has been to go direct to Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at Ottawa, with their grievances. The members of the Canadian House of Commons also have been approached individually with the complaint that the film distributors are trying to put the unaffiliated theatres out of business in their dealings with the Board administrators and

"What will the Wartime Prices and Trade Board order the distributors and theatres to do?" a distributor representative was asked.

"I do not know and no distributor knows," was his reply.

In seeking information, Mr. McMullen was reported to have asked the Advisory Council to study the possibility of a film shortage and to bring in recommendations to meet such a situation so that no particular group would suffer. What the Administrator told this writer was: "If there is to be a shortage of product, then all must share alike."

DISTRIBUTORS DENY THEATRE PRESSURE

Canadian distributors last week denied charges placed before the House of Commons by independent exhibitors that the companies were "forcing small theatres out of business" by alleged unfair practices.

The distributors met in Toronto to discuss the charges and a spokesman described the charges as "nonsense," saying that no exhibitor would be forced to close as a result of distributor practices.

Council Overrules Protests on Carnival

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

A flood of objections failed to dislodge the City Council of Moncton, N. B., from a stand favoring a traveling carnival show for which the Council had granted a week's license. The Board of Trade had protested formally against all carnivals, and there had been individual protests. However, the Council refused to reconsider its position and allowed the Lynch Shows, based at Halifax, N. S., to show. Film exhibitors from various centers have been protesting against this carnival specifically, chiefly because of competition with local theatres which pay taxes all year.

For the first time in the Atlantic provinces, and probably in Canada, police at Halifax, N. S., have painted queue lines on the sidewalks leading to theatre box offices. This action followed complaints of store owners adjoining the theatres that the lines of people waiting to buy tickets had been interfering with their business by blocking entrances to the stores. The queue lines have been developing nearly every night at practically all the theatres, because of the record demand for picture entertainment by civilians and service men. The introduction of rigid wartime traffic control included a ban on parking on streets used by the local tramways, and this has congested traffic and put parking space at a premium on other streets. Halifax had been a mecca for car owners for theatre going for years.

BBC WAR POLICY TARGET OF SHARP BRITISH CRITICISM

Parliament, Press attack Propaganda Programs, Entertainment for Army

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Critical artillery in press and Parliament is thundering these days against the wartime operations of the British Broadcasting Corporation, the state-directed monopolist of the country's ether, which currently operates under the paternal aegis of the Ministry of Information. It has fired its guns on two counts, on the BBC's role as a propagandist—and the allegedly inefficient way in which it performs that role—and on the count of its provision of entertainment to the forces, British, American and otherwise, who depend greatly on it for recreation and diversion today.

Despite the wholesale manner in which attacks were launched on the Corporation, or more strictly on the ministry's direction of it, in Parliament recently and in the press, where political flagwaggers have not hesitated to flourish a standard or two, there has been no appreciable change in the propaganda operations or flavor of the corporation. In the field of entertainment, the only concrete contribution to the controversy has been the corporation's considered fiat that British dance bands who use the air must cut out anaemic crooners and slushily sentimental torch singers. They must no longer, for that matter, borrow from the classics!

BBC Propaganda Is Scored in Parliament

During a recent parliamentary debate members of all parties, and from all points of the parliamentary compass, laid about the Minister of Information for the political and propaganda delinquencies of the BBC. It is the Minsiter's Department which is currently responsible for British broadcasting, under the authority of the House of Commons. The BBC, of course, always has been a public corporation, with a strictly state authority, its revenues derived from the millions of 10-shilling wireless licenses under which British listeners hold their radio sets.

In 1940 the Minister of Information took over and financing has been by a state grant in aid. The total granted for the current year is £10,000,000, an increase over the previous period of £3,100,000. The corporation, none the less, still preserves some financial autonomy. Increased expenditure has been necessitated by the expansion of the overseas services, the strengthening of the actual broadcasting resources, and the creation of machinery to permit broadcasting to be carried on at alternative centers in the event of emergency.

The activities of the BBC already have been comprehensively 'covered in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. There is little to add to the picture painted in the issue of February 7th, last. Despite these wide scale activities, despite the fact that the broadcasts in foreign languages have leapt from the pre-war figure of nine languages to 43, and the total hours devoted to these have increased from 43 to 275, British parliamentarians are dissatisfied, critical and unrestrained in venting these reactions.

SEE LITTLE CHANCE OF QUOTA SUSPENSION

Despite increasing industry agitation, among British exhibitors particularly, for a revision or adjustment of the quota, informed trade circles in London believe there is little likelihood the quota provisions will be suspended or abandoned.

The war decrease in British production has led to the plea for quota adjustment. Producer representatives met with the Board of Trade this week for a discussion of the need for protecting the studios from the manpower demands of the armed services.

Absence of Planning, An Alleged Fault

In particular there has been criticism of the quality of the broadcasting to Germany and of the character and nature of programs relayed to North America, which for reasons best known to the BBC come under the heading of the Empire Service. Absence of planning is one of the faults alleged. "Young and inexperienced officials, who, because they are sittting inside BBC buildings all day doing other things, cannot possibly have the necessary contact with Government departments and the necessary knowledge of what is going on," is a charge leveled at BBC. (The European News Service is under the direct control of the Government.)

These political considerations, however, are perhaps of less relevance to MOTION PICTURE HERALD readers than the considerations of entertainment and recreation, of which observers in the House of Commons, in the press and in the services—not least in the U. S. forces here—have been profoundly critical and openly contemptuous. American soldiers, sailors and airmen here have had to face the comparison—or contrast—between the broadcasting technique and pabulum of the two sides of the Atlantic.

No American visitant, but a sober English publicist, Vernon Bartlett, has been moved publicly to lament the "sentimental, sloppy muck that goes out hour after hour on the Forces Program," to deplore that "we are not using this very good opportunity of educating our peoples so that they will be really worthy of democracy and able to make the machinery of democracy work in all circumstances." Other critics have dubbed the Forces Program as "stodgy" and "trivial."

The critics thus tend towards a division into two lines of thought. The vast majority, found in the press and among both the services and the listening public, to whom the somewhat lighter forces program is easier listening, want more entertainment and better. The more academically minded want a note of uplift to be struck resoundingly and with regular rhythm.

Little Time Devoted to Dance Music

A statistical analysis of the Forces Program shows that on a typical week just over half the time was occupied by news, talks, lectures, plays, religious addresses, feature programs, and so forth. Only 6.5 per cent of the time was devoted to dance music—one of the favorite subjects with the Forces—and 5.7 per cent to serious music. Light music accounted for 7.4 per cent of the time, and vaudeville for 30.3 per cent.

The bias would clearly seem to be on the sober side—despite the general preferences. It is the BBC claim that although the initial demand—just after Dunkirk—was exclusively for entertainment, "the emphasis has changed." Who changed the emphasis, the BBC or the Forces, is not stated.

It is true that the various services and sections of the services have special programs devoted to them. Among these are "Ack Ack—Beer Beer," for the Anti-Aircraft and Balloon Barrage units, a Merchant Navy, and a Royal Navy program, and one for the women in the forces. It does not follow of necessity that they all meet with the full approval of those for whom they are designed. Keen and bitter critics are to be found in all these groups. Obviously the BBC faces a difficult task in satisfying all tastes and catering to all needs. With the thought in their minds that the majority of the listening is communal, and for short periods, the smart young men—and the sober old ones—of Broadcasting House have kept their serious items short, and widely spaced.

Bracken Not Held Responsible

None the less, the BBC braggadocio, in an official apologia, that in one week recently the Forces program included three orchestral concerts, two choral programs, two instrumental recitals, and seven gramaphone programs of classical music, while it may seek to answer Mr. Bartlett, is not necessarily going to placate Able Seaman Bill Brown or Private Joe Dokes of the U. S. Army.

Although the Government, of course, actually is responsible for all activities of the BBC and Brendan Bracken is ready to take the responsibility, the Ministry does not interfere in all the ramifications of the broadcasting machine. Mr. Bracken probably can not be held personally responsible for this onslaught on the crooners, on Tchaikowsky and Chopin in swing and—who knows—on Boogie Woogie.

Warners holds Three Meetings; PRC in Dallas

Warners this week and last completed three regional sales meetings, in Chicago, Memphis and Pittsburgh.

Effective operation is foreseen because of the speed and efficiency of the company's sales staff, Joseph Bernhard, general manager, told the Chicago meeting at the Blackstone Hotel on Friday, July 31st. Other speakers at this meeting of the mid-west group were: Benjamin Kalmenson, general sales manager; James E. Coston, circuit zone manager; Mort Blumenstock, Roy Haines, Arthur Sachson, Norman Moray, and I. Howard Levinson. Others were present from the home office. These speakers were also at the other two meetings.

In Pittsburgh on Tuesday, July 27th, Moe Silver, circuit zone manager, was a chief speaker, pointing out the role of theatres as morale builders. The Memphis meeting, for the southern division, Monday and Tuesday, brought the same lineup of speakers except Mr. Haines, who was called back to New York, and Mr. Bernhard, who proceeded to the coast from Chicago.

It was announced at the meeting that Ralph McCoy, Atlanta, southern district manager, led the company's nine districts, in the recent annual sales drive. Wolfe Cohen's Canadian district was second.

PRC Meets in Dallas Regional

Home office executives, franchise holders and branch managers met in Producers Releasing Corporation's third annual regional sales meeting for the southern territory, at the Adolphus Hotel, Dallas, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, presided. A fourth meeting will be held at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, Sunday to Tuesday.

RKO Announces Errol, Kennedy Shorts Series

Two series of short subjects, to be made at the Hollywood studios, were announced by RKO Radio late last week at the closing session of the annual sales convention, at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. The series, each to include six two-reelers, will star Leon Errol and Edgar Kennedy.

Bert Gilroy, in charge of the company's shorts program for many years, will produce them. Directors will be Ben Holmes, Lloyd French and Charles Roberts. Two of the series have been filmed.

For a full account of the RKO convention, see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 1st issue, Page 13.

Cooperative Theatres Reelects Officers

Reelected to office at last week's annual meeting in Detroit, was the entire Cooperative Theatres of Michigan slate.

The men are Fred DeLodder, president; B. J. Cohn, vice-president; Barney Kilbride, treasurer; James Ritter, secretary.

CIRCUITS NOT HIT BY OIL STOPPAGE

The halting of oil deliveries for heating and air conditioning in the east on Monday did not affect large New York circuits. Their air conditioning units operate by electricity. The War Production Board order of last week banned deliveries until September 15th. It allowed delivery of oil for heating water, but only 50 per cent of the normal quantity.

Schine District Managers Hold Annual Meeting

District managers of the Schine Circuit met on Wednesday and Thursday of this week for their annual meeting at the home office in Gloversville, N. Y. Among the speakers at the meeting were Mike Simons of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation, who has been business manager of the MGM Exhibitor Forums. Mr. Simons gave the Schine men the same illustrated recorded talk on newspaper advertising that was given at the MGM Forums.

Home office executives of the Schine Circuit met with the district managers to discuss various problems connected with their operations. The meeting took the place of the annual Schine convention, called off this year because of the war.

Eid to Cover Washington, Bragdon NBC Trade Editor

Leif Eid, member of the National Broadcasting Company's publicity staff at New York, has been named head of the network's Washington news bureau. Mr. Eid, who has handled television, technical and special news for the network, moved to Washington on Tuesday to supervise news coverage in the capital.

Everett L. Bragdon, for 19 years radio editor of The Sun, New York, has joined the National Broadcasting Company as editor of trade news in the press department. He is author of the "Radio Amateur's Handbook" and an authority on technical advances in radio.

Gilbert Golden Married

E. Gilbert Golden, in charge of consumer advertising under Mort Blumenstock in the Warner Bros. home offices, was married Tuesday to Marjorie Jane Hatch of Roscoe, N. Y. The bride is a great-granddaughter of the late Alfredric Smith Hatch, former president of the New York Stock Exchange. After a honeymoon at Mackinac Island, Mich., the couple will make their home in New York.

Beckman Gets Post

Donald Beckman, formerly manager of Western Poster Company and with National Screen Service's poster division in Seattle, has been named manager of the Egyptian, Evergreen State's key Seattle house. He succeeds Carl Mahne, who was promoted to assist Alfred Rosenberg, state manager.

No Chicago Rejections

No films were rejected during July by the Chicago police censors. Ninety-one films were reviewed. There were 20 deletions. "The Mad Monster" was given an "adults" permit.

Elevated to Stardom

Lynn Bari has been given a new contract by Twentieth Century-Fox which gives her star status.

Independents in Midwest form Conference

A "Central States Conference" has been formed, comprising independent exhibitor organizations in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska and the Dakotas. The announcement was made last week in Minneapolis by Fred Strom, executive secretary of Northwest Allied. He will serve the new group in the same capacity.

The organization was formed at a meeting in Spencer, Ia. It proposes to protect independent exhibitors' interests, especially in buying of film, and plans to coordinate their policies.

It is similar to the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors, a grouping of exhibitor units. Each unit will be represented in the mid-west group by two trustees. A full organization meeting will be held after Northwest Allied's annual convention, September 1st and 2nd, at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis. That meeting will discuss double features, shifting populations and the consent decree.

This week, three exhibitor organizations had approved the Illinois Allied campaign against double features. The units are the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and the Independent Theatre Owners, New York. A vote was expected at mid-week from the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

Possibility of regional meetings of Allied States Association units, to act on allegedly high film rentals, appeared nearer this week. Funds had been appropriated for such gatherings by the New Jersey and Texas Allied units.

Cooperative Production Proposed in England

A cooperative production plan under which British independent producers would coordinate production facilities, pool their overhead and administrative costs and staffs and generally avail themselves of technical manpower and studio equipment, was made known in London on Tuesday. The plan was reported to have originated with J. A. Rank, British producer. Product aimed for the U. S. market as well as distribution in England, will be released through General Film Company, Ltd., it was said, and the new group is to be known as Independent Producers, Ltd. The company is to operate under direction of a production committee. Among the independent producers interested in the plan, according to report, are Marcel Hellman, Leslie Howard, Michael Powell and Arnold Pressburger.

Army Nurse Film Set

Paramount announced this week a picture called "Hands of Mercy," which deals with Army nurses on Bataan. Mark Sandrich, who will produce the film, is now working on the script with Allan Scott. It will be filmed in cooperation with the American Red Cross and the War Department.

Oklahoma Price Cut

The State and Liberty theatres, Oklahoma City, have reduced their prices from 20-25-40 cents to 20-25 cents for the summer and the former, owned by T. B. Noble, Jr., has changed from a single to a double bill policy until autumn.

Miss Bruns Joining WAAC

Adelaide Bruns, who has been temporarily managing the production office of the David O. Selznick Company, will join the WAAC shortly.

$1,000,000 for "Miniver" in Ten Weeks

"Mrs. Miniver," the MGM film which has broken all records at Radio City Music Hall, New York, entered its 10th and final week on Thursday. According to G. S. Eyssell, managing director of the theatre, the picture will have grossed more than $1,000,000 before the end of its run and will have been seen by approximately 1,500,000. Mr. Eyssell announced that although attendance had shown no signs of waning, "Mrs. Miniver" would make way for the long-postponed premiere of Walt Disney's "Bambi," released by RKO on August 13th.

"Because of the number of outstanding productions awaiting presentation at the Music Hall," Mr. Eyssell said, "we regret to announce that after the most successful run in the theatre's history, the final performance of 'Mrs. Miniver' will take place on Wednesday, August 12th."

From the opening day on June 4th through last Sunday night, the total attendance was 1,222,841.

First Run Grosses Beat "Boom Town" Records

In its first 50 engagements, excluding the Music Hall, MGM's screen version of Jan Struther's best-seller outgrossed first week records of "Boom Town" by 10 per cent, according to MGM. "Boom Town" played at advanced admission prices. Second-week engagements of "Mrs. Miniver" in 10 of those towns drew 37 per cent more business than "Boom Town" did for the same period, the company reported.

Following "Bambi," the next two attractions at the Music Hall will be "Tales of Manhattan," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Talk of the Town," Columbia.

Holdover reports for the week include:

"The Pride of the Yankees," Goldwyn-RKO; third week at the Astor, New York, where it broke its own record over the weekend for the biggest Sunday since the opening, according to announcement from the Goldwyn office. At the Uptown, Salt Lake City, the film is reported to have broken every existing house record. In Washington, while established records for this time of year fell, business "climbed to equal the grosses taken at Keith's for Washington's biggest New Year's week business," said the announcement.

"Ball of Fire," RKO: playing for the third week at the New Empire Theatre, Bombay, India. RKO reports the Goldwyn picture "is the biggest screen hit in town."

"They All Kissed the Bride," Columbia: held a second week at Roxy, New York; drew an estimated $33,500 for first four days at that theatre.

"Wings for the Eagle," Warner Bros.: held second week at Strand; grossed an estimated $25,400 for first three days.

"Priorities on Parade" In Second Week

"Priorities on Parade," Paramount: ended its second week at the Paramount, New York; grossed an estimated $20,000 over the weekend and was expected to bring $40,000 for the second week.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros.: in its 10th week at the Hollywood, New York; grossed an estimated $7,500 over the weekend.

"Eagle Squadron," Universal: held a fifth week at the Globe, New York; drew an estimated $7,500 for four days of fifth week; is being held a sixth week.

Paramount reports that grosses in small towns on "Reap the Wild Wind," the Cecil B. DeMille production, were ranging from 150 to 600 per cent of the business achieved on "North West Mounted Police." Several exhibitors in vacation areas are booking the film every two weeks, having found that turnover of vacationers makes each new engagement almost as big as the first booking, it was said.

War Workers to Stage Show for Soldiers

A 50-minute musical show called "Ready! Aim! Fire!", written and acted by employes of the Bridgeport Brass Company who are now working on munitions, will be presented at the American Theatre Wing Stage Door Canteen in New York, August 17th. According to the Wing, this will be the first time war workers will entertain service men, either at the canteen or elsewhere.

About 75 employes will make the trip to New York at the expense of the company. The show was first performed July 16th and 18th in Bridgeport's Central High School auditorium for the benefit of the Navy Relief Fund.

Theatre Leased for Symphony

The Evergreen State circuit will lease the Music Hall theatre to the Seattle Symphony Orchestra for a series of Monday night concerts from October through January. During two years while the theatre was dark it was rented to the orchestra for the concerts. Now being operated as a first run house, it will suspend regular operations on Monday nights so that the concerts may be continued.

Frisque Reported Safe

Gordon Frisque, Eastman Kodak's Far Eastern manager, reported from Portuguese East Africa last week that he was safe. He is returning to this country with other nationals repatriated from the Japanese. He was interned in Hong Kong.

Set Previews for 'Wake,' 'Yankees'

Two previews of Paramount's "Wake Island" will be held simultaneously at Marine Corps bases on the east and west coasts, August 18th, it was announced this week by Robert M. Gillham, advertising and publicity director for the company.

Under arrangements just completed with the Marine Corps, the showings will be held at Quantico, Va., and Camp Elliott, San Diego, Cal.

A plaque memorializing the birthplace of George M. Cohan was unveiled Tuesday in Providence before an estimated 5,000 persons who gathered at the house where the actor, writer and producer was born. The plaque was sponsored by Town Criers of Rhode Island, coincidentally with the opening at the Majestic in Providence of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner film based on the life and music of Mr. Cohan.

Among those present were Edward M. Fay, Albert Clarke, manager of the Majestic; Thomas J. Meehan, former theatre operator and now secretary to Governor McGrath, and Dennis F. O'Brien, lifelong friend and attorney of Mr. Cohan.

RKO announced 14 premieres for Samuel Goldwyn's "The Pride of the Yankees," with each opening performance at $1.10 top. Regular runs will follow on a continuous run basis at advanced prices.

Four dual premieres have been set as follows: New Orleans, August 5th, Liberty and Orpheum, with continuance of run at the Orpheum only; Boston, August 11th, at Boston and Keith's Memorial, with continuance of run at Keith's Memorial; Columbus, August 19th, at Grand and Palace, with continuance of run at the Palace; Los Angeles, dual premiere and run August 19th, at Pantages and Hillstreet.

Chinese Studio producing in San Francisco

Forced out of China by Japanese aggression, the Grandview Motion Picture Company of Hongkong and San Francisco has set up production headquarters in the latter city, where it plans to produce an average of four Chinese language films annually, according to Joseph Sunn, a San Francisco director of the company.

Production on the first film was begun during June and is now nearing completion, according to Mr. Sunn. It will cost approximately $15,000, as will the second, which will start in October and be built around the annual Rice Bowl Party of San Francisco's Chinatown.

The present production, "Gum Kong Ting Far," freely translated as "Lovers of the Golden Gate," is a romantic comedy with scenes laid in Chinatown and elsewhere in San Francisco Members of the cast were recruited from among legitimate players at the Mandarin theatre in San Francisco, where a Cantonese troupe has been appearing under bond for two years. Approximately 100 persons are in the cast.

While many of the firm's previous outlets in the Orient are now cut off, future productions will be shown at the company's Grandview theater in San Francisco, and to Chinese communities in approximately 30 American cities. The company's product is distributed to 12 Canadian outlets through C. M. Wong of Vancouver, B. C., and also is shipped to exhibitors in Central and South America, and the Caribbean area.

The stories are written by Mr. Sunn, who also handles the direction. The company was founded in San Francisco in 1933 by D. W. Lowe, wealthy Chinese restaurant operator, who came to the United States 36 years ago, to work in an uncle's restaurant. He intended originally merely to distribute films, but soon set up production facilities in Hongkong, where a schedule of four pictures a year was maintained until after Pearl Harbor.

Film Leaders Named To Army Show Group

Nicholas M. Schenck, Nate Blumberg, S. Charles Einfeld and Robert M. Weitman have been named to the executive committee of the Army Emergency Relief show which will be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, September 30th.

Ed Sullivan is director of entertainment for the event and will act as master of ceremonies for the group of Broadway and Hollywood stars who will appear on the program.

Paramount Leads Baseball League

Paramount this week led the field in the Motion Picture Baseball League, comprising teams from the New York home offices of film companies.

It has won six games and lost two. Universal, second, has won four, lost three; International Projector has won four, lost three; Skouras, four won, four lost; MGM, two won, six lost.

Kellenberg Aids Legion

First Motion Picture Letter Outlines War Contribution

The first issue of the Motion Picture Letter, in which the Public Relations Committee of the industry will issue factual background for the use of those interested in, or writing about, the industry, appeared this week.

The initial copy of the letter described the nature of the screen's contributions to the war effort and listed the several committees through which this is done. The joint efforts of the War Activities Committee, Hollywood Victory Committee and the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were outlined in an effort to clear up confusion as to their particular places in the industry war effort.

The letter was mailed to approximately 5,000 newspapers, entertainment editors, columnists, radio commentators, magazine editors and others who are in contact with the industry.

It was described as reference material for file and the committee invited inquiries on facts and figures about the industry during the war. These should be addressed to its executive secretary, Glendon Allvine, at 28 West 44th Street, New York.

Screen players, through the Victory Committee, have made 3,198 appearances, with 723 personalities participating. The Victory Caravan raised over $750,000 for Army and Navy relief, the letter reported.

Pledges to show war activities films now have been signed by 15,152 theatres. The films are distributed without charge through 352 exchanges.

The letter noted special drives by the industry to aid the rubber, scrap metal and other salvage campaigns and special efforts within the industry to conserve critical materials.

It also summarized the special war subject production activities of the industry, listing the titles of 63 training films produced for the War Department by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Additionally, the report said, the industry is making special entertainment films on the war effort and is soon to produce 25 pictures for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Special war drives in theatres for the USO in 1941 raised $1,243,000, it was reported. For Army and Navy relief an additional $2,000,079 was collected in the recent drive, with 1,500 reports still due. Studio workers in Hollywood last year contributed $1,782,572 to seven charitable drives.

Fox West Coast Radio Tieup

Fox West Coast Theatres in northern California have set a reciprocal promotion campaign with KQW, San Francisco outlet for the Columbia network. Screen trailers, boosting CBS-KQW programs and performers, will be carried on screens of the circuit's 22 northern California theatres in return for free announcements and a promise to produce special programs from the new Fox Newsreel theatre in downtown Oakland, where a well-equipped radio studio has been installed.

Franciscans Buy Theatre

The Woods Building, Chicago, a 10-story structure containing the 1,100-seat Woods theatre, has been purchased by the Franciscan Fathers for a reported $600,000. Another $100,000 will be spent in remodeling, it is said. The religious order does not take possession until next spring. It is planned to use the theatre auditorium as a chapel and the rest of the building as a mission center and monastery.

Exhibitor on OPA Board

Robert F. Boda, operator and manager of the Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, legitimate theatre, has been appointed by H. T. Beckman, State Director of Office of Price Administration as supervisor of all Ohio rationing. Mr. Boda will coordinate the duties of sugar, tire, automobile, bicycle and typewriter rationing executives.

Monogram Gets Serial

Monogram has bought rights to the Columbia Broadcasting System serial, "The Adventures of Cosmo Jones." Two pictures are planned.

Three Film Firms Incorporate in New York

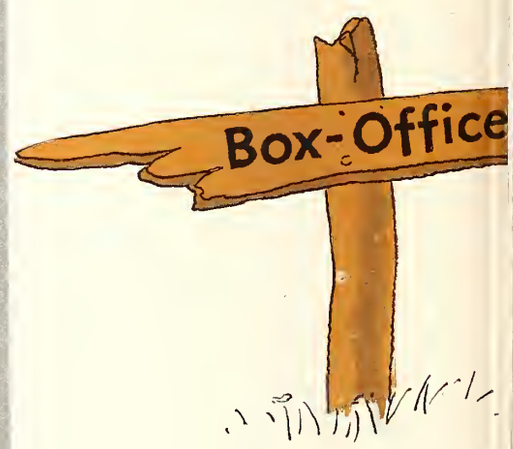
Three motion picture concerns have filed papers of incorporation with Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State, to conduct business in New York State. They are:

Film Theataretts, Inc., motion picture business, $20,000 capital stock, 190 shares of preferred valued at $100 each and 100 shares of common stock. Directors of record are Anthony J. Bruno, Dominick Bruno and John Bruno, New York. Attorney filing the papers was Nathan Kosseff, New York.

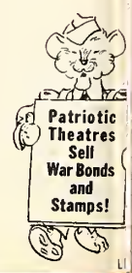
Ecla Patents Corporation, Brooklyn, plastic films, 1400 shares, 700 preferred at $100 each and 700 common, no par value. Directors are Edith Monak, Edna Klaeger and Catherine McPhillips. Attorney filing the papers was Walter F. O'Malley, New York.

Epta, Inc., 100 shares, by August Kessler, Lucille Athana and Florence Smolen. Attorney filing was Louis M. Weber, New York.

Goldman Expanding Circuit



William Goldman, independent circuit operator in Philadelphia, is reported entering into negotiations to increase his theatre holdings in eastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Goldman has entered into negotiations with the Berks County Trust Co. at Reading, for the acquisition of the Chamberlain circuit, comprising six major houses in the Shamokin-Sunbury territory.



Silverstein Leaves

Nice work at the cross-roads!

WAR INDUSTRIES INCREASING USE OF MOTION PICTURES

Two Major Groups include Technical Training and Morale - Building Films

War production by America's leading industrial firms has given rise to an unprecedented" increase in the use of motion pictures by these companies since the United States entered the war. The films fall into two major classifications: technical training pictures for thousands of new workers added to industrial payrolls, which, offered gratis, can be utilized by the Army and Navy in their training programs, and morale-building films for non-theatrical distribution. The latter bear the stamp of goodwill public relations and seek to keep before the buying public the name of the manufacturer. They are designed to inform that public of the responsible job which big industry has in the nation's war effort.

With the exception of the "minute movies" shown in rural theatres and produced by commercial dealers for local advertisers, there is not one so-called "straight advertising" film being produced at the present time, it was learned in New York this week. As MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported on March 14th, last, Pearl Harbor curtailed for the duration production of sponsored commercial pictures. Most of the 70-odd producing companies and individuals involved have geared their facilities for making the type of motion picture which industry requires at the present time.

Some of these firms, including Jam Handy, Caravel, Castle Films, Audio Productions, Emerson Yorke Studios, Sound Masters, Inc., among others, currently are engaged in producing training films for industrial companies and for the Navy. All of them are expected to participate in the forthcoming bids to be opened by the U. S. Office of Education for technical training films.

Navy Contracts for 16 One-Reel Films

The U. S. Navy is reported to have contracted with March of Time for 16 one-reel training shorts. Unlike the Army, which has its own film production unit in the Signal Corps, the Navy has to farm out production on the pictures it needs.

Among the large industrial firms which maintain their own film producing divisions are General Electric, Bell Aircraft Corporation, which is said to have studio and recording equipment valued between $75,000 and $100,000 at its Buffalo plant; Caterpillar Tractor Co., of Peoria, Ill., and Westinghouse. Bell and Caterpillar are understood to be turning out two and three pictures a month.

According to reports from advertising agencies handling motion pictures for their clients and from commercial dealers in the field, the following firms currently are engaged either in producing one or more films or are contemplating increased activity in the autumn: Curtiss-Wright, U. S. Steel, Goodrich, Glenn L. Martin, Warner & Swazey, Aluminum Company of America, Wright Aeronautical, Alleghany Ludlum Steel, Lindberg Treating Steel Company, Lockheed, Cincinnati Milling Machine Company, New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, Fuller Brush, Shell Oil, Socony, Association of American Railroads and DuPont.

General Motors has begun production on "This Precious Freedom," it was announced this week by L. M. Corcoran, director of the GM motion picture department, at his office in New York. The film is a feature production under direction of Arch Oboler, who wrote the radio play of the same name last year. Frank R. Donovan, formerly with Pathe News and now production manager of Sound Masters, Inc., is producing the picture for GM. Starring Claude Rains and featuring Gloria Holden, Martin Kosleck and Helen Mack in a cast of more than 15 players, the film is being produced at the General Service Studios in Hollywood.

Picture To Be Shown to General Motors Workers

The picture is to be shown free to an estimated audience of 250,000 war workers employed in 90 General Motors plants in 40 cities. Screenings will be held in theatres during hours which do not conflict with program time, in the home towns of GM employees during September and October. Its presentation follows exhibition of "America Can Give It," the company's first feature production, which starred Walter Huston, Lowell Thomas and Quentin Reynolds.

Through the medium of the screen, according to a spokesman for General Motors, the company "is pursuing a wartime policy of offering its employees and their families another document which it hopes will contribute to the winning of the war."

"This Precious Freedom," voted the best radio play of 1941, tells the story of what would happen to an American family in the event of Axis invasion. Another feature length film is planned for production in the autumn, it was said.

General Motors' army of production soldiers daily turns out an estimated $5,000,000 worth of guns, tanks, shells, airplane engines and scores of other war implements. In addition to these two features, the company, which reports it has "one of the most extensive motion picture programs of any industrial firm in America," has made "Victory Is Our Business," a short showing the various ways GM is participating in the war effort, and a monthly newsreel of company activities.

Advertising Films In England

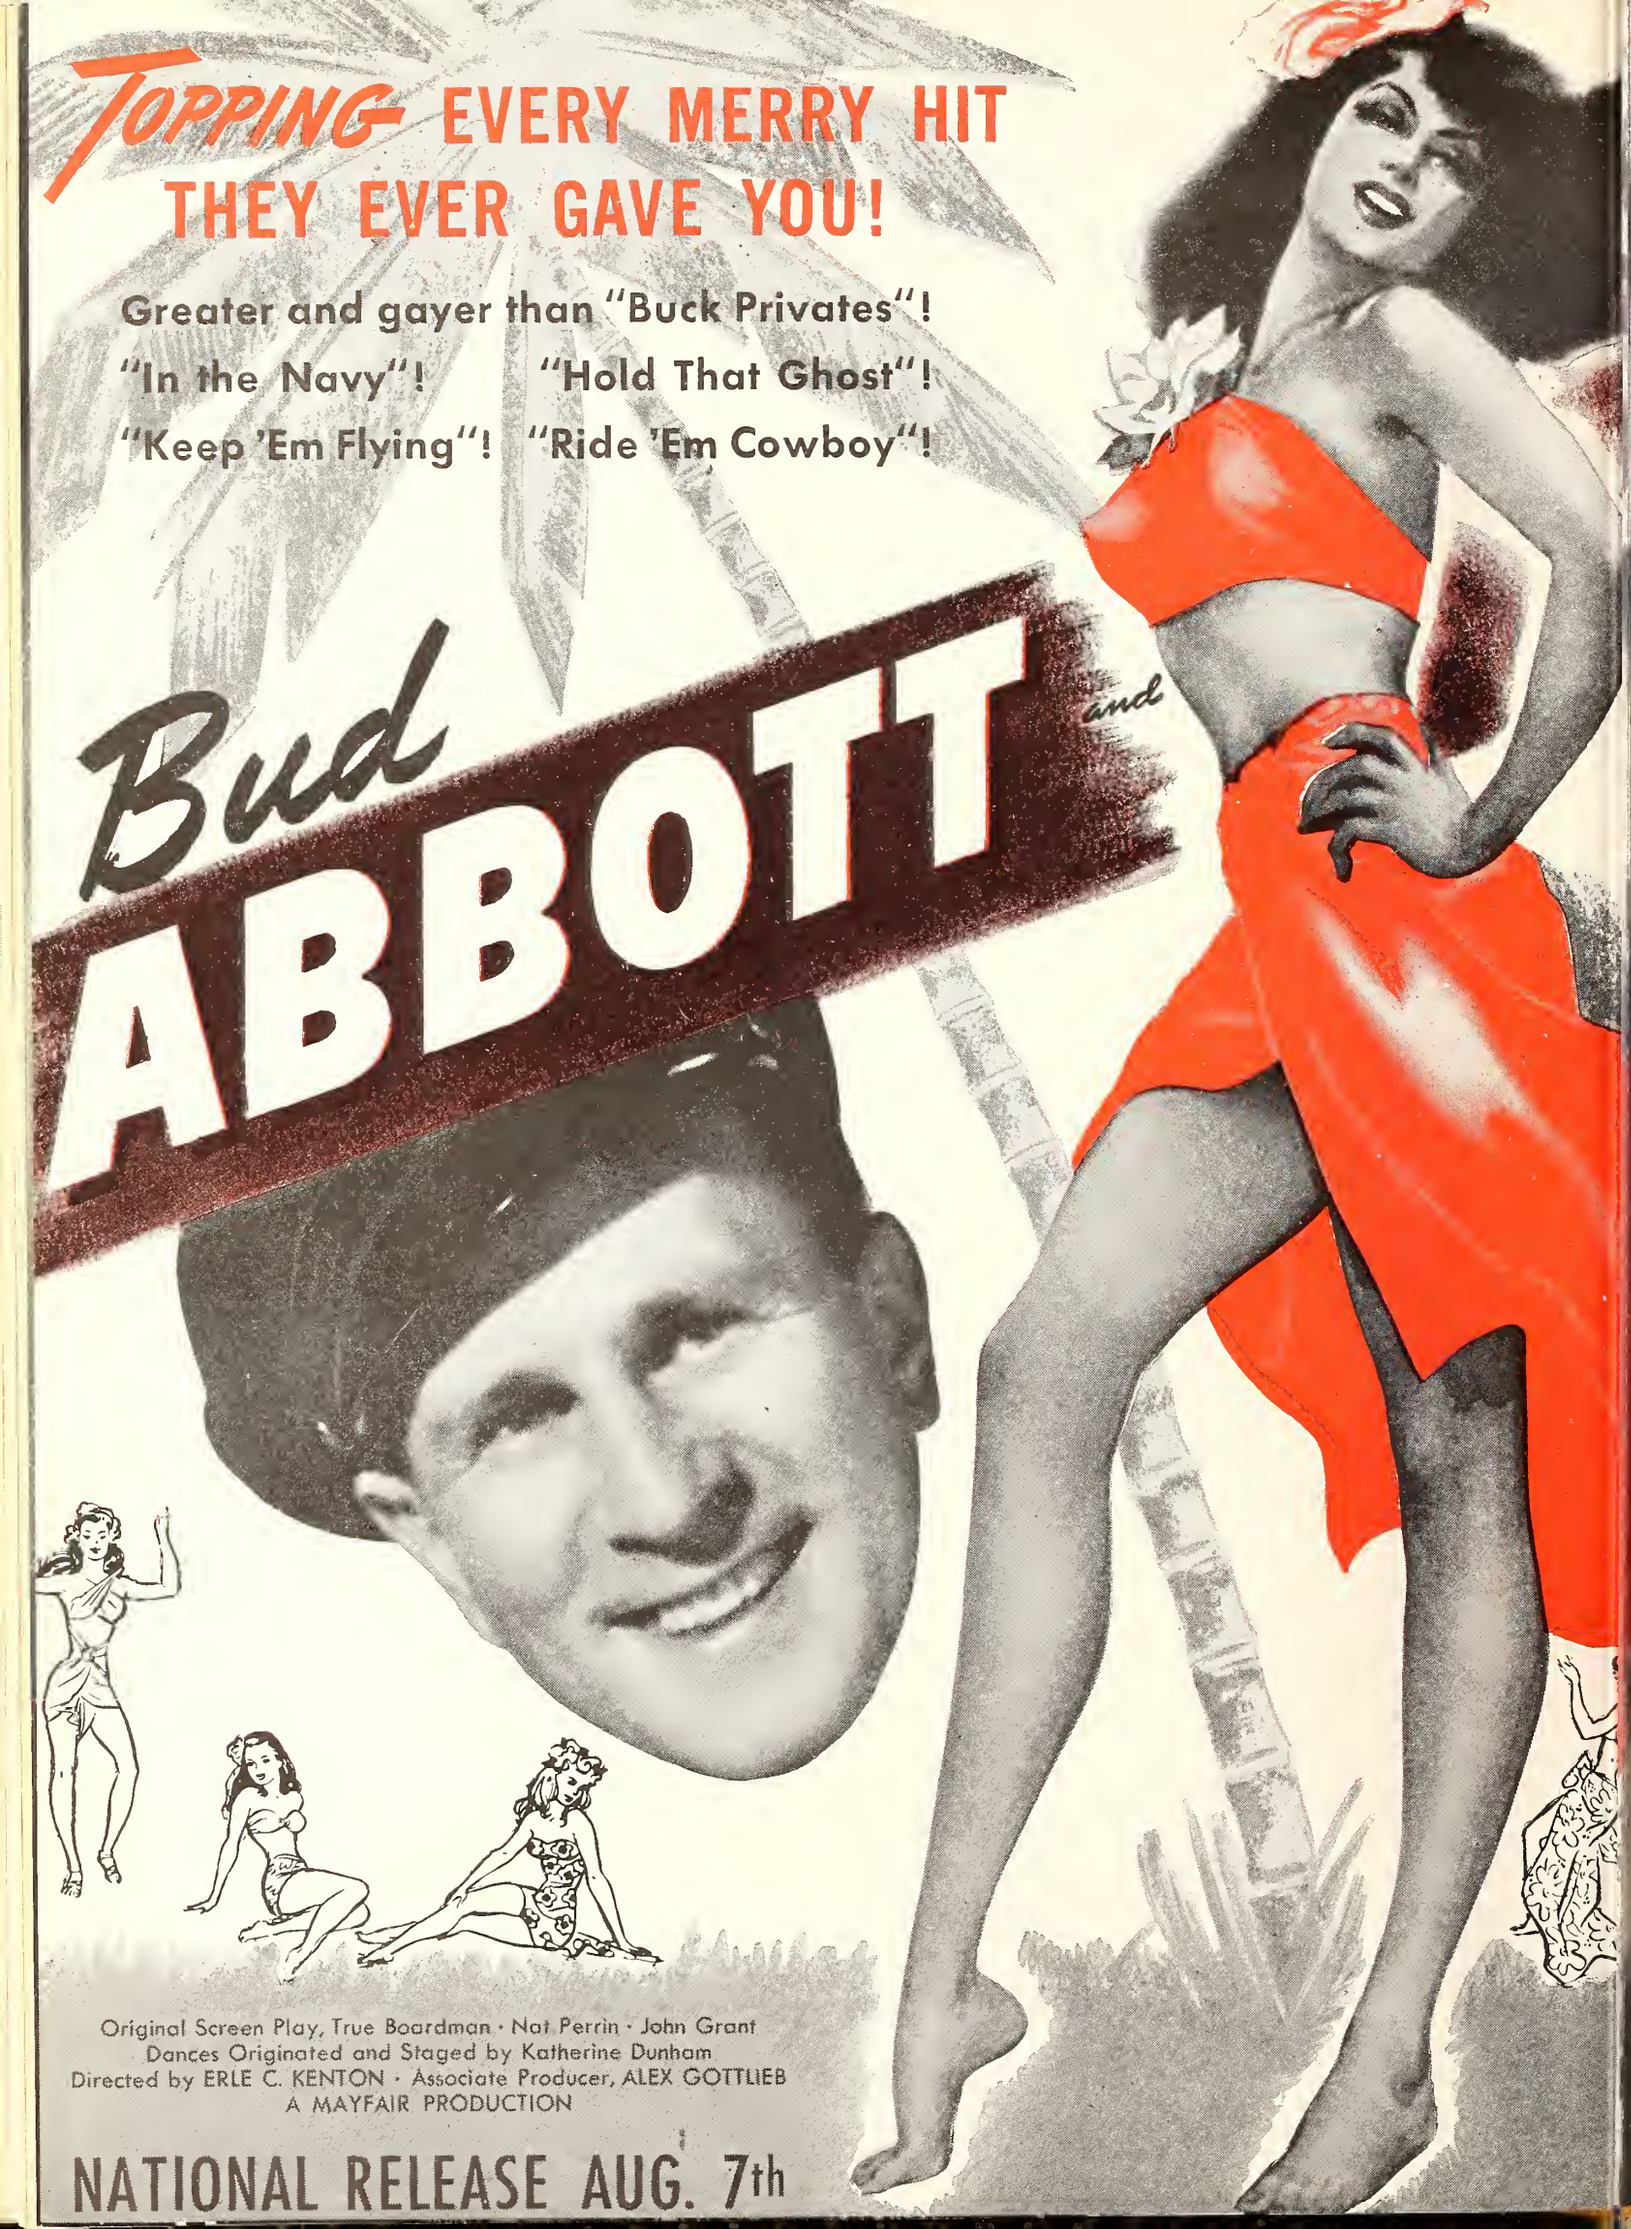
A report which came recently from the London office of J. Walter Thompson Company, Ltd., advertising agency, said that more advertising films are being produced by British firms since the war and are being shown in England's theatres. The agency also reported that it now has 33 full time employees in its film division as compared to six before the war, as a result of the drastic shortage in paper which, in turn, caused decreases in newspaper and magazine ad lineage. According to spokesmen for firms in New York representing British newspapers, the cut in lineage was as much as 40 per cent in 1940 compared to the previous year. Advertising circles in New York report the decrease here in newspaper lineage in 52 cities for the first six months of 1942 was approximately 8.5 per cent.

Observers in the field agree, however, that in England films have not replaced newspapers and magazines as a principal medium for sponsors. Moreover, it was learned that the British Ministry of Information for some time has been considering banning for the duration the production of the sponsored commercial film. That such action may be taken shortly also was indicated, the reason being that the raw film stock and manpower are needed for production of the entertainment motion picture and the British Government's morale films.

DISNEY CITES RISE OF FILMS IN EDUCATION

Visual education is taking its greatest step forward today because of the Government's interest in motion pictures for the training of our armed forces, the conquest of disease and the expounding of America's agricultural and productive sources. This observation was made last Wednesday by Walt Disney before 150 California elementary school supervisors at a three-week conference at Los Angeles.

The educators visited the Disney studio, where they saw a group of films being made for the Navy. They also saw the first running of "Saludos," a feature picture which Mr. Disney made as a result of his three-month trip to South America last year. "Saludos" was produced for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs for distribution in South America and in this country.



Actors on Victory Committee

Hollywood Victory Committee announced on Monday that its by-laws had been revised to permit the addition of 28 players to membership in the organization, bringing the total to 88 members. Eight players were added to the executive committee. In view of forthcoming plans for increased participation in the war effort, the expansion was considered necessary, it was said.

Organist, 10 Years at House, tells How

Roger Garrett, at Loew's Ohio, Columbus, Gives Recipe for Success

by FRED OESTREICHER
in Columbus

Roger Garrett is now in his 10th year as featured organist at Loew's Ohio theatre, Columbus. What Organist Garrett and Russell A. Bovim, now in his 12th year as the Ohio manager, have accomplished can be repeated in other film theaters, they believe.

On April 28th, 1933, Mr. Garrett began a week's engagement at the Ohio. The Ohio audiences liked this young, black-haired organist with an engaging smile and a way with the big Robert Morton console. He was promptly hired for another week, then for four more. That single week has since stretched to well over 500 weeks.

"The organ interludes serve to relieve an all-picture program," says Mr. Garrett. "In the case of organ prologues and settings for the feature, they build up the atmosphere of the feature, supplying showmanship that means your theatre will be remembered over the competing house without such an organ presentation."

The Ohio was until recently, the only Columbus theatre to feature an organist. Another capital city first run theatre has added a similar program, limiting it, however, to a single Saturday evening presentation once a week.

Organ Program Builds Goodwill of Theatre

Goodwill is one of the chief by-products of the regular weekly organ programs and accompanying stage presentations, Mr. Garrett thinks. The opportunity to tie in with high school and college activities, civic affairs and other group interests is so great that it represents an invaluable aid in getting and keeping business.

Before coming to Columbus, Mr. Garrett appeared at theatres in Huntington, W. Va., and Aberdeen, S. D. At the former town he cooperated with fraternities and sororities of Marshall College and at the latter with high schools and the normal school. Here are words of advice from him:

Don't use groups solely for your own ends.

Don't dictate details of programs staged by local talent.

Give suggestions when asked, but do not insist on your own ideas. You'll find that leaders of such groups will come to you for help and suggestions.

Be sure all equipment (lighting, settings, public address system, etc.) is first class and in good working order.

With the decline of live talent shows in the majority of theatres, Mr. Garrett says the organist can be the one human element of the program and serve the function of a full stage show in providing audiences with satisfying entertainment. This is, of course, even more true when the stage is used for entertainment in which local talent appears, with the organist as master of ceremonies, producer and general utility man.

The wide variety of entertainment possible with a theatre organ in use is evident from the following list of activities, stunts and novelties which Mr. Garrett has offered Ohio patrons.

1. Audience singing to slides. This is the standard item on the week-after-week program.

2. Parodies, also sung, whistled or hummed by the audience. The organist writes many of his parodies.

3. Singing of stunt songs, like "rounds," men vs. women, balcony vs. lower floor, etc.

4. Use of a traveling microphone and traveling keyboard. Patrons are invited to sing to organ accompaniment, with their voices recorded on apparatus in the lobby. Records are played back within a few minutes, so the audience can hear the amateur singers. Garrett autographs all discs and gives them to singers. Amateur keyboard artists are invited to play the organ via the traveling keyboard which can be carried up and down theatre aisles.

Quiz Programs Are Popular

5. Musical quizzes, with questions asked either by the player over public address system (he has microphone attached to console) or by screen slides. These quiz programs have been quite popular.

6. Special songs for fraternities and sororities.

7. Service songs, like the Marines' Hymn, Army Air Corps song. Mr. Garrett has been winning more good will by appearing weekly at Fort Hayes, headquarters of the Fifth Corps Area and playing for service men. He also has played many U. S. O. parties and war bond and stamp sales programs.

8. Presenting specially devised musical settings for tunes like "Sleepy Lagoon" and "Johnny Doughboy."

9. Playing medleys of tunes from different composers, like George M. Cohan, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter.

10. Presenting seasonal songs, at Christmas, Easter, New Year's, graduation, national holidays.

11. Prologue musical settings for feature films.

12. Staging a "trip through the organ," playing different instruments as pictures of appropriate sections of the organ are flashed on the screen.

It is in the field of home-talent stage presentations that Loew's Ohio has had special success. This success would have been difficult without the aid given by Garrett and the public willingness to be "sold" through the week-after-week acquaintance with the man at the organ.

From small beginnings several seasons ago, the Ohio has built up its Ohio State University football rallies, held each Friday before home games, into one of the established institutions in this football-mad town. Mr. Garrett does the major part of the actual physical staging of these rallies, in which 250 persons have frequently taken part on the Ohio stage.

NBC Applies for NAB Membership

Despite his opposition to membership for networks in the National Association of Broadcasters, Niles Trammell, president of National Broadcasting Company last Thursday in New York submitted NBC's application for network membership.

Mr. Trammell said that NBC was applying for membership because he wished to abide by the majority decision at the last convention. He added that network directors should be elected to the board only if such representatives are elected through normal procedure. NBC's chief also issued a plea for "a strong cohesive association in the broadcasting industry. The present differences in the ranks of the broadcasters, with many voices speaking in Washington for them," he said, "has led to confusion and ineffectiveness for the entire industry and this situation demands prompt correction."

ASCAP delaying Plan on Theatre Music Fee Cuts

Relief from payment of music licensing fees by exhibitors who have been affected by wartime dislocations was the subject of discussion between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Allied States Association last week. No concrete recommendation came out of the meeting.

Two months ago Allied proposed to ASCAP that the music organization offer some relief to exhibitors who have felt the effects of population shifts, blackouts and other wartime factors. ASCAP, it was said, began a survey of the situation.

At last week's meeting, attended by John G. Paine, general manager of the Society, Col. H. A. Cole, representing Allied, and Herman Greenberg, assistant to Mr. Paine, no solution had been reached and negotiations were postponed until a satisfactory statistical basis could be worked out, according to Mr. Paine. Both Allied and ASCAP presented statistics on the situation, said the Society's head, but it was agreed that a new basis for the survey would have to be developed before a method could be determined for granting exhibitors a fee adjustment. This process, Mr. Paine said, was likely to take some weeks, but he expressed confidence in the ultimate solution of the problem. He also announced that another meeting with Allied leaders would be held in October.

Theatres Paid ASCAP $10,200,000 in 10 Years

Motion picture theatres have paid ASCAP music licensing fees in the amount of $10,200,000 during the past 10 years. This figure was cited in a brief filed by the Society last Wednesday in Federal court, in answer to one of two anti-trust suits brought by exhibitors now pending against it. ASCAP contends the amount is "infinitesmal compared with the volume of business done by theatres, their gross incomes and profits made by them."

According to the brief, the Society collected the $10,200,000 from 1931 to 1941, and income to it from theatres increased from $665,000 in 1931 to $1,199,000 in 1941. The number of film houses licensed increased from 10,910 in 1931 to 15,510 in 1941, it was disclosed. ASCAP also said the average annual cost per theatre was $60.94 in 1931 and is now $77.39.

The Society intimated that Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, of which the 13 theatre plaintiffs are members, was behind the anti-trust suit and that it consistently had fought ASCAP in the system of license charges. The brief further disclosed that from January, 1917, the date of ASCAP's organization, to July, 1942, it had brought 1,929 infringement suits against film houses.

In answer to the charge that ASCAP's licensing fees are arbitrary and unreasonable, the brief asserted that rates had been arrived at after fair and equal bargaining and that the fees were reasonable to theatres. The Society contended that were it not for ASCAP, exhibitors would be forced to deal with individual copyright owners at a "stupendous and prohibitive cost to user and owner."

Another anti-trust suit brought against the music organization recently was that filed by more than 100 theatres in the metropolitan district, which is pending in the same court.

Stephenson Smith, educational director of ASCAP, was named to the National Theatre Conference this week in Cleveland. Paul Green is president, and Barclay Leathem executive secretary of the Conference. It was said that Mr. Smith's election was in recognition of his services in strengthening the ties between the music industry and the theatre.

6,000,000 DAILY READERS OF 'GUIDE'

The Loew circuit's Movie Guide, in all New York newspapers, has a daily circulation of 6,000,000, the company estimated this week, adding that in its two years it has been read by approximately 3,911,738,000 persons.

The advertisement is enlivened by the use of two cartoon characters, Willy and Nilly, who scamper about in the margins—and who have caused "fan" letters to the home office.

City to abandon Passage Right

Local controversy has developed in Springfield, Mass., over the probability of the city relinquishing its rights to a passage now covered by the rear of the Captiol theatre, and waiving its claim to an annual rental of $600 for the passage.

City officials also have questioned an order introduced in the City Council and referred to the Board of Public Works which would waive the city's rights. Under the order, the Mayor would be empowered to convey to others any right of the city to the property. Mayor Roger L. Putnam has declared there is some question as to the city's right to the property. The total rental now due, inclusive of back payments, is $3,300.

Mayor Putnam has pointed out that in the event the city decided to use the property, it probably would be liable to heavy cost in compensating owners for property now on the land included in the passage. The present lease on the property expires July 1, 1944.

Loew's in Ontario Offered for Sale

Loew's theatre in London, Ont., this week was publicly offered for sale, with bids accepted to August 14th. The terms provide a 15 per cent cash down payment. The house is now operated by Loew's. Conditions of the sale reveal that the name of Loew's is not included in the offered assets and that the purchaser, if other than Loew's, would have to change the name of the house.

The sale is understood to be in accordance with the desires of a group of preferred stockholders. Dividends on the preferred stock have been in arrears. It is reported that the Loew's circuit has offered $250,000 for the property, and that the directors have advised the stockholders not to accept less. The house seats 1,900 and is locally owned.

Cincinnati Variety Golf

Approximately 200 members and guests attended the annual frolic and dance of the Cincinnati Variety Club, held at nearby Summit Hills Country Club, last week. It was the largest attendance of any of the club's outdoor affairs. Golf, without an official tournament, swimming, boating, cards and games of various types, in addition to a dinner, were among the features. A highlight of the occasion was the awarding of $1,200 in War Bonds in a contest. An estimated $1,500 was realized for charity.

Bloom Returns to Northwest

Al Bloom, former Seattle film booker, has returned from Los Angeles as checking supervisor for Warner Bros. in the Pacific Northwest territory.

Atlanta Police ban Bingo

M. A. Hornsby, Atlanta Chief of Police, this week ordered all theatres conducting Bingo games to stop operation of this game immediately. More than 20 neighborhood houses and one downtown theatre are affected. The games, including variations known as Lucky and Comet, have been used by local theatres in Atlanta for many years.

Other developments where "games" are concerned included the action of city officials of Columbus, Ohio, who started a drive last week to close places where chance games are conducted. The Columbus Amusement Association, an organization of dealers interested in maintaining the games, has called a public meeting to organize opposition to the drive.

Bank Night in Des Moines theatres last Friday escaped a possible licensing fee when the City Council agreed to allow Bingo to continue unless it becomes "uncontrolled." Earlier, the Mayor had threatened to enact a licensing fee for all amusement places if the council insisted on licensing Bingo.

Mayor Petro of Elyria, near Cleveland, last week ruled that Bank Night was gambling. He held Max Greenwald, manager of the Rivoli, Lincoln and Capitol, the three theatres involved, guilty of advertising and promoting a scheme of chance. Mr. Greenwald was held for the grand jury. Recently the Lorain County grand jury investigating gambling issued an order banning Bingo and all forms of socalled organized gambling.

SMPE Ballots for 1943 Officers Are Mailed

Ballots have been mailed for election of 1943 officers of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Nominees are: for president, Herbert Griffin, vice-president of the International Projector Corporation; for executive vice-president, Loren Ryder, director of recording for Paramount; for editorial vice-president, A. C. Downes, research laboratories, National Carbon Company; for convention vice-president, William C. Kunzmann, technical engineer, National Carbon; for secretary, E. A. Williford, manager of that company's carbon sales division; for treasurer, M. R. Boyer, technical representative of the DuPont Company.

Board of governors nominees are: William A. Mueller, Warners; H. W. Remershield, Bell and Howell; Joseph Spray, Ace Film Laboratories, and H. D. Bradbury.

May Reopen Mastbaum And Erlanger Theatres

Two Philadelphia theatres, long dark, may reopen shortly. They are the 5,000-seat Warner Mastbaum, a de luxe film house once operated by the late Samuel "Roxy" Rothafel; and the Erlanger, former legitimate house, recently acquired by William Goldman. They are located on West Market Street above 16th Street.

The projected reopenings, probably this month, are attributed to the city's influx of war industry workers and Government agencies. "Pride of the Yankees" probably will be the opening feature at the Mastbaum.

Show "Women"

"Women Are Warriors" was shown at the Canadian Motion Picture Bureau last week. It is a documentary, portraying the role of women in the war.

BUY U. S. WAR SAVINGS BONDS

Mexican Stock Sufficient for 60 Pictures

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Good news for producers was the announcement by the Ministry of the Interior, recently designated by the Government to control and distribute raw film on a quota basis, that sufficient film will be available to allow the production of about 60 pictures. This, it is said, will be enough to enable the producers to carry through their 1942 program, which promises to be the largest since modern commercial production started in Mexico 11 years ago.

It was learned in picture circles that the Mexican Government asked the United States Government to allow a fair amount of raw film to be shipped to Mexico to help an industry in which this Government is so interested. Alberto J. Pani, the industrialist who has held several high Government posts in Mexico and abroad and is deeply interested in CLASA, this country's largest studios, of which his son, Ricardo, is the head, was reported to have figured prominently in these successful negotiations.

A Mexican version in Spanish of "The Phantom of the Opera" in which the late Lon Chaney starred, will be produced here soon by Ixtla Films, with Chano Urueta directing.

Radio Station XEW here, the most important in Mexico because of its power, 150,000 watts, and its enterprise, has just inaugurated improvements that not only expand its service but put it on a par with the big American stations. It is owned by Emilio Azcarraga, who with his associates also owns and operates XEQ and two important theatres, the Alameda, first run, and the Cine Bucareli, select second run.

David Hopkins in Navy

David Hopkins, west coast representative of the motion picture section of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, has been commissioned a lieutenant, junior grade, in the U. S. Navy. He is the son of Harry L. Hopkins, Lease Lend Administrator, and has been with the Coordinator of Inter-American affairs for a year and a half. Francis Alstock, director of the Motion Picture Section, has not yet named a successor in the Hollywood office of the Coordinator or to the Motion Picture Society of the Americas.

Acquires Milwaukee House

The Hollywood theatre, north side Milwaukee neighborhood house, has been acquired by Marvin E. Mirisch, brother of Harold J. Mirisch, now with RKO, and will be managed by Eugene Arnstein, recently a booker for Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Corporation. The house has been operated for many years by Bertram Nathan, who is entering the Army. Harold Mirisch formerly operated the Tower and Oriental in Milwaukee.

Armed Forces calling More Film Men

The armed forces of the United States continue to call men from all branches of the motion picture industry, to serve their country in the Army, Navy, Marines, Air Forces or Coast Guard.

The RKO Radio studio now reports 94 employees in the service, while National Theatre Supply has about 30 in service, including four captains, five lieutenants, two non-commissioned officers and an Aviation Cadet.

At the RKO Radio studio recently called were: Nate Slott, assistant director, Coast Guard; James Hall, studio driver, Army; Glenn Miller, electrical department, Army; Sam Waxman, physical instructor, Army.

National Theatre Supply men, all in the Army, include: H. T. Gooding, S. C. Kendall, V. D. Hobbs, M. T. Brown, E. H. Allbright, S. E. Songer, H. L. McCracken, C. W. Gano, R. P. Rosser, Jr., W. B. Estes, Stanley Partridge, R. A. Flaim, John Ward, J. R. Kesselman, H. D. Epting, H. L. Chafin, W. C. Hutt, D. F. Killmer, W. B. Hardin, R. C. Green, M. J. Koneman, J. C. Grizzello, M. V. Gelders, J. B. Stone, R. B. Hale, W. R. Harpster, E. B Conklin, E. M. Brown, E. Yates.

Others now in the service include: Fred Trebilcock, manager of Shea's theatre, Toronto, RCAF; Ralph Hayden, accountant, Paramount branch in Des Moines, and A. O. Elder, booker there, both Army; Herbert Pivnick, Loew's Poli theatre, Hartford, Marines; Robert T. Barton, MPTO of Virginia counsel, Richmond, Air Force; Alex Ravdin, former manager of the Capitol, Richmond, Army; Kenneth Peterson, doorman at the Westhampton theatre, Richmond, Navy; Harold L. Richman, manager of the Avenue theatre, Pittsburgh, Army; B. H. Pfotenhauer, manager of the State, Oklahoma City, Navy; Floyd Stawls, manager of the Carillon, Richmond, Army; Irwin Karches, manager of the Congress, St. Louis, Army; Robert E. Meade, projectionist, E. M. Loew theatre, Hartford, Conn., Air Force; Paul Kerrigan, owner of several houses in Philadelphia suburbs, Air Force; Donald Andreotta, assistant manager of the Webster, Hartford, Conn., Army.

Kaplowitz and Cohen Are Now in Army

Emanuel Cohen, one-time production head of Paramount, is on active duty at Governor's Island, New York, with the rank of major.

Harry Kaplowitz, assistant to Sam E. Morris at Warner Bros., is now in the Army.

Last week, Hal Roach was inducted as a major in the U. S. Signal Corps at Fort MacArthur on the West Coast. He will be stationed at the Signal Corps Center, Astoria, Long Island. Employes at his studio tendered him a farewell dinner and presented him with a platinum wrist watch.

Wilkes-Barre Houses Close

The Strand and Irving theatres, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have closed for the summer.

30 DAYS HATH SEPTEMBER

"SALUTE TO OUR HEROES" A BOND FOR EVERY MOTHER'S SON IN SERVICE

Sponsored by the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, 1501 Broadway, New York City (Room 408), in cooperation with the Treasury Department, War Savings Staff.

Thirty fighting days in September for our industry to fulfill the obligation that our Government has assigned us. We can make history and we will. A BILLION-DOLLAR MONTH is our goal! Not just one stunt or two, but something for every day! Not just showmanship, but showmanship that sells bonds! Have you read the Campaign Book? Below are suggestions to help plan your own September. For the land we love, FIGHT!

FIGHT! It's our Industry's SECOND FRONT!

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

. . . the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box-office performance of product—providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.

Columbia

LADY IS WILLING, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Fred MacMurray—A fair picture. However, very poor at the box office. It might be that Marlene Dietrich kept people away. Running time, 91 minutes. —Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town patronage.

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Laurence Olivier, Raymond Massey—Not as good as Columbia led us to believe. Will do pretty fair business. Running time, 104 minutes.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooncy, Lewis Stone—Glad to see Judge Hardy take a little of the glamour off the liquor business with his one scene. Far too many pictures tend to popularize drink. Returns satisfactory. Running time, 93 minutes.—Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

KATHLEEN: Shirley Temple, Lorraine Day—Ran this at the airport and it was a terrible flop with the all-man audience, but in the regular theatre it drew well and had many favorable comments, so Shirley is still good box office. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural small town patronage.

MRS. MINIVER: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Here is a grand picture with box office dynamite. The direction was perfect because the dramatic highlights hit the people between the eyes. The finale had them wringing their handkerchiefs. A radio dramatist came in to see that finale no less than five times. Business exceptional for the hot weather. Running time, 133 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetiian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

NAZI AGENT: Conrad Veidt, Ann Ayars—Another spy picture in the present cycle. If you don't show it you haven't missed anything. Running time, 82 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NAZI AGENT: Conrad Veidt—No draw. Those that came in seemed disappointed. Running time, 82 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

RIO RITA: Abbott & Costello, Kathryn Grayson, John Carroll—Wheeler and Woolsey's old standby back again. Not on the elaborate scale that the first one was, but with the two zanies it is still good for a lot of laughs. Miss Grayson, we all know, has a good voice, but for a solo she sang the "Shadow Son" from "Lenore," which to the audience was just so much voice exercise, except for perhaps the three per cent who know the classics. She trills and reaches the high register, but what does that mean, if the audiene doesn't get the sense of it With a slapstick comedy, it had no place in the picture. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

SHIP AHOY: Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton—This was a contest picture from MGM and we sure went to town on it. Plenty of outside advertising plus radio plugs put this one over big. Surpassed my average receipts by over 30 per cent. Play this one up and cash in. Running time, 95 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SHIP AHOY: Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton—The title evidently intrigued them, the ensembles in it were very good and Powell did one sensational dance number, but if Skelton and Lahr are comedians, I wonder why my audiences were so apathetic to their efforts. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy LaMarr, John Garfield—A very good picture in which Frank Morgan steals the picture by a good margin. This is not to the discredit of the balance of the cast; but his role had some of the mystic in it that was very effective. It did satisfactory business, but it deserves standout business, which it did not get. Each month more of the young men are leaving and that is affecting business to some extent. Running time, 105 minutes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

WE WERE DANCING: Norma Shearer, Melvyn Douglas—Well, we were just a little surprised as we had been led to believe this was terrible. It didn't have much but it was just about what one would expect from Norma Shearer. We do not yet see why producers continue to put Melvyn Douglas in romantic leads. Running time, 94 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WE WERE DANCING: Melvyn Douglas, Norma Shearer—I debated for a while whether to play this or not; then found myself advertising it. Some like it fairly well; some thought it was punk, but the best crowd since college closed came out for it. Personally, I thought it fair with a few laughs near the end. The cast must have done the drawing. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-op., Alfred, N. Y. Small college patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Not much to it. Poor acting and story, but beautiful color, and its drawing power surprised us. Business good. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Sterling Hayden—Too much hate and unhappiness. Not a chuckle in 80 minutes. Got by, being doubled with a Roy Rogers' western. Running time, 80 minutes. —Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—Here's the best musical ever made by Paramount. Producer and director showed plenty of foresight ringing in sveral stage acts that are sure fire comedy. Betty Hutton will soon be Hollywood's top comedienne. She vibrates through the whole picture. Bracken is great. Holden is great. Gil Lamb is terrific. Cass Dailey slays them. Lorraine and Rogna had them in stitches. Sorry, but Lamour seemed to slow up the action to a walk. Business big. Running time, 93 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—One time the movie fans got more than they expected; the vaudeville acts were blended in very well—tops in entertainment. Running time, 93 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

LADY HAS PLANS, THE: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland—Good picture, but did not draw much business. Running time, 75 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

LADY HAS PLANS, THE: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland—My kind of a picture—plenty of plot, comedy, suspense. Running time, 77 minutes.—Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN: Fleischer feature cartoon—If you have not already been stuck with this one, lay off it, or you will fall flat. Running time, 78 minutes.—Theodore Mikolowsky, Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa. General patronage.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN: Fleischer feature cartoon—Folks gave the kids their admission and sent them, but stayed away themselves. Feature O.K., though your sympathy was with the bugs. Running time, 78 minutes.—Mrs. L. S. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT OF JANUARY 16: Robert Preston, Ellen Drew—You will lose nothing by cancelling it if you can. Running time, 80 minutes.—Theodore Mikolowsky, Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa. General patronage.

PACIFIC BLACKOUT: Robert Preston, Martha O'Driscoll—Good action drama, not too strong, but served as entertainment for our giveaway patronage. Running time, 76 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: William Holden, Ellen Drew—A "prestige" picture, I guess, but it played to poorest crowd in months and then they went away feeling like it was wasted time—that's not the kind of prestige a theatre wants to build. Running time, 80 minutes.—Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town patronage.

TAKE A LETTER, DARLING: Rosalind Russell, Fred MacMurray—A Class "A" production if there ever was one, dialogue, settings, direction, photography and sound, all almost perfect. Running time, 93 minutes.—P. R. Maison, Crystal Theatre, Flarareau, S. D. General patronage.

TRUE TO THE ARMY: Allan Jones, Judy Canova, Ann Miller—This picture is only fair, but it did excellent business, way above average. Personally I did not like it, but I like the kind of business it did. Running time, 76 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RKO Radio

BASHFUL BACHELOR: Lum and Abner—Silly but brought in many who seldom come. Returns satisfactory. Running time, 70 minutes.—Mrs. Le. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE FOXES: Bette Davis, Teresa Wright—Did not draw.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MAYOR OF 44TH STREET: George Murphy, Anne Shirley—Good picture and good business. Running time, 86 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SYNCOPATION: Adolph Menjou, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper—Played Saturday through Tuesday to very nice gross—picture well done. The all star band gave out some very nice numbers which were enjoyed very much. In all, a swell show. Running time, 88 minutes.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

Republic

CALLING ALL MARINES: Don Barry—Pretty fair action picture. Some of the children said they had seen part of this picture in a "Dick Tracy" serial. I wonder? Running time, 65 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

DEVIL PAYS OFF, THE: Margaret Tallichet, William Wright—Played this on bargain night. Very good program picture. William Wright good. Running time, 70 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

MOUNTAIN MOONLIGHT: Weaver Brothers—A

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

dandy weekend picture. Did outstanding business. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

SHEPHERD OF THE OZARKS: Weaver Brothers, Elviry—O.K., but not as good as these stars used to make. Running time, 70 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—Just a lot of nonsense. Running time, 82 minutes.—Theodore Mikolowsky, Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa.

YOKEL BOY: Albert Dekker, Joan Davis—Just what the name implies, an entertainment for yokels. We thought it very ordinary. Running time. 69 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.

Twentieth Century-Fox

LONE STAR RANGER: John Kimbrough, Sheila Ryan—See review on "Joe Smith, American" from Metro. The only thing I can say about this is it was written by Zane Grey, and the supporting cast was very good, but as far as I am concerned, 20th Century-Fox can leave John Kimbrough's check in the office. His voice does not record, and he looks scared to death. Let's have no more. Played July 10-11.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

MOON TIDE: Jean Gabin, Ida Lupino—This picture gave fair satisfaction but has no drawing power. Running time, 94 minutes.—P. R. Maison, Crystal Theatre, Flanareau, S. D. General patronage.

MY GAL SAL: Rita Hayworth, Victor Mature—A swell musical show in color which did a little over average business. Running time, 101 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE DAY: Claudette Colbert, John Payne—A dandy picture. Did nice business considering the heat we had. Running time, 86 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

TEN GENTLEMEN FROM WEST POINT: Maureen O'Hara, George Montgomery—A fair production. Four-fifths of the picture showed night scenes which made it one of the darkest pictures we have ever shown, which for me greatly detracts from its interest. Drew only fair and pleased the same. Running time, 103 minutes.—P. R. Maison Crystal Theatre, Flanareau, S. D. General patronage.

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI: John Payne, Maureen O'Hara—We are not doing much business as a result of people leaving here to work in defense industries. However, this is an excellent picture, both from a standpoint of production and entertainment. Running time, 87 minutes.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI: John Payne, Maureen O'Hara, Randolph Scott—A really fine picture in beautiful color which pleased. Good business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHISPERING GHOSTS: Milton Berle, Brenda Joyce—Good picture and good business. It pleased all on Family Night. Running time, 75 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CORSICAN BROTHERS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Ruth Warrick—A real fine picture. It did business all right. Heat bad. Running time, 110 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

DUDES ARE PRETTY PEOPLE: Marjorie Woodworth, Jimmy Rogers—Skip it. No good anywhere you put it. Save your playing time and you won't have an audience that gave a sigh of relief when it ended. We could use some good reissues so that we would not have to fill bookings with such as the above. Running time, 46 minutes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

MISS POLLY: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville—Poorest title of all the Streamliners but about the best entertainment. Not a bad little picture at all.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

SHANGHAI GESTURE: Gene Tierney, Victor Mature—This is the world's worst, if kicks mean anything. More patrons panned this than any picture I have run in 17 years! Set a new high for me on walkouts. I noticed a few fairly good reports on this —There must be a great difference in people within our borders!—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

SUNDOWN: Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot—The kind of a show you have to call a good picture, but at the same time one that doesn't really please a whole lot. Lacks comedy and the ruthless slaying of large numbers of persons doesn't really add up to entertainment. This one drew a lot of good comments in these columns. I must be different.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. Small town patronage.

TWIN BEDS: George Brent, Joan Bennett, Mischa Auer—If it's comedy you want, here it is—so much, you grow tired laughing.—Running time, 84 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Universal

LEATHER PUSHERS, THE: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Nice action picture for double bill, business fair. Awful heat wave. Running time, 64 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

PARIS CALLING: Randolph Scott, Elisabeth Bergner—A real picture, if you can get them in. No draw, business poor. Running time, 96 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont. Rural patronage.

PRIVATE BUCKAROO: Andrews Sisters, Dick Foran—Played on Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to good business considering stiff opposition such as carnival and night rodeo. Andrews Sisters as usual are great, with numerous snappy numbers. Running time, 68 minutes.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

SABOTEUR: Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane—I am inclined to believe that the public is tired of propaganda pictures, at least the poor business done by this picture would indicate that. Running time, 108 minutes.—Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah. Small town and rural patronage.

UNSEEN ENEMY: Andy Devine, Leo Carrillo—Only fair. I thought this series was sold as starring Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine. I didn't see anything of Foran in this! Running time, 61 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Warner Brothers

BIG SHOT, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Irene Manning—This is a swell show which we should have run over the weekend instead of mid-week. Bogart never misses for us—Irene Manning did very nice work in this. Running time, 80 minutes.—H. W. Knutson, State Theatre, Livingston, Mont. General patronage.

BODY DISAPPEARS, THE: Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman—Pretty fair program picture that drew good patronage. Plenty of laughs. Running time, 72 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

IN THIS OUR LIFE: Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, George Brent—Here's drama that will pull the fans in from all over. The cast is big and the women will pull the men in for you whether they like it or not. Sold Bette Davis as a hard-boiled witch in the newspaper ads with a teaser advance campaign and the business was very big. Running time, 97 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

IN THIS OUR LIFE: Bette Davis, Olivia deHavilland, Geogre Brent—Very good drama well produced and holds attention all the way. What a trouper this little Miss deHavilland lady is. She most always is the under dog, playing second fiddle as it were, but she makes any part a solo. She is a tough baby to shade in any picture, and that is acting. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

JUKE GIRL: Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan—This one pulled the crowds in over the holiday. In spite of hot weather (we have no cooling plant) business was much better than last year at the same period. Sheridan still is a big draw, and Reagan has tripled his popularity since "Kings Row." Whorf plays an unsympathetic part and it's hard to figure whether the fans like his acting or not. Comments about him were non-committal. Running time, 90 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

JUKE GIRL: Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan—Another "They Ride at Night." Will please any audience that wants action—a natural for us. Running time, 90 minutes—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

KINGS ROW: Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan—Here is the dramatic triumph of the year. Plenty of repeats to see this one. Business was very big and the picture was held over in our other house for an additional three days. Running time, 130 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

MALE ANIMAL, THE: Henry Fonda, Olivia de Haviland—Here is a scream that had all the "donkeys" in town braying. Cast is great. De Haviland always turns in a good performance and Fonda is perfect for this part. Jack Carson deserves bigger and better parts. He's a natural. Running time, 101 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

MANPOWER: George Raft, Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich—Real picture, action, comedy, drama. Pleased the few who turned out to see it and we had an excellent print. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural small town patronage.

THIS WAS PARIS: Ben Lyon, Ann Dvorak—Our people do not care for English pictures and besides there is not much to it. Running time, 77 minutes.—Theodore Mikolowsky, Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa. General patronage.

STEEL AGAINST THE SKY: Lloyd Nolan, Alexis Smith—So many bad reports on this that I was afraid to run it. This is a good picture and was well received by all that saw it. It is nothing big, but has a lot of action with a little comedy tossed in that makes a good show. Played July 7-8.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town patronage.

WINGS FOR THE EAGLE: Ann Sheridan, Dennis

Short Features

Columbia

NEW YORK'S FINEST: Panoramics—Good subject. Running time, 10 minutes.——Paul McBride, Avalon Theatre, Fillmore, Utah.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DOG TROUBLE: Technicolor cartoon—This color cartoon is as lively and funny as anyone can want. Tom and Jerry meet up with a bulldog and get together to take care of him. The audience really let go and laughed plenty. So did I. Running time, 9 minutes.——W. Varick Nevins, Ill., Alfred Co-op., Alfred, N. Y.

N. Y. Projectionists Vote to Strike

Projectionists in New York home offices, exchanges, newsreels and laboratory projection rooms on Tuesday voted to strike because seven months of negotiation for a new contract have been unsuccessful.

Meeting at Manhattan Center the members of Local 306 authorized Herman Gelber, president, to call the walkout of approximately 300. Mr. Gelber denied that the action, if taken, will contravene the IATSE's "no strike" pledge voiced by its president, Richard Walsh. It was understood additionally that Local 306 would act only upon Mr. Walsh's approval.

The union seeks a 10 per cent salary increase to cover the alleged increased cost of living. The salary increases were agreed to by the film companies, the union said, but they asked changes in the contract which were rejected by the local. One disputed point was the provision that projectionists deprived of work by the closing of a booth be given employment elsewhere by the company.

Bowles Takes Over New Fox West Coast Post

Arch M. Bowles and Mrs. Bowles have left San Francisco for Los Angeles where Mr. Bowles will take up his new assignment as general manager of Fox-West Coast Theatres. Until recently Mr. Bowles was northern California manager of the circuit. He came to San Francisco first as manager of the old Equity Exchange, and in 1921 managed the T and D Circuit and the old Tivoli theatre.

In 1922 he became manager of the West Coast Theatres, remaining in charge until the circuit became Fox-West Coast Theatres, when he became northern California chief. His wife, known professionally as Peggy O'Neill, for some years has been producer of the weekly stage shows at the RKO Golden Gate theatre in San Francisco.

20th-Fox to St. Louis Circuits and Independents

The first group of five pictures in the 1942-43 schedule of Twentieth Century-Fox has been sold to two circuits and 30 independents in the St. Louis territory, Benjamin Reingold, St. Louis branch manager for the company, announced.

The circuits are the Rodgers in Southern Illinois and southeast Missouri, composed of eight houses, and the Frisina Circuit in Illinois and Missouri, consisting of 25 houses.

Named Evergreen Booker

Don Condon has been appointed booker for Evergreen State Theatres at Seattle, succeeding Jack Rosenberg. Mr. Rosenberg has enlisted in the Coast Guard. Mr. Condon was formerly assistant district manager for the Army Motion Picture Service.

Lillian Gish in Film

Lillian Gish appeared before a motion picture camera this week for the first time in 10 years. The occasion was the filming of the Lester Brown production, "The Commandos Come at Dawn" aboard a Canadian warship in a Vancouver, B. C., island inlet.

Silver Leaves 20th-Fox

Milton Silver last week completed his special assignment, on trade paper advertising, with Twentieth Century-Fox.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Showmanship from Contented Managers

NO man is ever paid what he thinks he is worth. Perhaps that is just as well; if a man were satisfied he would become complacent, and complacency in turn causes the downfall of the individual.

That's just as true of showmen as it is of any other workers. But the showman may find in these pages another voice to plead his cause; here at the Round Table sit his fellows, all trying to get a square deal for themselves and for their craft. The art of showmanship is indeed a craft and the laborer is truly worthy of his hire.

Now, it isn't just dollars and cents that will even temporarily satisfy a good man. Nor is it the type of paternalism which is common in other industries by which the employee is given so many things in lieu of actual cash-in-pocket that he becomes an ingrate if he complains. But showmen are paid off in other ways; a day off every week, a vacation with pay, and a decent living wage so that he may maintain the dignity of his position.

You self-employing showmen may laugh at these words; but you vote yourselves a living wage which is paid to you out of reserves if not earned and you arrange your business so that you may take vacations for the most part.

Many a manager is paid far less than his projectionist. We do not deprecate the skill it takes to operate the present type of motion picture projector—and do it efficiently. But surely the manager, whose responsibility is greater, whose efforts are productive of revenue, is entitled to at least an even break with his employees.

The man who comes to the theatre every day at 11:00 A.M. to do his paper work before the house opens, who stays until the closing after 11:00 o'clock at night, who writes ads and publicity copy, joins organizations, makes tieups, arranges parades, represents his employer—is worth a living wage.

Surely it's worth something to have such a man contented and happy in his work. A day off each week to spend with his family, to do just as he pleases, to forget about business, can do a lot for the morale of a man. And, after he has worked six days a week for 50 weeks of the year, surely he is entitled to two weeks of complete rest and relaxation when he may visit his family in a distant city, see his friends—in short, do just what he likes.

There's a certain brand of condensed milk which is advertised as being better because it comes from contented cows. Isn't a theatre better operated by a contented showman?

"The Quigley Awards are a great incentive to develop showmen for our industry", says Terry McDaniel, district manager for Fox West Coast. These words were uttered when Terry congratulated Ed Harris, manager of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., on winning a Quigley Award Plaque.

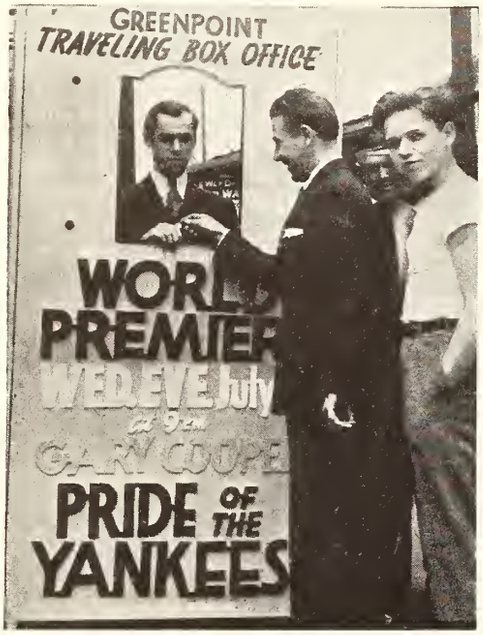
Operation Successful—Patient Died

IN hospitals and medical schools it is quite possible and not at all unusual to hear the expression, "The operation was a success—the patient died". Failure in medicine is not always coupled to life or death. That's true of war, too.

But the theatres' part in the war effort—the sale of Bonds and Stamps—can be measured only in terms of the amount of War Bonds sold. It's unusual for the theatres to be able to measure the success of their salesmanship at all.

Exploitation can never be gauged in selling values. One never knows whether business might not have been just as good if the ad had been smaller, if the editor hadn't run that piece or if that window display hadn't been arranged. Of course, it is well known that showmanship and selling of pictures pays; it just can't be proven in dollars and cents. It may well be said of exploitation that the operation was successful but the patient—in this case the picture—died.

Such, however, is not the case with the War Bond and Stamp drive for September to be known as a "Salute to Our Heroes". The idea is to sell a billion worth of Bonds and Stamps through the theatres that month.



It should be regarded as a tribute to our industry that we have been selected as the agent through which the Government hopes to realize this unprecedented sum.

The Government won't be impressed by effort—it's results that will count. All the bands, parades of Army units, spellbinders, Mayors' Proclamations, newspaper publicity, window displays, lobby setpieces and trailers won't mean a thing if the report doesn't end up with "The Bijou Theatre, through these efforts, sold $..... worth of Bonds".

In other words, the operation must be a success AND the patient must live. —BOB WILE

Novel Exploitations Devised By Round Tablers to Entice the Public

This clever lobby display was used by Jack Hamilton and Bud Silverman at Schine's Riviera Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

The girls are usherettes at the Orpheum Theatre, Portland, Ore. The picture is "Take a Letter, Darling" and that's what these service men have been saying. Zollie Volchuk is manager of the house.

This display, coupled with some clever teaser novelties in color, brought plenty of attention to the attraction at the Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla. Mark Dupree, the manager, also reports covering the 8 by 10 stills with colored cellophane to give the effect of Technicolor stills.

F. F. Weimers, manager of the Gopher Theatre, Minneapolis, erected this colorful animated display. The lifesize blowup swayed back and forth to the tune of a record playing South Seas music.

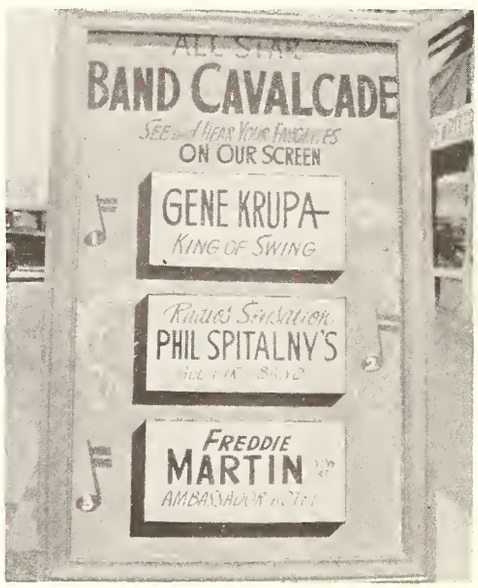
Shorts Sell Seats, Too

by SEYMOUR MORRIS
Director of Advertising and Publicity, Schine Circuit, Gloversville, N. Y.



With the possibility looming that feature production will be curtailed, short subjects are commanding more attention than ever before. On these pages the Round Table brings you some recent outstanding examples of short subject showmanship together with excerpts from a talk made by Seymour Morris, director of advertising and publicity for the Schine Circuit, before recent MGM Exhibtor Forums in various cities.

Rather than criticize the producer for not making good novelty shorts, we exhibitors can be criticized if we do not take full advantage of them.

We are now experienced over the Schine Circuit. We have found that every series of short subjects has certain appeal, and it is up to us to capitalize on that potential patronage. For example: One of our theatres played a short subject, entitled "One, Two, Three—Go!" The manager went out and got a civic organization behind him and tied up a National Safety Week. The papers, police and fire department all cooperated with him. We gained considerable good will by sponsoring this civic movement. A vast amount of publicity was obtained which ordinarily could not even have been bought. In another town one of our managers had so many requests as to when we were going to show "Prophecies of Nostradamus" that he wrote in to us and asked that we book all three Nostradamus subjects so that he could advertise a special attraction and take advantage of that patronage which was waiting to see them.

Tieups Make Short Profitable

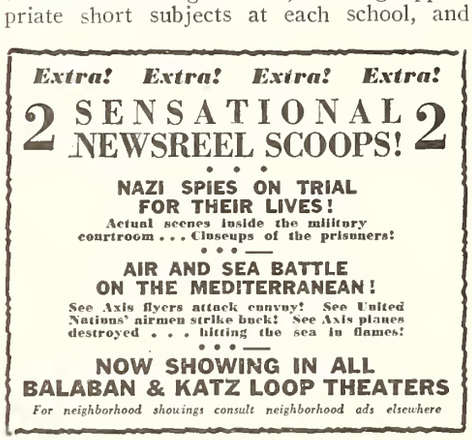
I recall the time we played the Prudence Penny Cooking short. We started out to get just a gas company and domestic appliance sponsorship. To our amazement, this worked out to be one of the best profit-making added attractions we ever had. Between the dealer and the gas company, they arranged a cooking demonstration on the stage. We gave away fifty grand prizes plus the dinners that were cooked right before the audience's eyes. We advertised that we would start our cooking school at 1:30, and gentlemen, you can believe me when I tell you that at one o'clock our theatre was filled with women. We started our cooking school, put the food on to cook, ran our short subjects, stopped the show, went back to our cooking school and gave away our prizes. This idea was so successful that within the period of a year we ran two more cooking schools, running appropriate short subjects at each school, and each of these was more successful than the previous one.

Here's how Ed Harris of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., sold a grouping of three band reels which he played in conjunction with a regular show.

Last Father's Day, we gained a considerable amount of good publicity which we would never have received if we did not cash in on a short subject. Throughout our circuit we booked as many prints as we could get of Pete Smith's "What About Daddy" and The Quiz Kids. In most of the situations where these subjects were shown, we were able to secure full-page cooperative ads entirely paid for by the merchants and newspaper cooperation. These subjects also gave us an opportunity of getting into the merchants' windows with displays advertising our Fathers' Day programs and these windows are usually the ones which are unavailable on days that have such special value.

I point these examples out to you to show what can be done with short subjects if you treat them with feature-like exploitation, instead of considering them as fillers, like the old time vaudeville that had to have an acrobat or seal act open the show because one belonged on each program.

We screen all short subjects in the Schine Home Office. A complete analysis is made as to booking appeal and exploitation and advertising possibilities. These are the essentials of getting the most out of your short subject. The proper booking is just as necessary as the proper booking of features. Many a good short subject on the same program with a weak feature has kept the audience from leaving disgruntled. When you show a heavy feature and have a short subject of a lighter vein, one that is amusing or has good comedy, it offers relief and alleviates that saddened feeling.



The booking of appropriate shorts on National Holidays, oft'times gives you something that you can shout about, and helps the audience to celebrate that occasion. We have found that it is not a good plan to book technicolor short subjects with technicolor features, because after patrons have sat for an hour and a half, or two hours, looking at color—a black and white subject following that offers a contrast and makes them appreciate the color that much more, whereas a technicolor subject following the technicolor feature will only detract from the value of the short. When you are playing a feature with juvenile appeal, you do not want to play a deep short subject. The kids do not appreciate them and become restless, which results in annoyance to those people who would ordinarily enjoy a subject of that kind.

Emphasizing Subject's Appeal

This emphasizes the need for analyzing the appeal of the short subject. It is essential that any short subject worth playing is worth planning. After you have found out what special appeal the short has, then you should follow up and see that you approach those people to whom the short appeals. If the subject is of a musical nature, contact your musical groups, your music schools and the music classes of your public schools. If it is of a literary nature, then your approach must be to those groups. Patriotic subjects should have the support of your patriotic organizations. Industrial shorts should be brought to the attention of your factories and industralists, and so on down the line. A letter to a music group on a musical short, a herald to the schools on an educational short, or a window display in a home appliance store on a home domestic type short will surprise you with the results that are obtained.

You can start in your theatre lobby by

Balaban & Katz is now emphasizing newsreel items in advertising like the above which appeared in all Chicago papers.

Attracting Golf Fans

When the short subject, "Shooting Golf", was booked into Warners' Yorktown Theatre, Elkins Park, Pa., Manager Jay King sent letters to all the golf clubs in the territory inviting the fans to visit the theatre. In addition, he had the golf clubs send personal letters to members endorsing the sport short and placed personal endorsements on the bulletin boards at the clubs.

Irving Cooper, manager of the Strand Theatre, Stamford, Conn., got a window display on "Spy Smasher" because of a tieup between Republic and the Fawcett Publications.

using one-sheets, 30x40's, 40x60's, and on various short subject series you can have a stock standee made up so that when you play one of this series all that is necessary is to put a snipe on the standee advertising the title. If the short subject is of special interest, it is always wise to have a one-frame trailer made up. This also applies to subjects which you know are well liked in your community and which have a large following. Your patrons will enjoy having this advance information, so that they can plan on seeing it. To reach the people outside your theatre, you should give ample display space in your newspaper ad. The mere line "Added Short Subjects" or "Cartoon, Comedy and Novelty," does not mean a thing, and you might just as well save the money that you spend for this extra space.

You will find most companies can furnish you mats on short subjects. If you prefer to have a stock cut made up to give you some individuality, the cost of this will be insignificant over the period of time that you can use it. We thoroughly check every theatre's ad and insist that our short subjects get prominent mention. There are many timely short subjects today that when advertised properly bring us additional business.

In speaking of shorts, we cannot lose sight of the news reels, because today, more than ever before, the public seeks to be graphically informed of what the newspapers can only give them in printed words or still art. If you will take advantage of the advance information that is given you on news reel subjects, you will find something in almost every issue that you can prominently display in your advertising.

Short subjects offer you even more than rounding out a well-balanced program. They can be built into unit shows which for the small expense involved will bring you a great deal of additional revenue. We have definitely found this out by experience during the past few months. Last Christmas we ran a Bugs Bunny Christmas Party, at which time we showed four repeat Bugs Bunny short subjects. We had games on our stage and prizes promoted from various merchants, also Christmas gift candy, etc. For the Saturday prior to Christmas, which is usually a very dull day, we enjoyed a better than average matinee gross. On Armistice Day, we ran a special matinee, at which time we showed a number of historical short subjects. This was sponsored by the schools, P.T.A.'s, and various patriotic organizations. Again, despite parades and other celebrations that were held, we enjoyed a very fine matinee business. Recently we lined up a special patriotic short program that was shown in conjunction with "I Am An American Day." The support of all civic and patriotic organizations was solicited. Cooperative ads were received. The schools again gave us their cooperation by announcing it in all the classes, and once more this type of program assisted our grosses.

Mickey Mouse Easter Party

Every year over the entire Schine Circuit, we run a Mickey Mouse Easter Party that has become an annual event that the kids and even the adults anxiously await. We started this a few years ago and it has constantly built since its innovation. We usually arrange to show a number of appropriate cartoons and tie in one of the children's or 5 & 10 cent stores. We find that the 5 & 10-cent stores are especially happy to cooperate with us because of limited advertising budgets. We place a counter or showcase display in the lobby showing the various Easter baskets and toys that we award as prizes to the holders of the lucky tickets drawn on the stage. These prizes are all given gratis by the Schine Circuit. In addition to this, we give away several live rabbits, Easter candy, etc., all of which are also promoted. The stores usually cooperate very well for window displays because we furnish them with cut-out cartoon characters which make attractive displays for them and appeal to the kids and those interested in the merchandise they are trying to sell at that time. You, too, can build up these special shows to be equally as important if you once start them and get behind them with all of the showmanship you possess.

Throughout the year we run kiddie cartoon carnivals in almost all of our houses. We find that these shows not only bring the children, but the children also bring the adults. We have also found that by running these shows as part of our regular program, and not as a special morning show, we get a better gross. We usually open up a half hour earlier and advertise that they must be in the theatre by starting time in order to see the cartoon carnival plus our regular program.

E. J. Friedwald of the Milwaukee Theatre in the city of that name ran "Winning Your Wings" during Wisconsin Aviation Week. The city's cadets marched through the downtown section with a banner bearing the title and playdates. The picture above shows the V.F.W. as they ended a mile-long march on the opening night. The Drum and Bugle Corps is playing. Business was 50 per cent above average.

For all of these special shows we put forth a great deal of effort. Special advertising manuals are prepared by the Schine Publicity Department. Special mats are made up for the newspapers; 40 x 60's are designed and sent to each theatre, and special trailers are also forwarded to the houses running these shows. Heralds are printed and distributed to all of the schools, and we have found that we have no trouble at all in getting their support when we give them this type of program. Especially on the patriotic and historical type of program, the schools are only too glad to use this as part of their visual education.

Ed Harris, manager of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., bills his short subjects. Take note that Ed has a double feature program, too.

Rabb Promotes Band to Aid War Bond Sale

Recently conducted by George L. Rabb at the Suffolk Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., was a Stamp and Bond Rally, which included the presence of the crack 45-piece Westover Field Band. The cooperation of the Mayor was enlisted and given, the police department being instructed to aid Rabb in every way possible.

The local newspaper gave plenty of publicity to the event, Station WHYN giving several announcements on their news broadcasts. The USO helped to spread the word around and a huge flat truck with a public address system was promoted and stationed out front for use of the speakers. Cooperation from the Postmaster was one hundred per cent, Rabb reporting that the gentleman and his staff personally handled the sales and tabulated them so that the theatreman could announce the figures to the crowds at intervals.

The parade started from the USO building, winding through the main streets and finishing at the theatre. Band numbers, interspersed with speeches by prominent localites, were followed by Boy and Girl Scouts circulating among the people selling stamps. A month's pass was offered to each purchaser of a thousand dollar bond.

Buying a Stamp Gave Right To Vote in Truitt's Contest

Girls between the ages of 16 and 25 were invited to have the opportunity to help Uncle Sam raise money as part of Horace Truitt's contest to select a fleet sponsor in connection with the opening of "Sweetheart of the Fleet" at the L&J Georgia Theatre, in Athens, Ga.

The purchase of a ten cent war stamp from the booth located in the lobby of the theatre entitled the purchaser to a vote for his favorite among the contestants. The girls entering the contest were on the stage two nights in succession, enabling folks to see whom they were voting for. Cooperating merchants came through with prizes for the winner and runners up and Truitt was assured of another full house by having the winners on his stage a few nights after the contest closed.

Truitt reports that the only cost to him in putting over the stunt was six-fifty for a trailer and a dollar for cardboard and show card colors. The local five and dime devoted their entire window to a display of of the prizes and other information on the contest. The stamp booth in the lobby was manned by the American Legion Auxiliary and the newspapers came through with stories and art work.

Stamp and bond sales in four San Diego Theatres—the New Spreckles, Broadway, Cabrillo, and Tower Theatres—were boosted to $97,000 in May and June through sustained ballyhoo. This replica of an army tank was constructed by Lou Metzger.

Gen. MacArthur Victory Club Entices Kids

The opening gun of the "General MacArthur Victory Club" as put on by Joe Nevison at the Warner Bromley, in Philadelphia was directed toward school children. Full cooperation of the public schools was secured, a tieup up with Station WIP and the personal appearance of Uncle Wip, juvenile favorite daily on the station. Children were admitted free upon the purchase of a War Stamp and the presentation of a signed application pledge.

The special show included the film "God's County and the Man," plus cartoons, etc., promoted gratis for the four p.m. after school matinee. Heralds announcing the matinee were circulated in each classroom, carrying the names of the cooperating merchants paying for the activities of the Club, and including application for membership. These were signed by each child and countersigned by parents, who became honorary members of the Club. The latter feature carried the herald into the home and gave merchant names a further break.

Nevison received permission of principals to appear at their assemblies to speak to the children about the Stamp Matinee and Club. The local papers carried stories and another highlight of the campaign was a parade for two schools led by safety patrols carrying banners "We Buy Stamps. On Our Way to see," etc. To attract the kids, Uncle Wip was on hand in the lobby to personally autograph each War Stamp book.

Runs Rubber Salvage Show

To secure the aid of all children in Waterville, Maine, in salvaging every possible scrap of rubber, J. K. O'Donnell at the Haines Theatre, recently held a "Rubber Salvage Show." The show included a specially selected feature, a comedy, cartoon and newsreel, the admission being rubber.

Smith Runs Benefit Show

Ira Smith at the Breeze Theatre, in Beaufort, S. C., a veteran of World War 1 and a Legionnaire, recently held a benefit show in the interest of the sale of Stamps and Bonds. The Legion cooperated by sending a committee of ladies to assist at the matinee and the men at night. The entire program consisted of patriotic shorts with one in which Kate Smith sang "God Bless America" to top it off.

Samartano Sells "Gardenia Jones"

Three column art work and stories were landed in the Meriden Record as part of Joe Samartano's tieup for "Mr. Gardenia Jones" at the Palace, Meriden, Conn. Members of the local USO campaign committee, engaged in a drive for funds, were invited as special guests of the management to a special screening of the picture. The picture run in the paper was a shot of the group in the theatre watching the screen.

Aldritt's "Office" in Lobby Helps "Take a Letter, Darling"

Aldritt's Lobby Display

One of the highlights of Don Aldritt's "Take a Letter, Darling" campaign put on at the Fox Watson Theatre, in Salina, Kansas, included the cooperation of the local transportation company which permitted the tacking of one sheet on the backs of all city buses, in addition to the defense buses carrying workers to the nearby army camp. Aldritt also got out a pocket-prevue herald which was put out in all downtown offices and placed before the 6,000 workers in the camp.

Highly effective was the lobby display created by Don and used seven days in advance of his opening consisting of a completely furnished office with cutouts of Rosalind Russell and Walter Pigeon. Newspaper teaser ads were started a week before playdates, publicity landed in the dailies with story and mat and three spot announcements were used on Station KSAL for two days in advance.

Stoltz's Record Tieup Sells "Syncopation"

Through a tieup with a local music shop, Arnold Stoltz for his date on "Syncopation" at the Avon Theatre, in Utica promoted imprinted bags which were used in connection with all record sales. The lower portion of the bag was devoted to a cut of Bonita Granville together with thumbnail cuts of the members of the All-American Dance Band. The upper portion carried a list of hit tunes together with copy: "See and hear all these recording stars in one great show."

Ingenious Idea Aids "My Gal Sal"

As a novelty stunt prior to the opening of "My Gal Sal" at the Riviera Theatre, in Rochester, Bud Silverman and Jack Hamilton arranged for two ushers to carry a large basket to the stage which apparently was filled with flowers and to say: "This is a special delivery for the manager." Hamilton then looked into the basket when out stepped a six-year-old little girl who handed him a card which he read out loud, reminding him to see the film. The child was interviewed, after which she sang and danced to the tune of "My Gal Sal."

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

FOOTLIGHT SERENADE (Twentieth Century-Fox): Since this is a musical with Betty Grable in the leading role, it can be sold in the same way as this type of picture has been sold in the past. There are five songs which provide opportunity for music stores cooperation through window and counterdisplays. Band leaders, radio stations, hotels and night clubs can be solicited to play these numbers with appropriate credit to the picture. There is a contest suggested in which illustrations from the picture are employed, together with a question which can be answered by using the title of one of the five songs. This can be made easy or difficult by slight variations; it is adaptable to programs, to newspapers and to throwaways. Miss Grable has frequently been associated with leg art or what is colloquially known as "cheesecake". A lifesize blowup of her in dancing costume installed in the lobby would offer the basis for comparison with some of the local damsels, with a suitable reward to any who approached Miss Grable's dimensions to any degree. There's a new dance in the picture—the "shadow dance" which is similar to shadow-boxing. The director of a local dancing school might be prevailed upon to sponsor, through the newspaper, a course in this type of dancing. The title suggests possibility of arranging a cooperative promotion with a local shoe store. There's a boxing duel between the leading men in the picture —John Payne and Victor Mature. It might be feasible to obtain some mention of this on the sports pages. To bring out the men, you might also enlist the services of a local boxer or sparring partner in the lobby punching a bag—appropriate copy would be posted thereabouts, of course.

CALLING DR. GILLESPIE (MGM): Lionel Barrymore has the title role and the same name he always had in the Kildare films. One idea for selling the title would be to print pictures of various characters in the picture using the telephone. Prizes could be offered to the best answers to the question of what they would say to Dr. Gillespie. There's a special trailer to be used in advance of the regular trailer which asks if Dr. Gillespie is in the house; an answering voice says that he is not but will be soon. Over the radio, voice could inject "Calling Dr. Gillespie, call the Strand Theatre". Have bellhops in every hotel paging Dr. Gillespie. Promote gifts for the first baby born during your engagement of the picture.

Crew's Teaser Ads Sell "Take a Letter Darling"

To put over his engagement of "Take a Letter, Darling" at the Strand Theatre, in Waterloo, Ia., Maurice Crew ran a series of one-inch ads on the classified ad page for four consecutive days ahead of the opening, each of which was sized by "Roz." In gag fashion the ads were written in such fashion: "Do you want a man for a private secretary, girls? If you do, read this column Sunday. Confidentially Yours." The last and fifth ad carried the title of the picture, cast and playdates.

Cornell Congratulates Folks On "West Point" Opening

Selling his engagement of "Ten Gentlemen From West Point" as the "sectional premiere," first Northern New York showing, Clayton Cornell, at the State Theatre. in Tupper Lake, constructed a special 40 by 60 blowup congratulating the people and the village of Tupper Lake on being chosen as a typical American community and for an early showing of this great picture. The premiere angle was also stressed in his newspaper ads, as it was in his trailers.

Newspaper coverage included an essay contest on the subject "What I Think West Point Has Meant to This Country." Readers were landed in the papers in advance and Cornell's program also stressed the premiere.

Moyer Holds Show For Kiwanis Club

Charles Moyer, manager of Warners' State Theatre, Hanover, Pa., built much good will when he turned over $500, proceeds of a silver offering, to the Hanover Kiwanis Club, the result of two free band concerts held at the theatre on Sunday nights, when the house is normally closed. The band concerts were for the benefit of underprivileged children.

A-Mike Vogel in New Post

A-Mike Vogel, former editor of the Managers Round Table, has been appointed director of publicity and special promotion for Station WHN, New York, it was announced this week by Station Director Herbert L. Pettey. He succeeds Al Simon, who resigned to join the Treasury Department to promote the sale of War Stamps and Bonds by radio.

Visitors to Round Table; Sketches of Some New Members

From Bill Boy to Relief Janitor To Artist to Manager for Adams

In the hotel, it's a bellboy; in the theatre, it's a bill boy. And in the bill boy spot in theatre is where Elmer Adams started in 1928. The exact location was the Lindsey Theatres in Lubbock, Texas, Elmer was only 15 years old then. He was born in Dallas but the folks moved to Lubbock when he was quite young. He climbed the ladder the hard way, rising from bill boy to relief janitor, to usher, doorman and then to a post he describes as "artist's stooge." Then he became house manager and artist as well as working in the booth and acting as general handy man. He's now in Clinton, Oklahoma, for the Griffith Circuit. He's house manager and full-time art man.

From the Theatre to Ice Cream And Back to the Theatre Again

Charles Edward August was born in Richmond, Va., in 1918 and went to work for Frank Ponton at the Ponton Theatre at the age of 14, while still a student in school. He spent all his spare time in the theatre after that right through his school terms and even while a student at University of Richmond, he worked on Sundays. After three years in college, he joined Southern Dairies, a Virginia manufacturer of ice cream. He left that job to join the Ponton Theatres again, this time as manager of the State.

Gross Joins Round Table The Moment He's Promoted

George P. Gross has wanted to be a full-fledged Round Table member, from the moment he entered the showbusiness while still attending high school in Chicago. His introduction was as an usher at the Capitol Theatre, one of the Warner Theatres on the South Side of the Windy City. He has remained with the circuit right through his entire career. In 1933 he was assistant manager at the Capitol and later at the Jeffrey, Shore, Hamilton and Avalon all in Chicago. This year he was appointed manager of the Rialto in Racine, Wis. George is proud of the fact that he has learned his craft from "some of the best showmen in the business": Marcel Brazee, Harry Turrell and Marlowe Connor among others.

Armstrong Has Experience With Own as Well as Circuit Houses

Clay Armstrong started about 15 years as an usher at the Wisconsin Theatre in Milwaukee. He worked for Fox Theatres in the Wisconsin metropolis for eight years and later was with Fox Theatres in New York and Los Angeles. A few years ago, he leased the New Manawa Theatre, Manawa, Wis., but gave that up to take over the Greenfield in Milwaukee, which he remodeled and renamed the Abby. He gave it up and joined Indiana-Illinois Theatres, for whom he is now managing the Lido Theatre in Maywood, a Chicago suburb.

VISITORS

James Cruze, who won Fame Twice, dies

"Covered Wagon" Director started career in West with Medicine Show

James Cruze Bosen, known to the screen world as James Cruze, one of the screen's great directors, died Tuesday at his home in Hollywood. He was 58 years old. He had been in ill health for several years.

Mr. Cruze was born in Ogden, Utah, in March, 1884. He grew up in the western tradition which was one day to enrich his career in his direction of "The Covered Wagon," one of the greatest pictures in the long history of Paramount.

Like many another of the early period, Mr. Cruze had his first experience of stage and entertainment with a medicine show company in the west. He first arrived at screen fame in 1914 with his appearance with Margaret Snow, the first Mrs. Cruze, in the famous serial, "The Million Dollar Mystery," made for the Syndicate Film Corporation by the Thanhouser studios at New Rochelle, N. Y. He and Miss Snow were members of the Thanhouser stock company along with such figures as Frederick Warde, the celebrated Shakespearean actor, and Florence LaBadie.

Unhappy days and ill-health fell upon the once blithe Jimmy and at last he found himself broken and discouraged in Hollywood seeking bit parts. The tide turned again and he drew a minor directorial assignment, leading into "The Covered Wagon" which started out to be "just a western" and reached the screen, aided by the enthusiasm of Jesse Lasky, as an epic of extraordinary success. It was immensely profitable and set Mr. Cruze on a new career of success. He won fame anew for his skill in rapid, efficient production of important material at lower costs. His salary mounted to $6,000 a week when such salaries were few, indeed.

Among his early productions were "Merton of the Movies," the first "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Goose Hangs High" and "City That Never Sleeps. Two of his best remembered films were: "Old Ironsides" and "Miracle Man."

In 1926 and 1928 Mr. Cruze was selected as one of the 10 best directors in a nationwide poll. Before he retired in 1938, he directed "Prison Nurse," "Gangs of New York" and "Come On, Leathernecks," for Republic.

Surviving is his former wife, Betty Compson, silent screen star.

Marcus Rubenfeld

Funeral services were held at Seattle Tuesday for Marcus (Mac) Rubenfeld, MGM Seattle salesman, who died Monday on a train en route from Seattle to Spokane. A native New Yorker, he was 37. Mr. Rubenfeld had been employed as a salesman for MGM since 1927, when he worked out of the Cleveland office. He subsequently was connected with the Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland branches.

He is survived by his widow, the former Eve Blatt, and two daughters, Barbara and Joilla, and a brother, Dr. Sidney Rubenfeld, who is with the Army Medical Corps in Australia.

JAMES CRUZE as he was in the days of "The Covered Wagon."

I. A. Roth, Former New Jersey Exhibitor

Isidore A. Roth, former partner in the Roth Amusement Enterprises, which operated five theatres in New Jersey now in the Reade Circuit, died Saturday morning of a heart attack, outside Morristown, N. J., while driving his car. He was 62.

Mr. Roth retired from theatre operation four years ago when he and a brother sold out to the Reade circuit. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Doyle Funeral Parlor in Morristown.

Walter Sanford, 82, Theatrical Producer

Walter Sanford, retired theatrical producer and theatre manager, died August 1st in Hollywood following an operation. He was once the lessee and manager of the famous Niblo's Garden in New York City. Throughout his career, Mr. Sanford was connected principally with popular-priced shows. In addition to the Garden, at one time he controlled three New York theatres, the Third Avenue and Empire in Manhattan and Star in Brooklyn. He had lived in California since his retirement many years ago. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Edith Sanford.

James Drury

James Drury, former director of Mansfield Theatres, Ltd., of Montreal, died in Ross Memorial Hospital, that city, on July 31st. He was 63 years old. Mansfield Theatres controlled Loew's house in Montreal prior to its absorption by Consolidated Theatres, Ltd.

David J. Troy

David J. Troy, stage hand for many years in Worcester, Mass. theatres, including Loew's houses, died at his home in Shrewsbury July 31st at the age of 74.

Ira J. Howe

Ira J. Howe, 77, builder of the first theatre in Lafayette, Ind., died July 29th, following a heart attack.

IN THE COURTS

Judgment Granted Loew's in Suit

Loew's, Inc., was granted a summary judgment by Federal Judge Duffy in Milwaukee last Friday, in its infringement suit against Manning Silverman, operator of the Ogden theatre in that city, for alleged unlicensed exhibition of the MGM cartoon, "Art Gallery." Jack L. Levin of the Copyright Protection Bureau announced the court's action in the case.

An affidavit submitted by Loew's alleged that Mr. Silverman admitted showing the short in 1940 and that the print was obtained from a shipping department employee at the Milwaukee exchange without authority of officials in charge. Mr. Levin said the employee had been discharged. He declared that regardless of whether it was a feature or a short subject, major distributors were going to continue to "crack down on any exhibitor who obtains and uses any of their motion pictures from any source other than through regular exchange channels."

Monogram Files Counterclaim

Counterclaim for $9,884 was filed last week in Federal court, New York, by Monogram Pictures Corporation against Arthur Levey in answer to his suit for $225,000 brought against Monogram, Pathe Pictures, Ltd., W. Ray Johnston and William Gell. Mr. Levey is seeking damages on the claim that he had been the agent on a deal between Pathe and Monogram for the distribution of the latter's films in Great Britain and that he had been promised five per cent of all profits.

In countering, Monogram charged Mr. Levey with breaching an agreement to service the account as Monogram's British representative. According to the answer, Mr. Levey obtained a payment of $9,884 from Monogram on a promise to remain in England and thereafter came to the United States in November, 1939, with no intention of returning to England.

Sues Supply Firm for Non-Delivery of Dishes

Mina Adelman, operator of the State theatre, Winnipeg, filed suit last week in King's Bench against the Local Mercantile Corporation, Ltd., supply firm, for failure to supply 26,158 pieces of dinner ware at a total cost of $3,835. In addition, she asked damages of $2,000 for breach of contract; $3,000 for loss of profit: $3,000 for loss of goodwill, and return of $300 payment, making the total of $12,135.

Plaintiff charged the supply firm failed to deliver the dishes which the theatre ordered to stimulate attendance. When delivery of the dishes stopped on March 20, 1939, box office receipts dropped, she said.

William Hamilton, RKO Shorts Editor

William Hamilton, 48, for 13 years a film editor and director of short subjects for RKO Radio Pictures, died on Monday of a heart attack at his home in North Hollywood. He was born in New York and entered the motion picture industry when he was a young man. Surviving is his wife, Gloria Hamilton.

Silen Held, Bell Killed

Bert Silen, National Broadcasting Company announcer in Manila, is being held by the Japanese, the company learned this week. Bert Silen, another NBC employee there, was killed and reportedly mutilated.

PRODUCT DIGEST

THE RELEASE CHART SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Tales of Manhattan

(20th Century-Fox)

Ten Stars in Five Stories

The excitement about this multi-starred, multi-storied production enterprise is none too much, showmen, for the picture not only is a stacking-up of personalities and plots but also is a piling-up of entertainment, layer upon layer, prepared, performed and presented with expertness, polish and precision. There is something in it for everybody and the whole of it is for most.

The five tales told are connected only by their common relevancy to a dress coat and to Manhattan. Charles Boyer, Rita Hayworth and Thomas Mitchell are principals in the first, a version of a triangle in which the husband shoots his wife's sweetheart, who is an actor and pretends the bullet missed him. This is a slice of the kind that used to be called Continental drama.

Ginger Rogers, Henry Fonda and Caesar Romero are principals in the second, perhaps the most unique of the tales. It is about a bride-to-be who discovers her prospective bridegroom is a philanderer, and at the same time that she prefers the best man anyway.

Charles Laughton stars in a characterization of an aspiring composer, which has an appeal to the emotions, and Edward G. Robinson portrays a down-at-heel lawyer in a tale that builds tension and sympathy of a rare kind.

Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, Ethel Waters and Paul Robeson are the principals in the fifth tale, the only one outside Manhattan, wherein stolen money dropping from the skies upon a Negro settlement is accepted as manna from heaven and handled as such by the community.

The supporting cast is of the best throughout, containing names which are box office in their own right, and the production of each of the tales is upon the top budget plane in every particular.

Julien Duvivier's direction sets him apart as a master of diversified materials. Ben Hecht, Ferenc Molnar, Donald Ogden Stewart, Samuel Hoffenstein, Alan Campbell, Ladislaus Fodor, L. Vadnaie, L. Gorog, Lamar Trotti and Henry Blankfort share the writing credit, of which there is more than enough to go around.

Production is by Boris Morros and S. P. Eagle, who are warranted in taking six bows, one for each tale and another for the whole of them.

Previewed for the trade press at the studio and to the evident satisfaction of all present. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Pardon My Sarong

(Mayfair-Universal)

Musical Comedy

Those two zanies, Abbott and Costello, with the aid of all the resources that Universal could command, have done it again.

By "it" is meant the fashioning of another piece of smooth entertainment for theatres here, there and everywhere, guaranteed only to cause audiences to chortle, chuckle, howl and roar and wish for more of the same.

"Pardon My Sarong" is one of their better vehicles, and they are given considerable support by Virginia Bruce, Robert Paige, Lionel Atwill, Leif Erikson, Nan Wynn, William Demarest, Samuel S. Hinds, Marie McDonald and Elaine Morey. In addition, there are specialty numbers by the Four Ink Spots and Tip, Tap and Toe, colored entertainers.

The story has Abbott and Costello as bus drivers who forget themselves and drive a wealthy playboy and his retinue of feminine companions from a midwest city to Los Angeles and then ship with him on a racing yacht to evade arrest on charges of stealing a bus. The romantic playboy kidnaps the sister of one of his competitors in the race across the Pacific, and after a series of incidents, the quartet is shipwrecked on an inhabited South Seas island. Costello, given the title of "hero" by the natives, uncovers a plot of other white men to rob the tribe of its jewels, while a romance develops between the girl and the playboy.

From start to finish, the picture at its Hollywood showing kept the audience in constant merriment. The original screenplay by True Boardman, Nat Perrin and John Grant provided an excellent framework for the capers of the starring duo, as well as for the other players, including a large group of dancers whose routines were originated and staged by Katherine Dunham. Erle C. Kenton, who directed, built neatly and completely to a climax. Tip, Tap and Toe, dance trio, were applauded uproariously by the preview audience.

Production was in charge of Alex Gottlieb an associate producer. Associated with other Abbott and Costello pictures, he outdid himself on this.

Release date, August 7, 1942. Running time, 84 min. PCA No. 8496. General audience classification.

Somewhere I'll Find You

(MGM—1942-'43)

Gable, Turner and Bataan, Too

Here they are again, Folks, Clark Gable and Lana Turner—and what more do you want to sell tickets with?

The "more" that you get is some creepy music on the sound track, while the principals smuggle Chinese babies across the border into Indo-China, and a ringside seat for the fighting on the Bataan Peninsula the day before the surrender.

That would be about all the customers need be told, in most situations, save perhaps a word to the parents about leaving the youngsters at home on account of the dialogue, the palpitant embracing, the fulminations and the frustrations which accompany the working out of the familiar girl-meets-Gable formula.

Reviews

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

In this script, written by Marguerite Roberts in complete conformity with precedent, the girl is hot in pursuit of Gable's attentions from the opening gong with no holds barred or conditions stipulated, but he finds out his young brother is in love with her and spends the picture doing everything but the obvious to prove to the boy that the girl is no good, a point he waives in favor of presumable matrimony after the boy dies for his country on Bataan. The three are reporters for the same New York newspaper which sends them to cover Indo-China, whence they drift to Manila and finally Bataan. Robert Sterling plays the brother and gives the character a lot more than the script did.

Previewed for the trade press at the Village theatre, Westwood, on a Friday evening, to an audience which had been attracted by "I Married an Angel." The paying guests raised the rafters in their jubilation when the main title informed them of the picture they were about to see and who was in it. They laughed delightedly at a number of comedy stretches. The passionate passages got some rises from the adolescents in the balcony, but the crowd cooled down when repetition set in. Then everybody got interested in the Bataan sequence, which comes at the end and takes the slack out of the tale, manifesting general satisfaction with the outcome. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—W. R. W.

Invisible Agent

(Lloyd-Universal)

Farce-Melodrama

An American possessing a secret formula which can make him invisible is prevailed upon by leaders of the United Nations to use it and enter Germany for the purpose of obtaining military secrets. He does so, becoming entangled with the Gestapo and Japanese agents, and a pretty blonde counter-espionage agent. His troubles and the amazement of the Germans are increased by the fact that he must take off all his clothes, when making himself invisible, in order that they do not betray his figure. He outwits the Jap-Nazi contingent, destroys Nazi bombers poised to attack New York and escapes to England, his mission completed, with the pretty agent.

That is the story of "Invisible Agent," which completes Frank Lloyd's current production deal at Universal. Starting out as a spy melodrama, it becomes a farce then goes heavily slapstick, farcical, and melodramatic at various times during the unfolding of the story. Curtis Siodmak wrote the original screenplay, based on H. G. Wells' "The Invisible Man."

Playing the American is Jon Hall; the counter-spy, Ilona Massey. Peter Lorre is seen as the cold blooded Jap killer who commits hari kari after he slays his German counterpart.

Edwin L. Marin's direction apparently was hampered by the change of pace. George Waggner was Lloyd's associate producer.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet theatre, Los Angeles, where the audience laughed heartily in places, some of them the wrong ones. The contrast of the seriousness of the melodramatic side, in view of current headlines, with the use of "invisibility" to defeat the Nazis, was remarked upon. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—V. K.

The Big Street

Damon Runyon in Top Form

This is a sure thing, on the nose, one and all on Broadway will agree. It has plenty of laughs and tears, and adds up to many minutes of good screen fun.

It is another story from Damon Runyon, produced by him. It brings again to the screen, in a warm, human tale of a bus boy's love for a night club star, the genuinely improbable characters and language of the Broadway smart money set for whom he has been laureate for 25 years. Runyon's many readers should welcome this chance to see his characters in a film which nears the par set by "Lady for a Day" or "Little Miss Marker."

Henry Fonda is excellent as Little Pinks, the bus boy who loves and aids Gloria Lyons. Lucille Ball, as the singer, is contemptuous of the bus boy as adversity forces her to depend on him and his Broadway pals. When she is crippled by Case Ables, a jealous gambler, (Barton MacLane) Little Pinks and his pals secretly pay her hospital bills, send flowers and keep up her illusion of stardom.

Pinks cannot afford the deception. Penniless, he brings her to his boarding house. Gloria wants to go to Florida so Pinks loads her in a wheelchair and they start afoot. There is a superb scene as Fonda convinces Holland Tunnel cops that the wheel chair is a vehicle.

In Miami Gloria realizes she will never walk. But Pinks, ready to steal for her, runs into Case again, discovers he is in a jewel racket and forces him to throw a night club party for Gloria's swan song.

Eugene Pallette, Agnes Moorehead, Ray Collins and Sam Levene are excellent in supporting parts, as are most of the cast selected by Runyon. Interest is sustained and Irving Reis' direction contributes many laughs. Leonard Spigelgas wrote the screenplay and Green and Revel contributed a tuneful song.

Previewed at the RKO 58th Street Theatre, New York, for a Monday night audience and the company's sales convention. It brought many laughs from both groups, and sustained applause at the end. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—JOHN STUART, JR.

The War Against Mrs. Hadley

Silver Cord in 1942

MGM, the studio which gave you "Mrs. Miniver," has turned its camera eye this time on the American scene in wartime and has caught a woman named Stella Hadley in many of her most unattractive moods. Stella is reminiscent of Mrs. Phelps, who, you will remember, was the protagonist of "The Silver Cord," written by the late Sidney Howard and played on both stage and screen by Laura Hope Crews.

The widow Hadley has been treated handsomely by her studio's craftsmen. Harold S. Bucquet, who directed, Irving Asher, producer, George Oppenheimer, who wrote the original screenplay, and a stellar cast headed by Fay Bainter in the title role, which she portrays skillfully, have turned out an entertaining film which carries a message of import for these troubled times.

Stella has been playing ostrich all her adult life. This fact is recognized and tolerated by her two children, Patricia, played by Jean Rogers, and Theodore, in the person of Richard Ney, whose performance of the elder Miniver son was hailed by film critics and audiences.

On a Sunday afternoon in December, 1941, during the customary birthday celebration of Mrs. Hadley, surrounded by her family and friends, news of the attack on Pearl Harbor is heard on the radio and the festivities are interrupted, much to the annoyance of the self-indulgent woman. Following December 7th, her way of life subtly becomes changed and the picture sets out to show how Mrs. Hadley's resistance against being drawn into the war is finally broken down by a pivotal experience which at long last achieves emotional maturity for the lady who has been escaping "unpleasantness" all her life.

Until that moment, however, she fights every factor which seeks to draw her son, daughter and friends into participation in the war effort. Her son is drafted, but she tries to get Elliott Fulton, life-long friend who is an executive in the War Department, "to get Teddy off." Fulton, played by Edward Arnold, is in love with Stella, but he knows her faults and is adamant where her weak, pampered son is concerned.

Against the wishes of her mother, Patricia Hadley who works as a volunteer in a canteen, falls in love with a young soldier, unknown to social register circles. The romance causes a breach, but Patricia marries the boy without maternal approval or presence.

Not even the news that her daughter is going to have a child breaks down the proud Stella, nor do the overtures towards reconciliation on the part of Patricia's mother-in-law, played by Sara Allgood. When Stella receives word that her son is cited for heroism in a maneuver which takes the life of his friend, Mrs. Harley is stirred to realization.

The picture's humor, true characterizations and lack of heavy-handed propaganda speeches make it enjoyable. It is a family picture for the family. Fay Bainter, Edward Arnold, Jean Rogers, Richard Ney and Sara Allgood are excellent. A newcomer to the screen, Van Johnson, remembered for his role in George Abbott's Broadway musical comedy, "Too Many Girls," is appealing.

Previewed in a projection room at the Museum of Modern Art, New York, before a large gathering of trade press representatives and morale officials of the U. S. Army. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—JEANNETTE E. SAMUELSON.

The Silver Bullet

(Universal)

Western Vengeance

The latest Johnny Mack Brown western opens with a stagecoach holdup by a lone rider, but this time the rider is the hero and no shots are fired. After Brown examines the occupants, they are allowed to go their way. Such is the element of novelty in this film of action.

For the rest, Brown, searching for his father's murderer, enters an election campaign on the side of good government, discovers his man to be the opposing candidate, and shoots it out in the final tense sequence. His sidekick, Fuzzy Knight, stumbles on the vital clues with his happy faculty for fortuitous accident.

Director Joseph Lewis kept the story moving without a lag from the early bar-room brawl to the gun battle at the climax. Oliver Drake was associate producer.

Journey Into Fear

(RKO Radio—1942-'43)

Spy Intrigue in Turkey

A story of spy intrigue in Turkey is Orson Welles' third Mercury production. Into it he packs many of the tricks which distinguished his radio thrillers and left a distinct mark on his previous films. But technique and mood are not quite enough to link episodes into a smooth melodrama.

The story of spies and death threats in Istanbul does not have the zip or suspense to carry audience interest at top pitch. Its study of fear psychology does not reach or sustain the penetration needed for conviction.

Joseph Cotten carries the action as Graham, an armament engineer whose life is sought by Nazi agents. His difficulties in a strange land, and uncertainty as to who among the weird characters are his friends should hold interest. But the tale lags when he flees on a tramp steamer followed by Nazi agent and hired killer. Suffice it to say they are outwitted by the Turkish secret police, or Welles in person as Colonel Haki, and Graham safely returns to his wife, Ruth Warwick. Meantime a Eurasian dancer, Dolores del Rio, guides and solaces him. The climax is a chase on a rainswept cornice.

As usual Welles casts his picture with exceedingly competent actors. Many of their scenes are excellent in vignette yet the effect is lost in whole. Editing and direction may be responsible in part. Everett Sloane, as Kopeiken, a mystery errand boy of the gun trade, Jack Moss as the killer and Richard Bennett as a Turk ship's captain are memorable for their contribution to the weird mood. Welles appears to speak Turkish, French and a number of other languages fluently.

Norman Foster directed the screenplay which Welles and Joseph Cotten contrived from Eric Ambler's novel. Roy Webb's music is useful, but sometimes intrusive.

Previewed at a customs' screening in New York. The inspector and an office boy were puzzled. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—J. S., Jr.

Sabotage Squad

(Columbia)

War at Home

Another of Columbia's delineations of war on the home front, this is in a minor category. It ends with a chase, and has standard crime film ingredients, but there are obvious handicaps of dialogue and acting.

The story has Eddie Norris, a small time gambler, in love with Ray Harris, manicurist, who wants him to go "straight", something he tries but never achieves. When his partner, George McKay, paroled pickpocket, snatches the wallet of Sidney Blackmer, steady patron of the barber shop in which Kay works, action starts. The shop is suspected by the police "subversive detail" for its heavy mail. What they do not know is that Blackmer, noted scientist, is also head of a sabotage ring. The wallet contains a medallion, his identification mark. The police, arresting Norris, for a while suspect him and McKay; but then, under astute Bruce Bennett, police lieutenant, they free the pair, who lead them to Blackmer.

Blackmer escapes, and in turn captures Norris and McKay, hoping to regain his medallion. Meanwhile he is sending trucks with explosives into an airplane plant, his biggest sabotage job. Norris, McKay and Miss Harris escape, the latter to inform the police. Norris to continue on a truck loaded with dynamite. Blackmer had hoped to leave it before it entered the plant. Norris forces him to remain, crashes the vehicle, which explodes, killing both. Norris, the gambler, thus becomes a hero, motivated by patriotism. Lew Lander's direction seems handicapped by a script weak in dialogue and exposition.

Seen at the Central theatre, New York, a transient Broadway double feature house, where predominently male customers on a Monday afternoon guffawed several times at the endeavors of George McKay, the "pickpocket" to reconcile his natural talent with ensuing obligations to be decent. Highways by Night

Gangsters and Truckers

RKO Radio presents two of its newcomers, Richard Carlson and Jane Randolph, in this story adapted from Clarence Buddington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post serial, "Silver Spoon." They acquit themselves well in a story that has sufficient action to hold interest, despite its lack of expansive treatment.

The problem is an old one, the transformation of a young millionaire into a man. He is not a playboy, but a studious mechanical wizard who owns a great motor works. An uncle convinces him that he should learn more of life before accepting a Navy commission, and Tommy Van Steel (Richard Carlson) plunges into his first round of night-clubbing.

It leads to complications with gangsters, and the necessity of trying to make his way under a new name. He takes a job with the Fogarty family, truckers who are fighting racketeers.

Herman Schrom was the producer. Peter Godfrey's direction is routine and the dialogue and screenplay do not improve the Kelland original. The comedy does not measure up to the action.

Mexican Spitfire's Elephant

(RKO Radio—1942-'43)

Farce

"Mexican Spitfire's Elephant" is the best of the series of the Lupe Velez-Leon Errol vehicles as far as entertainment quality and production values are concerned. A merger of slapstick and farce, plus the unique factor of an actor playing a triple role in full knowledge of the audience, the film kept a Los Angeles theatre audience in a constant state of the type of merriment that gives the most exercise to the abdnominal muscles.

Miss Velez and Errol again play their usual roles, she as a fiery Latin American married to an American, and he that of her uncle by marriage, a British nobleman and the uncle's impersonation of the nobleman. The plot this time deals with efforts of two criminals, a blonde and her lover—to inveigle the nobleman to smuggle a trinket which contains a valuable gem into the United States. Their efforts to recover the jewel after its entry motivate the action.

Miss Valez does three dances. Supporting the team are Walter Reed, who replaces Buddy Rogers in the series; Elisabeth Risdon, Lydia Bilbrook, Marion Martin, Lyle Talbot, Luis Alberni, George Cleveland, Marten Lamont, Jack Briggs, Arnold Kent and Max Wagner. Bert Gilroy produced and Leslie Goodwins directed from a script by Charles E. Roberts, who adapted the original story by himself and Goodwins.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet theatre, Los Angeles, to an enthusiastic audience. Reviewer's Rating: Good—V. K.

"Hillbilly Blitzkrieg"

(Monogram)

Comedy

This should do for the children's matinees, and for the lower halves of neighborhood double bills. Bud Duncan, aided by a built-on nose, is the comic strip character, "Snuffy Smith." Cliff Nazarro is "Barney Google." Edgar Kennedy is a sergeant. Snuffy's superior, for the latter is in the Army. The plot takes Duncan on a detail to the Great Smoky Mountains, to guard the demonstration of a special robot aerial torpedo, the inventor of which is Lucien Littlefield, and the backer Nazarro.

Enter the spies, whose chief weapon is Nicolle Andre, who tries to entice Kennedy and Duncan, with no success. Duncan, guarding the torpedo, hides in it. When the spies break into the workshed housing it, they push levers which put it into flight. They push other levers, which put it through maneuvers, with Duncan now astride it. The torpedo finally returns, and Government witnesses call its "test" flight a success. The spies are captured.

The direction and script hamper this. The camera work is elementary. Edward Gross produced and Roy Mack directed.

Viewed in a projection room, where it brought deep silence. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—F. S.

Danger in the Pacific

(Universal)

Spies in the Jungle

A small Pacific island, inhabited chiefly by head-hunting natives, is the scene of this drama of international intrigue, scientific exploration and domestic difficulties. It has the flavor of a serial, compressed into a running time of 61 minutes, with repeated perils and unexpected reprieves, as action carries the weight of interest.

Leo Carrillo does well with the material provided him as Marzell, the British agent who induces an explorer to make a trip into the island jungle under the guise of science. He is, in reality, on the trail of a secret enemy arsenal. The expedition is opposed by Zambesi, an inscrutable islander whose connections with the enemy are obvious. The party, including Don Terry as explorer, Andy Devine as photographer and Louise Allbritton as the bride-to-be, is twice captured but finally saved by a British raid.

Ben Pivar was associate producer for the film, which was directed by Lewis D. Collins.

IT'S EASY AS ROLLING OFF A LOG TO PREDICT:

"The Box-Office Sweetheart of the New Season will be

SEVEN SWEETHEARTS

from Metro-GOLDMINE-Mayer!"

Audience fills out Preview Cards and the mailman brings hundreds of raves about "Seven Sweethearts" (a few samples above).

EAST-WEST PREVIEWS JOYOUS!

California Preview:

" 'SEVEN SWEETHEARTS' is Leo's sweetheart for the new season. Pasternak's first for M-G-M packs a melodious warmth and romantic charm that captivated preview audience last night at Inglewood. Kathryn Grayson's velvet voice thrilling. Van Heflin steps to stardom and Marsha Hunt and all others round out a perfect cast. Frank Borzage hits 'Seventh Heaven' directorial stride. Here's one to ring all the bells. All the world will love 'SEVEN SWEETHEARTS'."

New York Preview:

"It's in the bag! We picked a typical neighborhood theatre in New York, Loew's Lexington. You never saw a preview audience react so enthusiastically to every kiss, to every song, to every laugh. Another BIG new season hit from M-G-M. And watch the novel exploitation idea: Selecting the most romantic cities in America, the cities with the most marriages, for special Sweetheart Premieres!"

WAR ORDER

ALMOST considerable and continuing importance to the war time status of the motion picture obtains in the military demand from Puerto Rico for priorities on film shipments to the island in behalf of military and civilian morale.

The call came at mid-week from the military command and films to relieve the entertainment shortage were dispatched by air, while further arrangements were made for space that had been denied on supply ships.

It is true that social, political and economic conditions in crowded, impoverished Puerto Rico are decidedly special. But in general they may be said to be intensifications of problems and conditions considerably more general. There is enough in common with other areas and the total state of a nation at war to make this acute situation indicative of the general values of the motion picture to the service of the well-being of all the people.

None of this is new, but the call from military authority puts a crisp official war seal on the films. That can be not only encouraging but mayhap useful in forestalling some impetuous restrictions.

THE BOND DRIVE

JUST two weeks away comes the kick-off on the picture industry's September drive as the spearhead of the month's campaign to sell a billion dollars in War Stamps and Bonds.

The plans, promises and prospects are spectacular—befitting quite the role of the show business, its equipment, manpower and capacities.

The slogan title is "Salute to Our Heroes Month." And the best catch line that appears in the surge of promotional literature from the War Activities Committee is "Stars Over America." That, of course, refers to the arrangement of the Hollywood Victory Committee to send top ranking stars on promotional expeditions into some three hundred cities in the month of the drive for which the motion picture is the responsible leader.

The purpose and plan is to make the land aware and enthusiastically aware of the urgency of the war effort in terms of dollars and investment in the nation's efforts for today and hopes for tomorrow.

The election of the motion picture to this assignment is recognition of the intimacy of relation between this industry and its public—and the effort itself will be enhancing that relation.

FILM IN BATTLE

FILMS and other photographic materials are munitions of war. The vehicle of entertainment is also the medium of military instruction and the instrument of report and planning for the areas of conflict.

That is why just now we are hearing so much about conservation of raw stock, allotments and conservation orders from the War Production Board.

No air raid over the Reich is made without preliminary photographic survey and the morning after there is always a photographic audit of the results. This war is being fought quite as much with cameras as cannon and bombs. The terrifically increasing air arming and activity of the United States is being accompanied by a parallel demand upon cameras and film.

Also, what with the nature of camouflage and many another aspect of the vast regions of total war, the demands of military and naval photography are requiring every resource of specialized photo-materials, including the specially sensitized negative stocks, from infra-red to the whole scale of color sensitivity.

It is an interesting, even if indirect, evidence of the progress of the war machine that the demand for photo-materials is now reaching the limits of current capacity in production.

The war effort is drawing heavily upon the trained and skilled personnel of the motion picture industry; so it is inevitable that it should be calling upon the materials and machinery, too. It is an incident of all this to observe that the magnificent battery of expeditionary cameras with which Martin and Osa Johnson recorded their adventures in Africa and the wild islands of the Indies, are now in "the service". It just might be that Martin's cameras are recording action at Tulagi, way out yonder in that cannibal country where his career of picture adventure began.

It is a reasonable assumption that in conservation of film resources and the materials of picture making the interests of the motion picture theatre, admittedly and officially so important to the national morale and direct service of war causes, will be getting what it requires to function.

INDUSTRIAL GEOGRAPHY

OUR war may yet make some changes on the production map of the motion picture, as it may, too, with many another industry. Just now Hollywood, confronted with blackout requirements of the coastal area, is exploring the practicality of a new inland center for the making of exterior night scenes, which so often use millions of candlepower in floods and flashes of illumination over large areas.

The picture capital of Hollywood was built on sunshine and climate, to escape the whimsies of New York and Chicago weather and the sandy monotony of Florida. The studios began on New York rooftops. Vitagraph went to Flatbush for elbow room. Independents fleeing the Patents Company, led by Mr. Mark M. Dintenfas, went to New Jersey and founded the Fort Lee production center. Colonel William N. Selig of Chicago sent an expedition to Venice, California. Mr. D. W. Griffith went to Los Angeles. Mr. Cecil B. DeMille rented a Hollywood barn. Fort Lee and Chicago studios began to wane. Part of the movement to the Far West was strategic, when some producers found they were happier away from the too close and inquisitive attention of home offices, and financiers.

Speaking of that, the last large scale experiment in Eastern

Waiting for the Thaw

A NEW quest for a revised payment deal with Great Britain is under way by the motion picture industry, it was learned this week, after an industry delegation visited the Treasury Department in Washington to ask assistance in negotiating a plan for the payment of the more than $50,000,000 in motion picture revenue still frozen in England.

Wendell Willkie, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox and Will H. Hays were reported by press services as having been in the group which met last Thursday with Treasury and State Department officers. Asserting that Britain's need for a dollar balance is less acute now that it is able to purchase war materials under the Lend-Lease plan, they urged a more liberal film payment scheme, it was reported.

Last week the industry received a third payment of $5,000,000 under the current agreement which called for a total payment of $20,000,000 from current revenue and about $18,000,000 of blocked funds. The fourth installment of current funds is due when the agreement expires at the end of October.

With current accumulations and balances from past years it is estimated that the eight American producers will have $50,000,000 frozen in Britain by November 1st. Negotiations for a new agreement are to start in London soon. The Washington meetings are seen as an effort to enlist Federal assistance in behalf of the film industry.

Some British sources in New York were reported as denying that lend-lease had left the Empire in a more favorable dollar position. There are many items of war supplies not covered by lend-lease, it was said and it has been necessary to disburse several million dollars monthly from England's dollar balances to pay for them. Industry agents are hopeful, however, of obtaining some concessions.

production, made with the establishment of the Paramount studios in Long Island City in the 1920's, is to be attributed about equally to internal politics and to the pressure of Wall Street factors which wanted to have some large physical assets on display in the East.

The concentration of production in the Hollywood region has the while created, and has been created in part by, a growing complex of technological services and an automatic pooling of facilities and skills. Unless the dislocations of war prove more radical than anything in sight so far, Hollywood will remain the production capital for many and many a year to come.

Candy to War

MANY candy makers will soon be making war equipment. The War Production Board on Wednesday said that a large segment of the nation's candy industry soon would be converted to the manufacture of secret Radar (radio detection) equipment for the Army and Navy. Its operation already has been curtailed by the shortage of chocolate, sugar and other ingredients.

The first factories to convert to war production will be at work before the end of the month, it was said. MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 1st reported that the candy business, which provides an annual revenue of almost $16,000,000 to exhibitors, faced drastic curtailment.

No Joint Return

AN AMENDMENT to the new Federal tax measure which would require married persons in community property states such as California, to file joint income tax returns, was rejected Monday by the Senate Finance Committee. The proposal came from the Treasury. It was rejected first by the House Ways and Means Committee. It was then suggested to the Senate committee.

Axis Pressure

YIELDING to pressure from German and Japanese embassies, Argentine officials last week banned two American features, "The Invaders," and "Secret Agent of Japan" from Buenos Aires theatres. The Government ruled that the ban was necessary to uphold the country's policy of "strict neutrality."

Carlos A. Pueyrredon, Government appointed Mayor of Buenos Aires, said the state of siege proclaimed recently forbidding any public discussion of international affairs, applied also to films that aroused sentiment against any of the warring nations. The ban, ordered last week, was postponed until Monday when "The Invaders," distributed by Columbia, was withdrawn from the Grancine Rex, largest theatre in the capital, after a record breaking nine-day run. The 20th Century-Fox picture about Jap espionage has also been withdrawn.

News services reported that the order aroused much criticism in the democratic press and among the populace. Capacity audiences at "The Invaders" screenings persistently booed the Nazi characters in the film. Last year the Government barred "The Great Dictator" and hundreds of Buenos Aires citizens crossed the River Plate to see it at Colonia, Uruguay.

The distributors said they had taken no action to arrange special showings in Uruguay. They have filed representations with the Argentine Government against the order, and asked the U. S. State Department to intervene.

British Film Shortage

BRITISH film men, too, fear drastic restrictions on raw stock consumption. New Government orders are being scrutinized. They are expected to bring printing and distribution economies, and a consequent alteration of releasing arrangements.

On the other hand, the British Board of Trade is reported to have decided against importation of raw stock. Kodak, Ltd., which has been importing from this country, now must supply British film.

Film stock manufacturers probably will renew their appeals for economy to the Kinematograph Renters Society.

BOND AND STAMP MONTH

STARTS SEPTEMBER 1st

Ten Weeks: $1,031,500

RELUCTANTLY the Radio City Music Hall in New York on Wednesday said farewell to "Mrs. Miniver," which after 10 weeks was still drawing record attendances and jingling the cash registers of manager Gus Eyssell, MGM, and the Rockefeller landlords at a rate never before reached by a single engagement of a motion picture. It left to make way for "Bambi" and a long backlog of bookings.

Attendance during the 10 weeks totaled 1,499,891 persons. It grossed $1,031,500. Metro was reported to have received over $300,000 of this, or almost half the picture's production costs. It promptly booked "Mrs. Miniver" for its own Loew's State for August 27th.

The picture surpassed by four weeks the six-week record attained by only three other pictures in the theatre's nine years of operation. Drawing over 158,000 persons in the final week, box office lines were still reaching around the block into Rockefeller Plaza.

Elsewhere also "Mrs. Miniver" was setting extraordinary records. Almost half the population of Portland, Oregon, or 150,999 persons out of a census total of 305,394 were reported to have seen the picture, which held for a sixth week at the United Artists theatre.

Not all New York business was garnered by the Music Hall. Paramount reported that "Holiday Inn" in its first week at the Paramount Theatre had grossed about $85,000 from an attendance of 150,000.

Time to 20th-Fox

THE March of Time has marched over to Twentieth Century-Fox. Announcement of the news subject's distribution arrangements came in a statement issued Tuesday by Spyros Skouras, Twentieth Century-Fox president, and Roy Larsen, Time, Inc., president.

The new contract, for an undisclosed number of years, was signed by Louis de Rochement, producer of the subjects, and Tom Connors, Twentieth Century-Fox vice-president in charge of distribution. It includes release of March of Time's full length feature, "We Are the Marines."

RKO distributed the subject for seven years.

Time, Inc., this week was ready to purchase 1,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Interstate Broadcasting Company, operator of New York radio station WQXR. The deal will bring to Interstate's board two representatives of Time. It also will mean new programs which a group from Time, under Frank Norris, managing editor, and Joel Sayre and Finis Farr, formerly of Time's editorial staff, will create in cooperation with Elliott Sanger, the station's general manager.

Show Us the War

EIGHTY-FIVE per cent of theatre audiences want newsreels to contain war information, it was declared Monday by Dr. Leo Handel, director of the Motion Picture Research Bureau, New York.

The statement was based upon a survey in metropolitan New York during which 500 persons were questioned. Each attended motion picture showings at least once a month. Only one per cent asserted they did not want war news and of these, most were women. Ranking second in preference were sports and third, fashion. Only two per cent of those questioned preferred domestic news.

It's Quieter Now

LISTENING to radio programs has declined to peacetime level, it was estimated by the Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting this week. Incidence of listening during April, May and June, was approximately the same as in the corresponding period of last year, the analysis reported. It is noted that gasoline rationing in the Eastern states has not increased radio appreciation. Interest in news broadcasts continues to be higher than last year, it was said. It has declined, however, from the level attained immediately after Pearl Harbor.

Films for China

HOLLYWOOD features and short subjects have been obtained for Free China's remaining 110 theatres, according to the Chinese Government Film Mission in Hollywood this week. Hollywood studios have agreed to contribute product, which would be specially picked for maintenance of morale. How the films would be shipped was not divulged.

On the commission are T. Y. Lo and Dr. T. Y. Fung, of Chungking; Dr. Maurice William, New York; Dr. Kinn Wei Shaw, China National Film Corporation.

Dr. Shaw said the Chinese Government was still able to operate more than one third the houses it controlled before the Japanese invasion. They are open 24 hours daily and no admission is charged. He added mobile projection units were another factor.

In the Trenches

DESPITE publicity about a few Hollywood personalities who have obtained important and interesting positions in the armed services, the majority called from the amusement industry are serving in routine positions and are, like most others, destined for combat.

This conclusion was drawn by The Billboard last week after its survey showed 42,000 men from the entertainment field already called.

It added that five per cent of Hollywood's film personnel is serving; that 10,000 from the circuits are in; that radio has contributed 1,548 men, and the American Federation of Musicians, 3,250.

Ships Come In

FOREIGN managers for the principal distributors took time out this week for brief sighs of relief as word reached them from Australia that a substantial number of prints for the Far East market which they believed had fallen into Japanese hands were in fact safe in Australia. The pictures, most of them shipped last autumn, were destined for Singapore, Hong Kong, Manila and other Orient exchanges. Ships carrying them apparently were diverted elsewhere on December 7th and the pictures have turned up in the hands of the Australian customs officers. The MPPDA is seeking their return to the distributors.

62% OF INDEPENDENTS FAVOR ARBITRATION, 30% DO NOT

Endorse Plan in Principle, but charge Application under Decree is Limited

Motion picture theatre owners who have tried arbitration as a means of relief from trade practice and local competitive inequalities generally endorse it in principle. But they charge that arbitration's application under the motion picture consent decree is too limited.

This is the basic observation made to MOTION PICTURE HERALD in a poll of the 230 theatre operators who filed complaints during the first year and a half of operation of the arbitration system set up by the decree. Questionnaires were sent to the exhibitors who have used arbitration for their clearance or run grievances.

Their answers, and out-spoken comments, are the first comprehensive report from the field on the total respect of the motion picture arbitration system.

Many Recommended Decree Changes

A higher than average proportion of replies was received. Many responses contained detailed discussions of the decree and arbitration and recommended changes. There is evidence that exhibitors are giving careful thought to arbitration.

Almost two-thirds of the exhibitors answering the questionnaire, or 62.5 per cent, expressed an opinion generally in favor of arbitration. Only 29.2 per cent of the answers wholly condemned it.

But most of the approvals had strings attached. Exhibitors want broader arbitration clauses in the decree, more power for arbitrators, fewer lawyers, lower costs and quicker action. They want provisions by which they can arbitrate grievances against their competitors directly.

The replies registered substantial approval of the administration of the 31 regional tribunals by the American Arbitration Association, court appointed administrator of the Motion Picture Arbitration System. The Appeal Board and its broad powers of veto over the decisions of local arbitrators was sharply attacked in a number of responses, however.

Express Confidence In Arbitrators

Fifty per cent of the answers said that exhibitors felt they received a fair hearing of their complaint, 20.8 per cent of the replies were in the negative. The remaining cases were settled before reaching a hearing.

Confidence in the calibre and ability of the arbitrators selected from the panels of leading professional and business men drawn up by the AAA was expressed by a majority of exhibitors. The arbitrator grasped the problems of the film industry in their particular instance, 45.8 per cent of the exhibitors said. Only 20.8 per cent said the arbitrators did not understand all, or some, of the business complexities of their complaint.

Many of the replies to the HERALD questionnaire urged changes in the Consent Decree and its rules and procedures for arbitration. In fact, 66.7 per cent of the replies indicated that exhibitors thought steps should be taken now to change the Decree.

While 58.3 per cent of the complainants said they had won their actions, an even 50 per cent said it had been a satisfactory settlement and only 29.2 per cent of the replies indicated that the competitive situation had improved since they went to arbitration. A third of the ballots reported that complaints had been lost.

Many Settlements Seen Disappointing

Arbitration had not resulted in a satisfactory settlement, 41.7 per cent of this group said. The comparison between this figure and the number of cases won or lost would indicate that many of the settlements or withdrawals, reached presumably after a compromise, had proved disappointing to exhibitors.

To the question "Was arbitration worth the time and money expended?" 45.8 per cent of the replies said No; 37.5 per cent of exhibitors answered Yes and the rest indicated that it would be a considerable time before the costs could be offset by any gains won in an arbitration award.

The highest cost reported by an exhibitor was $2,500.

Many answers noted, however, that the costs were much less than would be incurred in an anti-trust action in the courts. They returned to the refrain that the decree must be broader.

While urging that the arbitration hearings be more informal and conducted with fewer lawyers and less insistence on legal technicalities, 75 per cent of the exhibitors reported that they were represented by counsel. This, they generally asserted, was necessary to protect their interests. Most expressed willingness to appear before the arbitrator without a lawyer, if distributors would do likewise.

The majority of the answers to the HERALD questionnaire contained detailed and thoughtful criticism of the Consent Decree and arbitration. Others were briefer, but added significantly to the statistical conclusions. Where exhibitors requested, their replies are reported anonymously.

Typical of the analyses of arbitration was the letter from William F. Crockett, vice-president and general manager of the Bayne-Roland Corporation, operating theatres at Virginia Beach, Va. Mr. Crockett also is president of the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners and an active member of several UMPI committees.

Exhibitors Should Be Heard on Appeals

"We received definite advantages in the award, although we did not receive the award asked," he wrote. "We feel this was due to certain sections of the Decree which restrained the arbitrator from removing clearance entirely.

"We are trying operation under the existing award in hopes that we will be able to operate without the hardships which were apparent before this award," he said, noting that he did not feel competitive issues were involved.

Discussing the hearings, Mr. Crockett said: "We had a very fair hearing under the existing rules of arbitration, but we feel that all exhibitors should have an opportunity for oral hearings on appeal cases."

The arbitrator grasped the problems of the film business, "and while possibly some little technicalities were missed by him, gave a very constructive, able summary of the situation in his award," the Virginia leader wrote. "However, we feel that the arbitrator felt that he could not give the award he desired due to the limitations of the present Consent Decree."

The case cost between $1,000 and $1,200, he said, adding: "We will have to operate under the award for some time before we will be able to tell whether arbitration was worth the time and money expended." The sum included legal fees and all expenses.

Mr. Crockett reserved answer on questions asking his opinion of arbitration and recommendations for changes in rules inasmuch as he is a member of the UMPI committee, which is examining proposed changes.

Urges Lawyers Not Attend Hearings

A Pennsylvania independent, Herman Lorence, operator of the 18th Street Theatre, Erie, who lost his some run complaint, was critical of arbitration, but ready with suggestions for changes. He felt that he had a fair hearing, but declared the arbitrator did not understand the businesss and urged:

"Have the arbitrator selected by the interested parties from the ranks of those who un-

PREFER ARBITRATORS WHO KNOW BUSINESS

Several of the comments appended to the replies in the arbitration poll specifically indicated that exhibitors would have preferred to have had their grievances arbitrated by persons familiar with motion picture trade practices. Section II of the rules of arbitration in the Consent Decree requires that arbitrators must be men who have no associations with or experience in the motion picture business. This qualification was included by the decree authors in answer to exhibitor demands for arbitrators who would be completely disassociated from trade considerations or possible factional bias.

'EXTEND ARBITRATOR POWERS'

derstand the business and give him unlimited powers to correct any condition that arises and which in his opinion is unfair to either side. Under the present setup the arbitrator has absolutely no powers. The consent decree has made it a field day for the sellers."

"Do not permit the film companies to have high-powered lawyers appear," he recommended, "as they do nothing but confuse the arbitrator to such an extent by their legal technicalities that they have him dizzy as to what he can do and cannot do."

Distributors "have flouted the real intentions of the consent decree," Mr. Lorence charged, asserting that they first insist on the sale of short subjects, and offer "some run that has no value."

Federal regulation may come unless there are trade practice reforms, Mr. Lorence warned.

"Much as we dislike the entry of the Federal Government into the operation of the film business, the sales managers, except Rodgers of Metro, are so short sighted that they think they can continue forever as they have in the past," he said, "with only one result to follow: a Federal Motion Picture Commission set up with a head and staff in Washington and in each exchange center an assistant, also with a staff. The film industry will be taxed to support this commission, for it will cost less than it does at present to keep up the Hays organization.

Sees Day of Reckoning In the Future

"When this occurs it will be a great day for the politicians, for the patronage will be tremendous in the high-salaried jobs created. Now that Congress has found out so much about the business through its investigations and hearings, they are not going to let the opportunity pass much longer," Mr. Lorence wrote.

"Unless something like this is done there will be no independent exhibitors left in this business. When Hitler ran rampant and the film companies lost the foreign market they cried that they had lost 40 per cent of their gross, yet the balance sheets for the past year show the greatest earnings in their histories. . . .

"Unless they change their attitude the day of reckoning will come," he warned.

"Arbitration needs provision for suing a prior run but not the distributors," Thomas de Lorenzo, operator of the New Paltz theatre, New Paltz, N. Y., commented. He reached a settlement through stipulation, but remarked that arbitration had not improved his competitive situation.

Sees Settlement as Satisfactory on Paper

"I believe, by all means, that an arbitrator should not be limited in the event one theatre has clearance over another by merely being able to reduce the clearance," William Rosenthal, Indianapolis independent circuit operator, wrote. "The arbitrator should be able to determine whether two theatres are competitive or not, and, if they are not competitive, to be able to eliminate clearance."

Mr. Rosenthal observed that, although he had reached a satisfactory settlement with the distributor the case was carried to hearing at the insistence of an intervenor. The arbitrator then dismissed it for lack of jurisdiction.

"My opinion of arbitration is that it is necessary to prevent an exhibitor owning a larger number of situations being able to secure concessions against an individual, independent exhibitor," he added.

A Pennsylvania independent who sought the same availability as his competitor and received a partial reduction of clearance described his settlement as satisfactory only "partially, on paper." Now, he said, the period in which he may advertise is limited, and being in a weekly rural newspaper area, must "play later than ever (three to four weeks) in order to advertise the picture properly." The arbitrator did not fully understand the complexities of the business, he said.

Although he had an attorney, the Pennsylvania exhibitor added that arbitration was not worth the money spent because hearings "get lost in legal subterfuges." He recommended "fewer lawyers."

A New England exhibitor, who reached what he called "a fairly satisfactory settlement" before the case entered hearings, said "our competitive situation has not improved because the distributors have not lived up to their agreements. Arbitration would be worth the time and money if it were lived up to."

"Rules should be changed so it could be only an informal hearing between interested parties, and not so similar to a court proceeding. To date I cannot see where arbitration has been of great help to the independent exhibitor."

DESIRE CHANGES IN ARBITRATION RULES

Exhibitors are anxious for changes in the Consent Decree's rules and procedures for arbitration. They feel they should have greater scope. This is one of the principal planks in the industry "unity" platform of the United Motion Picture Industry. Action on this question has been deferred by the committee, however, pending the fate of the UMPI selling plan, now before the Department of Justice.

Better Chance Seen For Independents

A Michigan theatre man wrote that arbitration "gives the independent a better chance than he has had heretofore," noting that although his own award was only partly satisfactory to him he felt that the hearing was fair and the arbitrator understood the issues.

Julius London, who operates the Booth theatre, Detroit, called arbitration a failure and not worth the time or money involved "because decree is worthless. Every section has an escape; it does not answer any exhibitor's complaint." Although doubting that the arbitrator grasped the problems of the film business, he said he had received a fair hearing.

Says Case Definitely Worth the Time

"Excellent" is the opinion of arbitration held by the partners in the Olga Theatre Corporation, operator of the Rialto theatre at Hannibal, Mo. They describe it as,

"The only possible chance an independent has to exist, and besides, it's fair and the only way to settle disputes." The Rialto was represented by an attorney and they declared that their case was definitely worth the time and money spent.

Glenn W. Dickinson, Kansas City operator, whose clearance action for the Dickinson theatre, Mission, Kan., provided one of the first important tests of the exemption from arbitration of affiliate circuits, was critical principally of the Appeal Board.

"Arbitration is worthless when the Appeal Board can reverse an arbitrator's findings of fact. Get expenses down. Do away with the Appeal Board," he recommended, adding that it "takes too much time to get results."

The arbitrator grasped the industry's problems, he said, but asserted he did not have a fair hearing on appeal. Arbitration was not worth the time and money because the "Appeal was very unsatisfactory due to the technical attitude of the board, favoring large companies," Mr. Dickinson said.

A midwest theatre operator described arbitration as "good for some situations," but said that it was not worth his while as he "asked for some run and was granted a second run (under the some run clause), which did not help." The arbitrator grasped the problem "fairly well," he reported.

Adolph Rosecan, whose clearance complaint for the Princess theatre in St. Louis is still under advisement, called arbitration "Fine."

Asks Awards Granted Be Enforced

"It is the most satisfactory method of settling grievances, disputes and complaints of all kinds," a Danville, Va., operator, L. W. Lea, said of arbitration. He recommended that rules be changed so "that the awards granted by the arbitration boards be enforced." He said that his own competitive situation has improved in consequence of a satisfactory award in his clearance complaint.

"Make arbitration easier for exhibitors by not having too many legal points brought out at the hearing," Stanley Sobelson, operator of the West End theatre in Newark, N. J., urged. "Make it more of a friendly gathering where each party can tell his story without being trapped by legal phrases. It saves time and money. Arbitration is very helpful."

R. G. Taylor, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who won a clearance complaint for his Southlawn theatre, considers arbitration "O. K." But, he recommends, "Simplify proceedings and make them more informal; avoid all Legal Talent."

Samuel and Morris Somerson, operators of the Palm theatre in Philadelphia, are sharply critical of arbitration. Calling it "a failure," they urged, "Throw it out. Use the courts. "They declared it not worth the time and money and answered the question "If not, why not?" with the single word, "Incompetence." They did not win their clearance action.

A Missouri operator who said he reached a satisfactory settlement, although his some run case was dismissed, approved arbitration on all counts. Rules and procedure he found to be all right and commented that "It is new, but serve its purpose. It should be continued."

Get Rid of Trick Clauses, Exhibitor Urges

William Symfy, who filed the first San Francisco case, a clearance action for the Rita theatre in Vallejo, Cal., said that he did not feel he had had a fair hearing or that the arbitrator understood the problems of the film business in dismissing the case.

"Distributors have much the best of legal language in the consent decree," he wrote, recommending "Change legal language to help exhibitor. Get rid of trick clauses. Arbitration is fine if distributors would cooperate."

Operators of the El Cerrito theatre, El Cerrito, Cal., reported that they were not satisfied with the partial victory by which they won a cut, and stipulated availabilities, from Richmond, Cal., theatres. The hearing was fair.

Want Hearings held without Attorneys and the arbitrator grasped the industry problems "definitely," they said.

"Costs were exorbitant," they wrote. "Attorney bills and costs total $2,500. What chance has the exhibitor?" Recommending "a new consent decree," they said arbitration is "impotent under the present decree, and was so declared by the arbitrator."

In his award Murray Draper, arbitrator, cut clearance of the El Cerrito behind the State theatre, Richmond, to one day, calculated from opening date at the State, and said that had he been empowered to do so by the decree he would have eliminated all clearance.

A. A. Carlson of Mayville, N. Y., wrote that he withdrew his action to "accept promises that were not well kept." His competitive situation has improved "some," he added, but he does not consider the settlement satisfactory.

Frank Biordi, operator of the Majestic theatre, Elwood City, Pa., reported that arbitration in his experience had proved not worth the time and money expended, "Because an exhibitor's chances are 1,000 to one in these cases."

"Terrible," is Mr. Biordi's opinion of arbitration. "It is the same old story. The circuits have the buying power and if you wish the proof I will give it to you."

"Don't have attorneys at the meetings between exhibitors, distributors and arbitrator," he recommended. While reporting the arbitrator grasped the problems of the film business, Mr. Biordi said he did not feel his hearing was fair. He was represented by an attorney.

Warners, PRC hold Regionals

Warners held its fifth regional sales meeting in San Francisco Monday and Tuesday. Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, presided. Other executives were Mort Blumenstock, Arthur Sachson, Norman Moray and A. W. Schwalberg. Among the field staff were Al Shmitken, L. Blank, Al Brubetick, W. Wheeler, L. James, San Francisco; Fred Greeneberg, J. N. Howland, C. T. Charack, W. R. Walsh, H. Slater, A. E. Snyder, Los Angeles; Al Oxtoby, F. Keller, T. M. McDouglad, Portland; William Gordon, K. K. Pack, W. C. Saphro, J. Griffin, A. W. Baron, Salt Lake City; Earl Bell, W. A. Haefliger, R. P. Jamison, J. R. Neal, Denver; Vete Stewart, J. W. Spear, W. C. Young, Seattle. Home office officials on Tuesday went to the studio at Burbank for product conferences.

Producers Releasing Corporation's fourth regional sales meeting occurred in the same city Saturday, presided over by Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, assisted by Leo J. McCarthy, western division manager. Attending were Sam Sobel, Armand Cohn, Edward Morris, Lloyd Lamb, Joseph Ashby, Bernard Newman, Sam Decker, Bjorn Foss and William Winship.

Sell $25,125 in War Bonds

Members of the Twentieth Century-Fox company shooting scenes for "Crash Dive" at New London, Conn., last week, raised $25,125 in a War Bond campaign held in and about the Capitol theatre in New London.

Essay on the Industry

At the invitation of Rockefeller Center Magazine, the editor of Motion Picture Herald has contributed to the August issue of the Center's publication, for its opening feature, a piece about the place of the motion picture in the world. By permission it is reproduced here.

by TERRY RAMSAYE

LOOKING down from this rose tinted cubicle and ivory tower of the Fiftieth Street escarpment of the Rockefeller Massif, one finds capitaled here three of the great science-arts which have made over, or are making over, the human environment—in chronological order, the motion picture, the radio and television, all geneologically related, as media of expression. They, along with the printed page, so impressively represented by The Associated Press, just across the canyon, pertain to the developments by which ideas and thought have come to be made a part of environment.

Interestingly, too, our host in all this is a floration of another great environmental factor, the petroleum which has given motivation to the automobile and airplane, instruments of both communication and the motility of transit which makes this one nation and may yet make it one world.

The motion picture is a senior among these young arts and industries. It was born along with the motor car. It is a whimsy to observe that the film and the automobile came up simultaneously. The motion picture arrived as a device for dragging the scenery past the customer, while the motor car was a device for dragging the customer past the scenery. They both have done business. The pictures have become, on the national average, about four times as expensive, while the motor car is about one-fourth as costly, or less. Meanwhile the dollar has become worth less, but much easier to get. The inter-action between motor car and motion picture has been extensive, determinative in the nature of screen evolutions, resulting in the urbanization of the nation, somewhat in physical fact, somewhat in ideologies. The motion picture theatre began "in walking distance," a term which disappeared, until very recently, and poignantly now reappears.

THE motion picture began at the bottom while the motor car began at the top. At one end was the Nickelodeon, at the other the Daimler, and Benz. The film theatre took its origins in the regions of its greatest opportunity, in the densely populated foreign labor quarters, all polyglot, poor, and hungry for entertainment in a new world where the stage and the literature were fenced away from them by linguistic barrier. The pantomime of the cinema bridged the gaps with a sign language as plain as a bellylaugh or a bust in the nose. Swiftly there was revealed an indigenous American audience of like simplicity, kindred hopes and desires. The films took America, from the intellectual bottom up. The tradesmen and retailers of the foreign-labour quarters became the film's retailers and they had to take over the art in behalf of the customers. They rose with the industry and became its creative control, reached up and went up.

The screen has arrived from those humble beginnings at a positon where its most competent expressions are at one in capacity with the best of the vanishing stage and the best contemporary literature. The films now say and show for high and low.

This development up from the American melting pot and the crucible of human experience in this land makes certain that the motion picture is a truly responsible and faithful recording and functioning, in total, of the democracy which is this Republic. The screen's success could have come no other way.

IT is more than symbolic that this development finds much of the motion picture, so builded, officed here in this Rockefeller Center which records the parallel story of industry in soaring steel and towering stone, an organic architectural epitome of the great American story.

Not only is it fitting, but inevitable, that we should have here the largest, and also greatest, of all the screen theatres of the world, the Music Hall. There is also significance in that the Music Hall, so importantly an instrument of the motion picture, has its ancestry in a plan which once proposed an American shrine of the art of the opera, an art dominated by special class patronage and known to the multitudes rather more for its diamond horseshoes and tiaras than for what it had to say and sell. Here on these magic acres, of this opera-project site, the screen has demonstrated the superseding power of the art of the whole people, and has "taken over."

The charge has often been made that the motion picture is responsive only to the box office dollar. That is generally true. It is well that it is true. Service is rendered and paid for—or else. The consumer has made everything that counts. That is the American way.

"EXHIBITION under Fire in MALTA"

Alex Francis-Smith was a notion picture publicity director in London, and later manager of the Associated British Circuit, London, until he joined the British Royal Navy. His account of "Exhibition Under Fire in Malta" was sent by him to MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S London office, and relayed, by airplane, to New York, where it arrived on Tuesday.

We have read many stories of the remarkable fortitude of the Maltese people during the terrific onslaughts of the Nazis; how their most cherished possessions were destroyed and they themselves left homeless; but what of the business people, especially those whose burden it was to supply the necessary distraction from the horrors of war—the cinemas.

Try to picture for a moment, conjure up all the vivid imagination at your command, the reactions of an audience who have spent days in a shelter through ceaseless day and night bombing and emerge during a lull to take the opportunity of trying to forget the cares of war while looking at a comedy in a cinema, which rears its proud head from among the debris of flats, business premises, or clubs.

"Yes," you many answer, "we experienced that in England." Admitted, but not every day, not every night, since the war with Italy commenced. The show is on . . . the sirens sound, but the audience sit on and cling to the hope that it will not be a serious raid, or that the attention of the enemy will be directed against another part of the island, but those thoughts are dashed to the ground as nearby "Ack Ack" opens up.

Gradually they rise from their seats but they go very reluctantly, glancing back so as not to miss a laugh or a scene of particular thrill or interest; the "Ack Ack" becomes more intense, growing nearer and as soon as the crack of the Bofor shells is heard bursting overhead a concerted exit for shelter takes place, as that world of make believe suddenly becomes a sordid reality and that dominant feature of life—self preservation, takes its place. Many of the cinemas have built rock shelters for the use of their patrons under the floor of the stalls or as near the theatre as possible.

During the earlier part of the war the cinema operators carried on during the air raids but latterly it became too much to ask anyone to remain and the show was abandoned until the "raiders passed" had sounded and the show recommenced. The patrons emerged from their shelters hoping against hope that they might be permitted to enjoy what was left of the entertainment in peace, and return home content in their mind that although disturbed they had lightened to some extent the war tension. On occasions the return from a shelter has been to find their favorite theatre a ruin and they pass on thanking God that a rock shelter was available in which to seek refuge.

There are two circuits of cinemas, one directed by Captain Caruana and the other by Robert Pace of the Pace Bros. The island itself boasts of 22 theatres (or did) with a total seating capacity of approximately 15,000 and with prices ranging from 7d to 2/6 according to the locality and the type of theatre.

Captain Caruana is a genial type of chap who, apart from greeting you as you enter the Manoel theatre, will play the genial host to you at the bar which bears his name, after the performance. This bar and the name of "Caruanas" or the "Captain's," as it is more affectionately referred to, is known to every visitor from all parts of the world. Captain Collins was the first to bring the "talkies" to Malta and opened up in the Grand Opera House, now a house of memories, thanks to the efforts of Nazi culture. Captain Caruana opened the Manoel theatre as opposition to Collins, and now controls quite a number of the cinemas but he, too, has suffered losses. The Gaiety, the Capital, the Kingsway, Regent, Rialto, Rio are now piles of debris.

Pace Bros. even had the courage to build and open a new super just 12 months ago, the Coliseum, and were rewarded by seeing the "house full" sign exhibited for weeks on end even though the films shown were vintaged.

The main worry at present, as you may well realize, is product, and carbons; and how eagerly do the public and services, as well as the directors, await the arrival of a convoy, trusting that new features may have been lucky enough to have been included amongst the cargo. To a blitzed island such as this, films may not be looked upon as essential war stores or necessities of life, but when one considers that there is no place that one can go to get away from war and depends entirely on the cinema for its war relaxation, films become essential war stores, for happy service men and happy civilians are better armed to face the rigors of bombing when it does arrive after they can snatch even an hour or so watching the world of make believe.

The latest war gazettes—the latest to us—are always received with great enthusiasm and bring home vividly what the rest of the world and the services are doing to bring victory nearer.

UNITY PLAN 'POCKET-VETOED' BY ARNOLD, ALLIED CHARGES

Myers threatens to seek Revival of Neely Bill to compel Trade Reforms

Charging that Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is planning to "pocket veto" the UMPI sales plan, Allied States Association on Tuesday threatened at Washington to seek revival of the Neely block booking bill to bring about the reforms which it asserted the Department of Justice had failed to obtain.

A bulletin from Abram F. Myers, general counsel, and M. A. Rosenberg, president of Allied, attacked the Department of Justice for failure to act on the blocks-of-13 sales formula proposed by the United Motion Picture Industry to replace the Consent Decree's blocks-of-five method which expires on September 1st.

"There is today no legal restriction of any kind on the monopolistic and socially undesirable practices of block booking and blind selling" the bulletin charged, blaming Mr. Arnold's inaction on the UMPI plan and his "accepting a milk and water consent decree in 1940."

Allied Plans to Reveal Facts

"The implications of the situation are grave enough to merit the consideration and to arouse the indignation of the countless thousands who directly and through their authorized spokesmen have joined in the fight against the evils of block booking and blind selling," the message said.

Allied disclosed its intention to "reveal the facts and make its position plain to the exhibitors, the public groups which cooperated with it in support of the Neely Bill and the public in general."

As Mr. Myers was releasing the bulletin, which he emphasized had been approved by Allied's executive committee, Governor Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia, who as a member of the Senate pressed the legislation bearing his name over a period of several years, was assuring friends on the Senate Finance Committee that he planned to return to Washington next January. Governor Neely already has received the nomination for the Senate seat—in his state tantamount to election.

The Allied bulletin characterized the present situation as "scandalous" since, as a result "of Arnold's action in accepting a milk-and-water consent decree in 1940, and his inaction in 1942" there is no legal restriction of any kind now on block booking or blind selling.

The break between Allied and the department—with which it had worked in close cooperation during the period of the Neely bill campaign and in the building up of the Government's anti-trust suit against the eight distributors — was seen as complete, with the association charging that Mr. Arnold had adopted a "capricious and arbitrary" stand on the UMPI plan. It contended that he had indicated at the July 3rd meeting at which the plan was submitted that the department would accept it although Mr. Arnold and his assistants made no attempt to cover dissatisfaction with it.

"POCKET VETO" EVIDENT, ABRAM MYERS SAYS

In a statement accompanying his bulletin, Abram Myers explained that "for several days it has been evident that the Department of Justice intended to give the UMPI plan a 'pocket veto'.

"The delay has enabled certain circuit operators with closed situations, who have profited by the five-picture system, to circulate misleading statements concerning the scope and effect of the plan.

"The distributors have indicated that they will continue to sell under the five-picture plan—at least to the independent exhibitors. This will be a blow to those exhibitors but they will know that the associations cooperating through UMPI did all in their power to secure a better method.

"The danger to be watched is that with all restrictions removed the distributors will continue to sell to the independents under the five-picture plan but will sell to the circuits and other privileged buyers under long-term preferential franchises."

Calls Consent Decree A Failure

Allied declared the consent decree a failure, robbing the independent exhibitor of protective measures which he enjoyed even under the old system and making it possible for the major companies to profit handsomely.

During the past sales year, under decree buying methods, it said, exhibitors have been offered blocks with one or two good pictures and a balance of poor ones. This has left them in the position of buying, "under the gun," on a take it or leave it basis, the message charged.

All opportunity which the independent previously had to cancel some pictures or "wash out" unplayed ones at the end of a season has been lost, the bulletin said.

Mr. Myers further charged that last year distributors demanded that more pictures be played at high percentages of box office receipts than ever before. Both the consenting, and independent, distributors made these demands, he said.

"Not only that, but they required that the exhibitors increase the admission prices paid by the public during the engagements of numerous outstanding pictures, including inspirational war pictures, thereby increasing the amounts realized by them from the percentage arrangements," he said.

"The tactics of the distributors in thus taking advantage of the opportunities afforded by the Consent Decree have resulted in greatly increasing their earnings at the expense of the exhibitors and of the moviegoing public." Mr. Myers appended a statement of corporate earnings of the distributors.

Sees UMPI Plan as Better Than Decree

The UMPI plan, it said, is far superior to the Consent Decree selling scheme "devised by theorists in the Department of Commerce and in the Department of Justice" but which, it was charged, is still desired by Department of Justice officials.

"Mr. Arnold's attitude is all the more serious," the message pointed out, "because with Congress absorbed with problems arising out of the war there is little likelihood that it will find time to consider anti-block booking legislation.

"The most that can be hoped for is that a Congressional committee, either in the consideration of some measure like the Neely bill or pursuant to a resolution calling for an investigation, will develop and disclose all the facts connected with this amazing situation. Such revelation would pave the way for effective action in the future."

Although the UMPI plan increases the block buying from five to 13 pictures the Allied report predicted that on the basis of prospective release schedules this was more likely to be about 10. It also noted that the provision for trade showing five pictures in each block and identifying the rest precluded the worst dangers of blind buying.

"All the safeguards of the Consent Decree against forcing one picture or group with another picture or group, now suspended, will be restored," it said. Elsewhere the report noted that one consenting company since June 1st had demanded that exhibitors pledge to buy a second group as a condition of obtaining the first. It did not elaborate on the charge.

Most importantly the UMPI plan provides a minimum cancellation privilege, the bulletin said, which will enable exhibitors to drop a minimum of 20 per cent of undesirable pictures. An additional factor in favor of the UMPI plan was the potential savings in transportation by salesmen and purchasing exhibitors, the message said.

Local Units Must Decide on Duals

A second bulletin from Mr. Myers this week told members that a decision on the elimination of double features as a conservation measure was up to the local units of exhibitor organizations.

Summing up arguments on the conservation issue he said that each area should decide whether it wished to ban double features or elect to accept fewer prints, with resultant changes in clearance and availability. A ban on all double features probably would have to be implemented by a nationwide Federal order, he said.

"The double feature issue is another challenge to exhibitor associations" he wrote, urging local groups to canvas their members on this aspect of the conservation problem and to be prepared to join in concerted action.

Opponents of double features, he reported, are arguing that show hours would be reduced, with savings in power, fuel and critical materials. Also they say it would enable theatres to run Victory Shorts and other Government films with less disturbance to the regular program.

The gathering of information from all exhibitors on what the effect of eliminating double features would be in conserving materials and in organizing for the enforcement of any decision that might be reached was seen by Mr. Myers as "a challenge to every exhibitor organization to demonstrate its ability to meet demands of the times."

Urges Exhibitors Write Conservation Views

Mr. Myers said that the exhibitor committee, known as the Motion Picture and Speaking Stage Theatres Advisory Committee, has been summoned to a meeting in Washington on August 20th. The exhibitor members are: M. A. Rosenberg, president of Allied, Robert Poole, secretary, Pacific Coast Conference, and Si Fabian, New York exhibitor.

This will be an opportunity for exhibitors to impress on Government officials the need for joint advisory committees on the conservation problem, he said. He urged theatre men to write to the committee members, or associations with their views on the matter.

A meeting of St. Paul and Minneapolis exhibitors called by Northwest Allied last week to discuss double bills and giveaways failed to reach an agreement. Delegates, however, pledged to drop duals on Wednesday and Thursday. They remain on Friday and Saturday. Another meeting will be called to continue the discussion and examine the giveaway problem.

W. R. Frank, Minneapolis independent, has resigned from Northwest Allied. His action followed similar steps, on the eve of the convention on September 1st and 2nd, by Paul Mans, Lee Brothers and Sol Fischer, who also are active Northwest independents. The unit's action against double features and giveaways was said to have spurred the resignations.

Benjamin G. Hull, business agent of the projectionists' union in Springfield, Mass., has been reelected a district vice-president of the State Federation of Labor.

Named Stromberg Aide

Katherine Brown has become executive vice-president for Hunt Stromberg Productions, Inc., releasing through United Artists. She formerly was eastern agent for David Selznick.

Rodgers Sees General Increase in Receipts

Theatres, generally, are reporting better business, according to William F. Rodgers, MGM vice-president and general sales manager, on his arrival in Hollywood Tuesday with E. M. Saunders, J. E. Flynn, and E. K. O'Shea, division managers. The men are to participate in product conferences at the studio with Louis B. Mayer, Howard Dietz, and other executives.

Mr. Rodgers admitted "high and low" locations, according to war industries and population shifts but said the general picture was good. Theatres are "extremely busy" maintaining morale, he added.

"Americans, while wanting variety, are not seeking so-called escape films exclusively," he said. "The war is here, and when a great story comes along with a war background, it gets enthusiastic support."

The company shortly will sell its 1942-43 product to the National Theatres chain, Mr. Rodgers said, and on Tuesday he went into conferences with Charles Skouras, the circuit's president, for renewal of the three year franchise now expiring.

Bush in Charge of Trade Paper Ads for 20th-Fox

Rodney Bush, formerly exploitation manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, has been assigned by Hal Horne, director of advertising and publicity, to handle trade paper advertising, serving under Charles Schlaifer, advertising manager.

Mr. Bush joined Twentieth Century-Fox in 1937. He started as a theatre manager in Memphis in 1924 for Paramount Famous-Lasky, and later entered the advertising department of Publix Theatres at the home office when that circuit was formed. He later became press book editor for Paramount Pictures, and in 1935 went to the Paramount studio as advertising and exploitation manager.

Raise $300,000 in USO Campaign

Jack Cohn, chairman, and A. P. Waxman, director of campaign of the USO Amusements, Arts and Sports Division, announced yesterday that $300,000 had been raised by their group in Greater New York. This was $60,000 above their quota.

Sam Rinzler, Fred J. Schwartz and Irving Lesser, who were co-chairmen of USO Theatre Week, were instrumental in bringing in $200,000 through collections taken in the motion picture theatres in the five boroughs.

Golden Confers in New York

Nathan D. Golden, film consultant of the United States Department of Commerce, conferred in New York last week with the Eastern Public Relations Committee on industry statistics. A committee for statistical work includes Robert M. Gillham, chairman; Hal Horne and Maurice Bergman.

Studio Publicists Elect Lieber

The Public Relations Committee, western division, on Tuesday elected Perry Lieber, head of publicity at RKO, as its chairman. He succeeds Howard Strickling of MGM, whose six month term expires. George Brown, of Paramount, was elected to fill the vice chairmanship vacated by Mr. Lieber.

Form Play Association

Max Reinhardt, Eddie Dowling, Norman Bel Geddes and Richard Myers have announced their association to produce plays for the new season.

Benny to make 12 Pictures for United Artists

Jack Benny last week signed a contract with United Artists to produce 12 pictures said to involve $12,000,000.

The company will be known as Jack Benny Productions, Inc. Six will star Mr. Benny. Mr. Benny will be executive producer for all 12. Two will be produced each year. The first will go before the cameras in January.

Mr. Benny now is negotiating with George Kaufman and Moss Hart, playwrights, for an original screenplay. He also is seeking Ernst Lubitsch, director.

The deal was signed by Edward Raftery, UA president; George Bagnall, vice-president; and Arthur S. Lyons and Loyd Wright, attorney, representing Mr. Benny.

Sol Lesser will release his projected "Stage Door Canteen" through United Artists. By his agreement with the American Theatre Wing, operator of the canteens, and from which he obtained screen rights, profits above distribution and production costs will go to the organization.

Deny Dismissal of Joelson Suit

Application to dismiss the anti-trust suit brought by Julius Joelson, operator of J. J. Theatres, Inc., in the New York supreme court against the eight major companies, Harry and William Brandt and Max Cohen, was denied last week by Justice Benjamin Schreiber. The suit, novel in that it charges violations of the state penal code and business laws, claims a conspiracy to create a monopoly in the Times Square district.

"While there is doubt in the mind of this court that many of the allegations of the complaints compel or justify the inferences drawn therefrom, the motion to dismiss the complaint is denied, since the plaintiff is entitled to those inferences most favorable to sustain the complaint," Justice Schreiber said.

According to Emil K. Ellis, attorney for the plaintiff, the action is the first against the film companies to be brought under state laws.

Guy Wonders, Warner District Head, Dies

Guy Wonders, district manager for Warner Theatres, in Maryland, southern Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, died Monday in Washington, from injuries suffered in a fall Sunday night from the seventh floor of the Earl Theatre building, that city, where the circuit has offices. Mr. Wonders had charge of 12 theatres and had been in the industry 39 years. Survivors are Mrs. Stevens Porter, a daughter, of Bethesda, Maryland; and Mrs. Beatrice Bock, a sister, of Baltimore.

Schine Managers Meet On Selling of Bonds

The Schine circuit's participation in selling of War Bonds and Stamps was outlined Tuesday in Rochester, at a meeting of 45 managers in the territory. Other such regional meetings will follow. In charge at Rochester, were Gus Lampe, assistant general manager; and Bud Silverman, city manager.

TRADE ATTENTION FOCUSED ON LABOR FRONT ISSUES

Office Guild Jurisdictional Dispute of Wide Import; Operators may strike

Negotiations which are expected to have far-reaching effect on the labor-employer equilibrium in the motion picture industry began this week in New York. Although they were concerned immediately only with office workers in company exchanges and ultimately with all white collar workers, the significance attached to them by the industry brought into sharp focus the status of labor contracts now under discussion throughout the trade, some of which are being bitterly disputed.

The first discussions on the agenda in New York were between officials of the Screen Office Employees Guild of Los Angeles, a local of an American Federation of Labor studio union, and Pat Casey, labor contact executive for the producers and distributors. The course and result of these discussions, which concern only Los Angeles exchange workers, are expected to have an important influence on a jurisdictional fight now being waged in the east between the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109 of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers of America, and the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, which controls exchange workers.

Still further in the background were the scheduled discussions between Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and William Green, president of AFL, aimed at nation-wide labor peace.

Other present discussions of bearing on the general picture include the demands of Moving Picture Machine Operators Local 306, in New York, for a revised contract for home office projectionists; a strike settlement for clerical workers at the Warner home office, and wage adjustment negotiations with Laboratory Technicians' Local 702, AFL.

West Coast Dispute Brought to New York

The negotiations between representatives of the Screen Office Employes Guild, representing office workers of the principal exchanges in Los Angeles, and Mr. Casey of the producer-distributors, now shifted to New York, were considered to be of possible ultimate effect in the exchanges of all key cities. Specifically they were to discuss reclassification of workers and minimum scales for Los Angeles exchanges.

Entering the conversations, too, may be the status of the exchange employes of the San Francisco offices of the distributors, who were recently organized by the Guild immediately preceding the recent strike of the Los Angeles workers which was called off after several days when the distributor-producer group sought an amicable settlement.

The principal points remaining to be settled are classification of workers according to their duties, and minimum wage scales.

There is every likelihood that the New York discussions will have some bearing on the future economic status of the majority of the 11,000 exchange workers employed by companies in the United States.

However, executives of the Guild said in Hollywood over the weekend that organization of exchange employes in cities other than San Francisco had not been discussed by them.

Other points sought by the Guild for the Los Angeles workers have reportedly been settled in conferences between Casey and exchange representatives and Guild executives during the last two weeks in Hollywood.

The pattern of the concessions granted may influence demands by employes in other cities. Principal pay demands of the Los Angeles workers are based on the scales of studio workers doing the same or comparable work.

Wage Increases to 40 Per Cent Asked

During the strike which lasted about a week before the truce was effected, officials of the Guild, which is a local of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America, AFL, charged that veteran employes of exchanges were receiving as low as $20 a week, and that some of them were performing duties calling for much more money.

Wage increases approximating an average of 40 per cent were asked. Also sought were inclusion in a written agreement of provisions for sick leaves, vacations with pay, and other conditions.

CIO Unit organizing New York Workers

The CIO's United Office and Professional Workers of America also is organizing clerical workers in the distributors' home offices—through its Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109.

Although its charter was obtained only last October, the union's organization has been rapid. On July 28th, in the law office of Wendell Willkie, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, there were signed closed shop contracts between the Guild and RKO, Loew's and Twentieth Century-Fox. A contract with Columbia followed shortly. Included were the Columbia New York exchange, and Loew's radio station, WHN.

Mr. Willkie is reported to have brought together executives of the signatory companies, except RKO, for a meeting with Lewis Merrill, UOPWA president, and Phillip Murray, national president of the CIO.

The union began in October, 1941, with the granting of a charter from the CIO. It formerly had been a loose combination of employee guilds in the home offices, banded together in the Screen Guild Council. David Golden became its president, a post he still holds.

It includes the Screen Readers Guild and a year ago there was a possibility it might include the Screen Publicists Guild. However, that organization's membership rejected affiliation at that time with a CIO union, although in a reversal it is today a separate local of the UOPWA.

Local 109 claims it now represents 2,000 film office clerical workers in New York, and says it hopes to represent 6,000.

Negotiations now are under way with National Screen Service, in headquarters and exchanges; a National Labor Relations Board election is pending at the Paramount office; the union has filed with the NLRB for certification as the collective bargaining agency for United Artists clerical workers, and for Paramount's exchange, music company, newsreel and for such workers in the Loew's and Twentieth Century-Fox New York exchanges.

Attempts to organize exchange white collar employees have been met by the IATSE, an AFL union, with orders to its "B"—exchange "back room" workers' locals—to take in all exchange employees. However, Local 109 spokesmen said this week there was "no doubt" it would capture most of the New York exchanges. They added a petition to the NLRB would be filed shortly, for representation of RKO exchange office workers.

The contracts signed with the four major companies July 28th are identical. Chief provisions include a 10 per cent general wage increase; a maintenance clause under which a majority of employees must be members; severance pay, and vacations.

Arbitration of grievances is provided. If the union and employer cannot agree on a third person to be arbitrator, he is to be picked by the American Arbitration Association, and his decision is to be binding.

Walkout threatened by Projectionists

Conferences at mid-week in New York among executives of Local 306, largest projectionists' union in the country, and distributor home office officials, were to determine whether approximately 150 union members in projection booths of exchanges, home offices, studios, and newsreel offices were to strike.

The union is demanding renewal of a 1938 contract which expired in 1940, and which has been observed in a "status quo" agreement. Disputed points, however, are new provisions asked by both sides.

In negotiations for renewal the union, in November, 1941, demanded that Loew's distributing organization cease servicing theatres employing non-union projectionists, or those of the rival New York union, the Empire State Motion Picture Operators.

Company Seeks Federal Injunction

Loew's responded with a petition to Federal Judge Henry Goddard for an injunction. It asserted cessation of service as demanded would be a breach of contract, and also contrary to the Federal consent decree, to which it, along with four other major distributors, is a signatory. The action is pending.

However, Local 306 spokesmen asserted this week the demand on Loew's was made by the local's "old regime," headed by Joseph Basson; and that decision was still to be made by the new regime, headed by Herman Gelber, president, whether to pursue it.

The demand was made in accordance with the desire of Local 306 to eliminate competition —"dual unionism," it terms it. The competition is the Empire State union, which has a contract with the Century circuit and several smaller companies.

Negotiations for amalgamation have been desultory. Local 306 charges Empire is a "company union." In conferences this spring in the offices of the New York State Labor Relations Board, Empire balked further talks until the Board decided several pending jurisdictional cases.

Another disputed point in contract renewal between major distributors and the union is the former's demand they be allowed to close projection rooms at will.

A third dispute centers about the union's demand for a general wage increase of 15 per cent.

The local also has contracts with the great majority of theatres in New York which are unaffected by the dispute with the distributors. Contracts with the Skouras, RKO, and Loew circuits, 1936-1945, are the same, although wage scales vary. In the Loew circuit, projectionists receive a $63 minimum for a 40-hour week. In the Independent Theatre Owners Association pact they receive between $50 and $55.

Severance, Vacation Pay Provided

The theatre contracts have in common provisions for two weeks' vacation with pay, two weeks' notice upon severance and arbitration on "every difficulty."

The most recent wage readjustment with the circuits was last year. A Local 306 official described the theatre contract situation as "pretty well stabilized." Citing the union's war work, a spokesman said that members were projecting "thousands" of special shows per week, in police stations, social halls, clubs, churches, schools and the like without recompense. These shows are under the Office of Civilian Defense, and are of special defense reels. Also, he said, Local 306 members are contributing "over time" in showing of special defense films in theatres.

Warner Clerical Strike Settled

After 10 days of idleness and picketing the Warner home office, clerical workers returned there Monday morning, their demands granted. The walkout, ordered by AFL Office Workers Local 23,169, came because the company allegedly reneged on several points in an agreement which was to precede the contract.

Intervention and arbitration proved futile. The settlement was obtained after Joseph Bernhard, Warner vice-president and general manager, flew into New York from the coast Sunday.

Terms of the contract follow:

All striking employees will be paid for the time they were out.

Those earning less than $30 per week will get an increase of $4 weekly; $5 for those earning between $30 and $40; $6 for those earning $40 to $50; $8 for those earning more than $50. The increases are retroactive to May 15th. A union grievance committee will also adjust other salary "inequalities." In layoffs, seniority will be observed.

Severance pay will be given thus: one week's pay for those who worked a full year; two, for those with two to five years' employment; three, for five years; four, for six years; five, for seven years; six, for eight years. Employees now union members, must retain membership. All new employees must join the union.

The union was formed in February, 1941. It was known first as the Warner Brothers Associated Office Employees. In May of this year, it received a charter from the AFL. Raymond Price is president.

The AFL office worker's union also has a unit at Universal's home office. On Monday, volunteers from the Warner unit handed circulars to Paramount employees, citing the contract provisions, and urging membership.

Cameramen Join Jurisdictional Fight

Between Hollywood, Los Angeles and Washington this week were played the tunes of a tri-cornered battle over the jurisdiction of first cameramen, claimed by the American Society of Cinematographers, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers which is aiding the ASC and the IATSE, the latter seeking to exercise its AFL charter grant over the workers.

Headed by Fred Jackman, who is directing the fight from his Malibu Beach home, the ASC protested several months ago to the Los Angeles office of the National Labor Relations Board that the major producers were violating the Wagner Act by negotiating a wage scale for first cameramen in January.

Since then, the ASC obtained the aid of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which fears encroachment of the alliance into the ranks of certain electrical workers which have been the subject of dispute for some years. The international board of the IBEW has issued a charter to Local 1318 which is seeking to combine first cameramen and certain electrical workers in its membership.

Thus, some cameramen are holding three cards in order to work: those of the IATSE, the IBEW and the ASC.

William R. Walsh, regional director of the NIRB, after conducting an intensive investigation into the charges and counter-charges including conferences with Richard F. Walsh, IATSE president, who was in Hollywood for two weeks on the jurisdiction matter, forwarded the entire case to Washington for decision as to whether a board complaint charging the producers with violation of the Wagner Act should be issued. The complaint was refused.

Dispute Affects Location Crew

The ASC-IATSE dispute has resulted in a tangle over what cinematographer shall guide the cameras on 20th Century-Fox' "My Friend Flicka," on location in Utah. Winner of the round just passed at press time is the IATSE, whose member, Dewey Wrigley, has supplanted Virgil Miller, who supplanted Eddie Cronjager.

Mr. Miller's replacement was ordered when he resigned the IATSE membership. Mr. Wrigley is a member of both ASC and IATSE. Mr. Cronjager was ousted because he was not an IATSE member.

The ASC contract with the major producers provides that all first cameramen working in studios be members of the Society. However to work on locations outside of the state, the cinematographers must hold IATSE cards. ASC officials claim most of their members have gone into the IBEW local, thus making a third card they carry.

The IATSE Hollywood local has received offers of aid from the other two photographers' locals in the alliance. Then, too, the recent convention of the alliance voted "all aid possible" to the Hollywood local in its fight.

Twenty-four resignations of cameramen from the IATSE local have been received at the local's office, according to Herbert Aller, business representative of the IATSE.

The ASC some time ago appealed to the IATSE international for a separate charter, but the Photographers Local 659 opposed it. At a vote of local members presided over by International President Walsh, the first cameramen were overwhelmingly defeated in their request, and the international backed its unit.

Now the ASC is playing with the IBEW.

No strike is expected because of the NLRB case.

Local 644 Has All Eastern Cameramen

Under rigidly defined conditions, all of the East's motion picture photography, commercial, documentary, and entertainment, is under the jurisdiction of the AFL's Local 644, International Photographers.

The current uniform "production" contract, now two years old, expires December 31st.

For production for entertainment, it gives 1st men $62.50 per day, $250 per week, exclusive of Saturdays and Sundays, for which they receive time and a half pay. All work over eight hours per day, is designated time and a half. The work week is of 40 hours.

On the same type production, assistants receive $15 per day, $75 per week. For commercial film production, first men receive $50 per day, $100 per week; assistants, $15 per day, $75 per week. A still man on a production rates $25 per day, $125 per week.

The union also has a contract covering newsreel photographers, signed last December 19th, and running for two years.

Publicists Guild Seeks Contract

With all major distributors except Warners signed to closed shop contracts, the Screen Publicists Guild is concentrating on that company, and this week, there were to be conferences with is executives.

Warners, although agreeing to union recognition, never bargained in concert with the other companies. The United States Conciliation Service was unable to bring agreement, but its three-man panel assigned to puruse the case was to meet this week with both sides.

The Guild contract is for two years, with a proviso for reopening at the end of one year for salary adjustments. Salient points are:

The three classes of workers and their minimum weekly salaries are: publicists, $65; associate publicists, $40; apprentices, $25. Seventy per cent of a company's employees shall be members.

JURISDICTION BASIC FACTOR

Severance pay is established up to 12 weeks' for 10 or more years of service. A work week is of 40 hours, cumulative. This includes a "tolerance period" of 20 hours, for persons working outside their offices. Vacations with pay are of two weeks for persons with service of one year or more; one week for those with less than one year.

The Guild was formed in November, 1939. It remained unaffiliated until June 22nd, this year. It then became Local 114 of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO. Last year affiliation with the UOPWA's Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild was rejected. Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., is president.

Contract negotiations with the companies started in September and were broken off several times. Contracts were signed May 5th after a campaign in which a strike was voted.

Local 702 Presses NSS; Others Signed

The New York processing laboratories in the main have accepted the claims of Local 702, IATSE, four-year-old laboratory workers' union. An agreement has been reached with National Screen Service, but that organization thus far has not signed a contract. A strike against the Movielab Company was called off in March, after five months, but the firm did not sign a contract, and remains the chief "holdout."

Currently, with those with whom it has contracts, the union is attempting to obtain wage increases to correspond to the rise in the cost of living, and closer to those obtaining in west coast laboratories.

The union was formed September 9, 1937. It represented a break from its predecessor, Local 669 of the IATSE and was at first independent.

Introduced First Closed Shop Pacts

It immediately sought recognition from all eastern processing companies. First acknowledgment came from De Luxe, Ace and Consolidated in March, 1938. It entered into its first contract, the terms varying according to company. Contracts later were signed by Ace, De Luxe, Consolidated, H. E. R., and Paramount News.

Local 702 introduced the first closed shop pacts in the field. A spokesman said Monday it had raised base pay to $28 in all companies. The union's first strike occurred at Du-Art, in 1938. It resulted in a 10 per cent pay increase, but not a "satisfactory" closed shop. Other contracts gained by the union were with Malcolm, Producers, Cinelab, Pathe News and Mecca.

Contracts expired December, 1940. After negotiations, they were renewed March 10th, 1941, with the salient provision that all laboratories were to enforce parallel wages and working conditions no later than March 10th of this year. There are to be wage increases March 10, 1943, of five per cent for those earning over $50, and 10 per cent for those earning less than $50.

The 1943 reopening provides not only for the wage boosts but also for three additional holidays with pay. The union also obtained on September 1st, 1940, the first agreement with the Pathe laboratories in Bound Brook, N. J. On June 19th of this year, the local drew Paramount's laboratory in Long Island into the pact.

The membership is approximately 1,500. John H. Rugge is president.

Delay Petrillo Suit Hearing

Delay until September 16th of the Government's anti-trust suit against James Caesar Petrillo and the American Federation of Musicians, of which he is president, was granted Thursday in Chicago Federal court by Judge Michael Igoe.

It was countered with immediate notice by Joseph A. Padway, defense counsel and general counsel to the American Federation of Labor, that he would demand the hearing be advanced to August 24th.

In obtaining the delay, Daniel B. Britt, Special Assistant Attorney General, asserted it was sought because Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice, wished to argue the case personally, and could not do so until September.

Mr. Padway on Friday, August 7th, also asked for dismissal of the suit. He challenged Federal jurisdiction and asserted the Government failed to state a cause of action; that the case involved was only a "labor dispute" and a "peaceful refusal to work under certain conditions."

Says Arnold Desires To Test Theories

Mr. Petrillo last week charged through counsel that the suit was instituted by Mr. Arnold so that he could "test out some of his pet theories which have recently been repudiated by the supreme court."

The Department of Justice this week rounded up evidence from broadcasters, transcription manufacturers and all others affected by the various Petrillo edicts.

There will be a series of conferences, out of which are expected to emerge affidavits for submission to court when the complaint is heard.

The National Music Council last week asked William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to intervene. It termed the ban on recordings a "blow to our democratic way of life."

Chicago Union Opens Books to New Members

In Canton, Ohio, a motion to dissolve an injunction issued last week restraining picketing of four theatres of Tri-Theatres, Inc., was dismissed on Monday. The judge added that until the labor case was tried shortly, no picketing would be allowed.

Directors of the Chicago projectionists Local 110 met this week over a new contract to become effective September 1st.

For the first time in 24 years its books will be open to new members.

At a meeting last week attended by 300 members of the union, a resolution to open the books to new members was made by Robert Burns, chairman of the membership committee. It was passed unanimously. As a result 155 new members will be admitted, to be selected from the list of "permit men," as soon as possible.

The "permit system," in existence for many years and the idea of the late Thomas E. Malloy, has been the means of large income for the union.

Progress in the formation of a union taking in film exchange office workers is being made in Chicago under the direction of officials of the Chicago Film Exchange Employees Union, B-45. The new union already has signed up Warners, Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO Radio front office workers. Head bookers and office managers are not eligible for membership.

In the same city, the photographers' union, Local 666, IATSE, has signed a new contract with industrial film producers. It takes effect September 1st.

B-51 Contracts with N. Y. Exchanges

The exchange workers' local in New York is B-51, of the IATSE group of "B" exchanges throughout the country. It has renewed its two-year contracts with the distributors, and now is attempting to include office workers, in a struggle with CIO Local 109. It has not filed petitions with the NLRB, however—and Local 109 already has obtained representation for Columbia exchange clerical workers. Lou Johnson is president of B-51.

Reduce Prices at Army Theatres

Admission prices at Army theatres operated at posts, camps and stations have been changed to reflect the recently-enacted legislation exempting such shows from admission tax.

The single-admission charge has been reduced from 20 to 15 cents and the price of coupon books—widely used by enlisted men—has been cut from $1.40 to $1.20 for a book of 10 coupons. The changes in rates went into effect August 8th.

MGM to Donate Profits Of Shorts to Red Cross

Exhibitors will be asked by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to pay regular rentals for "Mr. Blabbermouth," short subject produced and distributed for the Government, as well as four additional short subjects. All profits will go to the Red Cross and studio overhead and distribution costs will not be charged against the films, it was said.

Sussman Leaves 20th-Fox; Will Take Vacation

William Sussman has resigned from Twentieth Century-Fox. He had been eastern division manager, until replacements recently by A. W. Smith, Jr.

There had been discussion subsequently of a Cleveland sales post, but Mr. Sussman announced his departure Friday, August 7th. He will take a vacation, and then disclose his plans.

"Divide and Conquer" In 20 Houses Friday

"Divide and Conquer," Warner short subject exposing Nazi methods, was to have opened in New York Friday. It will play 20 leading first-run houses, day and date. The company said this was the largest number ever recorded in that area for a short subject.

Mexico establishes Cinema Institute

Patterned after Hollywood Academy; Camacho is Honorary Chairman

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Mexico now has an officially constituted Institute of Cinematographic Arts and Sciences, similar to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences of Hollywood. The Institute was organized by the Athenium of Sciences and Arts of Mexico at the request of the Association of Producers and Distributors of Mexican Motion Pictures, which felt that the time had arrived for this country to have such an organization. Annual selection of the "bests" in the business had for some time been done by the Association of Mexican Cinematographic Journalists.

The Mexican Institute is headed by Felipe Gregorio Castillo, chief of the Federal Film Censorship and Supervision Department, who also is the chairman of the Athenium's cinematographic section; Nemesio Garcia Naranjo, Ricardo Lopez Mendez, Prof. Jose F. Vazquez and Julio Jimenez Rueda, representing the Athenium; Jorge Mendoza Carrasco, of the Cinematographic Journalists Association, and Arturo Ortiz Mugica of the Film Censorship and Supervision Department.

Rules of the Institute requires that artistic and box office values both be considered; that great attention be given the scenario of films, while the selection of actors must be guided by natural ability, lack of affectation, virility, appearance and other things that "make players credible representatives of the best ideals of Mexico in the theatre and on the screen," while inherent ability, naturalness, dress, beauty and grace are the chief points in deciding on the selection of actresses.

Institute Offers Prize Awards

President Manuel Avila Camacho has consented to be the Institute's honorary chairman. He is the first Mexican president to show a practical interest in his country's motion picture industry. He donated a handsome trophy to the producer of the best Mexican film of 1941, as chosen by the Journalists.

Prizes of the Institute's competition will be a gold medal to the producer of the best picture, and $2,250 in cash each for the best actor and actress. Various business houses have subscribed to the fund for these prizes. There also will be prizes, as yet unspecified, for directors, cameramen, makeup artists and others who contribute to production.

If MGM wishes to produce a biography of Francisco I. Madero, first president of the Mexican revolution, in a fashion which will please Mexico, it must alter considerably the scenario it submitted to the Federal Film Censorship and Supervision Department for criticism. The Department found that the scenario as it was submitted did neither Mr. Madero (assassinated in 1913) nor Mexican history justice, it was said.

MGM was asked, if it desires to go ahead with this production, to have as consultants one or more recognized Mexican historians.

Mexican pictures henceforth will be governed by the Code of Morals that the Federal Film Censorship and Supervision Department has drawn up and which is similar to that used in Hollywood. The Association of Producers and Distributors of Mexican Motion Pictures has given the department written assurance that it will obey this code strictly.

Profits that he garnered as a star bull fighter and as a film actor are being invested by "Pepe" Ortiz, one of Mexico's outstanding matadores, in a film production company he has organized here and which is to start its first production, a bull fight picture, "Marvilla del Toreo" ("Marvel Bull Fighter") early in September.

Conchita Martinez, Spanish folk dancer and singer, will be starred. Mr. Ortiz plans to make two other films.

Government Shorts Present War View

As war time propaganda and to "orientate public opinion," the Federal Film Censorship and Supervision Department is preparing a series of shorts for the screen discussion by outstanding personalities in various fields in this country of the international situation, from the Mexican viewpoint.

Alejandro Galindo, who has several successful pictures to his credit, will direct. The series would be exhibited in all of Mexico's 1,012 active theatres and is expected to start on or about September 16th, Mexican Independence Day.

The Academy of Cinematographic Art, which the Government and the National Picture Industry Workers Union started recently to teach screen acting, has resumed functioning after a brief period of reorganization. All tuition is now free.

MEXICAN CENSOR BANS 7 FILMS

The Mexican Federal Film Censorship and Supervising Department banned only seven films of 1,918 reviewed during the first 18 months of the Department's existence. Deletions were ordered in 70 other films. The report, for the period ended July 31st, included Mexican and foreign films, of all lengths.

Disney to make New Feature on Mexico

Walt Disney will follow "Saludos," his first feature length picture based on his 1941 tour of Latin America, with a second full length combination of cartoon and live travelogue on Mexico.

The world premiere of "Saludos" will be held simultaneously at five first run Rio de Janeiro theatres on August 24th. Mrs. Darcy Vargas, first lady of Brazil, will be guest of honor at the opening. The film, in four episodes, is based on the music and colorful backgrounds of Brazil, Argentine, Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

The Disney research and production staff which prepared "Saludos" has completed a study of the music, traditions and romance of Mexico and combined them into a story. Production will start within a few weeks. It too will combine cartoon and the color footage taken on Mr. Disney's tour of Latin America. Donald Duck, known as Pato Pascual, and a number of new Disney creations will appear against the Mexican background.

The RKO sales department has not yet completed plans for the United States' release of "Saludos." It is understood, however, that it will be issued as a full length feature following the run of "Bambi."

"Saludos" will be shown under its Portuguese title of "Alo Amigos," in Brazil. The deal, closed by Bruno Cheli, RKO's Brazil manager, provides for a guaranteed two-week opening run at the five theatres with increased admission prices.

Poller Named Aide to Mochrie at RKO

Mike Poller last week was promoted from the head of the playdate department of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., to assistant to Robert Mochrie, general sales manager. The promotion was made by Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio.

Poller has been with RKO Radio for 13 years, having joined the theatre department in 1929, doing film booking and buying. He later transferred to distribution. In 1937 he assumed charge of the playdate department.

Picker Given Post at Columbia Studio

Leonard Picker, who has been in the legal department of Columbia Pictures Corporation since 1932, left New York on Tuesday to become assistant to B. B. Kahane at the Columbia studio in Hollywood.

Associates at the Columbia home office gave Mr. Picker a farewell luncheon at Gallagher's on Monday, with more than 50 persons in attendance.

Washer on Army Show

Ben Washer, formerly publicity representative in the East for Samuel Goldwyn, now a private in the Army, has been assigned to the Army show, "This Is the Army," now at the Broadway theatre, New York. Hal B. Wallis held conferences in New York this week with Irving Berlin on plans for filming the Army show for Warner release.

Treasury Honors Miss Dietrich

Marlene Dietrich was termed the nation's leading seller of War Bonds in a special citation Tuesday from the Treasury Department. In Hollywood a Treasury agent announced Miss Dietrich had sold more than any other single person. Trailing Miss Dietrich were Rosalind Russell, Linda Darnell and Dorothy Lamour.

EXHIBITORS IN BRITAIN BESET BY WAR TIME PROBLEMS

Quota, Sunday Bookings, Staff Depletions Among Operating Difficulties

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

From all points of the summer season compass, exhibitors here with the mantle of worry worn by all in a war afflicted land already upon their shoulders, are finding further missiles hurled into their commercial and political camp. Trade still is far above the pre-war average, with no immediate suggestion that the market will depreciate.

But the picture houses are finding difficulties in obtaining British product and thus fulfilling their quota obligations; a determined bid among the distributors to cash in on the improved Sunday trade; politicians and propagandists seeking Government intervention because they are not giving away their entertainment to the armed forces; their staffs, despite Government promises and instructions, being depleted and drained, and themselves called upon to take drastic action to economize in the use of light and power.

Headaches Vary In Degree

Such headaches vary in their bitterness. Some will pass, others are likely to remain. The likelihood is that pressure upon the appropriate Government quarters may ease the labor situation by having the labor exchanges called to heel, and the Ministry itself persuaded to take a more serious view of the role of the cinema. Despite the dexterous and determined maneuvers of the Kinematograph Renters Society, there would seem no assurance that any notable change will be made in the present Sunday films policy.

The shortage of British product, despite the campaigning and protestations of the Cinematographic Exhibitors Association, hardly is likely to be eased, although it is possible the attitude of the Board of Trade may be lenient. On the more immediate question of fuel economy exhibitors have got to draw in their horns, have in fact already been given instruction by their headquarters in how to do this.

The distributor group, maintaining an eye, in which the observer would be blind not to perceive the green of jealousy, on the business currently done by the picture houses on Sundays, are relentless in their efforts to make the most out of this, to alter the now established policy of showing inexpensive, out-dated, or poor quality films on Sunday, for one under which up-to-date commercial features would be shown, out of which both exhibitor and renter would derive a reasonable revenue—which, they contend, under the present system the latter does not.

Efforts have been made (as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD) to persuade the exhibitor by various means to abandon this policy of the cheapest possible films to obtain the largest possible public. It has taken the form now of a campaign to abolish one-day bookings and where possible have programs booked on a seven-day basis. Since the circuits are notably the main obstacle, particular efforts in recent days have been devoted to persuading, not the booking managers, but the "High Panjandrums," managing directors and chairmen of the groups, to reconsider their trading policy. Talks have not been finally inconclusive. They have not, on the other hand, been fruitful.

Associated British, largest of the British groups, have listened to the proposals of the KRS that seven-day bookings be given a trial, and heard the plea that the present policy is not only unfair to the public but also uneconomic in its need for extra labor and machinery. Although the Associated British organization already has tried seven-day bookings and found them unsuccessful, the KRS suggestion that they should be tried again for appropriate films was not dismissed.

Ask Assurance on Quota Defaults

Less easy was the path of the KRS casuists with Arthur Rank of Gaumont-British and Odeon. There the adamantine and pugnacious attitude of Commander Arthur Jarratt, G-B's booking chief, influenced the proceedings with argument meant to plead the case that the KRS could not be trusted, and that if seven-day bookings were to be conceded, even experimentally, they would be imposed for all time. G-B, too, has tried seven-day bookings and found them unsuccessful, claiming they mean that one of the seven days loses all its value as a trading day.

With Jarratt set against the distributor plan, and antipathy within Associated British—and probably in Odeon—it is not likely that the KRS will score a tactical victory. Even if they did with the circuits, it is dubious whether the independents could be persuaded to alter what they still find is a profitable procedure.

Efforts still are being made by the CEA to get some assurance that exhibitors will not be penalized for failing to meet their quota obligations. The impending prosecution of 85 out of 1,200 defaulters is not regarded as a sign of leniency.

More urgent, however, is the aspect of the situation in its relation to product. From the last year's registrations they had only 46 films from which to draw, a poor total for 4,700 cinemas, of which probably approximately 1,000 are circuit-controlled. This year, in the first quarter, only nine films have been registered, and Dr. Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, has stated in the Commons he cannot guarantee that the studio and personnel figure, by which these were achieved, will be maintained as a war time minimum.

Even in the showing of pictures, whether they are British or foreign, on a Sunday or during the week, the exhibitor ever has looming before him the contradictory and unsatisfying shadow of the Ministry of Labor.

The blanket on the younger women projectionists has been raised and the danger is imminent that girls now trained to replace men already called to the armed forces will be swept into the factories. Efforts are being made to obtain the intervention of the Board of Trade in altering the attitude of Ernest Bevin. But the position of the exhibitor as an employer is not an envious one, or one in which stability is a discernible factor.

Fuel Economy Need Affects Theatres

Currently, too, from various points of the compass, from Parliament and elsewhere, have come suggestions that soldiers, sailors and airmen should be admitted free, that they should be charged the lowest possible prices for the highest priced seats, and, most recently, complaints that prices in the houses in the West End of London are far above the means of the boys and girls in uniform. Allegations of profiteering and piracy, requests that the Government take action, suggestions of price control have been made. But, so far, let it be recorded, they have been cold-shouldered by Government spokesmen.

Now comes the need for strict economies in fuel, to synchronize with the Government's fuel economy campaign, and the misty shadow of fuel rationing. CEA maneuvering in this regard has been clever, and, avoiding the imposition of official regulations, a voluntary code of rules has been set up by the exhibitors' association and is to be observed strictly by British picture houses.

Under the new code:

All proscenium and attendant lighting comes to an end.

Full lighting of auditoriums will be abbreviated, and the total wattage used will be cut to 50 per cent of pre war. Every other lamp will be removed.

Cleaning light and vacuum cleaner power will be economized.

Save for safety lighting, foyer and vestibule lamps will be out during daylight.

Advertising lighting is to be eliminated.

FILMS COUNCIL URGES AID FOR INDUSTRY

The British Films Council sounded an urgent call for immediate measures to preserve a nucleus of British production, in its annual report, issued last week in London. Reviewing its third year of activity, the Council asked that the Government consider it essential to provide a sound economic basis for commercial production. Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, in presenting the report to Parliament, said it is the Government's policy to preserve the industry, and disagreed with the gloomy picture of the future presented by the Council.

Entertainment Films As Propaganda

A straw in the wind of war time motion picture production blew into town with a promise from the Ministry of Information's Films Division that it now would give its blessing and practical support to purely entertainment films and not merely the war variety. In short, the ministry, no less keen on propaganda than ever, presumably, considers that there is propaganda value in films of quality. They may be comedies, historical dramas or romances. They need not refer to the war in any way. If they are films of quality and do not distort or injure the prestige and character of Britain and her allies, they will find the Films Division pulling in the team.

The decision is a significant one. It points the way to British producers who hitherto justifiably had believed they would have the Ministry's backing only on purely war propaganda films. It follows, too, the increasing tendency on the part of the public—and of the more sagacious industry men—to go very warily on war films.

The help which the Ministry will afford presumably will take the form of assistance in general benison and no less materially in helping the release of men and studios for the physical processes of production.

Films Division States Policy

A statement of policy was made by Films Division chief Jack Beddington—who these days sits in on the meetings of the British Film Production Association—at last week's meeting of that body. On the Association there are producers who are known to be fearful that war films are reaching the saturation point. Among these are C. M. Woolf, head of General Films Distributors, and Fillipo Del Giudice of Two Cities Films, who is intent these days on putting Britain and her character on to the screens of the world.

In a statement issued after the meeting it was made clear that the Films Division was now all for a balance to be preserved between war and non-war propaganda films.

"The Ministry indicated its willingness to support all types of pictures, including entertainment of a dramatic or comedy kind, provided these were of the highest quality and neither maudlin, morbid nor purely nostalgic for the old ways and old days.

"Its special support would be given to realistic films of everyday life dealing with events not directly about the war but featuring events in factories, factory hostels, workshops, mines and on the land, and to other serious films dealing with historical and dramatic themes, provided they showed the positive virtues of national British characteristics and the democratic way of life. These films can be first-rate as prestige propaganda, and for morale, and need not lack box office value.

"As in the past, first class war subjects realistically treated would be supported. It would be against the national interest for these to cease or suffer in quality. But the Films Division would be less favourable towards B class war pictures, and A pictures inspired by mere sensationalism, even if little or no cooperation was required from the services.

"An exception to the above are comedies of various sorts and settings. It will be understood that taste in handling this type of film is particularly important."

It is too early for any tangible effects of this pronunciamento to have been felt on British production. It is not surprising that the spirit of war still hovers over the conference rooms of the domestic studios. War films more or less—probably more rather than less—still hold floors at Denham, Ealing and Teddington. None the less there is a discernible trend towards motion pictures of less bellicose and blatantly propagandist flavour.

At Shepherds Bush, for instance, Maurice Ostrer, production chief, has followed one sheer comedy with another even sheerer, a screen adaptation of one of British radio's most popular programmes, "It's That Man Again" in which comedian Tommy Handley, as Mayor of Foaming-at-the-Mouth, and many of the radio cast, are being directed by Walter Forde.

Comedy Is Theme of Many Pictures

Comedy reigns, too, at Elstree, where wisecracking Jewish comedian Max Miller is at work for British National, complete with an elephant which plays the harmonica in "Asking for Trouble." It reigns also at the Riverside Studios, with Frank Randle, Enoch Ramsbottom, and (Mr. Lovejoy) Harry Korris—comedians of another BBC bullseye, "Happidrome" at work under the banner of Mancunian, for release by Butchers, and with John Blakely directing. Verity Films, hitherto producers of shorts exclusively, also have embarked on a feature comedy based on Frederick Lonsdale's play, "On Approval."

Other productions of a completely pacific nature are on the accredited blueprints of other British producers. Two Cities have De Grunwald's "This Demi Paradise" for forthcoming production. The same company's programme also includes some Noel Coward prospects which will not necessarily be war subjects. Gainsborough plan other comedies. Paul Soskin's next will be "Dear Octopus" by Dodie Smith. Ealing's schedules, although mainly rich in documentary or documentary drama, also provide for subjects which might be classified loosely as "escapist," among them the Will Hay comedies. The abandonment of some war subjects and their replacement by other entertainment films of the quality and realistic flavour favoured by the M.O.I. are already under consideration.

War Services Are Being Dramatized

Nevertheless, these prospects apart, Concanen-Two Cities' film on women in khaki, "We're Not Weeping," which Leslie Howard now is jointly directing, is still in full flight with scenes being shot in a genuine dyed-in-the-khaki A.T.S. camp. At Denham the Powell-Pressburger opus in all the glories of war time colour, "Colonel Blimp," is on the floor. Elsewhere in the same studios, RKO Radio's current production, with a distinctly war atmosphere, Archers Production's "The Silver Fleet" is in an advanced stage of shooting. Teddington has George King's "Tomorrow We Live" which has a Fighting France flavour, and Ealing is at work on "The Bells Go Down" which dramatises the work of the war time Fire Service.

The immediate trade show prospect has a majority of war films for presentation. There remain those war films already in production. No pronunciamento by the Ministry of Information is likely to alter the plans of Ealing Studios, whose programmes of war documentaries have been outlined in these pages. Gainsborough's schedule contains some subjects which are of such obvious box office appeal that they are not likely to be abandoned.

The war film certainly is not going to be obliterated by the current discussions. None the less it is certain that the MOI policy, taken with the lesson of the box office, will have some influence upon the trend of production in the future. Nothing in war is static, and motion picture production is no exception. Some experimenting with the character and nature of entertainment films is inevitable. The box office will be the arbiter.

Rosener to Distribute "Earth" on West Coast

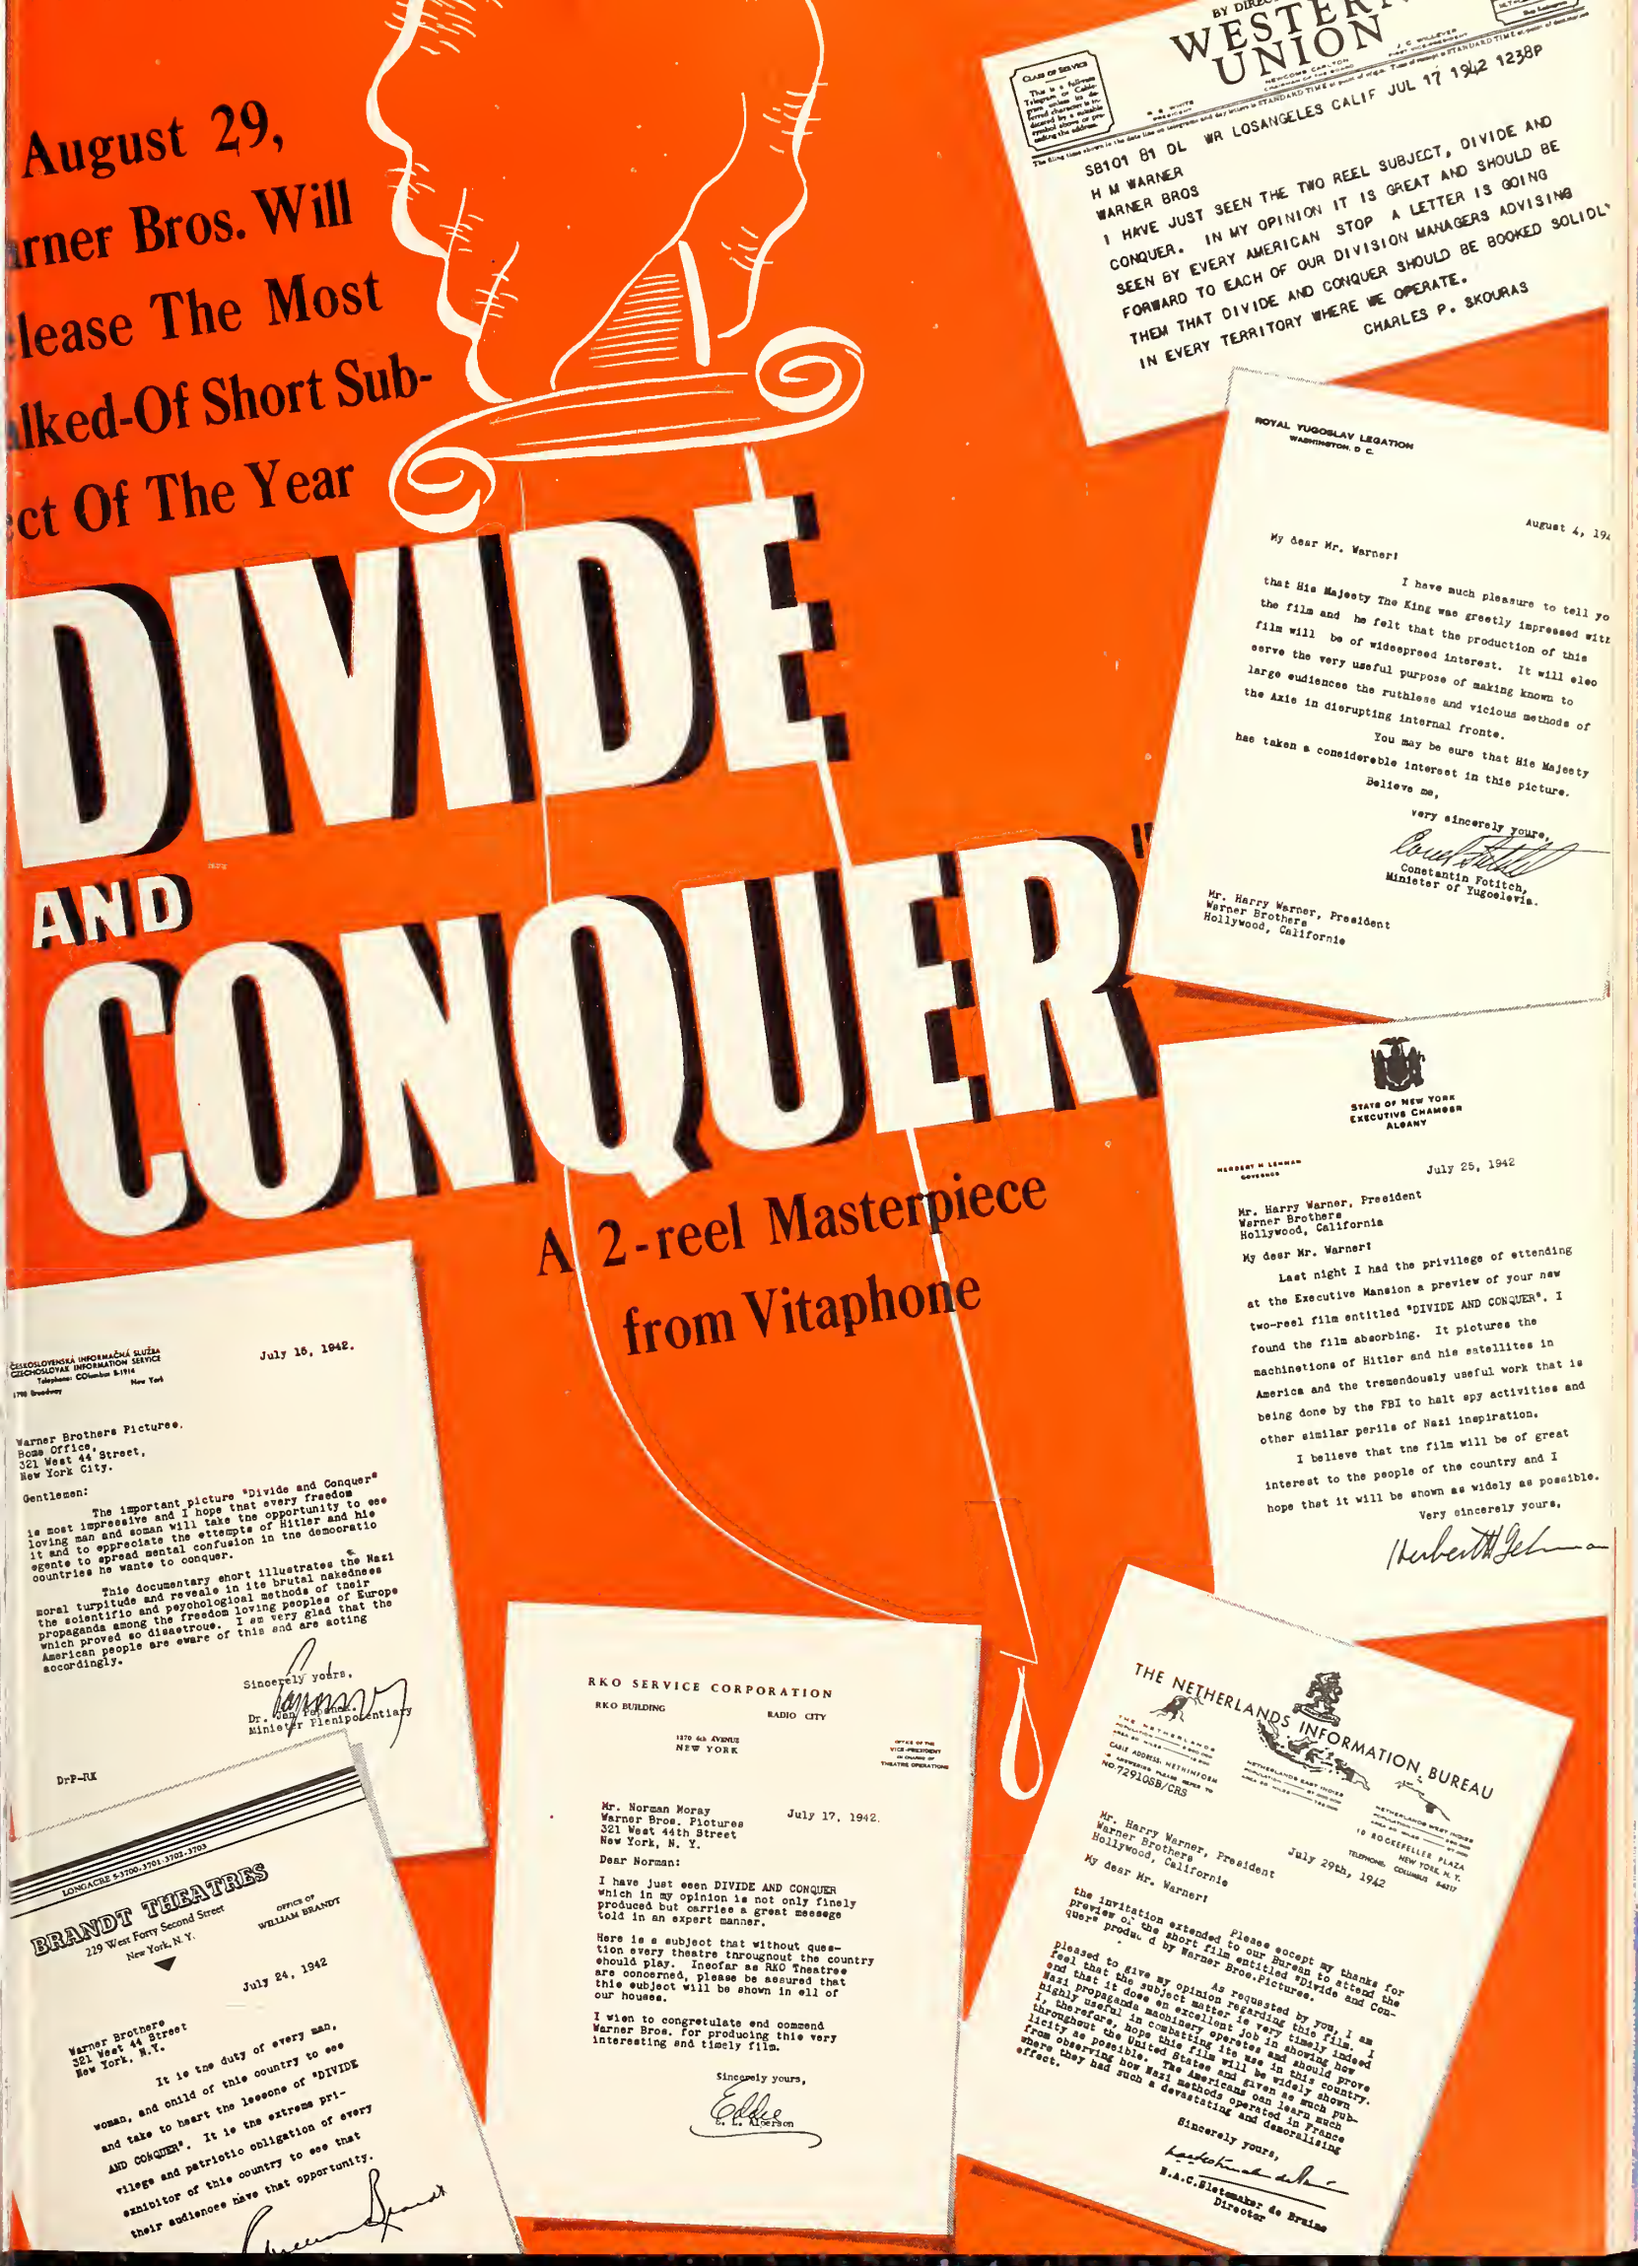
Herbert Rosener Company will distribute on the Pacific coast the film "Ravaged Earth," Mark L. Moody's picture record of Japanese atrocities, which is now in its seventh week at the Esquire and Grand theatres in Hollywood.

The film was to have opened next in San Francisco, on Friday, at the Clay and Larkin theatres. The film will be shown in other key cities on a roadshow basis, it was said.

Milder Back to London

Max Milder, managing director for Warner Bros. in Great Britain, returned to his London headquarters early this week. He has been in this country for the past month on a vacation visit and to confer with H. M. Warner and other company executives.

Joins Public Relations Unit



Lance Heath, formerly acting publicity director at the Columbia Pictures studio, has joined the west coast Public Relations Committee as assistant to Arch Reeve, secretary.

Korda Buys "Thirteen"

Sir Alexander Korda has purchased from Artkino, Russian distribution agency, the American remake rights to "The Thirteen," Soviet film.

Gable in Air Force

Clark Gable has enlisted as a private in the machine gun corps of the Army Air Force. He has left for Miami to begin his training.

My dear Mr. Warner:
I have much pleasure to tell yo that His Majesty The King was greatly impressed with the film and he felt that the production of this film will be of widespread interest. It will also serve the very useful purpose of making known to large audiences the ruthless and vicious methods of

My dear Mr. Warner:
Last night I had the privilege of attending at the Executive Mansion a preview of your new two-reel film entitled "DIVIDE AND CONQUER". I found the film absorbing. It pictures the machinations of Hitler and his satellites in America and the tremendously useful work that is being done by the FBI to halt spy activities and other similar perils of Nazi inspiration.
I believe that the film will be of great interest to the people of the country and I hope that it will be shown as widely as possible.
Very sincerely yours,

Gentlemen:
The important picture "Divide and Conquer" is most impressive and I hope that every freedom loving man and woman will take the opportunity to see it and to appreciate the attempts of Hitler and his agents to spread mental confusion in the democratic countries he wants to conquer.
This documentary short illustrates the Nazi moral turpitude and reveals in its brutal nakedness the scientific and psychological methods of their propaganda among the freedom loving peoples of Europe which proved so disastrous. I am very glad that the American people are aware of this and are acting accordingly.

Dear Norman:
I have just seen DIVIDE AND CONQUER which in my opinion is not only finely produced but carries a great message told in an expert manner.
Here is a subject that without question every theatre throughout the country should play. Insofar as RKO Theatres are concerned, please be assured that this subject will be shown in all of our houses.
I wish to congratulate and commend Warner Bros. for producing this very interesting and timely film.

Nazi propaganda and subversive activities can be much highly useful in combatting its use in this country.
I, therefore, hope this film will be widely shown

RELIEF IN SPECIFIC RUN CASE UPHELD BY APPEAL BOARD

Affirms Award in Detroit; Exception Cites Contractual Relation

Ruling on a specific run complaint for the first time, the Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration system this week upheld the relief granted to Erving A. Moss, operator of the Parkside theatre, Detroit, with but a single exception.

The board affirmed the award by Wilbur H. Brucker, former Governor of Michigan, which directed the five consenting distributors to license the fifth run requested by the Parkside to the competing Aloma, Admiral, Rivola and Alger theatres, circuit houses only by separate contract.

An exception was made in the appeal opinion, however, for the contractual relations between Paramount and the Alger theatre, operated by the United Detroit Theatres Corporation. These two intervenors in the original action, Detroit's sixth case, carried it to the Appeal Board.

The three judges of the Appeal Board, Van Vechten Veeder, Albert W. Putnam and George W. Alger, found that the Alger was a Paramount affiliate within the meaning of Section XVII of the consent decree. they found that the Alger was part of the United Detroit circuit whose stock is wholly owned by Paramount.

Cites Decision in Dickinson Case

The board cited its decision (No. 27) in the Dickinson case which held that Section XVII clearly withdrew from the operation of Section VIII, the clearance clause, a distributor's right to arrange for the exhibition of its pictures in theatres affiliated with it. Although the Detroit case dealt with run, it wrote, "so far as the protection of Section XVII is concerned there is no distinction between the two."

"A distributor authorized by virtue of Section XVII, to license its pictures to theatres affiliated with it upon such terms and subject to such conditions as may be satisfactory to it, may grant to its affiliated theatres such protection by way of run as may be satisfactory to it," the judges ruled.

The arbitrator's finding that the affiliate section did not apply in the Detroit case was based on a mistaken conception of the fifth Appeal decision in the Earle theatre case, the board said. It added that "there is no question of exclusive run in this case."

The Parkside decision also held that membership by the Aloma, Admiral and Rivola theatres in the buying and booking organization of Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., gave them the status of circuit theatres within the meaning of Section X which specifies membership in a circuit of not less than 15 theatres.

The board affirmed the arbitrator's findings of fact on all of the six conditions imposed by Section X, and wrote, "In our opinion the award is fully supported by the record, with the sole exception of the issue raised by Paramount under Section XVII."

The appeal board Wednesday reversed the dismissal of Buffalo's tenth case by William E. Barrett and ordered the five distributors to reduce to seven days the clearance granted to the Schine Capitol Theatre, Newark, N. Y., over Caroline Perriello's Playhouse in Clyde, N. Y. They also granted the intevenor Ohman Brothers in Lyons, N. Y., the same seven day maximum to preserve its equality with the Playhouse.

The board found that until several years ago complainant and intervenor had received "open booking" seven days after Newark. "There is no explanation given by the defendants for the extraordinary increase from seven to 30 days from 1939-40, the board said, concluding that seven days was reasonable clearance between Newark and the two theatres and should be restored." Costs were divided equally.

Albany

Former New York Supreme Court judge Joseph Rosch, arbitrator in Albany, cut the clearance enjoyed by the Colonial Theatre, Norwich, a Schine circuit house, to three days over Smalley's theatre, Sidney. Previously, the clearance was 14 days.

Three similar clearance cases have been filed by Smalley Theatres against the "big five," all of them involving clearance held by Schine theatres over competitive Smalley houses. Hearings on all three are to start in Albany next week.

Chicago

An award has been rendered in the Times theatre, Danville, Ill., clearance case against the five consenting companies, by Wilbur A. Griffen, arbitrator.

Paramount was dismissed from the case under Section XVII of the Consent Decree as an affiliated distributor and the clearances granted the Fischer, Palace and Lincoln theatres found not unreasonable. The clearance granted the Tivoli theatre over the Times was judged as unreasonable with the arbitrator finding that the Tivoli did not play its pictures promptly. The Times sometimes had to wait as long as 175 days after first run before it could play certain pictures.

The Tivoli, a second and third run house, was ordered to play closer to availability so that the Times theatre would have films not later than 88 days after first run and 42 days after second runs.

Detroit

The Michigan theatre, Flint, Mich., filed Detroit's tenth case Friday when it named Paramount, Warners, Twentieth Century-Fox and MGM in a clearance action. It charged that clearances of 74 days to first runs and 14 days to second runs in Flint granted by the first three named distributors were unreasonable. It also attacked MGM clearances of 67 days to first runs and 7 days to seconds.

Boston

Currie and Harmon, Inc., operators of the Darlton theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., settled their clearance action against All Five and first and subsequent run houses in Providence and Pawtucket on Thursday with a consent award. George E. Gordon, arbitrator, signed it. The case was Boston's twelfth.

The case against Paramount was withdrawn.

Minneapolis

A clearance demand by Abraham and Louis Engler, operating the Royal and Hopkins theatres in Hopkins, Minn., filed August 5th, attacked the clearances granted the Minnesota Amusement Company and all Minneapolis first runs by MGM, Warners, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox.

St. Louis

Describing the St. Louis clearance system as "chaotic" but insisting he was powerless under the decree to remedy it, Kenneth Teasdale, arbitrator, on Tuesday dismissed the clearance complaint of Adolph Rosecan, owner of the Princess, south St. Louis subsequent house. Warners, Paramount, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox were defendants in the city's ninth case.

Mr. Teasdale held that the clearance between the Princess and the Wehrenberg-Kaimann Cinderella theatre and the St. Louis Amusement Company's Gravios was not unreasonable, but added, "Complainant is victimized by the loose and flexible system now in operation." Mr. Teasdale suggested a rearrangement of clearance by "some sort of an administrative commission which would make a citywide survey and arrive at conclusions sound and fair for the entire area."

CHANGE COMPLAINANT IN MIDDLE OF CASE

A St. Louis arbitrator, Harry G. Erbs, has permitted a switch in complainants in the 12th St. Louis case. It happened when E. R. Gillette sold his Stadium theatre, in Carruthersville, Mo., to Gregory Carey on July 23rd. Mr. Erbs granted a request to amend the Stadium's some run complaint against MGM by substituting Mr. Carey's name as owner.

Mr. Carey appeared at the hearing to testify that all other companies offered him a run at prices much lower than MGM and to assert that that company had set an exorbitant price in its offer. John X. Quinn, Loew branch manager, corroborated a letter stating MGM terms and Mr. Erbs took the case under advisement.

INDUSTRY IS READY TO ROLL ON WAR BONDS CAMPAIGN

Morgenthau to open Drive at Capitol on Aug. 31st; hope for $300,000,000

Nationwide mobilization of all the facilities and talent of the motion picture industry for the War Bond drive to be conducted through September, "Salute Our Heroes" month was nearly completed this week. Far-reaching plans already laid include provision for the "Stars Over America" tours which will cover 300 cities; premiere rallies in Washington, New York and Hollywood to launch the drive; parades and rallies in all cities through the month; national and local radio broadcasts; arrangements by circuits and local committees for tieups with department stores, other retailers and factories, and mobilization of all film salesmen to handle War Bond sales in the higher brackets.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry W. Morgenthau will open the drive officially on the steps of the Capitol in Washington on August 31st. The ceremony will be part of a great demonstration with the stars of several eastern War Bond tours participating. Another premiere will be staged in Hollywood on the same day and other ceremonies, all in conjunction with the start of the tours, will be held in San Francisco, Fresno, Dallas, Chicago, Chattanooga, Philadelphia and New York. All are planned as explosion points for the drive opening.

Estimate 60,000,000 Reached by Tours

An estimated 60,000,000 persons will be reached by the "Stars Over America" tour in which Hollywood players will lead rallies in 300 cities and towns, all one-night stands. The routes were arranged by Carlton Duffus and Gordon White of the Treasury staff in Washington and have been approved by the Hollywood Victory Committee. Communities which have had recent star rallies will not be revisted but many of the smaller centers will be, particularly the towns and villages where no star ever has made a personal appearance.

Seven studio publicity men have volunteered as advance men and seven others will tour with the stars. Approximately 200 field exploitation men have been placed at the disposal of S. Charles Einfield, field director of the tours by advertising and publicity directors constituting the Eastern Public Relations Committee. David Lipton and Earl Wingart have been appointed to direct this phase of the work.

11 Industry Figures Donate Their Time

This week 11 representative industry figures volunteered to devote all of their time, beginning immediately, as exhibitor liaisons in all parts of the country. The men, and the territories assigned them after conferences in New York with George J. Schaefer, War Activities Committee chairman, are:

Claude Lee, assigned to Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Louisiana and Mississippi; Leslie E. Thompson, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut; H. M. Richey, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and West Virginia; Jules Rubens, Illinois and Indiana; P. J. Wood, Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan; David Palfreyman, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado; Ed Grainger, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and western Pennsylvania; John Payette, District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland and eastern Pennsylvania; H. A. Cole, Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas and Oklahoma; David Bershon, California, Nevada and Arizona, and J. M. Hone, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Utah.

The group will be special assistants to Si Fabian, campaign director, and will cooperate with state chairmen, Treasury Department administrators and all exhibitor groups. They will assist local committees and will give special attention to centers where star tours will touch.

Oscar Doob, publicity director of the campaign, said this week it was hoped that the 300 star rallies would average sales of $1,000,000 each, a total of $300,000,000.

The strictly non-commercial nature of the "Stars Over America" tours is emphasized in a bulletin issued by the Treasury Department and made a part of the instructions given advance men on the tours.

The War Activities Committee this week reported that the full cooperation of every general sales manager had been offered for the mobilization of sales staffs as War Bond salesmen. A quota of $10,000,000 has been set for the salesmen, who will negotiate sales of the War Bonds of the F and G series up to $100,000. Treasury men will cooperate with the salesmen in closing the deals.

This lithographed one-sheet in red, white and blue, prepared by the War Activities Committee for the September Bond drive, is available in any quantity at five cents each through National Screen Accessories. The same design, in 11 by 14 size, is available at four cents each.

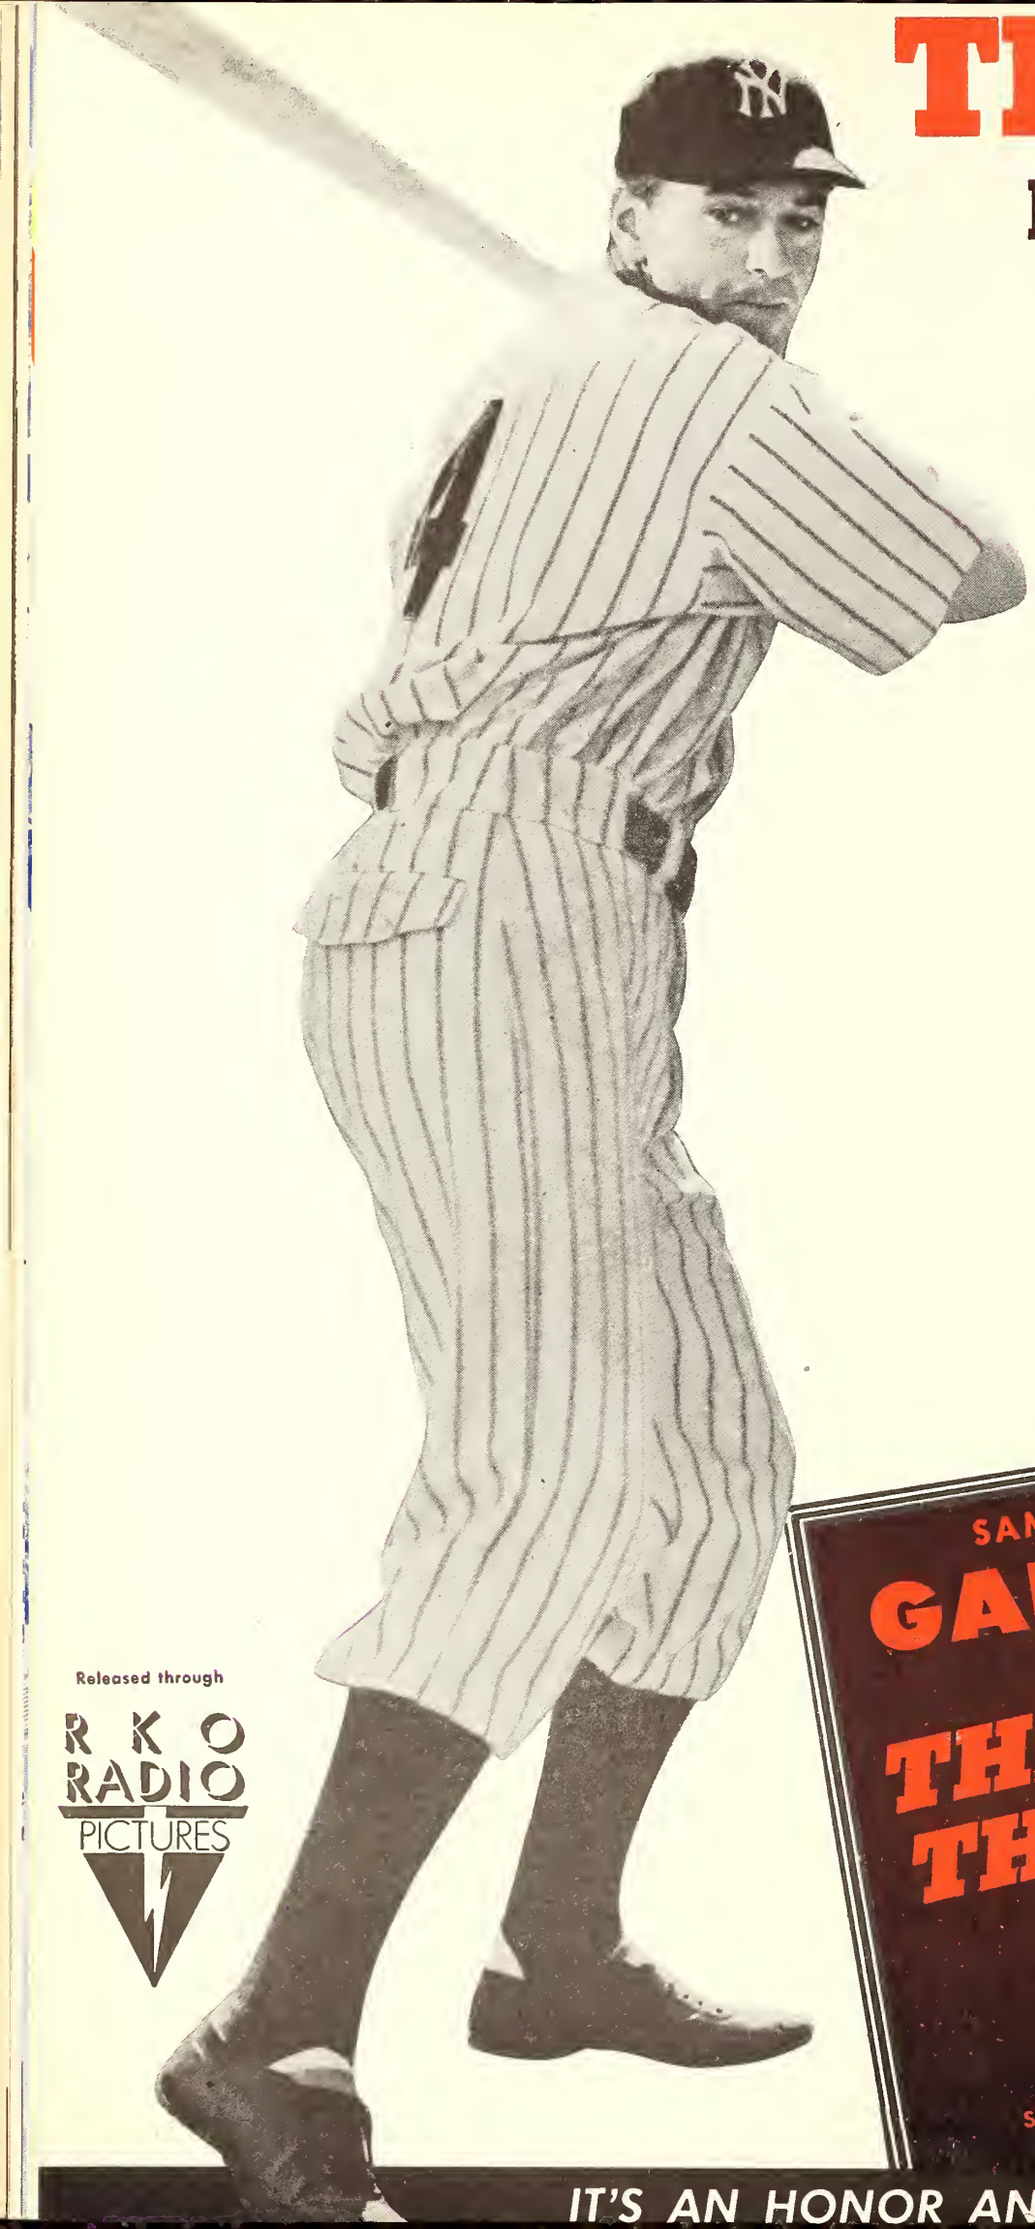
"Commando" Group Has Quota of $33,000,000

A "$33,000,000 Commando Committee" was announced this week as one of the special volunteer groups working in the War Bond campaign. Each member of the committee has pledged himself to sell from $500,000 to $2,000,000 worth of War Bonds before September 1st. The committee includes executives, stars and circuit heads.

Because of the concentration of corporate headquarters of film companies in New York, Mr. Schaefer, handling the Commando task force for Mr. Fabian, campaign director, has recruited a special New York committee, including:

Stanton Griffis, Nicholas M. Schenck, Adolph Zukor, Peter Rathvon, H. G. Place, Spyros Skouras, Charles Skouras, Barney Balaban, Jack Cohn, H. J. Yates, Jules Brulatour, Herman Robbins, Will Hays and Ed Raftery, with Joseph Hazen as New York chairman.

Another special committee is being formed in Hollywood to tap that reservoir. Henry Ginsberg, of the Motion Picture Committee of Hollywood, is recruiting studio executives, stars and others to sell a large part of the $33,000,000 quota.



In addition, a field force of Commandos has been named from among the following leading theatre owners from coast to coast: A. H. Blank, Des Moines; Arch Bowles, San Francisco; Harold Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; John Balaban, Chicago; John Friedl, Minneapolis; Ben L. Heidingsfeld, Cincinnati; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Earl Hudson, Detroit; Ike Libson, Cincinnati; Frank Newman, Seattle; R. J. O'Donnell, Dallas; Sam Pinanski, Boston; Elmer Rhoden, Kansas City; E. V. Richards, New Orleans; Rick Ricketson, Denver; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Charles Skouras, Los Angeles; Robert Wilby, Atlanta.

Bond Premiere for "Dandy" on Coast

Following the precedent set for the New York opening at Warners' "Yankee Doodle Dandy" at which War Bonds were the price of admission with the house scaled up to $25,000, a similar sale was held for the opening of the picture at the Hollywood theatre, Hollywood, Wednesday night. Bond sales in connection with the premiere were expected to exceed $5,000,000.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Two typical Broadway vaudeville booking agents entered the elevator in our RKO Building publishing headquarters, at Rockefeller Center, the other mid-morning, both obviously dejected over the trials and tribulations of their lot. "Yeah," said one, "and you think you have troubles. "Here I work and stew and fret to get a booking for—actor's name deleted—and when I rush over to tell the big ham that he finally has a date at an RKO house, what do I find? What DO I find?" screamed the agent. "I find that he is working at the Fairchild factory on Long Island, making airplanes for the war."

"Speaking of flyers," writes W. Varick Nevine, III, exhibitor of Alfred, New York, "maybe you could help me out." I am both the manager and the projectionist in the theatre. Now, what I want to know is this: Just what are my duties in an air-raid warning?"

For more than two years, the fate in Europe of Felix Salten, author—including the authorship of "Bambi"—has been a mystery, ever since the Hitlerites destroyed all the Salten books they could get their hands on. They pouted that Salten's stories of tenderness toward animals and lessons in compassion were "enervating to German youth." Felix Salten finally was heard from on Monday, by way of a cable to Walt Disney, from Zurich, Switzerland. Said he had heard that Disney had made his "Bambi" book into a motion picture and would like to see it, but will probably have to wait until after the war.

What the average American soldier thinks of the war is very important to the British, according to a letter from a former National Theatre employee, now "somewhere in England," to W. E. Green, President of National. The letter, on the new "V-mail" photographic form, was written by Lieutenant E. B. Conklin, Jr., and emphasized the "wonderful treatment" accorded to American soldiers by British citizens. However, people in England, said Conklin, are still somewhat confused by pictures of American cowboys and gangsters who they see in U. S. movies and are inclined to believe that most cities in the United States are teeming with such characters. Which is an old story.

The penetrating power of its trade advertising, says National Supply Company, seems most unusual. Last week National's publicity department received a request for the company's booklet on theatre equipment conservation from an inmate of Auburn State Prison at Auburn, New York.

IN THE LAND OF JIVE AND JULEPS

Adolph Hitler and his Nazi hordes may have moved in and taken over the Holland of Europe, for a while, but Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reminds that right now the spirit of the Dutch prevails, and that there's a Holland, U. S. A., which is the theme of Metro's new "Seven Sweethearts" feature picture, and which is introduced on the screen by the following little rhyme:

To this great land
Of Jive and Juleps
The Dutch once came
To plant their tulips . . .

They grit their teeth,
Pulled in their belts,
Produced New York—
And the Roosevelts . . .

Enriched this best
Of melting pots
With their traditions,
Towns and tots . . .

Behold!
In Michigan today
There's still a Holland,
U. S. A.

A town that flaunts
Its windmill touch.
To prove you just Can't beat the Dutch.

A CINCINNATI film exchange man who asks—discreetly—that his name be withheld, passes on the following, although he claims that otherwise he is perfectly normal:

It always has been a puzzle to me
What sailors sow when they plow the sea.
What was it that made the window blind?
Whose picture is put in the frame of mind?
When a storm is brewing, what does it brew?
Does the foot of a mountain wear a shoe?
Can a drink be gotten from the tap on the door?
Does the edge of the water cut the shore?
How long does it take to hatch a plot?
Has a school of herring a tutor or not?
To a king who reigns, why shout, "O, Hail!"
With a powder puff is one's mind made up?
Does a saucer go with misery's cup?
Can you fasten a door with a lock of hair?
Did a biting wind ever bite you, and where?
Who is it that paints the signs of the times?
Does the moon change her quarters for nickels and dimes?
What tune do you play on the feelings, pray?
And who is that mends the break of day?
And say—I'll admit this is quite absurd,
When you drop a remark, do you break your word?
Can a rope be made out of ocean strands?
Have the silent watchs of midnight, hands?
Can money be tight when change is loose?
Now, come, you wiseacres, what is the use
Of going through college and taking degrees
When we're posed by such plain, little problems as these.

Mrs. Eleanore Coolidge Walton, head of the movie censoring board at Kansas City, ordered deletion of thirty feet in a film which showed native girls doing an "energetic" hula dance.

The theatre manager, unnamed by Associated Press flashing the word around the world, called Mrs. Walton and protested: "Those hula dancers only shake a little."

"That's correct," retorted the censor, laconically, "They shake a little too much."

Clarksdale's George Best recently received a letter from Willie and it asked him to go to the next movie Step'n Fetchit played in at Clarksdale, to see if the elder Best recognized anybody. "That's my son all right," George said. The letter, by the way, also included a little check for the ol' man.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

Einfeld Sets Plans For War Bond Tour

He didn't know it at the time, but when S. Charles Einfeld took a trainload of players and press people to Weaverville, Cal. back there in the peaceful winter of 1937, to stage a publicity screening of Warners' "Gold Is Where You Find It" and thus establish the site-premiere as an institution of exploitation, he was starting his training for the field directorship of the industry's War Bond Campaign which gets rolling, a billion dollars worth, on September 1st.

Between the date of that trial trek and now the resourceful Mr. Einfeld has transported trainloads, planeloads and boatloads of professionals and press people hither and yon about the nation with nary a slip-up, notably inclusive of all-out expeditions to Virginia City for "Virginia City," to Dodge City for "Dodge City," to many another point on the map caught up with by Warner cameras and, most notably, to San Francisco via the high seas aboard the S. S. America for "The Sea Wolf."

Field Director Einfeld is one man, not seven, although his works often make him seem more than that, and he can't personally accompany and conduct the seven tours which will take seven groups of players via seven routes to some 300 cities during September, so he's boiled his experience in such matters down to a set of 12 rules.

List of Rules Governing Player Appearances

Here they are:

1. They (the players) will appear at stamp booths in theatre lobbies or in public squares (such as the Victory House, in downtown Los Angeles, where War Bonds are steadily on sale under officially approved conditions).
2. They will appear at public rallies, civic club luncheons and, most particularly, at factories, to boost payroll savings plans.
3. They will appear at planned press conferences.
4. They will not appear on theatre stages.
5. They will not appear at store stamp booths.
6. They will not appear at rallies where admission is charged, except where the admission is in terms of stamps and bonds.
7. They will not appear at private parties, dinners, etc.
8. They will not appear on paid radio broadcasts.
9. They will not appear necessarily at conventions or rallies planned to coincide with the appearance of the star just to have them present as a drawing card on the strength of the fact that this will give the affair a war-savings sanction.
10. They will not make any appearances associated with any political activities or politicians.
11. They will not appear in any parades (except in important Labor Day parades).
12. They will not appear at more than three functions in any one day or in any one city.

Underlying those rules is more experience in the subject dealt with than ever has been acquired by any other man.

The seven publicity directors now advance-agenting the routes to be covered by the seven troupes of players are laying down the rules in every one of the 300 cities to be visited. The seven troupes making the tours will abide by them.

Production eases Its Pace

The production level, which has stood at 50 or better for several weeks, dipped to 42 when studios started only seven new pictures to replace 15 which wound up their occupancy of shooting stages. Twentieth Century-Fox was leading with seven films shooting, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal and Warner Brothers following with six each.

Chinese Assured Of U. S. Product

Members of the Chinese Government Film Mission, visiting Hollywood last week, were assured a steady flow of Hollywood production, made up of features, shorts and newsreels, to supply the 110 theatres still operating in China.

Dr. Wei Shaw, Kinn Wei Shaw, China National Film Corporation executives, said, "We still can operate more than one-third of the houses we had before the invasion—24 hours a day and no admission charged—and we can reach millions more through mobile projection units operating right behind the fighting lines for the Army and the always present surrounding farmers."

Urgent need of carefully selected product to instruct the population and bolster morale was expressed by the Commission, which included T. Y. Lo, Dr. T. Y. Fung, both of Chungking, Dr. Maurice Williams of New York, co-founder of the United China Relief, and Dr. Kinn.

Being in 5 Places At One Time

Dialogue overhead in a studio projection room during last week's cluster of day-and-date previewings for the press.

Reviewer A to reviewer B: How'd you like that MGM number last night?

Reviewer B: I didn't see it. I caught the Fox job. Joe covered MGM.

A: Yeah? Which one are you catching tonight?

B: Think I'll grab the MGM thing tonight, and send Joe to ——

A: Wish I could make up my mind—I'd like to see 'em both.

B: So would the exhibitors, I reckon.

A: Meaning what?

B: Meaning it's probably only coincidence or due to widespread holdovers or something, but the people who set the dates for the trade shows have sure been drifting toward a situation where the exhibitor who really wants to look at the stuff for himself will have to be in five places at the same time.

A: Probably just coincidence.

STUDIOS AWAIT DECISION OF WPB ON RAW STOCK CUTS

Industry's Plan provides Reduction Up to 20%; Cooperation marks Talks

by FRANCIS L. BURT

War Production Board officials this week had before them industry proposals for cuts running up to more than 20 per cent in the consumption of motion picture film, with indications that a decision would be forthcoming promptly.

The industry plan was submitted to the board through Harold B. Hopper, chief of its Motion Picture Section, last week at a conference in New York. The cuts proposed are aimed at meeting Mr. Hopper's warning at the advisory committee meeting in Washington, July 28th, that a curtailment of at least 20 per cent in raw stock used was imperative because of heavy and increasing military demands for film.

Formal orders are expected to be issued shortly, placing the maximum of raw stock which may be used at not more than the consumption in 1941, in line with Mr. Hopper's declarations in the past that under no circumstances could the Board permit a greater consumption.

The Board order is expected to limit both the number and footage of films, but in the most general terms, leaving it to the industry itself to allocate the available supply among the various producers.

While the Government will move formally to impose restrictions on the use of raw stock, the whole matter is being handled in the cooperative spirit which has marked the board's relations with the industry from the very start of the former's conservation program.

It was because of the whole-hearted cooperation of the industry that Board officials decided not to place restrictions on the producers individually, but to permit the industry to divide up its film supplies—a concession that has been granted no other industry, restriction orders always calling upon all producers to restrict their consumption of a controlled material by a stated percentage or to a fixed limitation.

Industry Committee Expects WPB Decision

The industry's schedule of raw stock cuts, meanwhile, awaited the WPB order, which, it was anticipated, would establish priorities for users and authorize purchase permits. This procedure would enable the WPB to distinguish between essential and non-essential commercial and amateur use.

The schedules of film savings, amounting to 180,000,000 feet of the 960,000,000 used by Hollywood last year, are expected to stand as the industry's estimate of the maximum reduction in raw stock consumption which it believes it can make safely. Based on 1941 consumption, the schedule calls for a 15 per cent reduction for all companies using up to 50,000,000 feet; 20 per cent on the next 50,000,000 feet; 25 per cent for the following 25,000,000 feet; 30 per cent for the next 25,000,000 and 35 per cent on all over 150,000,000 feet. Two companies are reported opposed to the schedule.

The problem of implementing the reductions in footage once an industry agreement is reached continues under discussion. In some companies curtailment of the number of short subjects and secondary features is contemplated. Others plan to reduce the number of prints in circulation.

WPB Bans Mercury for Film Developing

The War Production Board, tightening its control over chemicals used in photographic operations, has prohibited the use of mercury in film developing solutions. Moving to conserve stocks of mercury, the Board ordered its use abandoned in all but the most essential connections. Provision was made, however, for its use where needed for maintenance or repair of present equipment.

The distribution of soluble nitro-cellulose of four types, including that used in making film, was placed under strict control by the WPB last week. The order provides that deliveries of more than 1,000 pounds per month can be made only by special authorization. Deliveries of more than 232 and less than 1,000 pounds may be made without allocation but with a certificate to the supplier that it is to be used to fill war orders. Deliveries of less than 232 pounds per month are not restricted.

The order also provides that no deliveries of undissolved scrap film may be made without express authorization.

Executives of film manufacturing companies in New York expressed the opinion that the order would place no limitation on the manufacture of motion picture film. It has seen as an allocative rather than a restrictive order.

Gorman, Eyssell Named to WPB

Tom Gorman, RKO Theatres division manager in the Chicago area, and Gus S. Eyssell, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, have been appointed members of the Motion Pictures and Speaking Stage Theatres Industry Advisory Committee of the War Production Board. The purpose of the committee is to give advice, supply information and make recommendations to the WPB. Both new members will attend a meeting to be held under the supervision of C. J. Dunphy, presiding officer of the committee, in Washington, August 20th.

WEST COAST DIMOUT HITS NIGHT FILMING

Hollywood studios are concerned over the Army's drastic dimout order for the west coast, effective August 20th. With the restriction extending inland 150 miles at some points, night location work will become difficult and, as the order now stands, no night exterior shots may be made at the studios. Twentieth Century-Fox is contemplating the purchase of land east of the coastal area in order to erect permanent sets for night exterior shooting.

The dimout regulations prohibit all lighting for theatre marquees and outdoor night sports. Advertising signs must be extinguished after sundown. Like the east coast order, the dimout is designed to eliminate sky glow at sea.

West Coast Theatre Operations Expand

With the San Francisco Bay area teeming with war building activity, motion picture exhibitors are finding ways to get around construction priorities so as to bring their programs to a steadily-expanding audience.

Robert Lippert, who recently opened the new Studio theatre in Richmond, where three shipyards are in full swing, including that of Henry J. Kaiser, is remodeling a store building for another house. The Lark theatre at Larkspur in Marin County is being moved 10 miles to Sausalito, where another huge shipbuilding plant is being erected. Just a few weeks ago Fox West Coast Theatres opened the Fox News theatre in downtown Oakland. It is in a remodeled store building, but construction was started before priority restrictions were ordered.

Joseph Blumenfeld, operator of the Orpheum, United Artists and Esquire theatres in downtown San Francisco, has taken a long lease on the old Tivoli, and reopened it with 10 acts of vaudeville headed by Faith Bacon, Verne Buck of Chicago as master of ceremonies, an 11-piece orchestra, and single features. Emil Bondeson, former manager of Alcazar, is manager.

Wolff in New OWI Post

Nat Wolff, west coast radio liaison for the Office of War Information, has been named deputy chief of the OWI Radio Bureau, William B. Lewis, chief, announced on Monday. He will supervise all OWI radio work on the Pacific coast. George Zachary, formerly a CBS producer, was named chief of the radio bureau's production division by Mr. Lewis.

Paramount Group Set

Paramount Wednesday announced its first group of features for 1942-43. They include "Wake Island," "The Major and the Minor," "The Glass Key," "Priorities on Parade" and "Henry Aldrich, Editor." Trade screenings will be held August 27th and 28th.

U.S. extends Program of Training Films

Success of First 48 made by Office of Education resulting in Expansion

Marked expansion of the vocational training film program of the U. S. Office of Education, Washington, is being mapped out as a result of the unusual success of the 48 pictures so far made. Appropriation bills in Congress have provided a fund of $1,000,000 for the fiscal year just started.

The broad acceptance of the bureau's film courses by vocational schools and industrial establishments is indicated by the fact that during the seven months beginning December 1, 1941, when the pictures began to emerge from the laboratories, a total of almost 6,500,000 feet of 16 mm prints were sold by the distributor, Castle Films.

The pictures, sold at a flat rate of $8.47 per 400-foot reel, in the can and delivered anywhere in the United States, have met such wide acceptance that the office has been encouraged to broaden its activities to take in lines other than machine shop practice and shipbuilding, to which the first 48 films were confined, and pictures this year, while including more on those trades, will also go into airplane manufacturing operations and the making of optical glass.

Used as Supplement to Personal Instruction

Designed to be used as a supplement to personal instruction, the films have been found of sufficient value for the Army and Navy to obtain "lavenders" of each, making from 150 to 200 prints for use in their training centers, and requests for the pictures have come in from the Governments of India, Australia and other nations.

Enthusiastic over the work, Dr. C. F. Klinefelter, assistant to John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, explained this week that activities for the moment were confined to enlarging the staff to handle the the increased operations which are planned and to determining upon the number of courses to be handled. The producing companies will not be asked to submit bids on the work until all details are complete and it is known definitely just what is to be attempted and how it is to be done.

Estimate About 140 Films to Be Made

The number of pictures to be produced, he said, will depend on what is to go into each visual-aid unit, that is, whether a particular course shall consist of one film and one or two film strips, or what combination. The strips, he explained, are used where it is desired to stop movement to show in detail a particular point on which more detailed instruction is necessary.

The strips have been found so important in instruction that the office is committed to their production for all of the pictures previously made.

While, accordingly, no definite number of pictures has been arrived at, Dr. Klinefelter estimated that it would be in the neighborhood of 140, which would enable the provision of units on a number of operations in the four fields to which they are to be devoted.

The major fields of distribution aimed at by the Office of Education are the vocational schools training workers for war industries and industrial plants engaged in their own training programs. In both fields, he declared, the Government films are being found very valuable, as evidenced by the demand for prints, the price of which was fixed at a point which would enable schools and plants with limited funds to take advantage of the project.

Zinn, RCA Attorney On Board of RKO

Frank Zinn of the legal staff of the Radio Corporation of America on Monday was elected a member of the board of directors of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, succeeding Lunsford P. Yandell, who resigned recently to enter Red Cross work. Mr. Zinn will represent RCA on the board.

It was reported from Hollywood on Monday that Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures, was considering the naming of an executive producer for the studio during a visit on the coast. Mr. Depinet was at the studio with Malcolm Kingsberg and Edward Alperson, company executives.

Paramount, UA Circuits To Operate N. Y. Rivoli

United Artists circuit and Paramount Pictures on Wednesday signed a 10-year contract to operate jointly the UA Circuit's Rivoli theatre on Broadway, New York. In charge will be a committee composed of George Skouras and William Phillips of the UA Circuit, and Leon Netter and Robert Weitman, of Paramount.

Montague Salmon will manage. The deal becomes effective with the reopening of the house on September 2nd with Paramount's "Wake Island." The new Paramount Broadway show-window also will play other product. Paramount and the UA Circuit will divide profits and losses.

Seek Noon Opening

Petitions containing hundreds of signatures were submitted to Mayor James G. Stewart in Cincinnati last week requesting that the City Council pass an ordinance prohibiting all theatres in the city catering to colored patrons from opening before noon on Sundays. There are five houses in Cincinnati, with combined seating capacity of approximately 2,500, for colored patrons.

Pepperman on Gripsholm

Lewis Pepperman, United Artists manager in Tokyo, is a passenger on the Gripsholm, Swedish liner which sailed for the United States from Portuguese East Africa on July 28th with other Americans freed in an exchange agreement with the Japanese. The announcement of Mr. Pepperman's return was made by Walter Gould, foreign manager for United Artists.

Fly says Radio will not fail

Broadcasting is neither in dire straits, nor will the Government allow it to fail, James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said on Monday, denying in Washington rumors that the broadcasting industry was harrassed by shortages of men and materiel.

He added that he, the War Production Board and other agencies had discussed the situation, and that, while replacement parts were not plentiful, they would be given to the industry with Government sponsorship. Of the shortage of technical men, he noted that the War Manpower Board had recommended that certain types of radio employees be classified as workers in "essential" industry.

Mr. Fly also discussed foreign language broadcasts and taxes. Of the first, he said domestic programs were under constant scrutiny, and of the second, that the radio industry could not stand a direct levy.

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, Thurman Arnold, head of the Department of Justice Anti-Trust Division, indicated last week anti-trust actions would be filed shortly against the Radio Corporation of America, General Electric, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and other communications companies.

Schechter Leaves NBC For Post with OWI

A. A. Schechter, director of news and special events for the National Broadcasting Company since 1931, resigned last week to take a post with the Office of War Information at Washington, to which he was appointed by Elmer Davis, director. His resignation is effective August 15th. A successor has not been named as yet.

Schechter is widely known in radio for his exclusive broadcasts. He will become special assistant to Gardner Cowles, assistant director of domestic operations of the OWI, and will be assigned to the radio branch.

Cagney Offers Land

James Cagney and W. Cameron Forbes, former United States Ambassador to Japan, have turned over to the United States Army about 6,500 acres of land on the islands of Martha's Vineyard and Naushon, off Cape God, for maneuvres to be staged there. Cagney also has given the use of his summer home, Tashmoo, in West Tisbury, for quarters for staff officers.

Army Takes Over Hotel

San Francisco's 24 story Empire Hotel, a favorite stopping place for Hollywood celebrities, was sold last week to the Army for $2,000,000, and will be remodeled immediately into offices and conference rooms. Located in the heart of the theatre district, the hotel's Skyroom cocktail lounge has been a rendezvous for show people for many years.

Rain Empties Theatres

Audiences in two Skouras theatres in Englewood, N. J., the Englewood and Plaza, were compelled to leave the theatres on Monday when heavy rains caused the street to become flooded and water began to seep into the theatres.

Educators studying Film Propaganda

Watch Newsreel Makeup at 20th-Fox; Discussion led by DeBra of MPPDA

Teachers and educational administrators from all sections of the country are greatly concerned with the impact of motion pictures on public opinions.

To study the operations of the industry at first hand last Thursday 115 members of education and propaganda classes at Columbia University Teachers College visited the Twentieth Century-Fox home office to observe the compilation of newsreels and hear a discussion of propaganda factors in feature pictures.

Edmund Reek, vice-president and producer of Movietone News, was host to the group of 115 from the classes of Dr. Clyde R. Miller, Dr. Harold Rugg and Dr. Wilbur Chapman Hallenbeck in the home office Little Theatre.

Newsreel Compilation Studied by Group

There the group studied the mechanics of newsreel compilation, viewed unedited newsreels and attended a special screening of the historical documentary, "United We Stand." Earl Allvine, producer of the feature and associate editor of the newsreel, told the group that the newsreels' mission is to present the fact on the screen, without bias or editorial interpretation. All the American companies have been eminently successful in accomplishing this, he said.

Arthur De Bra, assistant to the director of the community service division of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, answered questions on motion pictures submitted by the teachers and explained the operation of many of the industry's trade practices.

Screen's First Mission Is Entertainment

No pressure group, he asserted, is ever able to tell any producer what he should or should not include in a film or select as story material, Mr. De Bra asserted. Pointing to examples from recent production he told the teachers that the screen has occupied a position as a leader and expresser of public opinion closely akin to the press and radio.

But, he reminded the class, the theatrical screen's first mission is entertainment and its presentation of issues is necessarily secondary. However, it has presented true and fair dramatizations many important historical, economic and social issues, he said.

He cited "The Devil and Miss Jones," "The Magnificent Dope," "Christmas in July," "How Green Was My Valley" and other recent titles as examples of pictures which depict a labor leader as hero rather than a successful business man or promoter. But such pictures, he told the questioner, are few and reflect the relatively new and small group of labor leaders who have risen to a "hero" status in popular estimation.

Many pictures have successfully pictured social conditions in the community, bad housing, poor education and other factors producing the criminal, he told another teacher. "Dead End," "One Third of a Nation," "Primrose Path," "Girl From Avenue A" and "Courageous Doctor Kildare" were among the titles he cited in proof that the screen can portray causes as well as the mere dramatic fact of a crime and a criminal's capture.

Explains Industry's Trade Practices

"Can you name a film which starts with marriage and then brings in the problems of marriage, instead of marriage as the end in view," one teacher asked.

Mr. De Bra cited "We Who Are Young," "Saturday's Children," "Woman of the Year" and "One Foot in Heaven," explaining that much film entertainment must be romantic as well as dramatic. This, he said, precludes beginning very many photoplays with marriage. The screen he declared has been generally successful in depicting exemplary weldock.

When Dr. Alice Keliher and the Motion Picture Commission for the Progressive Education Association sought excerpts from photoplays to portray marital problems and their successful solution, Mr. De Bra recalled that they had no trouble in obtaining examples from "Arrowsmith," "The Animal Kingdom," "Cradle Song" and other outstanding features.

He also explained the operation of the business end of the industry, and, answering a question on block booking which recalled the agitation of public groups to abolish it, pointed out that it already has been generally ended by the New York Consent Decree. He cited also the UMPI sales plan as another example of the application of self regulation in the industry.

Following the lecture the group saw "United We Stand." The visit was part of a tour by the propaganda analysis class to newspaper offices and broadcasting studios.

Stage, Radio Volunteer To Aid Bond Drive

The United Theatrical War Activities Committee, in New York, with its membership of stars of stage, radio, concert and opera, vaudeville and night clubs, will aid the industry in its $1,000,000,000 War Bond and Stamp drive in September.

At a meeting with officials of the War Activities Committee this week, James Sauter, executive director of UTWAC, expressed the desire of stage, radio, night club and concert artists to participate.

Campaign Director Si Fabian of the film committee welcomed the cooperation of UTWAC.

Broadway Plays in Preparation

A number of plays are being prepared for production on Broadway during the coming theatrical season.

The Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse comedy, "Strip for Action" is scheduled to open at the National theatre, with Keenan Wynn in the lead, on September 22nd.

A new Emmet Lavery comedy, "Murder in a Nunnery," is scheduled for a late autumn opening, with Morris Helprin producing.

The Theatre Guild's 1930 folkplay, Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs," is planned as a musical comedy, with changes by Messrs. Rodgers, Hart and Hammerstein.

"The Damask Cheek," a new comedy by John Van Druten and Lloyd Morris, will be produced by Dwight Deere Wiman, and probably will have Flora Robson in the lead. The Shubert play, "Count Me In," is to rehearsals soon, with Charles Butterworth, June Preisser and Mary Healy in the leads. George Abbott's "Beat the Band" is well along in preparation.

Herman Shumlin has at least three plays scheduled, the Frances Goodrich-Albert Hackett dramatization of E. P. O'Donnell's "The Great Big Doorstep"; Robert Ardrey's new and as yet untitled work, and Vladimir Pozner's "The Edge of the Sword," on which Mr. Shumlin has taken a year's option.

Shepard Traube is making plans for his next production, "Winter Soldiers."

National Decency Legion Classifies Five Films

Of five pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week two were approved for general patronage, two were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Hillbilly Blitzkreig," "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Invisible Agent," "Tales of Manhattan." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Somewhere I'll Find You."

Named Representative For Mexican Company

Henry R. Arias has been appointed New York representative for a new producing and distributing company formed in Mexico City by M. J. Messeri, former manager for Paramount in Spain and Portugal. The company plans to produce Mexican films and distribute them and American pictures. Mr. Messeri is president and general manager of the new company.

Host at Trade Showing

Arthur Levy, Columbia Pittsburgh exchange manager, was host to 50 exhibitors at a luncheon at the Hotel Schenley, following a trade showing of "Talk of the Town" at the Schenley theatre. The exhibitors also saw rushes of "My Sister Eileen," "You Were Never Lovelier" and "Desperado."

Smoke Routs Patrons

More than 2,000 patrons left the Branford theatre, Newark, N. J., without mishap on August 5th, when the large midtown theatre filled with smoke from a second-floor storeroom fire, which was quickly extinguished.

"Ice Capades" To Open

The third edition of the ice show, "Ice Capades of 1942" will open at Madison Square Garden, New York, September 4th, and will run until September 20th.

STUDIOS ACQUIRE 40 STORY PROPERTIES DURING JULY

Compares with 55 for June; War Predominant Theme; "This Is the Army" Sold

Forty story properties were acquired by Hollywood producers in July. This was a drop from the 55 acquired in June but an increase over the 31 acquisitions of July, 1941, July and August are traditionally "slow" months in the story buying fields.

More than 50 per cent of the properties acquired in July were concerned with the war in some manner. Probably the most notable acquisition of the month was Warner Brothers' purchase of the screen rights to Irving Berlin's all-soldier show, "This Is the Army," now playing to capacity on Broadway. The picture will be in color.

Other highlights in story purchases for the month included Columbia's acquisition of the screen rights to Max Marcin's radio program, "The Crime Doctor," on which a film series is planned with Warner Baxter starred; "Men Without Country," a new novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Hurricane," bought by Warners, and "Without Love," the play by Philip Barry, which is scheduled for Broadway production in the autumn acquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

$5,823,000 IS PARAMOUNT NET; RKO LOSS, $643,360

KAO Earns $507,571; RCA Profit $3,024,121, and Consolidated Film, $224,276

Paramount Pictures, Inc., this week estimated its earnings for the second quarter, ended July 4, 1942, at $2,908,000 after interest and all charges including estimated provision for all Federal taxes, normal and surtaxes being computed at 45 per cent. This was after deducting $240,000 representing increase in provision for Federal normal and surtaxes for the first quarter from 40 per cent to 45 per cent, and included $482,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries.

Earnings for the six months ended July 4, 1942, on the same basis, were estimated at $5,823,000, including a $1,026,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries, and $130,000 of non-recurring income.

For the first six months of 1942 the company included in its earnings only those subsidiaries which have operations in the Western Hemisphere; the operations of all other foreign subsidiaries (including those in England, Australia, New Zealand and India) and the company's share of current film rentals therefrom are included only to the extent received or determined to be receivable in dollars.

Earnings for the quarter ended July 5, 1941, were $1,904,000, including a $231,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries, while earnings for the first six months of 1941 were $4,379,000 including a $881,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. The 1941 earnings included the operations of and the company's share of film rentals from subsidiaries operating in England, Australia, New Zealand and India, which have not been included in 1942 except to the extent above reported.

94 Cents per Share On Common Stock

There were outstanding on July 4, 1942, 126,042 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value 6 per cent first preferred stock. After deducting $189,063 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these first preferred shares, the remaining $2,718,937 of estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the quarter represent 94 cents per share on the 2,901,580 shares of common stock outstanding on July 4, 1942, which compares with 66 cents per share for the quarter ended July 5, 1941.

Computed on the same basis, the estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the six months ended July 4, 1942, represents $1.88 per share on such common stock outstanding, which compares with $1.58 per share for the six months ended July 5, 1941.

The board of directors of Paramount on Monday declared the regular quarterly dividends of 25 cents per share on its common stock and $1.50 per share on its first preferred stock, payable October 1, 1942, to common stockholders of record on September 15, 1942 and preferred stockholders of record on September 17, 1942.

Consolidated Net $118,866

For the three months ended June 30, 1942, the consolidated net earnings of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and its subsidiaries, before deducting any provision for Federal taxes, were $224,276.

After deducting $105,409 estimated provision for Federal normal and surtax based upon pending tax legislation the balance of net earnings, $118,866, is equivalent to 29½ cents per share on the 400,000 shares of $2 preferred stock outstanding.

RCA Profit for Six Months $3,024,121

Radio Corporation of America—which has large holdings in Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation—reported last Thursday a net profit, after all charges and taxes, of $3,024,121 for the first six months of 1942, compared with $4,101,095 in 1941, a decrease of $1,076,974.

Total gross income from all sources amounted to $90,095,593 in the first half of 1942, compared with $68,891,379 in the same period in 1941, an increase of $21,204,214.

Provision for Federal income taxes (on the basis of 45 per cent normal and 90 per cent excess profits tax) amounted to $11,907,800 for the first half of 1942, compared with $5,657,700 for the corresponding 1941 period, an increase of $6,250,100.

KAO Profits are Nearly Doubled

Profits earned by Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation were nearly doubled in the first six months of 1942, reaching $507,571, compared with $213,440 in the same period of 1941. KAO's consolidated income account compares as follows:

	26 Weeks Ended July 4, 1942	26 Weeks Ended July 5, 1941
Profit before provision for depreciation and income taxes	$1,300,100.62	$ 635,402.74
Depreciation	317,668.34	327,047.59
	$ 982,432.28	$ 308,355.15
Provision for incomes taxes	474,860.82	94,915.00
Net profit after all charges	$ 507,571.46	$ 213,440.15

The provision for Federal income taxes is based on a 45 per cent rate for 1942 as compared with a 30 per cent rate for 1941. No provision has been made for Federal excess profits tax as the companies do not appear to be liable in this respect, said the company.

RKO 6-Month Loss Increases $157,755

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, parent of the RKO picture-making, distributing and circuit companies, last week reported a loss of $643,360 for the six months ended July 4, 1942, compared with a loss of $485,605 in the same period last year. Nearly all of the 1942 losses were attributed by RKO to "extraordinary studio write-offs and reserves." Consolidated income account compares as follows:

	26 Weeks Ended July 4, 1942	26 Weeks Ended July 5, 1941
Profit from operations, before items below	$1,410,801.96	$1,419,314.82
Extraordinary studio write-offs and reserves	633,804.92	.....
	$ 776,997.04	$1,419,314.82
Depreciation	641,182.46	667,753.10
	$ 135,814.58	$ 751,561.72
Provision for income taxes	752,787.29	213,456.34
	$ 616,972.71	$ 538,105.38
Dividends declared during the 1942 period on common and preferred stock and accrued during the 1941 period on preferred stock of a subsidiary company in the hands of the public	26,388.00	52,500.00
Net profit or loss after all charges	$ 643,360.71	$ 485,605.38

The provision for Federal income taxes is based on a 45 per cent rate for 1942 as compared with a 30 per cent rate for 1941. No provision has been made for Federal excess profits tax as the companies do not appear to be liable in this respect, said RKO, adding: "The above figures are in part estimated and subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year, as has been the practice heretofore."

Eastman Nets $7,462,336

Net profit of $7,462,336 for the first six months ending June 13th was reported Wednesday by Eastman Kodak Company, in Rochester. This is equal to $2.94 per share of common stock, and compares with a net profit of $10,480,425, or $4.15 per share, for the same period in 1941.

Directors at the same time declared a dividend of $1.25 on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on the six per cent preferred.

It was pointed out that this was the first time the company had paid less than $1.50 per share on the common stock, since the disbursement on April 1, 1938.

Total sales for the period were $97,539,272, an increase of 33 per cent over 1941 sales for the same period. Operating profits gained 48 per cent, going from $17,989,337 for the period in 1941 to $29,538,732 for the period just ended. It was indicated the dividend reduction would mean a reduction in the employee wage dividend.

War booming Grosses in Canal Zone

The influx of large numbers of war workers and members of the armed forces is booming attendance at the 33 motion picture theatres in the Republic of Panama and the Canal Zone at an unprecedented rate. The Foreign Commerce Weekly, issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce, estimates that gross receipts for 1942 will be 60 per cent above the 1941 figure.

The gross income for the 33 theatres during 1941 was estimated at $1,200,000 by the Government bulletin.

Hollywood product occupies approximately 75 per cent of Panama screen time, the magazine reported, with Spanish language pictures from Argentina and Mexico accounting for about 25 per cent. Panama theatres last year exhibited 500 features.

The Foreign Commerce Weekly also reported that the Royal Air Force production unit in Great Britain now has four mobile units, an overseas production staff, and headquarter section. The unit is making propaganda, training and secret military films.

Three full length documentary films, similar to "Target for Tonight," and six short subjects are on the unit's production schedule for this year. Detachments are also in Libya and Malta and the unit plans a camera record of the tasks of each command. Plans are being made for film units for the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Polish air forces in Britain.

War Boom in Some Canadian Cities

Canadian cities and towns engaged in war activity are currently experiencing a box office boom, according to Mitchell S. Bernstein of the Bernstein and Lieberman Circuit, who visited New York this week.

The B & L Circuit, with headquarters in St. John, N. B., has five theatres in Nova Scotia, five in New Brunswick, and two in Maine. The Canadian Government regards theatres as an essential industry, said Mr. Bernstein, and in some of the war active communities they are the only form of amusement available.

Close Scranton House

The Riviera, one of six theatres operated by Comerford in Scranton, has closed for the summer. Bud Irwin, manager, has been retained as swing man, relieving managers of other theatres during their vacations. The remainder of the staff has been absorbed by the other houses. The Riviera, built in 1928, had never closed before.

Pasho Buy Theatre

The Apollo, New Haven, has been purchased by John Pasho, New York, from the Fishman circuit. Mr. Pasho is the brother of Ralph Pasho, operator of the Gem Theatre, Naugatuck, Conn.

Charter Cinema-Craft

Incorporated for $200,000 in California, Cinema-Craft Productions, Inc., plans to manufacture photographic supplies and film, and will have main offices in Los Angeles. Principals are Alfred Burke, Lafayette McDonald, and Francis Corby, of that city.

Warners To Use "Penrod"

Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" series will be used by Warners in its new season short subjects, Gordon Hollingshead, in charge of that short subject production, said last week.

Invites Sale of Bonds Of Spokane Circuit

Tenders of Fox West Coast Theatres (Now Fox Spokane Theatre Corporation) modified first mortgage four per cent bonds due September 1, 1943, are invited by the Spokane and Eastern Branch of the Seattle First National Bank, special trustee, which holds approximately $10,500 for purchase of bonds.

Tenders at prices not more than par will be opened at 3 P.M. August 20, 1943, at the trustee's office in Spokane. The bonds will be purchased at lowest tenders. If purchases do not consume available funds, the special trustee by lot will designate bonds for retirement at the next interest-paying date, and interest will cease to accrue on such designated bonds at that date. The issue was originally $400,000 but has been reduced to $228,500.

The Bijou Amusement Company, Nashville, will rebuild the Gem theatre, Knoxville, destroyed by fire July 28th, after lightning struck it.

All Games Banned in Chicago Theatres

In a sweeping non-gambling order issued last week by Police Commissioner Alman of Chicago, 75 theatres were compelled to cease the operation of games. This included approximately 50 houses that were operating "Bingo for Defense," one to three times weekly, with War Bonds and Stamps as awards.

Several unsuccessful attempts had been made in the past by the Better Business Bureau of Chicago to stop the practice, and, although in violation of a city statute, city officials preferred to look the other way for several months because of the patriotic angle. With a general cleanup drive under way by the Chicago Police Department, to protect the thousands of men in the armed forces who visit the city, the elimination of games was included in the order. Many theatre operators claim that the operation of Bingo and other games had increased their receipts to a considerable degree.

$2,800,000 to Army and Navy from Industry

Two checks for $1,000,000 each were presented to the Army Emergency Relief and the Navy Emergency Relief August 5th by the motion picture industry in a special ceremony at Washington. Robert P. Patterson, Under-Secretary of War and Admiral J. O. Richardson, heads of the relief funds, received the checks from Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's Inc. The money was raised in a drive conducted by the theatres of the country.

In addition, checks for $400,000 each were presented to the two relief funds by Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount Pictures. The money was raised by the Hollywood Victory Caravan Tour.

Benefit for Army Fund Set for New York

Zanuck Status is clarified

Spyros Skouras, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, following a meeting at the studio on Monday, issued a statement to clarify the status of Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, and engaged in war film work.

Mr. Skouras' statement said:

"Colonel Zanuck is an officer of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., in charge of military films produced by the Research Council (of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences) with the collaboration of all Hollywood studios and under direct orders of the War Department.

"As vice-president in charge of production, Darryl Zanuck will, as in the past, continue to guide the production activities of our company.

"Colonel Zanuck will personally produce for Twentieth Century-Fox a number of films dealing with military and naval subjects, or themes of international political significance, such as John Steinbeck's 'The Moon Is Down' and John Brophy's Libyan novel, 'The Immortal Sergeant'.

"The establishment of a Signal Corps film depot at the Western Avenue studios of Twentieth Century-Fox for the use of the Special Service Branch of the U. S. Army is another example of the motion picture industry's cooperation with the nation's war effort."

Pittsburgh Legitimate To Open August 31st

Expecting one of its biggest seasons, with the longest autumn schedule in recent years already on the books, the Nixon theatre will open with "The Moon Is Down" on August 31st, earliest opening date in years.

Listed to follow are: a return engagement of "Claudia" September 7th; the premiere of the new Lindsay-Crouse play, "Strip for Action," September 14th; two weeks of the new "Hellzapoppin" beginning September 21st; a new starring Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, October 5th; "This Is the Army," October 12th; Frederic March in a new play, October 19th; return engagement of "Arsenic and Old Lace," October 26th; Paul Robeson in "Othello," November 2nd; Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady in the Dark," November 9th, for a fortnight; "Let's Face It," for two weeks beginning November 23rd; "Junior Miss" for two weeks, December 6th; and "Sons of Fun" for the Christmas and New Year weeks.

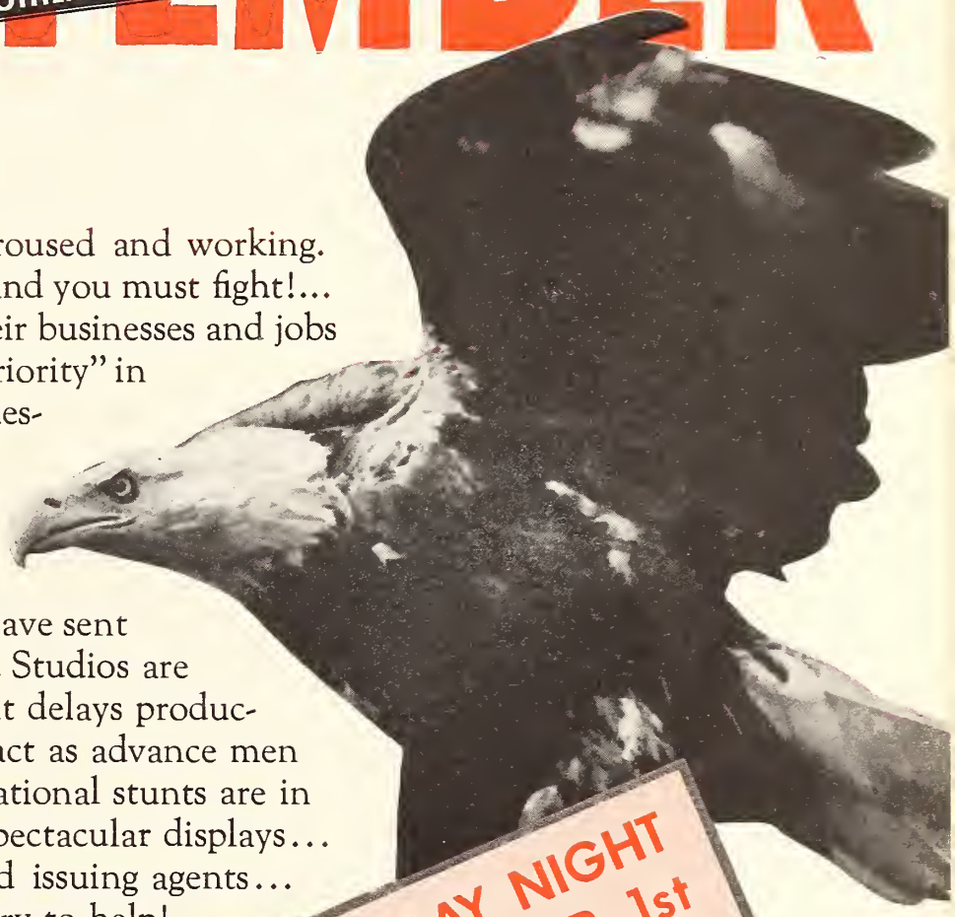
In the 39-week season of 1941-42, the Nixon grossed more than $550,000.

Raise Price in San Francisco

Four independent downtown theatres in San Francisco here increased their admissions from 25 and 35 cents to 30 and 40 cents, following by several months the price rise put into effect by first run houses last spring. Making the increase were the Embassy, Strand, Downtown and Regal theatres. The Golden State circuit of San Francisco will make a similar increase in about two weeks, and other neighborhood circuits are expected to follow.

Helen Hayes on Committee

Helen Hayes has been named chairman of the Rockland County, N. Y., Committee of Russian War Relief, Inc. Other committee members are: the Rev. Dr. William N. Ross, Mrs. Natalie Couch Williams, Mrs. William F. McCartin, Mrs. William Walton and Charles W. Hawkins.



PRIVATE JONES IS DEAD!

A casualty last week in the Solomon Islands, thousands of miles from where we sit. He died for us. He gave up a job, a home, a life. Little enough we can give in time, in effort, in money to honor his memory. He's what we mean when we talk about this industry's all-out enlistment in September's "30 fighting days!"

WE'LL REMEMBER IN SEPTEMBER

LETTERS FROM READERS

PROVES SINGLE BILLS ON TEST RUNS

To the Editor of the Herald:

We all have been reading in the trade publications a lot of talk about single features and it seems to be mostly conjecture with scarcely anyone doing anything about it.

However, using the Uptown Theatre, a class first run neighborhood house in one of the better sections of the city, as a test house, we played single features for ten days with strong product and turned in the highest gross in over a year for this theatre.

Due to the fact that one of our downtown theatres has been closed for a couple of months, and that the other three first run theatres downtown have had holdovers for several weeks, it has been impossible for us to get sufficient product to warrant continuing single billing. However, beginning in September and continuing as long as we can get strong product, it is my intention to play single features. If the policy holds up to the previous success, we will work all of our other houses into this policy gradually.

The features single billed were "My Favorite Blonde," "My Gal Sal" and "Rio Rita."

Many of our patrons congratulated me upon instituting this policy; others mentioned as they came in that it was the first time they had been to a picture theatre in years because they didn't like double features, and others thanked me for finally bringing back the single billing.

This is a thought that you might pass on to other operators of class neighborhoods,-because I believe that it will be up to us to pave the way for the other fellows.—Bill McIlwain, Manager, Uptown Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

URGES FEWER BUT STRONGER FILMS

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have watched the quality of the product now being released from week to week and it is a sickening fact to observe the number of pictures that are not suitable for any purpose on any program, not even for double featuring.

If the circuits would place themselves in the position of their patrons they most certainly could see how poorly the second half, or should I say the weaker half of the double bill, appeals to the customers.

Who wants to sit through a weak feature after he has seen "Sergeant York," "One Foot in Heaven," "How Green Was My Valley," "Honky Tonk," "Shores of Tripoli," "My Favorite Blonde," "Captains of the Clouds,' "Ship Ahoy," "Birth of the Blues," "Mrs. Miniver" and other pictures of that class?

Even in "war" times, good pictures do good business in the small towns. It is the class C pictures that are going to close many a small town theatre.

Yes, I double-feature. Not because I want to but because I have to. There's no other way out. Many a program has been held up or held together by a Hopalong Cassidy, a Gene Autry or a Roy Rogers and other western product.

No exhibitor can expect to have a "How Green Was My Valley," a "Fleet's In," a "One Foot in Heaven" every day in the week. But if the producers, who make these "double" features, would spend the money they use in making two doubles and make one good feature, business would be better nationally and not be great in defense areas and bad in non-defense areas.

The problem of the chain and the independent is not how to get the good pictures but how to get out of playing the bad ones. Can anyone imagine any other business operating on such a basis?

Producers who have the idea that the upturn in business in big cities is due to their product are kidding themselves. The rubber shortage is keeping many a person from pursuing his usual summer weekend trips and he has to stay in town for his entertainment.

Warner Brothers had the right idea some years back. The year they made pictures such as "Heart of the North" and "Dark Victory" proved what any film company can do if they really try. Why can we not have consistently good product instead of one good one and four bad ones?—L. E. Palmer, Manager, Iris Theatre, Postville, Ia.

Four Motion Picture Companies Chartered

Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State at Albany, has issued papers of incorporation to four motion picture concerns to do business in New York State. They were:

Filmedia Corporation, 100 shares, by Milton Harawitz, Victory Jacobs and Henry Mayer, New York. Papers were filed by Garbiel Calef and Victor Jacobs. Willoughby Amusement Corporation, Brooklyn, $5,000 capital stock, by Frances Katz, Frieda Zoberg and Shirley Kaufman, Brooklyn; Kirtden Amusement Corporation, $20,000 capital stock, by William Indursky, E. R. Waxman and Helen Kirshenbaum, New York, and Vinegrad Theatre Enterprises, Inc., $10,000 capital stock, by Nathan Vinegrad, Helen Domin and Julian Liberman, New York.

New Orleans Tax Record

Income from the New Orleans city amusement tax, which goes to welfare work, increased 36.9 per cent in June, 1942, as compared with the same month in 1941, A. Frank Fairley, director of revenue, announced. Reflected in the increased figure, Mr. Fairley said, are heavier attendances at motion picture theatres, night clubs and other amusements.

Children's Films Selected

A Children's Cinema Guild to select and recommend films specifically for their appeal to children has been organized in St. Louis under the direction of Mrs. Edwin L. Lopata.

Farnol Closes Office

Major Lynn Farnol, public relations officer for the First Bomber Command, has closed his commercial publicity office at 250 Park Avenue, New York, for the duration. He is stationed at Mitchell Field, Long Island.

Burt Champion, Mr. Farnol's assistant, this week became publicity director for the Rivoli Theatre, New York.

Five Releases listed by WAC

The Government last week listed five pictures which shortly will be released for distribution through the War Activities Committee.

They include: "Salvage," "Manpower Mobilization," "Paratroops," "Transportation" and a Disney Technicolor film on fats and greases. "Salvage," "Manpower Mobilization" and "Transportation" are productions of the Office of War Information Film Unit. "Paratroops" is a re-edition of a film produced for the Army Signal Corps. The Disney picture is a conservation campaign film made for the War Production Board.

It was announced last week that William P. Montague, assignment editor of Paramount News, now with the OWI, will be assistant producer in the Film Unit.

The next War Activities Committee release, "The World at War," is scheduled for September 18th, and will be distributed jointly by MGM, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners in the following exchanges:

Twentieth Century-Fox—Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle.

MGM—Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, New Haven, New York.

Paramount — Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Memphis, New Orleans.

Warners—Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Washington.

RKO Radio—Cincinnati, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha.

Warner Bros., in cooperation with the Army Air Force, plans production of "Transport Command," two-reel Technicolor defense subject. B. Reeves Eason will direct with Gordon Hollingshead as supervisor.

Prints of sequences showing the landing of Commando units from "The Commandos Come at Dawn," Columbia picture, will be turned over to Washington and Ottawa for possible use as training films, it was reported in Ottawa this week. The film was produced with the cooperation of the Canadian Army and Navy.

UMPI Adds to Local Taxation Committees

More names have been added to the United Motion Picture Industry local tax committee list.

Stanley Sumner, of the University theatre, Harvard Square, Cambridge, has been elected chairman of the state committee, other members of which are Charles Kurtzman, Loew theatre manager in Boston, and A. M. Kane, Paramount branch manager there.

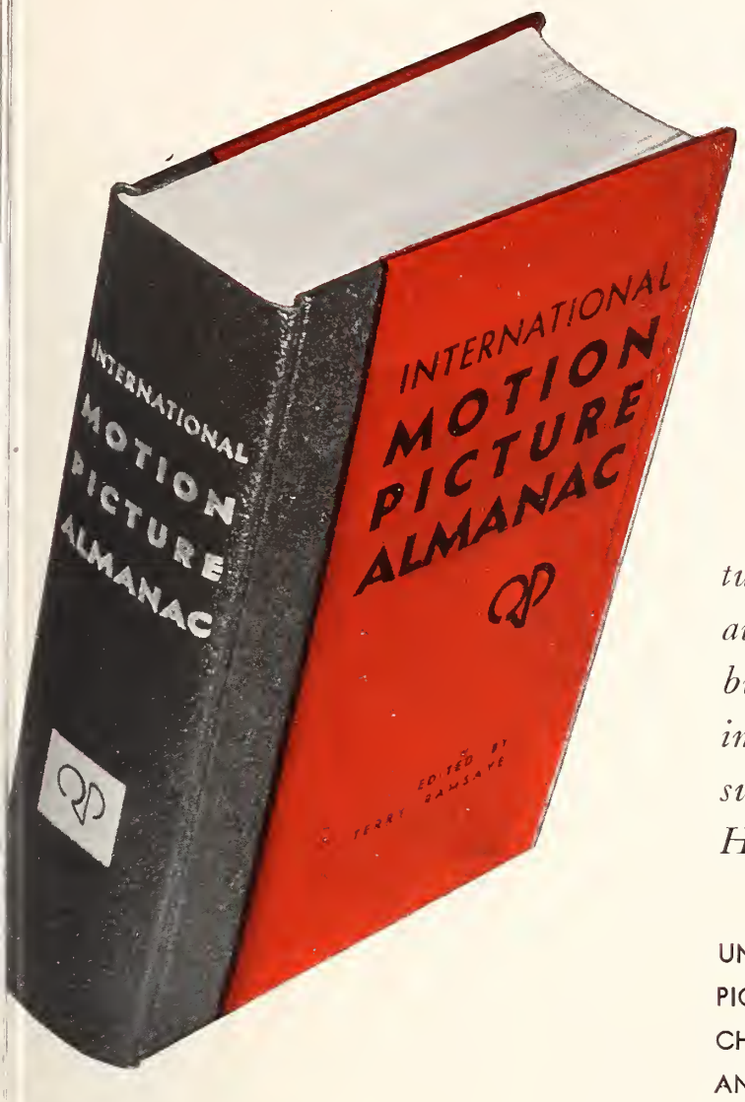
Film Fires Cost $4,590



From January 1, 1926, to July 1st of this year, exchange film fires caused damage totaling $4,590, according to Arthur Dickinson, conservation department director for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Milwaukee Promotions

Benjamin Schwenke has been named Warner Milwaukee office manager. Jacob Kaiser has replaced him as head booker.

Schlank with Monogram

Irving Schlank, formerly with United Artists in Chicago, is now in charge of the Monogram exchange in Minneapolis.

Columbia

ADVENTURES OF MARTIN EDEN: Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor—Got a little draggy in spots but nobody walked out and a few told us it was a good picture. It's about as good as anything for week-end. The two stars are good. In fact, they are both very popular here. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 24-25.—M. L. Dubose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

MEET THE STEWARTS: William Holden, Frances Dee—Family entertainment which pleased. Running time, 73 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MEET THE STEWARTS: William Holden, Frances Dee—Very good little picture that pleased everyone. If you can get them in, they will take it. The stars, as well as all the supporting players, are excellent. Played July 14—Ritz Amusement, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Running time, 73 minutes. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE RAIDER: John Howard, Marguerite Chapman—Program picture. Just fair. Running time, 64 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THEY ALL KISSED THE BRIDE: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Good comedy. Good cast. Running time, 86 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THEY ALL KISSED THE BRIDE: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Here is one of the best we've played in some time with the two stars at their very best. It's a swell comedy and drew very satisfactorily at the box office. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 8-9.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WIFE TAKES A FLYER, THE: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—Satire on the Nazis. Good dialogue and amusing gags. Competent cast. Running time, 86 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WIFE TAKES A FLYER, THE: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—Fair picture depicting humorous side of world affairs and ridiculing Nazis. Joan Bennett did a fine job in this one and Tone also good. "Remember Pearl Harbor" was used with it and business was good both days. Premium for women also helped somewhat. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 28-29.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

WIFE TAKES A FLYER, THE: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—Ran this with "Mr. Bug Goes to Town" and was really pleased with the results. Boy, they certainly laughed in this town while this picture was on the screen. They got a big kick out of the satire on the Nazis. Maybe the situation is serious; but that does not stop us from having some enjoyment at the enemy's expense. The dialogue is very clever. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 30-31.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op., Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main—Business not up to expectations. Beery seems to be slipping here. Miss Main is no second Marie Dressler. Plot of this feature somewhat threadbare although tanks and other Army props very interesting and timely. Running time, 101 minutes. Played July 5-6.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S VICTORY: Lew Ayres, Ann Ayars—Very good picture but unfortunately Lew Ayres' trouble regarding the Army I think made many enemies for him and they stayed away from the theatre. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 19-20.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

FINGERS AT THE WINDOW: Lew Ayres, Larraine Day—Fair melodrama. Running time, 80 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FINGERS AT THE WINDOW: Lew Ayres, Larraine Day—This is a very good mystery picture. But we give that good looking Day girl credit for bringing some of them in. Running time, 80 minutes.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

HER CARDBOARD LOVER: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor—The women came to see Robert Taylor and the men, some of them, admit that Norma is easy to look at. The story was just so-so. Funny at times. Will do if you can't get something better. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 26-28.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

I MARRIED AN ANGEL: Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy—Star appeal is the principal attraction in "I Married an Angel." Running time, 83 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAISIE GETS HER MAN: Ann Sothern, Red Skelton—Played to swell business on weekend. Picture is only fair. Ann Sothern is very good as usual and Red Skelton is one of the top box office bets right now. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 11-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon. Small town patronage.

RIO RITA: Abbot and Costello—Good comedy with Abbott and Costello holding their own in very fine shape. Business very good on this one and I think both children and adults liked it far better than "Ride 'Em Cowboy." Used "Nazi Agent" with it. Another fine picture with Conrad Veidt doing a splendid dual role. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 26-27.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

RIO RITA: Abbott and Costello, John Carroll, Kathryn Grayson—Strictly an Abbott and Costello picture. Pleased their following. Running time, 91 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SHADOW OF THE THIN MAN: Myrna Loy, William Powell—This is a picture that I can fully recommend for a situation such as mine. There is plenty of action, comedy, suspense and a good story, with two top notch performers and a good supporting cast. Would recommend this as good entertainment. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask. Rural and small town patronage.

SHIP AHOY: Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton—Well-made musical. Good dancing by Powell—and laughs from Lahr and Skelton. Running time, 95 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy LaMarr, John Garfield—Much more entertaining than other films of John Steinbeck's stories. Not a small town picture. Running time, 105 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Monogram

ROAD TO HAPPINESS, THE: John Boles, Mona Barrie—Compares favorably with the better major company films. Running time, 63 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—A feature with beautiful coloring but a very thin story.—Enjoyed by most of my patrons. Water scenes exceptionally good. Would recommend this one, although played very late. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask. Rural and small town patronage.

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—Poor story. Poor color. No entertainment. Running time, 82 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—There was something wrong with this picture but I can't put my finger on it. The color was beautiful but my customers want something else with the coloring. I really don't know what they want. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 12-14.—M. L. DuBose, Majestice Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

BEYOND THE BLUE HORIZON: Dorothy Lamour, Richard Denning—Beautiful Technicolor. Usual Lamour jungle picture. Running time, 76 minutes. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N.H. General patronage.

GREAT MAN'S LADY, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Emotional drama. Donlevy does the best acting by far. Running time, 90 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Eddie Bracken—Pleasant musical entertainment. Good all-around performances by the principals. Specialties excellent. Running time, 93 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HENRY AND DIZZY: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—Pleased the kids. Running time, 71 minutes. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN: Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland—A woman's picture. Running time, 116 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN: Max Fleischer Feature Cartoon—Ran this with "The Wife Takes a Flyer" to very good business. My folks come out quite well for feature cartoons. From your usual reports, my house must be an exception. Anyway, they came, they enjoyed it, and they said so. Personally, I think the picture is very clever and cute and I cannot see where so many of you think a cartoon is kid stuff. Children are a very small percentage of my crowd even at the very best. It would result in my murder if I let a show go by without a cartoon of some sort. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 30-31.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op., Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Madeleine Carroll, Bob Hope—Very good picture with Hope doing his best job yet in pictures. Madeleine Carroll held up the interest, supporting him well. Good story, comedy great. Used "Dangerous Game" with it. Business very good Friday. Thursday just fair. I say more like this one for Bob Hope. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 30-31.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Bob Hope, Madeleine Carroll—Familiar story—quite a few laughs. Miss Carroll an able partner for Hope. Running time, 78 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Funny—capable cast. Running time, 90 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REAP THE WILD WIND: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland, John Wayne—Good acting. Superb photography. Thrilling. Our audience did not mind the advance in price. Running time, 124 minutes.—

Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STICK TO YOUR GUNS: Bill Boyd, Andy Clyde—Good western, Hopalong series go well here, especially Saturday. Children like him and show it by their attendance. Adults seem to like him for a change also. Used "Unseen Enemy" with it along with "King of Texas Rangers" serial and Stooges comedy rounding off program well. Very hot weather but business fair considering heat and no air conditioning. Running time, 63 minutes.—Played July 25.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

SKYLARK: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—This was an exceptionally clever picture. Just too much upper strata for our trade. Miss Colbert, although no longer youthful, still has plenty. Business poor. Running time, 93 minutes. Played July 8-9.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small town patronage.

SKYLARK: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—Fair entertainment. Running time, 93 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—Different kind of picture. Some thought it was very good, others did not like it. Running time, 91 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SWEATER GIRL: Eddie Bracken, June Preisser—It's a shame to waste two swell songs such as were in this on such a cheap and ordinary picture with a murder mystery as main story and no star value at all. Played on Bank Night to poor business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 28.—Ritz Amusement, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TAKE A LETTER, DARLING: Fred MacMurray, Rosalind Russell—Here is another good sophisticated comedy that pleased everyone. Play it on your best days in your best house. It drew very well and was enjoyed by everyone. Running time, 93 minutes. Played July 18-20.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TAKE A LETTER, DARLING: Rosalind Russell. Fred MacMurray—High rating comedy. Bright lines and laughs. A picture which will get word-of-mouth advertising. Running time, 93 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIS GUN FOR HIRE: Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake—Fifth columnist background. Ranks with the better product of its kind. Ladd made a good impression. Running time, 80 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TRUE TO THE ARMY: Judy Canova, Allan Jones—It's too silly to be good. Even the Canova fans failed to come in to see this one. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 15, 16—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

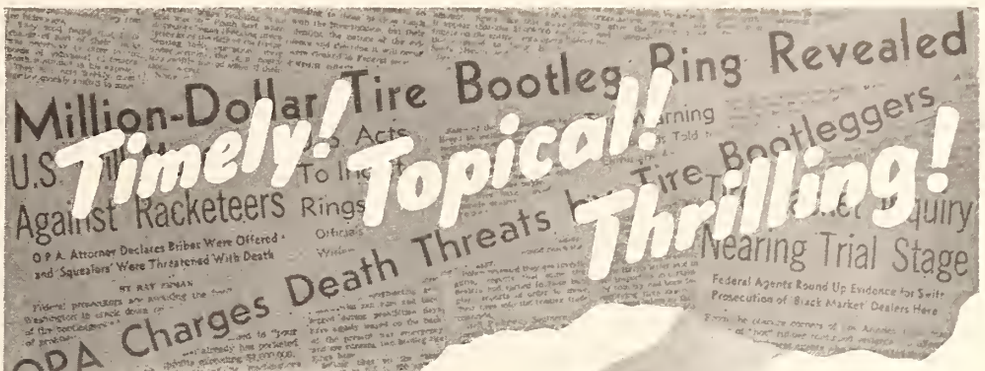
RKO Radio

DUMBO: Walt Disney Feature Cartoon—I repeat: "Never again!" Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 18-20.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta. Small town patronage.

DUMBO: Walt Disney Feature Cartoon—Very good—appreciated by young and old, but double billing was necessary to furnish drawing power. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small town patronage.

LADY SCARFACE: Dennis O'Keefe, Francis Neal—Double bill fare and not so hot. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small town patronage.

Republic



HOME IN WYOMING: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Will satisfy the Autry following. Running time, 67 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Alan Curtis, Donald Barry—Timely production. Good title. Action and suspense. Running time, 76 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

I WAKE UP SCREAMING: Betty Grable, Victor Mature—Not very terrific. My customers are satisfied that Miss Grable has commendable acting ability; now they'd like to see her go back to her former roles. Running time, 82 minutes. Played

June 25-27.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta. Small town patronage.

RISE AND SHINE: Jack Oakie, George Murpby—There isn't anything wrong with this picture if you're looking for entertainment, and aren't we all? Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 15-16.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

ROXIE HART: Ginger Rogers, George Montgomery—I got a kick out of tbis satire; but the majority of the customers either thought it too extreme or else missed the point entirely. Fair draw first night but final business poor. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 15—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta. Small town patronage.

ROXIE HART: Ginger Rogers, George Montgomery—In my opinion, Ginger's worst, story not good in my estimation, although it had drawing power, probably due to her being Academy Award winner. "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break" fair comedy used for co-feature. Business good in this show. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 21-22—George G. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

TEN GENTLEMEN FROM WEST POINT: George Montgomery, Maureen O'Hara—Slow moving historical picture of the beginning of West Point. Little action and no draw for Sunday. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 25-27—Ritz Amusements Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

United Artists

GOLD RUSH, THE: Charlie Chaplin—Good. Running time, 72 minutes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

JUNGLE BOOK, THE: Sabu, Pat O'Rourke—Beautiful color in this picture, but unfortunately had no drawing power for adults. Did five matinees with children liking this one very much. Used "Blue, White and Perfect" as co-feature. This picture very good. Lloyd Nolan, in my estimation, is a fine actor and deserves bigger and better parts. Business fair. Running time, 115 minutes. Played July 23-24—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

JUNGLE BOOK: Sabu—Beautiful fantasy in Technicolor. Will please everyone. Running time, 115 minutes—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MISS ANNIE ROONEY: Shirley Temple, William Gargan—This picture does not show Shirley's talents to advantage. Running time, 85 minutes—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper—A reissue worthy of playing again due to its timeliness. Running time, 95 minutes—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

LADY IN A JAM: Irene Dunne, Patric Knowles—Silly, boring, and senseless are the three most appropriate adjectives I can think of to desribe my own and my patrons' opinions of this attempt to camouflage an absurd script with a good cast. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 19-20—C. B. Carter, Co-Ed Theatre, Brevard, N. C. Small town and tourist patronage.

YOUNG AMERICA: Jane Withers, William Tracy—Fair picture, but do not think adults enjoyed it very much. "Road Agent," Universal, used it along with "King of Texas" serial, and Stooge comedy. Business O.K. Matinee with kids, but light in evening Don't recommend for top billing. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 1. George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

ALWAYS IN MY HEART: Gloria Warren, Walter Huston, Kay Francis—Really a good picture. Gloria Warren has them all topped with her wonderful voice. Everyone seemed to like her fine. Borah Minevitch really "hit 'em solid," too. I don't see why he isn't in more features. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 8-9—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris—Picked up this old one to the audible satisfaction of the action-comedy fans. Nice picture to average business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 22-24—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta. Small town patronage.

LARCENY, INC.: Edward G. Robinson—Just fair. Running time, 95 minutes—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MALE ANIMAL, THE: Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland—Good cast. Story could have been better. A few laugbs. Running time, 101 minutes—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Short Features

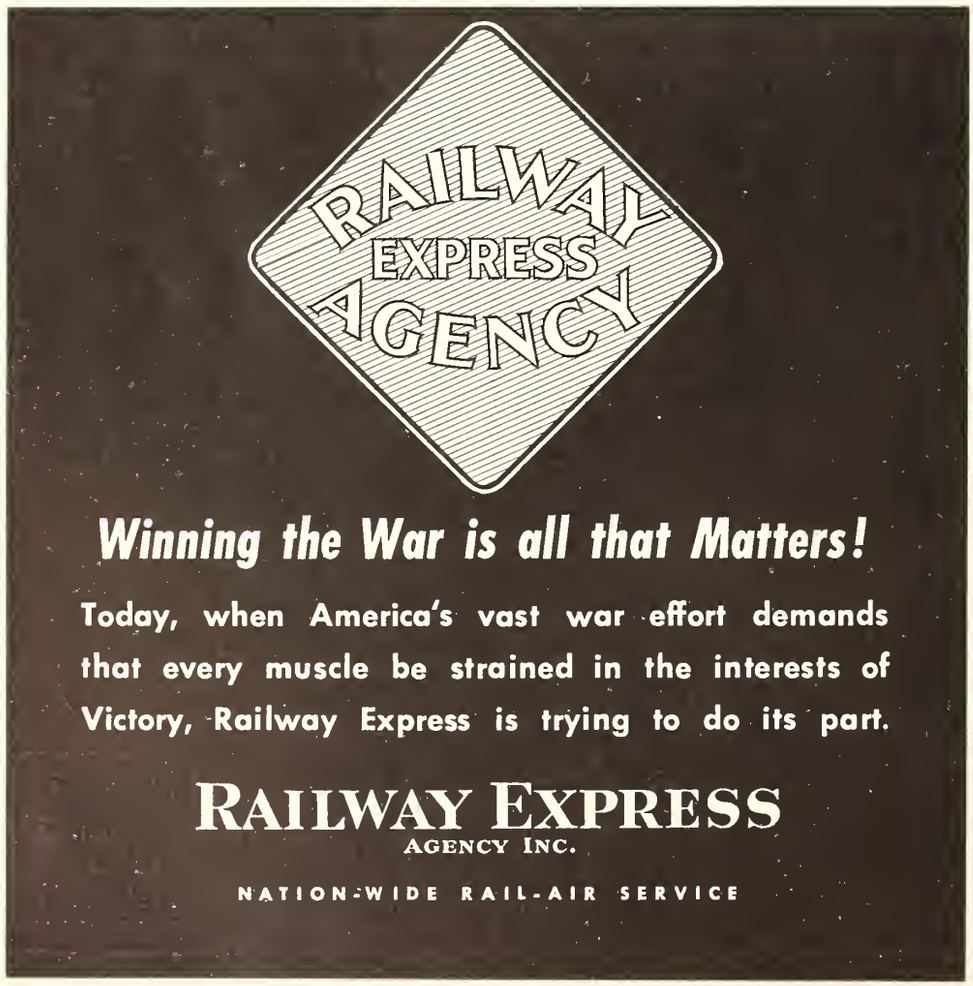
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FIELD MOUSE: Good color reel enjoyed very much by the kids. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan.

CONSTABLE, THE: Just another color reel. Poor print on this one. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan.

Paramount

FISHING FEVER: Just another fishing reel. Very little entertainment value. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatcbewan.



Victory Films

WINNING YOUR WINGS: Victory Films—James Stewart does such an excellent job of talking people into wanting to join the Air Corps that I would not have been surprised to have half my audience enlist when it was over. It lasts 20 minutes, but to my way of thinking, this is the best best of the Government films so far and I have played most of the rest of them. I am too old or the reel might have done a job on me, too. The whole thing is downrigbt fascinating. Play it soon.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Serial

Republic

KING OF THE TEXAS RANGERS: Slinging Sammy Baugh, Pauline Moore, Neil Hamilton—Not so good. It seems that Baugh is not a heavy enough actor for this job. He rides well, speaks plainly, but something is lacking in interest for kiddies here. Sabotage business connected with this is same old stuff. Neil Hamilton as the villain has a small part. Here and there it is not thrilling enough. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass.

Title Dispute Ended

Producers Releasing Corporation and Twentieth Century-Fox have settled a dispute over rights to the title, "Corregidor." PRC receives clear right to the one-word title; but Twentieth Century-Fox may use it with additional words.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Advanced Prices

ONE of the most effective moves on the part of a distributor in some time and one which is having a good effect on the public was the decision of William F. Rodgers not to require advanced admission prices for "Mrs. Miniver".

For example, the Wilkes-Barre, Penna., Times-Leader says of "Mrs. Miniver" following some editorial praise: "It is gratifying to learn the Comerford will show it at regular prices. There is a tendency in the industry to demand higher admissions when a special attraction is available, putting local managers on the spot with their patrons who feel they are entitled to a break once in a while."

The Times-Leader just mentions one of the objections to advanced admission prices. There are others.

Without disputing the fact that one picture is worth more than another, is it wise to let the public know which ones we think should be shown at bargain rates, so to speak? What about next week's picture? What answer can the theatre manager give to the patron who says, "Oh, this week it's only a 30 cent picture".

Certain minimum admissions are set by distributors for certain pictures without their realizing that these figures may be just a matter of pennies over the theatre's usual price. Thus we are confronted with the spectacle of a certain picture being exhibited at 40 and 55 cents last year and this year being brought back at popular prices—35 and 50 cents.

The country's showmen are a pretty wise bunch of individuals as a whole. They are in general charging what they consider a fair price for their towns. Good business judgment would suggest the advisability of leaving such important matters in their hands.

More on Joiners

BEING a Joiner is definitely a part of the activities of many showmen, we have had occasion to observe again, recently, following the editorial, "The Joiners", in the issue of May 30th.

Latest to detail his civic activities is Arthur S. Murch, Jr., manager of the North Shore Theatre, Gloucester, Mass., who writes: "I have been following with interest your editorials in the Round Table section about 'joiners', and thought you might be interested in receiving another comment on the subject. I definitely believe that it is to a manager's advantage to be what you term a 'joiner' and I have followed out this practise during the seven years I have been in Gloucester.

"Some of my associations at the present time include the following:

President of the Rotary Club
Director in the Chamber of Commerce
Past-President and Member, "Y" Men's Club
Corporate Member, Addison Gilbert Hospital
Vice-Chairman, Hospital Campaign
Executive Board Member, North Shore Council, Boy Scouts of America
Finance Chairman, Cape Ann District, Boy Scouts of America
Member Essex County Board of Trade

"All these things, it's true, bring on an extra pile of work and hours, but in the long run it's worth it, both to the theatre and the manager. People in the community begin to look at the theatre manager not as a fly-by-night fellow, but as a civic-minded citizen who wants to do something for his fellowman.

"It has been a long time since the Round Table has heard from me but I couldn't let this one pass without telling you that you are right."

Edward Salzberg, Bluefield, West Virginia, exhibitor and an authority on small town showmanship, in an article appearing in the July 25th issue of the Round Table made much the same point. He called it being "civic minded".

An Outsider's Look-In

Mr. Breck Moss, an attorney, acting as arbitrator in a complaint brought before the Arbitration Tribunal in Oklahoma City, made some interesting observations in rendering his opinion. Among the factors to be considered by him was the seating capacity of each of the theatres involved. "Regardless of the number of seats in a theatre, the value of this factor is getting the seats occupied. If attractive features are not available, seats are ships at sea with little cargo." Mr. Moss has a most interesting thought and says it better than it has been said.

LOBBY, FRONT and STREET

Showmen Use Every Approach to Inform Public of Their Attractions

This miniature theatre was built by Stewart Gillespie, manager of the Marks Theatre, Oshawa, Ont., who is seen on the right. His assistant, Larry Ryan, is at the left. It's all made out of the covers of press books.

This 24-foot sign atop the marquee of the LaPorte Theatre, LaPorte, Ind., could be seen for six blocks, says Wayne Sweeney, manager.

Famous West Pointers are shown in this lobby display in the Orpheum Theatre, Portland, Ore., where Zollie M. Volchok is the manager.

Ann Miller was chosen queen of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) tobacco market. Harvey Smith, manager of the State Theatre in the tobacco town, went back stage of the Paramount Theatre in New York, while on vacation, to present her with the crown. Miss Miller wears a sarong of Forsyth County (N. C.) tobacco.

This is the main lobby display used in Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., on "Somewhere I'll Find You", soon to be released. Les Pollock manages the house.

"Ghosts" walked the streets of Madison, Wis., in the interest of Marlowe Conner's engagement of "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost" at the Capitol Theatre.

Stearn, Carter Stage Big Drive In a Small Town

A special edition of the local paper was issued by Harry Stearn and Ken Carter for their engagement of "Tarzan's New York Adventure" at Schine's Manring, Middlesboro, Ky. The regular headline was replaced by a special one dealing with the picture and the lead story was removed in favor of one about "Tarzan." The entire back page was devoted to a misspelled word contest. Merchants' ads on this cooperative page covered the entire cost. Boys put these papers out shouting "Extra" as they went along and naturally they commanded Middlesboro folks' attention. Large store windows were used for the posting of paper and stills on the picture. The large figure of Tarzan on the 24-sheet was cut out and mounted on heavy primetex. The sign artist painted the other side and thus gave a two-sided figure. This was hung from a rope which was tied to the top of the theatre building and thus gave the effect of Tarzan actually swinging from the theatre. This was spotlighted at night for further effectiveness. The sidewalk in front of the theatre was painted with four foot letters reading "Tarzan" and the playdates. This was made into a double sign and therefore readable to pedestrians in either direction. A man in gorilla costume was used as a street ballyhoo in advance. This was the first time such a stunt was attempted in Middlesboro and it therefore attracted lots of attention. During the engagement a picket was used with a sign reading, "Manring Theatre unfair to keep 'Tarzan's New York Adventure' only two days, Sunday and Monday." In addition, the boys got a swell front using a background of heavy green foliage for giant three-foot letters spelling out the title. Inside, the lobby was made up into a veritable jungle with animal heads mounted on walls, all being deep in heavy foliage and illuminated with colored spots. The public address system was used on the marquee on the day before the opening with a local boy who is very good at imitating the Tarzan call and wild animal noises, supplying the effects. Spot announcements were, of course, plentiful.

Scott's Novelty Herald

To sell his forthcoming attractions at the Margie Grand, in Harland, Ky., Leon B. Scott recently distributed two fold tinted folders with star photo and copy on the front reading: "Are you looking for a substitute for Sugar? If you are then . . ." followed by inside spread "Visit the Margie Grand where you are always assured of a honey of a show." Below was listed the picture titles together with playdates.

Boyle's "Rio Rita" Tieup

Joe Boyle at Loew's Poli Broadway, in Norwich, Conn., ahead of "Rio Rita" promoted a local five-and dime store for an entire front window which featured the song hits from the picture. In addition a department store which sells a Rio Rita line of shoes also came through with a cooperative ad.

Girls' View of Theatre Publicity

by MARIAN GRONAW
Publicity Director
Spreckels Theatre
San Diego, Calif.

Girls in publicity work have a definite advantage over men. First of all, men are predisposed to be courteous to them. Second, they are not expected to "salve" their contacts by drinks, "palsy" palaver, etc. Third, the feminine sex is inclined to take more pains with detail, which is conducive to proper preparation of material. Fourth, girls can call up their contact, or drop a little note, to give thanks for favors shown, in a manner which would seem too effusive in a man.

Don't "Vamp" the Contact

Take the first point about courtesy. It is not so easy to turn down a smiling girl freshly attired and eager to win her point. This leads into the aside that one of the "nevers" is an attempt to vamp or gush her way into favor. That is, for steady contact. Men resent it. Just working on one project might turn the trick that once, but if a girl wants to last in the business, let her beware of the extremes in dress, either the glamorous or the masculine type, and of extremes in manner and speech. Sincerity wins every battle in the long run.

This is closely akin to the second point, that of not being expected to ladle out drinks and tell barroom stories. Not that a girl can't turn a wisecrack now and then to the right person at the right time. But it saves so much valuable time on both sides not have to court favors in the masculine way. And 9 times out of 10, the contact is only too happy to have the press agent, male or female, leave material and get out of his hair.

Prepare Material Properly

Third and most important, is that preparation of material. Girls can, and will, take the trouble to measure up to masculine approval by turning in stories and captions properly prepared according to the needs of the contact. This is a phase sadly neglected by the men, generally speaking. But girls turning in just the right length of yarn, correctly spelled, neatly typed, properly spaced between lines and on the page, are not only going to see that yarn printed pretty nearly the way they turned it in, but are going to have a chalk mark high on the list with her men contacts. Because, girls, men naturally think you haven't enough brains to do that in the first place and it's pleasant surprise when you score.

Second only in importance is the female ability to do the polite thing. Our advice is to never forget a favor, and to absorb the slights gracefully. A story printed as you turned it in, with a good position on the page, (ditto for art, of course,) is worthy of a phone call or a verbal thank you on the next call. Tell your contact you were delighted, and appreciate the favor. On the slip-ups, gloss them over with the remark that you were most disappointed, but know it was "one of those things" that happened IN SPITE of your contact's best efforts. There will be times when you would like to "axe" your contact, but never forget that a display of temper in a girl labels her immediately in the office as a termagent.

Display Feminine Dependency

Added to this is just the right display of feminine dependency. If you have brains, let them seep through. If you have good looks, rejoice, but don't over emphasize them. Sameness of disposition, a ready smile, a subtle flattering of your contact's ability, proper preparation of your material especially adapted to your contact's needs, and a follow-up of grateful appreciation . . . and girls, you're there to stay. And it's a grand game.

Mrs. Marian Gronaw, who wrote the article on this page, says, "I think it is generally acknowledged that newspaper training is the perfect background for publicity. I didn't touch on the field of ad making," she says, "but here is a perfect field for women. She takes her orders from a man, it's true. But she tempers the angles with the inevitable woman's viewpoint, usually quite different. Her innate sense of balance and proportion lends itself to ad making, a sense much more common readily to the art of taking a batch of material and a batch of ideas, spreading them out, sorting them into bundles, and arranging them attractively. After all isn't that ad making?" she asks.

By Norman T. Van Pelt

Marian Gronaw, in charge of publicity for Lou Metzger's Spreckels Theatre, San Diego, Calif. Mrs. Gronaw says of the article on this page, "It is an attempt at stating my true convictions on the subject."

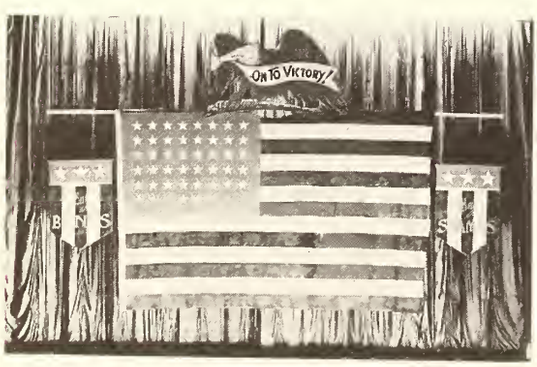
AWARD CONTENDERS

These Ideas have been Entered for Quigley War Showmanship Prize

Ken Collins and Leonard Tuttle of the Indiana Theatre, Indianapolis, promoted this window display in a leading department store. They redeemed old coins at market value.

By Bill Ehrich

From this booth in the lobby of Loew's Theatre, Evansville, Ind., War Stamps and Bonds are sold under direction of H. W. Reisinger, manager.



By R. Uhl Studios

This is the lobby of the Strand Theatre, Cumberland, Md.: F. K. O'Kelly, manager, says that since the photo was taken both panels have been filled. "I believe it is a great goodwill gesture," he says.

This display is mounted on a background of foreign language newspapers in ten different tongues. It's in the lobby of the Roosevelt, Philadelphia, where Artie Cohn is the manager.

Zinn Sells War Stamps at Box Office—Signs Cover It

Since the Century Theatre, in Minneapolis, is located in the busiest shopping district in the loop, Charlie Zinn chose his boxoffice to further the sale of War Stamps and Bonds. A small standee urges patrons to ask for stamps instead of change, while the cashier also puts the same question to the customers. A sign under the boxoffice merchandises the sale, while a red, white and blue sign over all does the same.

For the lobby a beautiful illuminated display with flags, etc., and an illustration of a Minute Man sells the fact to patrons that they may make their purchases at the theatre. The foyer has the same illuminated treatment, except that an Air Force Aviator is used instead of the Minute Man. A trailer on the screen with appropriate music background and illustration also does a selling job.

On Zinn's daily programs over Station WDGY, five minutes is devoted to the drive All outdoor billing carries a strip reading "Buy Your War Stamps and Bonds at This Theatre," as did the newspaper ads. Atop his canopy, Zinn used three-foot illuminated letters along the same lines.

"Buy a Bar for Buddy" Sign

"Buy a Bar for a Buddy" is the attractive sign that now greets patrons in practically every theatre in Portland. Movie-goers are thus given the timely suggestion that they purchase a candy bar, at the theatre vending machines—usually one for themselves, and then one for one of the boys in service. This is immediately dropped into a large wire-locked basket.

Once a week a representative calls from the George A. White Service Men's center, to pick up and distribute the bars free to visiting service men.

Elder Invites Enlistees

Guest tickets were given to young men enlisting in the Navy during "Ship Ahoy" week, one of the features of the campaign for the musical put over by Bill Elder, Loew's Indianapolis. A contest in the local Times offered a War Bond for the best 15-word answer to: "Why I Joined the Navy."

The Lafayette (La.) Business and Professional Women's Club buys a $100 War Bond at the booth of the Jefferson Theatre, managed by Tom Maine.

By Metropolitan

Parkhurst Cracks Army Post Paper

Pvt. Pearce Parkhurst, formerly manager of the Colonial Theatre, in Nashua, N. H. and now in the Army at Dow Field, Bangor, Maine, forwards us a copy of the Dow Field Observer which devotes two columns to the ex-manager's theatrical career.

Among the highlights of Parkhurst's biography was the fact that he had become a manager at the tender age of 18, was a member of the Round Table and had taken down citations in the Quigley Awards.

Teschner Uses Trade Ad

For his lobby display, Ted Teschner at Loew's Poli-Bijou, in New Haven, featured a cutout display of the recent War Activities trade ad showing uniformed men in action. As the base of the setpiece, planted in a strategic spot in the lobby, were the words: "Are You Behind the Men in This Picture?"

Passes for Rubber Collectors

A reward for 25 youngsters of the Junior Victory Army who helped collect most rubber in the Detroit scrap rubber drive was an invitation to a special screening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" where they met Detroit's leading West Pointers. David M. Idzal of the Fox Theatre arranged the tie-up with Hearst papers.

Havener's "Lose Talk" Folder

A telescopic folder carrying messages against loose talk was used by Sid Havener, Paramount, Lake Charles, La., as a feature of his promotion for "Joe Smith, American."

McCollom Uses Model of Tank to Sell War Bonds

Effective was the six by seven foot compoboard model of an army tank constructed by Nelson D. McCollom, manager of Young's Tivoli Theatre, in Gary, Ind. Painted grey, it was mounted on a large platform with a large silk flag atop. On a large piece of drawing paper, the words: "Uncle Sam Wants Your Autograph" was lettered. The idea being for bond purchasers to sign their names. At the base of the tank was placed a red, white and blue table with a 40 by 60 sign. McCollom also secured the cooperation of one of the leading department stores, which supplied the services of a young lady every evening to sell bonds and stamps. As an inducement, the theatreman offered two free passes with every bond purchased. Nelson also runs a trailer on his screen all the time, keeping his patrons informed on the theatre's progress in the bond sale. A young lady is also on hand to make the war stamp corsages for sale at the theatre.

Smozanek Enlists Aid of Red Cross and Motor Corps

The local Motor Corps, the Red Cross and other agencies' services were enlisted by John Smozanek, manager of the Strand Theatre, Summit, N. J., for the sale of War Stamps and Bonds. A member of one of these organizations sits in the lobby at all times to handle the sales. A large display featuring a picture of General MacArthur, President Roosevelt's "We Can, We Will, We Must" and other copy flanks the desk occupied by the local ladies. John further advises that $5,004 worth of War Stamps and Bonds was sold in 40 days.

10% of Gross in War Bonds

E. C. Hoffman, managing director of the Hollywood Theatre. Buchanan, Mich., carries a line in all his advertising, "For the duration, 10 per cent of the gross receipts of this theatre will be used in purchasing U. S. War Savings Bonds." He has run this line ever since August of last year.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars ran the rubber salvage booth for Ed Harris, manager of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif. A scale weighed all contributions and donors were paid one cent a pound. This youngster is exchanging his bicycle tire for a War Stamp.

Cornell's Ingenious "Invaders" Herald

While requiring a little additional work Clay Cornell at the State, in Tupper Lake reports comment on his herald distribution for "The Invaders." These were folded in the form of the letter "V," stapled and handed out in that form, people expressing their curiosity by opening them immediately.

Cornell arranged to have the U. S. Customs men located in town attend the showing, this netting a story in the weekly paper. Special letters were sent to Air Raid Wardens and Auxiliary Police and Firemen and a 40 by 60 made from a press book cover with production stills to which was added headline copy taken from papers on the freighter sinking in St. Lawrence and the more recent headlines of the capture of the eight Nazi saboteurs.

Roberts' "Doctor" Lobby

For his lobby display on "Good Morning, Doctor," Reynolds Roberts at the Elite, in Middlesbrough, England, featured a hospital scene consisting of a bed in which was planted a store dummy. Through the use of a concealed microphone, the dummy was made to talk. The entire setup was surrounded by stills and starheads.

Kalberer's Doodler Contest

In connection with the opening of "Take a Letter, Darling," A. J. Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., ran a typewriter doodler contest. War stamps were awarded as prizes to those submitting the best pictures of an animal, tree, or anything, "drawn" by use of typewriter letters.

Hero Contest Planted By Krolick on "York"

To usher in his date on "Sergeant York" at the Century Theatre, in Rochester, Art Krolick planted an identification contest in his local daily. Guest tickets were awarded to those correctly identifying a series of photos of American heroes together with brief biographies which were run in the paper.

Radio coverage included a special mystery melody program with passes given to those recognizing the songs. Spot announcements were also landed, and a dramatization of the picture broke on the opening night with announcements after the program plugging the theatre and date.

Blotters with the theatre ad were placed in all Postal Telegraph envelopes and mailed with monthly invoices, while inserts were placed in five and dime store packages. In addition, Krolick called on all the draft boards in the city and made arrangements whereby any inductees leaving for service during the week of the picture engagement were invited to see the show.

Miller's "My Gal Sal" Dances

"My Gal Sal" dances were featured at the Arthur Murray Studios in the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, as a result of a tie-up arranged by Manager Edward Miller of the Hippodrome Theatre.

Coleman's Juke Box Tieup

Ronald Coleman of the Kearse Theatre tied up 350 juke boxes throughout Charleston, W. Va., with stickers and theatre announcement for "My Gal Sal."

Kuhn Gives "Syncopation" A Rousing Campaign

The Palms State theatre, Detroit, under the supervision of Manager Don Kuhn, gave "Syncopation" a rousing campaign, stressing the "7 Kings of Swing," which resulted in a very successful week's gross.

Trailers started three weeks in advance and the art pieces throughout the theatre were numerous. A recording turn table blasted forth with swing tunes in the lobby, where a space was reserved for any rug-cutters who had the urge to swing out and also in front of the theatre calling attention to the lobby dancing. Prize awards were given dance contestants at certain times during the course of each evening. Kuhn also arranged a tie-up with more than 1,000 juke box operators, wherein each record machine carried a cooperative sticker with copy stressing the recordings that could be heard on the machines and the screen appearance of the "7 Great Kings of Swing" in the picture "Syncopation." Huge blowups of each of the seven bandleaders were placed in the front exit doors of the theatre, one week in advance, and were moved out front during the current run.

Technical Adviser Aids "Eagle Squadron" Date

Since RAF Flying Officer John Hill, technical adviser for "Eagle Squadron," was in Atlantic City in connection with the opening of the picture, Harry Waxman at the Hollywood Theatre went to town to sell him and the date. Interviews were arranged over the local radio stations, dailies also coming through with stories. Effective window displays were promoted, imprinted napkins distributed at local restaurants in addition to special heralds which were attached to menus. The newspaper campaign was ushered in with a series of small ads scattered throughout the paper 10 days in advance, building up to a large ad on opening day. Carl Singer, advertising manager, aided the campaign.

Beauty Booklets for "Blonde"

Tieing up with Westmore for free beauty booklets given to the ladies during the engagement, Bob Kessler, manager of Warners' Benn Theatre, Philadelphia, promoted a novel contest among patrons for "My Favorite Blonde." A special herald containing hidden color effect was issued and those returning them with Miss Carroll's hair in blonde effect were given free tickets to the show. Patrons were asked to wet the tip of their fingers and rub Miss Carroll's hair. If it turned blonde, they were declared winners of the free tickets. He also arranged special prizes for the most popular blondes within the theatre area.

Scott Uses Teaser Giveaways

Teaser giveaways are Boyd Scott's forte for the pictures he plays in the Broadway and Lyric Theatres, Lubbock, Texas. Recent samples include three different types on "Kid Glove Killer," which convey the "menace" of the picture forcefully. Another and larger one is the opening of "Riders of Death Valley," a serial. In order to attract the kids, Boyd offered a 10-cent book of comics free to the first 250 boys and girls to come to the Lyric.

Lands Radio Coverage On "Annie Rooney"

A considerable amount of coverage was landed over Station WNAB by Morris Rosenthal as his advance for the opening of "Little Miss Annie Rooney" at the Majestic Theatre, in Bridgeport, Conn. The Round Tabler arranged for 17 spot announcements to run over a period of three days, two days ahead of his opening. The United Artists 15-minute radio transcription was used and Rosenthal arranged with the radio editor to list it on the day's Best Radio Programs.

For his street ballyhoo, candy kisses were distributed in imprinted envelopes bearing copy: "As exciting as a first kiss." A feature story was landed on Shirley Temple with two columns of art, cards were used in all local buses and menus were imprinted in prominent restaurants and lunch counters. For his musical tieups, stores featured window displays plugging the jive angle in the picture.

Salt Lake Society Sees "Moontide"

Included among the guests invited to a special showing of "Moontide" at the 20th Century-Fox Salt Lake City Exchange were such varied elements of the female population as social leaders, receptionists, telephone operators, waitresses, elevator operators, nurses, Western Union Clerks, office workers and debutantes. The Salt Lake City campaign was engineered by manager Charles Pincus of the Utah Theatre, Helen Garrity, publicist for Intermountain Theatres and 20th Century-Fox exploitation man Earl H. Keate.

Williams Ties Stores To "Vanishing Virginian"

Through the aid of local merchants, F. L. Williams at the Holland, in Bellefontaine, Ohio, secured co-op ads for his date on "Vanishing Virginian." In exchange, the Round Tabler presented the stores with autographed copies of the book. For his newspaper attention, Williams featured an "Open letter to the Boss" ad, which attracted, as did his "sleeper" ad. Mailing pieces were sent to his regular weekly program list and also dropped in local parked cars about town.

Furniture Store Holds "Twin Beds" Radio Contest

An ideal tie-up was made by Round Tabler Fred Lee of the Capitol Theatre of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for his campaign on "Twin Beds." A local furniture company tied up for a radio contest which was staged nightly and brought plenty of plugs for the picture. Listeners were asked to name five films with the word bed mentioned in the title. In addition the furniture company set up a window display featuring large cutouts of the stars in twin beds with addition stills and copy also being used.

Ties "West Point" to History

The Battle of Mississinewa, which took place in what is now Indiana, was the first in which West Point men were engaged. Manager Arthur W. Baker dug up the historical background on that event to make the news columns of Indianapolis papers for the opening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" at the Circle Theatre.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

DESPERATE JOURNEY (Warner Bros.): Action is the keynote of the picture and it should be sold as an action picture. Predominating the illustrations used for advertising purposes and in the pictorial matter is a photo of Errol Flynn as he strangled a helmeted Nazi soldier. To tie up the title and make people conscious of it, there is a contest available in mat form depicting four other desperate journeys for identification by newspaper readers. There is a scene from the picture which has been cut into sections for reassembling by contestants in another idea to sell tickets. Tickets which look like railroad tickets can be issued with each admission a week in advance; these tickets can bear copy stating that they are good for a desperate journey, etc. There is a tabloid herald (available in mat form) which can be imprinted on the back with a merchant's ad to defray the cost. Since the fliers in the picture bombed Berlin and then were shot down on their way back, and then acted like a Commando from then on, various ideas can be used employing the phrase, "Command raid to Berlin and back". If any fighting pilots either with or without experience are available, they can be tied up with the picture's action and feted in advance. If they have been over Germany, so much the better for newspaper publicity.

ARE HUSBANDS NECESSARY? (Paramount): The title of the picture is a teasing one to begin with and can be made the basis of a teaser campaign. For instance, an attractive girl can picket the License Bureau long enough to have her photo taken with signs reading, "Are Husbands Necessary? See the picture at the Strand for the answer." Similar pickets (girls) can be in front of the theatre and elsewhere with "Unfair to Wives" signs. An inquiring reporter could be sent to ask the question of engaged couples, whose names can be obtained from the newspaper. An essay contest asking for 25 words answers to the question in the title would be provocative of much comment. A similar idea over the radio would have more sopntaneity and consequently even more humor. There are a number of stills available for planting in store windows of various kinds. There is a little questionnaire suggested with ten questions for men and ten for women. A certain number of positive answers add up to certain conclusions.

Murphy Promotes Charm School

For a summer activity at Loew's State Theatre, in Syracuse, Frank Murphy started a Charm School for women which is now in its fifth week and held each Tuesday afternoon on the mezzanine, thereby not interfering with his regular show.

Murphy has promoted a man and woman beautician who give lectures on makeup, coiffure, beauty culture, exercises, etc., each week using stills of the feminine star of the next attraction in discussing adaptation of movie coiffure and makeup. The school is publicized with a screen trailer, lobby display, etc., and has broken with some excellent stories in the papers.

Feldman's Balloon Gag Sells "The Spoilers"

An attractive street bally was engineered recently by Dick Feldman in advance of "The Spoilers" at the Paramount Theatre, in Syracuse. An usher toured the downtown area carrying three large red balloons on a thin stick about three feet above his head. On the balloons the house artist had drawn clever caricatures of Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. The copy on the usher's vest read: "These three guys are the modern version of 'The Spoilers.' See Rex Beach's version at the Paramount—Now."

Army Wife Entertains "Ten Gentlemen"

Here is a workable idea for the theatre managers in a town near an Army post or Air Corps field and one that was tried out in Oklahoma City by E. I. Hoig, manager of the Midwest Theatre. Before the opening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" the wife of an Army lieutenant doing foreign service was hostess at a dinner to which were invited ten West Pointers recently reported for duty at Cimarron Field. The Army wife who was selling defense stamps and bonds at Brown's Department Store also was hostess at a screening of the picture for the men from the Point.

Kiddie Birthday Parties

Abe Goldsmith, manager of Warners' Waverly Theatre, Philadelphia, introduced Kiddie Birthday Parties. Parents are invited to purchase tickets for birthday groups and arrange the celebration for the youngster at the theatre during the regular kiddies' matinee. During the show, Goldsmith makes a special announcement from the stage and gets the entire audience to sing "Happy Birthday" for all the youngsters celebrating their birthdays with a theatre party. Gifts are given to the youngsters on the stage with a special gift, the compliments of the theatre.

ABOUT SHOWMEN

These Are the Men of the Theatre In the News This Week

Bud Kornblite Follows Father's Footsteps in Show Business

Bud Kornblite, a consistent Round Table contributor, came naturally to show business —his father was a showman. Kornblite, Sr., started when the motion picture business started and was one of the owners of the Binghamton Theatre until 1930 when he sold out to Comerford. He is now Binghamton general manager for the Comerford interests. Bud naturally followed the show business ever since he was able and old enough to work. He is only 25 years old now (he'll celebrate his birth on the 27th of this month), but he has 12 years of experience back of him. He started by peddling hand bills and distributing advertising for the Capitol, Strand and Riviera Theatres in Binghamton. At 15, he was an usher, 17, doorman. After two years at the University of North Carolina, he returned to Binghamton as assistant manager of the Suburban Theatre. A couple of years later he was transferred to the Capitol at Waverly, N. Y., and since November last year has been manager of that house.

Grizzanti Started Career Under Arnold Stoltz

James Grizzanti, a new member of the Managers' Round Table, started as an usher in the Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., a few years ago under the well-known Arnold Stoltz, last year's Grand Award Winner. He was successively promoted to chief usher, then to doorman, and about nine months ago was made assistant manager. Last month he resigned to accept the post of assistant manager and publicity man at the Kallet Circuit's Uptown Theatre also in Utica.

By Staff Photographer

Walter Hall, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Johnstown, Penna., who was a visitor to the Round Table offices last week while on vacation. Walt is an old timer in the business, having experience in many lines, and he is now handling the stage show house in Johnstown for Warner Brothers because of his long experience.

Joe Feulner, of Des Plaines, Started Career as Usher

Joseph H. Feulner, now manager of the Des Plaines Theatre, Des Plaines, Ill., for the Harry Balaban Circuit, started as usher with Warner Bros. in Chicago. Over a period of time he was promoted to assistant manager and finally to the Calumet Theatre, Hammond, Ind., as manager. About eight years ago, Joe joined the Harry Balaban Circuit as manager of the Dearborn Theatre in Chicago. Lated he was transferred to the Windsor of the same circuit and when the company took over the Des Plaines, Joe was shifted to his present post.

Bally Man in Stripes

A man dressed in stripes and with a "cop" in pursuit provided a suitable ballyhoo for "Men of San Quentin" at the Bijou in New Haven. Norman Levinson conceived and executed the idea.

Former Fox Attorney Answers Charges

Attorneys for Morgan S. Kaufman, former attorney for William Fox, filed a lengthy answer on August 5th to the recommendation of three special masters in Philadelphia who held him guilty of "grossly unprofessional conduct" in his relations with former U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis at a time he was acting as attorney for Mr. Fox. Mr. Kaufman's attorneys listed 30 exceptions to the masters' report, most of them based on the manner in which testimony in the conspiracy trials was accepted and interpreted.

The masters recommended to Judge Guy K. Bard, of the U. S. district court in Philadelphia, that Mr. Kaufman be disciplined for his part in the transactions charged against Mr. Davis, Mr. Kaufman and Mr. Fox. Criminal charges against Mr. Kaufman and Mr. Davis were dropped after two juries failed to agree. Mr. Fox, who pleaded guilty and testified against them, was sentenced to a year and a day in prison. The sentence was upheld the previous week by the U. S. circuit court of appeals.

Sue on Actor's Earnings

The mother of Roddy McDowall, 12-year-old film actor, is the defendant in a Los Angeles suit for $36,000, charging breach of contract, brought by the boy's former agents. They contend his earnings amounted to $360,000 in the course of a five-year contract period, and ask 10 per cent of that sum.

Reade Completes Project

Walter Reade, theatre operator, has completed his Monte Carlo Beach Club and swimming pool at Asbury Park. It is said to have cost $500,000, occupying an entire block, and providing facilities for 7,500 bathers.

Fire Destroys Film

Fire caused damage of $50,000 in the two-story building of the Wholesome Film Service, Inc., in the South End of Boston on July 28. Thousands of feet of educational film were reported lost in the fire.

IN THE COURTS

Paramount Suit on Bioff Money is dismissed

Ruling that the Paramount stockholders and the company "have had their day in court and the result is final," Federal Judge John Bright last week dismissed a parallel derivative suit in Federal district court, New York, brought to compel an accounting of extortion funds turned over to Willie Bioff and George E. Browne. The court reached its decision after noting that an appeal was pending from a dismissal of the New York supreme court suit with the declaration that the appeal "does not alter the finality of the judgment."

The Federal court action, similar in its charges and demands to the state court suit, was brought before Justice Carroll G. Walter dismissed the latter action on July 3, 1942, after a full trial. "The rendition of the judgment in the state court upon the same issues as are involved in this action, is admitted," Judge Bright said. "A judgment in the stockholders derivative action is res judicata both as to the corporation and as to all of its stockholders, including stockholders who were not parties to the original action in subsequent actions based upon the same subject matter."

"That the case in the state court may not have been properly tried, as the plaintiffs now intimate," the opinion continued, "does not in any way militate against the finality of the judgment there entered. The corporation and its stockholders had their day in court, and the result is final."

Fanchon & Marco Suits To Be Tried Next Month

The two suits filed by Fanchon & Marco Enterprises, Inc., against the Ambassador Investment Corporation, the St. Louis Amusement Company, Thomas N. Dysart, president, and Clarence M. Turley, secretary of the amusement company and of the Ambassador Investment Company, will be tried on their merits during the September term of the St. Louis circuit court.

The point at issue is whether Fanchon & Marco, owner of 5,839 shares of Class A and 15,060 shares of Class B stock of the St. Louis Amusement Company, shall have the legal right to exercise a claimed option to purchase 12,431 additional shares of Class A and 13,929 shares of Class B stock. Fanchon & Marco now holds 42 per cent of the stock and the block at issue represents control, or 52 per cent.

Sues for Union Rights

Philip Trainer, projectionist of Chester, Pa., who had once been exepelled from his union, on August 8th, asked the United States district court in Philadelphia to force the union to restore his full membership rights. Suit was filed against the Chester union, Local 516 of the IATSE. He charged that after his expulsion, he paid penalties totaling $202, but was deprived of his right to vote or have a voice in the union's affairs. He contends the union's action constitutes a deprivation of his "right of free speech."

No Building Violation

A municipal court jury in Marshfield, Wis., ruled last week that a 60-inch mirror installed below the foyer floor level in the New Adler theatre did not constitute a violation of the state building code. The State Industrial Commission brought the action.

Wake Island

(Paramount)

Heroic Defense

The page which a small garrison of United States Marines at Wake Island, in the Far Pacific, wrote into the splendid history of the Corps has been translated into the language of the screen with magnificent results.

All the dramatic intensity inherent in the heroic defense of the little Pacific outpost in the early days of American participation in World War II has been caught by the camera and carries a tremendous impact, which should be reflected in box office terms straight across the country.

Based on authentic records of the defense of Wake by a mere handful of Marines and a pitifully small group of planes, the film was made with the cooperation of the Marine Corps, with the screenplay fashioned skillfully and with dramatic force by W. R. Burnett and Frank Butler. John Farrow's direction could not have been improved upon. Joseph Sistrom produced.

Completely devoid of romance, it is basically a day-by-day factual record of the terrible onslaught of the Japanese sea and air forces, vastly superior in numbers, upon the garrison. However, there are humorous moments, chiefly supplied by William Bendix, pugilistic type, who is the butt of the garrison's jokes.

There is little to choose in performance quality among the players. From Brian Donlevy, as Major Caton, who takes up his post just prior to the Japanese attack, down through the list, including Robert Preston, Macdonald Carey, Albert Dekker, Walter Abel, Damian O'Flynn and Frank Albertson.

The battles between four or five American fighter planes and a score of big Japanese bombers, the ruse by which Caton permits a Jap Naval squadron to come close to shore before blasting it with concealed guns, and the suicidal flight of Carey in sinking a Jap cruiser out of range of the garrison's guns, are among the film's highlights. With the headlines war-laden, the selling of this film should be a good something less than a problem.

An audience which filled the Paramount projection room to capacity gave the film rapt attention, and applauded it vigorously at the conclusion. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—CHARLES S. AARONSON

Iceland

(Twentieth Century-Fox, 1942-'43)

Sonja Henie at the Peak

Superbly staged skating sequences with Sonja Henie at her best makes this offering by the Norwegian star well worth playing.

It is a year since Sonja Henie has made a picture, a year in which much has happened and a year that has seen a steadily increasing number of pictures with war themes or background. And so it is here. The Marines have landed at Reykjavik in Iceland and seem to have the situation well in hand. The fact that the Marines are there and that it is a Marine (John Payne) who captures Sonja's heart leads up to the last skating sequence, a patriotic tableau with a martial music motif including "Anchors Aweigh" and the Marine's own stirring song.

But while the times have served to change the theme and the locale there are several things about "Iceland" that have a similarity to Miss Henie's "Sun Valley Serenade" of a year ago. The first is that her skating still is of the very best—and welcome after such a long year. The second is that her leading man again is John Payne, the third that again a name band contributes to the merriment and the fourth, the music of Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. The name band is Sammy Kaye's.

Of the music let it be said that the Gordon-Warren team has contributed several melodic songs, destined to be heard in the weeks to come. They are "You Can't Say No to a Soldier" sung here most competently by Joan Merrill; "Lovers Knot" (It's the), a real hit tune; "Let's Bring New Glory to Old Glory," sung by the members of Sammy Kaye's band; "There'll Never Be Another You" and "I Like a Military Tune," the theme song for the final patriotic number.

Lots of people are going to be completely bewildered. It is an Iceland such as you wouldn't dream of in your least rational moments. The "Hotel Jorg" where a good deal of the picture takes place, is reminiscent of an elegant Swiss hostelry and it's ballroom seems to have been transplanted directly from New York or Hollywood.

The story creaks from repetition and slows down the picture but is of little consequence when balanced by the superb skating of Miss Henie and entourage. It has to do with the manipulations of the skater's family to marry her off in a hurry to the first taker so that her younger sister by "Icelandic" tradition may be free to marry the wealthy son of a herring merchant. Practically all of the footage concerning this phase of the picture is played for comedy but doesn't always accomplish its purpose. Jack Oakie, also a Marine and buddy of Payne, is in on this too, but below par, primarily due to inadequate material.

There is another skating sequence which rivals and to this corner surpasses all the others. It is in three parts, China, Panama and Hawaii. Some of the finest "dance" skating Miss Henie has ever done and some of the most attractive costumes ever seen on an ice floor make this sequence something to remember.

William LeBaron produced and Bruce Humberstone directed from an original screenplay by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan. Skating ensembles were by James Gonzales.

Previewed at the Twentieth Century-Fox projection room in New York. A trade press audience to all intents and purposes enjoyed the offering but was floored by the elegance of the Iceland pictured, to the extent that one reviewer expressed a desire to enlist in the Marines for immediate duty there. A Yank at Eton

Mickey at Eton

This time it's Mickey in "college"—but it's Eton in England he goes to, instead of Notre Dame in the U. S. A. And he is disappointed. The result is well indicated, including his resentment, not only at his transfer from a California high school, but also against the wealthy Englishman, Ian Hunter, who had married his mother and so brought the change in plans, and against the queer, and to him, unfair, customs pervading the ancient system of Eton.

However, Mickey learns. His rebellions are portrayed as natural; the "beatings" of lower boys by upper class boys in the English "public school" are not glossed, nor explained. It is Mickey's crassness which is explained, and his change which is the story.

He cannot change the bullying upper boys, nor his half brother, Freddie Bartholomew; nor the cringing lower boys; nor his immensely tolerant headmaster, Edmund Gwenn. He can only perceive it is all in the training of "men," the inculcation of that discipline which they will inflict upon others in ruling the British Empire.

At the end of the first semester, still cocky, he inadvertently, but through that cockiness, causes to be destroyed the favorite racing horse of Hunter—a tragedy in that horsey set. Hunter's calmness, the lack of recrimination, impress him. He returns for the second semester humble, and himself now on the "giving" end to the lower boys.

A fast turn to the plot comes in the abduction of Gwenn's auto by Peter Lawford, nasty upper boy; a carousal; the smashing of the auto; Lawford's unperceived return. Mickey sees Bartholomew outside the boys' house, sees him enter and drop a handkerchief. He attempts to retrieve it and is caught by Gwenn. When, next morning, the fate of the auto is known, Mickey is accused.

"Covering" Freddie, he says nothing. Expulsion looms on the eve of a hurdle race in which he thought he'd best Lawford. The detective work of Juanita Quigley, his young sister, clears him, however; she learns, and he learns, Lawford's whereabouts the previous evening in a tavern.

A teetering taxiful of boys finds the tavern keeper, drags him to the race, where he identifies Lawford. But not before Mickey, given permission by Gwenn to enter the race, strips to shorts, and even though far behind at first, races ahead and wins.

The picture is a moderately successful exposition of Eton life, with Mickey and his pals an immensely successful leavening, with several uproarious scenes. One, that in which the teen age Eton boys best the tavern keeper and his men, is especially funny. Mickey's face, working furiously and reflecting angry incredulity, in many adjustments to England, is constantly a sight to bring laughs.

The photography and direction are of MGM's best. Karl Freund and Charles Lawton were cameramen and Norman Taurog was the director. John Considine, Jr., produced from a screenplay by George Oppenheimer, Lionel Houser, and Thomas Phipps, who worked from an original by Mr. Oppenheimer.

Berlin Correspondent

Outwitting the Gestapo

An action packed melodrama which pleasantly stretches the imagination and at all times holds suspense, this picture of an American correspondent in Berlin at grips with the Gestapo and outwitting them at almost every turn is good screen fare. The film maintains a fast pace, a fact that should be appreciated by devotees of melodrama.

Dana Andrews plays the fearless correspondent with competence and verve and is abetted ably by Virginia Gilmore as the German fraulein in the Gestapo headquarters assigned to "get the goods" on Andrews after so many other of the Gestapo agents have failed. She is successful but inadvertently seals the fate of her own father, who has been selling secret information to the correspondent. She, incidentally, unwittingly supplied her father with the information.

When her father is tortured by the Gestapo and sent to an insane asylum, the fraulein seeks help of the American and he, by brazenly posing as a German colonel on Der Fuehrer's personal staff, makes good an escape. The Gestapo retaliates by sending the American to a concentration camp. With the help of the fraulein he also escapes and the two of them make their way over the border in a "borrowed" plane. Bryan Foy produced and Eugene Forde directed.

Cairo

Intrigue with Music

Dedicated "irreverently" to the unsung heroes, the writers of spy melodramas, this is a travesty on espionage. It recounts how a small town newspaperman, assigned as a war correspondent, becomes involved in spy activities in Cairo and unwittingly becomes the dupe for foreign agents. There he makes the acquaintance of a famous Hollywood motion picture star, who, he had been led to believe, is the leader of a spy ring. She in turn suspects him and the two innocents carry on their little game while the real spies go merrily about their business.

Jeanette MacDonald is the motion picture star and she sings several songs in the course of the proceeding. Robert Young plays the misguided small town newspaperman. A host of character actors play their roles with spirit. They include Reginald Owen, Grant Mitchell, Lionel Atwill, Edward Ciannelli and Mona Barrie. For added effect Ethel Waters, as the film star's maid, sings a song.

On his way from America to get the "real" news about the war, Young's boat is torpedoed and sunk. He finds himself on a raft in the Mediterrannean with a Nazi spy, who poses as a member of British Intelligence. Landing, they separate, with the spy imparting certain military information. In Cairo, Young contacts the Nazi agents believing them to be Allied agents. To get rid of Young they send him on a wild goose chase involving spying on Miss MacDonald. He becomes her butler and his queer antics arouse her suspicion.

In one of those fantastic climaxes peculiar to spy melodramas the spies are captured and Young parachutes out of a burning plane which, radio-controlled, is headed for an Allied troopship. The plane explodes before it reaches the ship and the troops are saved.

Some of the scenes bolstered by amusing dialogue are very funny. In one, on landing on the desert with the Nazi agent, Young accidentally fires a shot which brings a score of Italian soldiers with their hands up begging to be taken prisoners. They are terribly disappointed when this request is refused. The picture is rather long, due to the musical sequences. Major W. S. Van Dyke directed from a screenplay by John McClain. The story is based on an idea by Ladislas Fodor.

Previewed at the MGM projection room in New York. A trade press audience found the picture very amusing at times. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—P.C.M.,JR.

CHANGE TITLE OF "FLEW ALONE"

The English-made picture, "They Flew Alone", will be released in this country as "Wings and the Woman". A biographical chronicle of the life of the British woman flier, Amy Johnson, the film stars Anna Neagle. It was directed by Herbert Wilcox and is being released by RKO on its 1942-43 program.

A review of the picture, from London, appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of May 2nd. It said: "The film is biography rather than drama, a chronicle record of Amy's life and career. . . . There is little attempt on Wilcox's part to shape the material into dramatic form, and incident follows incident and flight follows flight. . . . Technically, the film has nothing spectacular about it, but nothing, on the other hand, to suggest reproof."

Orchestra Wives

(Twentieth Century-Fox 1942-43)

Music Film for the Masses

Glenn Miller and his orchestra give this musical all they've got, and that's a lot, in the opinion of just about everybody who goes for swing music, and if that isn't everybody it's a reasonable facsimile, according to radio polls, juke box ballots and record sales these past couple of years.

The picture in which Maestro Miller and his men work out is as rhythmic and pleasant and divertingly trivial as one of his band numbers, which is a tribute to William LeBaron, producer; Archie Mayor, director, Karl Tunberg and Darrell Ware, screen writers, and to James Prindle, who concocted the story supplied to keep interest keen between musical numbers.

George Montgomery, Ann Rutherford, Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Carole Landis and some others furnish plenty of marquee copy for showmen, if any, whose customers are not 100 per cent Glenn Miller fans. They all play band members or band members' wives and the story's about nothing else whatever. Four songs by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren are hits in their own right, and the delivery they get at the hands of Miller and his men is the kind song writers dream about.

Miss Rutherford, seen here for the first time under the trademark, turns in a performance that sends her off to a flying start. She plays a small town girl who marries a trumpet player and finds that musicians' wives have troubles of their own, which is enough to know about the story of the picture. The film is a natural for any theatre that hasn't got an ironclad rule against jive.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, to a Friday night audience which had the time of its musical life and had made that plain by their applause long before the Nicholas Brothers came on near the finish for one of their sparkling dance specialties, at which point the audience raised the roof. Seven Sweethearts

Tuneful Romance

MGM gives a group of its brightest new faces starring roles in this tuneful romance set against a heritage of the Dutch in America. The result is a happy one. Audiences receive an hour and a half of gay forgetfulness of war and worries, and the exhibitor gets a chance to test showmanship in summoning patrons to meet the new stars on which the box office future must increasingly depend.

Walter Reisch and Leo Townsend set their novel screenplay against the folklore and traditions of the Dutch in this country as preserved in the little town of Holland, Mich., with its tulip festival and other Netherlands traditions.

Van Heflin, already established as a contender for honors among the stars of tomorrow, plays the role of Henry, reporter covering Little Delft's tulip festival. He arrives at the inn kept by Van Maaster, an eccentric old Dutchman, to find that it is run by his seven daughters, all bearing masculine names. Van Maaster had expected all his children to be boys.

Romantic complications develop when he finds that the younger daughters cannot marry until the eldest is betrothed. Marsha Hunt is the oldest, a stage struck and affected girl who is pampered by her father while her sisters do the work. She sees in Henry a chance to meet some big New York producers. But he is enamoured of Billie. Kathryn Grayson as this younger daughter refuses to break tradition and elope and Henry returns to New York still pursued by the eldest daughter, Regina. All is worked out under the benevolent guidance of Van Maaster and the picture closes with seven couples at the altar.

Miss Grayson displays her voice to advantage in several lilting songs at the tulip festival and in the inn. S. Z. Sakall, heretofore seen in bits, makes Van Maaster a grumpy but lovable parent with a skill and humor which should win him wider attention. Peggy Moran, Cecilia Parker and Diana Lewis are attractive additions to the cast.

Frank Borzage's direction makes the most of the screenplay, giving humor, song and credibility to the relatively modest canvas of this Joseph Pasternack production. Franz Waxman wrote the score and Walter Jurmann, Paul F. Webster, Burton Lane and Ralph Freed provided songs for Miss Grayson.

Previewed at Loew's Lexington theatre, New York, where a midweek audience manifested frequent pleasure with Miss Grayson's singing and Mr. Sakall's humor. They applauded heartily at the end. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—JOHN STUART, JR.

Timber

(Universal)

Top of the Series

If you've acquired fixed notions about the series of action films offering Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine as amusing adventurers, don't let them cripple your style in presenting this number. This is by wide margin the best of the series, compressing in its hour of running time more melodramatic tension than all the others linked end to end.

Dan Dailey, Jr., is the third member of the adventuring trio this time, and their adventuring occurs in a lumber camp beset by saboteurs. The means by which the agents of the enemy arrest the flow of timber to the shipyards is unique, supplying a surprise ending which packs a wallop, and the handling of the incidents leading up to this build a tension such as is seldom experienced in the cinema.

There is somewhat less of horseplay in this number than has been par for the series and there is a deal more of fighting, Dailey supplying most of this and making it look like the McCoy all the way.

Production is by Ben Pivar, a good overall job, and direction is by Christy Cabanne, screenplay by Griffin Jay and story by Larry Rhine and Ben Chapman. Not a gigantic or collosal entry in the attractions list, it is nonetheless a triumph within its budget.

Salute John Citizen

(British National - Anglo-American)

Domestic Wartime Drama

Whereas other British pictures have sought to epitomize the role of the services, or to dramatize the glory and the grimness of battle, this homely picture seeks to translate into screen idiom the attitude and the lives of the little man in the suburbs and his wife and children.

The war is its background, with the blitz in all its fury, and the rattle of artillery and the whine of fighter planes off stage, but characters, the life of department store and A.R.F. post, the elemental war aims of John Citizen, make up its narrative and development. There are no heroics, but plenty of emotion, an absence of pageantry and an abundance of homely humor. Despite its war flavour and character the picture, for all its elementary factors, should strike a harmony with popular audiences here, to whom its subject matter will be more familiar than others of more well-bred setting.

The film is based on two popular novels, hero of which is "Mr. Bunting," department store employee living in the suburbs, never able to pay his income tax, but ever loyal at heart. He is seen under the shadow of war, his children translated from grumblers into fighters in uniform, carying on, doing his bit for victory. The ordinary ways of life are traced in the film, which mirrors war conditions studiously if not always subtly, and Edward Rigby's Mr. Bunting, shuffling, direct and quietly courageous, is splendidly convincing.

The film has been directed with no concessions to the expensive seats or the more critical patrons and is in fact a very naive production. It is strung together by a commentary from Mr. Bunting's next door neighbor, and interspersed with a round-by-round commentary on the war from newsreel clips. Its most saleable factor probably is its lack of sophistication, and its relation to the ordinary people and their extrarodinary lives.

Comedian George Robey appears occasionally as a platitudinous but good natured bore, Stanley Holloway gags his way through it as the man next door, and Jimmy Hanley, Eric Micklewood and Peggy Cummings are among the young people. Camera work and sound are adequate, the sets modest, and the script not so good that it might not—and the film—have been much better.

Sweetheart of the Fleet

(Columbia)

Lightweight Comedy

Produced by Jack Fier and directed by Charles Barton, this musical comedy features Joan Davis, carrying most of the entertainment, aided by Brenda and Cobina, those two comediennes who appeared on the Bob Hope radio show a few seasons back. The picture is enhanced by the pulchritudinous Jinx Falkenburg, photographer's model whose face and figure have adorned billboard and magazine ads. This is her third picture under the Columbia banner and she is scheduled for three more next season.

The plot of "Sweetheart of the Fleet" is on the thin side and the situations are not very adroit, but on the whole, the film is fair midsummer entertainment. The musical numbers, under direction of M. W. Stoloff, are tuneful and rendered in lively, martial arrangement.

Miss Davis is featured as an advertising agency executive who gets into difficulty after promising the U. S. Navy and the USO to produce two mystery singers of a popular radio show for a forthcoming Navy recruiting rally. The singers are Brenda and Cobina. Joan plans to put across as "Sweethearts of the Fleet" two photographer's models, Miss Falkenburg and Joan Woodbury. The complications arise during her attempts to keep the real identity of the singers from the Naval officers and the USO liaison. On the eve of the rally, however, the truth is out. The audience, neverthless, decides that the two pretty girls should remain "Sweethearts of the Fleet" and everything ends happily for Joan, her boss, and the two girls. Brenda and Cobina finally "get their men"—two sailors who marry them.

Careful, Soft Shoulders

Washington Spy Story

Polish in production, performance and presentation imparts a deal of fascination to this story of espionage in the nation's capital, and it is not until near the end that it breaks into melodramatics that discount these. By that time an hour of diversion has been had and there is enough excitement in the remainder to hold interest to the fadeout.

Virginia Bruce, whose off-screen voice tells much of the story in a chatty way, makes the character of a Washington society girl misled into helping a Nazi ring, under the delusion that she is aiding the U. S. Secret Service, a credible and interesting thing. The original screenplay by O. H. P. Garrett, who also directed, adroitly places her in quest of Navy secrets which she obtains from a man with whom she falls in love, and unwittingly conveys to the enemy. It is by way of preventing their transmission to Berlin that she and he get themselves captured by the enemy agents whom they at length outwit and overpower.

Just Off Broadway

Shayne Does It Again

This adventure of Michael Shayne, detective, is tops for the series or thereabouts. It excels all or most of the others in nicety of plotting, steadiness of development and in humor. This last notably through the efforts of Phil Silvers as a newspaper photographer. Lloyd Nolan's performance as Shayne and Marjorie Weaver's as the girl reporter are their best.

The screenplay by Arnaud D'Usseau, from an idea by Jo Eisinger, opens with Shayne serving as juror in a murder trial. A socialite is about to be convicted on testimony of a night club singer. A witness is ordered to the stand. Locked up for the night in a hotel room, Shayne lets himself out by the fire escape, is joined by the girl reporter, whereupon they spend the night tracing clues, incidentally discovering a third murder related to the first two. Next day, exercising a juror's prerogative to question witnesses, Shayne fastens the crimes upon the counsel for the defense, and is sentenced to jail for violating jury rules.

As produced by Sol M. Wurtzel and directed by Herbert Leeds the picture rolls smoothly along its way, building suspense and concealing until ready the disclosure of the unsuspected murderer.

Grim Realism

Only a strong-stomached audience can view this picture without being repelled by the sight of maimed and tortured dead bodies, hangings and the other results of Nazi frightfulness as practiced in Russia. But even the sturdiest may turn away from some of the scenes.

With the exception of the first brief sequence showing a peace-time festival in Moscow and Marshal Timoshenko addressing his troops on the eve of the war, the entire time which the picture takes is a graphic picturization of what war means in terms of dead men and women, devastated homes, churches, hospitals and schools, and the misery of the surviving population.

The genuineness of the scenes is apparent in the unposed pictures of grief-stricken relatives returning home to find their loved ones mutilated and exposed to public view. When Nazi prisoners are seen shortly afterward, one wonders how the Russians can be forced to obey the rules of war, how they can be restrained from tearing their erstwhile oppressors limb from limb.

The commentary spoken by Edward G. Robinson is biting and vivid. Each phrase is particularly apt. It may be said that the usual propagandistic utterances heard in connection with Russian pictures are missing from this one.

Produced by the Central Newsreel Studios in Moscow, the picture was given American editing and montage under the guidance of Slavko Vorkapich, a music score arranged by Dimitri Tiomkin and the English commentary by Elliot Paul and Albert Maltz. Nicholas Napoli was in charge of the preparation for the American showing.

Previewed in a crowded projection room, the picture was received in rapt silence until the end, when it was greeted with enthusiastic applause. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—Bob Wile.

Release date, August 15, 1942. Running time, 55 min. Adult audience classification.

UA ACQUIRES "KUKAN"

United Artists has acquired "Kukan", the Chinese feature in color, from Herbert Edwards, who produced the picture, and will reissue it under the title, "Battle Cry of China". The film has been blown up from 16 mm. to standard 35 mm. It was reviewed in Motion Picture Herald, issue of July 5, 1941.

The review said: "The unceasing efforts of China to rid herself of her Japanese invader and the indomitable spirit of the country and its people in this war for freedom are revealed in this impressive documentary. Rey Scott, war correspondent and cameraman, whose byline in American newspapers is familiar to those who have followed the Sino-Japanese conflict through the years, has graphically recorded the heroic sacrifices being made."

Western

A well-made western with plenty of action, this should be pleasing to western fans and especially those who prefer lots of fighting. Don "Red" Barry is the star, playing the title role, and is a tough customer. A gunman for a big time small town crook at the start, he sees the error of his ways and become the crook's most persistent and successful nemesis. Whatever side of the fence Barry happens to be on, he's a small package of dynamite.

The plot is the one about the range war—ungarnished. The crook, portrayed by Alex Callam, is intent on driving the settlers out of the territory to confiscate their lands, and the settlers are just as intent on staying. Barry changes to the side of the settlers when his brother, a doctor, shows him that the crook's warfare extends beyond the ranchers to their children—that an epidemic has resulted from the poisoning of water. The young doctor is played by John James. Lynn Merrick is the girl.

Release date, May 31, 1942. Running time, 56 min. PCA No. 8379. General audience classification.

Talk About Jacqueline

(Excelsior-Metro)

Romance

A British picture without a wartime setting is the exception, but Marcel Hellman's pleasant little romance has neither gunpowder nor stylised Nazis. This probably is an advantage to the British exhibitor, whose audiences are increasingly ready to be selective when it comes to war films. The picture, a slender but agreeable enough trifle, with some pleasing characters in it, is not one of Metro's more ambitious quota sponsorships, and whilst it does not enter the category of major showmanship, will pass a tasteful 90 minutes or so for the womenfolk.

The picture is a polished production, with technical sheen on it, and all the players are grades above the average. Most of them are known to British audiences as competent leads, and the three principals, Carla Lehmann, Hugh Williams and the increasingly popular Joyce Howard, create the type of characters which audiences find interesting and agreeable. Miss Lehmann's Jacqueline goes through the gamut of emotions in her role, whilst Miss Howard's charm and easy versatility nearly steal the picture. Roland Culver, Guy Middleton and Mary Jerrold also do well.

The talk about Jacqueline and her risqué past pursue her when at last she finds a man she loves enough to be a husband, and it is her sister, naive and ingenuous from a Parisian orphanage, who takes the odium associated with "that Marlow girl." When this mantle of fictitious wickedness nearly crashes her romance, her sister Jacqueline takes the rap, and all but crashes her own life. A solution is afforded by a quite irrelevant and fictitious train smash and reconciliation—the picture's main weakness.

Despite the gaiety of the opening sequences, the touch of a foreign hand on the essentially native fox hunt, the dramatic clichés and the far fetched climax, the picture holds interest throughout, partly due to Paul Stein's direction, but no less to the warm hearted work of the principals. The scene is varied, twixt Monte Carlo, Paris and the better class Britain, all of pre war vintage—and all a little preciously upper class. A trifle though it be, it is a trifle with sheen, and consolidates Hellman's prestige as a producer.

A trade audience with women in the majority obviously found the film entertaining, and critical opinion among the more serious viewers was that though the picture called for no superlatives it could be sold to the customer with little likelihood of discontent. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—A.F.

Isle of Missing Men

Penal Island Melodrama

Craftsmanship in production, writing and direction of this melodrama lift it above the norm of its budgetary bracket. The craftsmanship is that of Richard Oswald, whose first made-in-America picture it is, his years of experience on the Continent counting for much in keeping the story away from routine and the plot unfolding without kink or letup.

In addition to producing and directing, Oswald shares adaptation credit with Robert Chapin, screen writer, the story coming from the play, "White Lady," by Gina Kaus and Ladislas Fodor.

John Howard plays the governor of a penal island, Alan Mowbray the alcoholic doctor stationed on the island, Gilbert Rowland a prisoner bent upon escaping and Helen Gilbert a girl who, believing herself married to him, arrives to aid and abet. The steps by which she learns that her supposed husband is a bigamist and that she has learned to love the governor instead involve surprises, riots, fights and finally the killing of the convict, none of these occurring in the stereotyped manner.

Previewed at Monogram studio to a large turnout of press and profession which manifested its approval. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—W. R. W.

Release date, Sept. 18, 1942. Running time, 67 min. PCA No. 8580. General audience classification.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 148, No. 8 — August 22, 1942

FROM HERE TO WHERE?

THE decision from the Department of Justice and its Mr. Thurman Arnold rejecting the "Umpi" plan for film distribution delivers the industry of the motion picture into a new array of confusions and multiple-horned dilemmas.

The situation—and that is too static a word for it—is a developing continuance of the sequence of complications which flew in on the Blue Eagle wings of "planned economy" a decade ago.

Most conspicuous among the immediate appearances in the ruling of this week is that there is fundamental objection to a unified pattern of procedure in distribution and selling which might in the most remote degree suggest that there was understanding between distributors.

This comes in direct sequel to the "blocks-of-five" prescription of the Consent Decree. That was the official setting of a uniform pattern. That is declared all very wrong, from exactly now.

Inevitably the requirements and pressures of the relation between distribution and exhibition always have been toward something resembling a unified pattern of procedure for the whole industry. It began when each major distributor had his own set of exhibitor customers. It has tended to continue and grow in consistent patterns of relation into this day when all exhibitors are drawing their pictures from a number of distributors. The same set of customers is buying pictures from the same set of distributors. Almost automatically, and as much because of competition as because of designs to eliminate it, the trend is ever into unified and coordinated selling patterns.

The exhibitor must keep his theatre going.

The distributor must keep his studio going.

Neither of them can operate successfully on a day to day or picture to picture basis.

MR. ARNOLD, who seems to be the determining power in the situation of today, has been much interviewed and quoted, also most recently, to the effect that he is not a believer in a planned economy, but is an advocate of free competition as the American way. One is to gather from expressions attributed to him that he holds for an enforcement of the anti-trust statutes, and then letting American enterprise work out its own destiny in the service of the customers.

That makes an encouraging speech. It does not, however, square with the procedures that have been had in the relations of the government and the motion picture over the last decade—and notably in the case of the government's anti-trust suit, ending in a decree which had no relevancy to many important contentions of the suit and which emphatically did impose, or cause to be imposed, a firm pattern of trade practise—so firm it would have been collusion if reached without the approbations and even collaboration of the Department of Justice.

The fact is that the government's anti-trust suit was not adjudicated and that the Consent Decree represented no actual determination of any issue, standing rather as a sort of interim experimental settlement, of a nature that now appears to have been even more tentative than suspected.

One consequence of this has been to make the motion picture industry, in a large sense, a good bit more the business of lawyers than of showmen. That has, incidentally, been made manifest in the Herald's recent examination of the state of mind of exhibitors who have had occasion to engage in the processes of arbitration under the Decree. Exhibitors seem generally to prefer to run theatres instead of lawyering.

For ten years the preponderance of executive ability in this industry has been preoccupied with controversy—on how to do business, rather than doing business. This has not been by choice.

All this does not add up to any contention here for or against the "Umpi" plan. It represented the collaborative effort of many able showmen on both sides of the buyer-seller counter, including representation of exhibitor organizations. The resulting document bore their avowed approval. It also incurred the acute disapproval, some of it distinctly articulate, from other able showmen of wide perspective.

But this week's rejection of the plan seems to be quite as much because it is a plan as for what it plans.

RATIONED NEWS

EXAMINATION of the contents of the American newsreels and unthrilled discovery of what they do not contain brings emphatically to attention the fact that, despite all the pother about gasoline, rubber, fuel and steel, the most stringently rationed of all necessities is the news.

The official reluctances of the several censorships, while so conspicuously marked on the screen, or by what is not on the screen, are also tediously manifest in the press.

This war is not being reported. It is being covered, if one may use the term, by rewriting rewrites of rewrites. A competent press is being drowned in bureau releases of bureau-made copy. This is making the newspapers exceedingly dusty, the readers skeptical and indifferent. The best of the war news comes out of Britain. The best source of news about America's war effort is in the advertisements of the munition makers.

PERSONS and organizations that ought to know better have given out information to the effect that a number of pictures, current in the flow of Hollywood production, have been ordered withheld from distribution in the Latin Americas, as being undiplomatic. They have named the pictures, too.

That procedure of course considerably invades the purpose of the decision and puts the "good neighbors" on special notice that we have some pictures they would not like.

Also concurrently comes a piece from Hollywood saying that a certain series of stories has been purchased and then shelved because it might show too much about methods of sabotage. That is directory service for persons who might want to look up the stories and study sabotage. Also the outgiving is more than inferential indictment of the management which bought them.

Stupidity and mistakes can get publicity—but to what purpose?

—Terry Ramsaye

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Allied Caravan

INDIVIDUAL sporadic claims by independent exhibitors and organizations, that rental terms and prices for motion pictures are unfair, has resolved into a determination by officers of national Allied States Association to conduct a series of meetings of regional Allied organizations, sometime in September, "to devise ways and means for resisting exhorbitant film rentals and unfair terms," M. A. Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh, president of National Allied, announced Wednesday.

The statement came from the organization's Washington offices, after a conferance among Mr. Rosenberg, Abram Myers, general counsel, and Sidney E. Samuelson, of Philadelphia, national vice-president.

Mr. Rosenberg disclosed that already 11 regional Allied organizations had approved a plan for attacking film rentals and terms, a plan which, he said, was devised by Allied's board of directors, last month, at a meeting in Pittsburgh, at which Mr. Rosenberg, Mr. Samuelson and Jack Kirsch, Chicago, and H. A. Cole, Dallas, were appointed a "Caravan Committee" to carry the campaign to meetings in the field. The "Caravan" will hit the trail right after Labor Day.

Request

THAT no American distributor has offered to distribute the British Ministry of Information's war shorts was deplored by Walter Wanger, producer, and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Tuesday night, at an Academy screening of eight British MOI films, attended by members of the press.

Mr. Wanger added that the short subjects are being offered at cost. Guest at the showing was Sidney Bernstein, BMI film advisor, and British Government "film liaison," who described the manufacture of the films, and remarked: "I hope that those who can bring about their exhibition in this country will do so."

Aid from Britain

EARLY agreement to unfreeze motion picture revenues in Great Britain was seen as imminent as London reported this week that R. C. G. Somervell, the Board of Trade official concerned with films, was flying to Washington. He is charged with discussions and agreements on the whole dollar-sterling exchange problem and it was believed in London that disposition of blocked film rentals under discussion on both sides of the Atlantic recently, would be decided in Washington.

London film circles believe it likely that all cash would be unfrozen and complete freedom in British remittances granted. It is likely that a decision on blocked film rentals would be part of a general exchange ruling.

Special dispensation from Britain's Exchequer and the Board of Trade this week permitted RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., to withdraw $2,000,000 of its frozen British revenues. The exception to the British monetary withdrawal quotas and restrictions was granted, according to London reports, on RKO's plea that it was urgently needed to remedy the company's financial condition. It is understood the request was granted following the intercession of the U. S. Treasury Department in behalf of the company.

Recently the new RKO management under the generalship of N. Peter Rathvon and Ned E. Depinet has been very busy with the problem of rounding up production funds for the new season. It was recently reported that the company had approximately $2,800,000 in past and current income frozen in the British Isles.

Cooperation

COL. Richard C. Patterson, chief of the New York War Savings Staff, and Max A. Cohen, chairman of the New York State Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, were hosts Wednesday evening at a reception for the New York press at which the cooperation of the press with the coordinated effort of the motion picture industry and all other agencies was urged to insure the success of the War Bond Drive in the New York sector. Col. Patterson told the assembled reporters that the New York quota of 16.2 per cent, which had been set by the Treasury Department, definitely would be surpassed during the September drive. The lay press promised complete cooperation with the total effort.

Cut the Gab

"PLEASE do not make unnecessary long distance telephone calls," is the plea of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to the general public, and to the motion picture industry, too. Hollywood, and its distribution machine across the nation has ever been a prolific user of the telephone.

Now the telephone company is begging studios, home offices and other large phone users not to make so many transcontinental or long line calls.

"Circuits are overcrowded with war business, A T & T points out, and a two-hour conference between producers might well delay orders for airplanes, guns or supplies for the AEF. Calls in Los Angeles are 11 per cent above a year ago and the average national business has increased 20 per cent.

May Appeal

Northwest Allied may appeal the St. Paul, Minn., district court decision which invalidated the state "anti-blocks-of-five" law which it sponsored and which was effective only briefly.

The move was said by Minneapolis film observers to be possible because of the Department of Justice rejection Monday of the United Motion Picture Industry's new sales plan, which would have increased the size of film blocks allowed under the Consent Decree selling method from five to 13.

The Allied organization will convene September 1st and 2nd in Minneapolis. Its legislative committee is expected then to recommend an appeal so that a supreme court decision may be obtained before the January legislative session.

Allied had appeared satisfied to drop its fight for the law, when the UMPI plan seemed certain of adoption.

BOND AND STAMP MONTH

STARTS SEPTEMBER 1st

Under Motion Picture Industry Leadership

No Outlet

RUSSIA, THE ALLY, is having trouble in getting distribution in the U. S. for "Moscow Strikes Back," the latest of its war documentary features to arrive in this country, and which opened its first run here last Saturday at Harry Brandt's Globe theatre on Broadway.

Nicholas Napoli, president of Artkino, New York, official film distributing agent of the Soviet in the United States, said Wednesday that he then still was trying to negotiate release with a major distributor. Several had told him, he said, that schedules at this period in the selling season prevented acquisition of another picture.

Mr. Napoli explained that "Moscow Strikes Back" required circulation through a national distributor's exchange system, that Artkino had limited facilities, adding that United States Government officials "liked" the picture, presumably for its propaganda content. "If they (the distributors) won't deal, we'll go ahead and sell it ourselves," he said. (Republic and Artkino were reported to be discussing a releasing contract on Thursday).

Cables from Moscow this week reported that the Soviet Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, and the Committee on Cinematography will hold a forum in Moscow Friday and Saturday, on "American Films." Hollywood portraits will be exhibited, American pictures shown and papers will be read by Serge Eisenstein, Ilya Ehrenburg and others prominent in Russian motion picture and cultural circles.

London Uneasy

LONDON film circles found cause for worry in reports this week from the United States that the War Production Board was going to cut the supply of raw stock by 20 per cent, and that the annual output from Hollywood's studios might be curtailed as a result.

With domestic British production's belt pulled into one of its last notches, and only a scant 25 per cent of the pre-war total of pictures produced there last year, England's exhibitors frankly are worried at the consequences of a sizeable slash in imported footage, according to cables arriving in New York Tuesday. Double features are very strongly entrenched in the British Isles, with even the first runs in many instances showing dual programs.

A reduction in the overseas print quota by American companies, coupled with an impending Board of Trade ban on the importation of undeveloped sensitive print stock, might disrupt the entire British distribution and exhibition pattern, London observers said. It would require drastic economies in the number of prints and playing time and revision of the machinery of release and clearance. It also might force the elimination of many double programs.

Hollywood currently is supplying approximately 85 per cent of English screen time, it is estimated. Last year British studios produced only 46 quota features, compared with a pre-war 200. Many studios have been requisitioned by the Government and there is an acute shortage of technicians and talent.

Hope of relief for the worried British showmen was seen, however, in unofficial assurances from several Government sources that every consideration would be given by the WPB and other agencies to insure a continued flow of American product for foreign screens. There is a very general conviction among leaders in the State Department, Office of War Information and other U. S. agencies that the screen is one of the best of wartime ambassadors in behalf of the United Nation's cause.

". . . it is a picture which every Canadian ought to see at this time. . . . It could very well be the story of the people in your street; the story of your people and mine . . . get as many of your fellow Canadians as possible to see it, for the good of their souls. . . ."

Sweepstakes Out

AFTER having conducted Sweepstakes, the chance game, continuously since April, 1935, without having missed a single week, believed to be a nationwide record, the Northio Paramount, in Hamilton, Ohio, this week discontinued the practice. The game just bowed out without pressure, legal or otherwise. The management said it merely was felt that the game "had about run its course," that patronage reaction to it has been dwindling for several months. Moreover, it was said, in view of "bigger and better" product anticipated for the new season, which is expected to result in extended playing time, it was decided that there was no room for chance games in the future scheme of things.

Bank Night at the Rialto, a sister house in the Hamilton circuit, which likewise has been in operation for a number of years, also was discontinued last week for much the same reason.

War Secret

WHEN the War Production Board last June froze construction-in-progress including construction of motion picture theatres, it left standing the steel and other-type frames of many new film theatres. What happened to those projects as a subsequent un-freezing order permitted the release of materials in certain places and under certain conditions is not being discussed by the War Production Board in Washington. Completion of some theatre construction has been permitted, a WPB official said, but, he added, the WPB isn't releasing any information.

UMPI PLAN REJECTED BY U. S. DISTRIBUTORS PUT 'ON OWN'

Arnold Says Companies Must Trade Show Films, May Sell as Desired

The Department of Justice on Monday rejected the Unity sales proposals of the United Motion Picture Industry.

The Government charged that the proposal was a uniform plan for partial blind selling and would restrict competitive selling of motion pictures. It warned, in effect, that the distributors must continue to show pictures to the trade before selling them; but could sell blocks as large or small as each company elects.

Thurman Arnold, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of anti-trust actions, warned that if the picture companies try to put the plan adopted at Joint exhibitor-distributor unity conferences last spring into effect they would be taken into court for violation of the Sherman Act.

His ruling was a flat refusal of requests by five companies for an amendment to the consent decree which halted their anti-trust prosecution by the Government. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO Radio, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox had sought permission to sell five pictures after trade showing, eight after identifying them.

Method of Selling Left Wide Open

It left wide open the question of how product would be sold for the 1942-43 season starting September 1st. Each company, it appeared, can sell as it chooses, in unrestricted competition. They can make such cancellation concessions as they wish and offer pictures in any grouping.

But there was a clear declaration that the Government expected all pictures to be trade shown before sold.

At mid-week sales heads were still working hurriedly to set up company policies for the new year. Several indicated that they would offer cancellation, others were setting first release and trade show dates. The blocks of five provision of the New York consent decree expires August 31st.

The decision of the department was announced Monday in a statement by Mr. Arnold which he had first submitted to the Attorney General for approval.

Calls Plan Partial Blind Selling

In his statement, Mr. Arnold charged that the UMPI plan was nothing more than "a uniform plan of partial blind selling of feature pictures" which, if approved, "would in effect sanction a uniform plan and to that extent discourage competitive methods of distribution" and encourage blind selling.

"For the Department to sanction a uniform plan of blind selling now would be to take a position inconsistent with its position when the suit was started," it declared.

So far as the cancellation privileges which influenced some independent exhibitor organizations to support the plan are concerned, the belief was expressed that a better chance of getting increased cancellation privileges will come from competition "rather than through the sanctioning of a uniform plan which will eliminate competition."

In the rejection of the UMPI plan the threat of divorcement and dissolution of the defendant companies again was raised. Also the companies participating in the development of the UMPI plan were informed that they had violated the law in working concertedly—but would not be prosecuted because of the necessity for joint action in working out the plan.

Four Reasons Given For Rejection

Mr. Arnold set forth four reasons for the department's action:

1. Experience under the decree has indicated that trade showings before sales are desirable.

2. Approximately 100 of the coming season features have been trade-shown or are now ready for showing.

3. The department cannot take a position on blind selling inconsistent with that taken at the institution of the suit.

4. There is nothing in the decree to prevent the distributors from giving the cancellation privileges offered under the Unity plan.

Outlining briefly the selling provisions of the decree, the Department decision explained that the five-picture block plan terminates August 31st because of the Government's inability to secure a similar decree or court verdict against the three non-consenting companies, consisting of Columbia, Universal and United Artists, prior to June 1st last.

Concerted Action Only Limitation

As a result, Mr. Arnold said, the general provision of the Sherman Act prohibiting concerted action to establish non-competitive practices becomes the only limitation with respect to features released and contracts made on and after September 1st.

But "any agreement or concerted action by the consenting distributors to put into operation any uniform method of selling their 1942-43 features will be viewed by the Department in the light of its effect upon competition in the industry and with particular reference to its effect upon the ability of independent exhibitors to compete," he said.

It was made clear that the rock on which the UMPI plan crashed was the refusal of the Department to consent to "the kind of blind selling the department complained against when it filed its suit." This was raised by the provision that eight of the 13 pictures to be offered as the maximum UMPI block could be sold with no further identification than the name of a star or featured player who was to be used or the title of the book or play on which it was based.

At the same time, it was pointed out that the cancellation privileges agreed upon at the unity conferences were not offered for incorporation in the decree but were to be written into the 1942-43 contracts. Most of the public groups, the organized independent producers and the independent exhibitors who wrote the department objected to picture grouping and identification rather than to this cancellation privilege, it was reported.

Competitive Selling To Be Tested

The decree, Mr. Arnold declared, has not yet "succeeded in accomplishing its objective," and until November, 1943, he warned, the industry will be closely watched to see whether the decree affords adequate relief without invoking the remedy of divorcement and dissolution.

If the decree stands as it is, it was said at the department, competitive selling under the present setup will have a chance to be tested.

Six and one-half weeks from the date of its submission, the UMPI plan was thrown out by the Department. At the time of its presentation on July 3rd, members of the group which brought it to Washington received the impression that the Department would accept it, with minor changes. Robert L. Wright, in charge of the film section, however, had indicated he did not favor it and so reported to Mr. Arnold. The intervening weeks brought such a deluge of communications, both for and against the proposals, that it was subjected to most careful scrutiny.

Letters on the plan came in from exhibitors, the Society of Independent Producers and members of Congress, as well as from public groups prominent in the Neely bill hearings and other anti-block booking movements.

The delay in announcing its decision proved irksome to many interests in the industry, and last week Allied, States Association in a formal statement, charged the department was preparing to give the plan a "pocket veto."

Future of UMPI Now Uncertain

The future of the United Motion Picture Industry, and the other trade practice items on its program became highly uncertain as a result of the Arnold declaration. Some trade observers predicted that it marked the end of the movement expressing the belief that distributors would be afraid to risk possible charges of conspiracy by further participation. A few participants were hopeful that UMPI's arbitration and conciliation, tax and other all-industry projects might be continued.

With the unity movement's principal project, the joint sales program, halted by the

UMPI Plan Rejected by Government

Government it appeared unlikely that it would soon be able to take decisive action on other proposals.

William F. Rodgers, chairman of the committee of the whole was expected to call a meeting of the group soon after his return to New York from studio conferences.

Abram Myers, general counsel of Allied, in his comments struck a note of hope that the principles of the UMPI plan were not lost. He saw no difficulties in the path of distributors if each selects the size of block and cancellation he feels best suited to the needs of himself and exhibitors, provided all pictures are trade shown.

"There is no reason why distributors cannot announce groups of trade-shown pictures up to a maximum of 13, with cancellations not less than those agreed to in UMPI, without risking prosecution by the Department," he said.

Objections All on Trade Showings

"The greater the variation in the size of the groups and in the amount of the cancellations the greater the security from Government molestation. It is noteworthy that the four grounds of objection cited in the statement all have to do with the trade showing of pictures."

At the same time, he continued, if all the distributors revert to the five-block plan, the Department should crack down on them, since "the five-picture plan led to greater uniformity among the five consenting companies than had ever existed before."

Suggesting that the Department's position may mean the end of UMPI, Mr. Myers said:

"There remains on the UMPI agenda the putting into effect of the plan for conciliation of individual complaints and the investigation of territorial grievances. Also, the consideration of proposals for making arbitration under the consent decree more effective. Distributors and exhibitors alike would be foolhardy to pursue these joint endeavors in the absence of clear-cut approval by the Department.

"No one in the future will waste the time or money to engage in cooperative undertakings that can have the slightest bearing on competitive practices until Mr. Arnold tells them, straight from the shoulder, that it is all right to do so."

Move Not Unexpected Kuykendall Says

"Rejection of the UMPI plan was not expected," Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America said in Washington Wednesday.

"We were a house divided," he said, pointing to wide differences of opinion on the merits of the plan. "So much was said from both sides I believe it was confusing to the Department of Justice itself. It took the organization of UMPI to really prove the lack of unity and sincerity in our industry."

"The failure to secure immediate relief that the new selling plan prepared by UMPI would give is disappointing," said Robert H. Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and a member of the UMPI trade practices committee.

"However, MGM should be given a great deal of credit for their announcement that they will sell their initial group of eight with a two-picture cancellation privilege. And every exhibitor in the United States can only hope that the four other companies signatory to the decree will do likewise.

"The fact that Assistant Attorney General Arnold states that there is nothing in the decree which prevents distributors from competing with each other in giving cancellation privileges equal to or in excess of those proposed in the UMPI plan gives them the opportunity of evidencing their sincerity apparent at the UMPI meetings."

Robert White, head of the Independent Theatre Owners of Oregon, and also a member of the committee which drew up the plan, when informed that Mr. Arnold had rejected it, commented:

"I surely deprecate the action taken by the Department of Justice as being wholly unfair and entirely out of line with the wishes of at least 95 per cent of all independent theatre owners in the United States."

Text of Arnold's Veto of 'Unity' Selling Plan

The following is the text of the statement issued in Washington on Monday by Thurman Arnold, Assistant United States Attorney General, rejecting the United Motion Picture Industry sales plan:

"On November 20, 1940, in an anti-trust suit against the eight major distributors of motion pictures, a consent decree was entered against the five theatre-owning distributors. That decree suspended further prosecution of the suit against the consenting defendants for an experimental period of three years.

"The purpose of the decree was to determine whether the industry could be restored to competitive conditions without invoking the remedy of divorcement of distribution from exhibition and dissolution of the distributor-owned circuits of theatres. It was not the intention of the Department to sanction non-competitive control of the industry, either by an industry council or by the Department itself. The decree provided a quick remedy of arbitration with respect to certain unfair trade practices. It also prohibited blind selling of feature pictures and limited their block booking to blocks of five for the 1941-42 selling season, a one-year period expiring on August 31st of this year. These blind selling and block booking limitations terminate as of that date because the Department was unable to obtain a like decree against the three non-consenting defendants prior to June 15, 1942.

"The only limitation at present existing with respect to features released and contracts made on and after September 1, 1942, is the general provision of the Sherman Act preventing concerted action to establish non-competitive practices. A plan for selling the features of the five consenting companies during the 1942-43 selling season, known as the UMPI plan, was presented to the Department in July of this year with the approval of most of the organized independent exhibitors. To carry out that plan, the Department was asked to consent to an amendment to the decree approving the sale of pictures in blocks of not more than thirteen, eight of which could be sold with no more identification than a reference to a star or featured player appearing in the picture or the title of a book or play on which it was based. Such identification is the kind of blind selling the Department complained against when it filed its suit. The plan also provided for a certain minimum cancellation privilege which was not offered for incorporation in the decree but which each defendant represented itself, by a letter to the Department, as being willing to incorporate in its 1942-43 contracts. All of the public groups which communicated their views to the Department opposed the plan as did the organized independent producers and a number of independent exhibitors.

"The Department has decided that it cannot consent to the proposed amendment to the decree for the following reasons:

"(1) Experience under the decree has persuaded the Anti-Trust Division that trade showing of motion pictures before their sale is desirable. Such trade showing tends to encourage the production of better features and thus confers a substantial benefit on the public.

"(2) There are now trade-shown or ready for trade showing approximately 100 of the features which the consenting defendants will release during the 1942-43 season. Competitive practices should lead these distributors to trade show these completed pictures rather than sell them blind, insofar as each has faith in the merit of its product.

"(3) To expressly sanction blind selling of motion pictures would be to take a position inconsistent with the position the Department took at the institution of its anti-trust proceedings.

(4) So far as the cancellation privilege sought by the independent exhibitors is concerned, there is nothing in the decree which prevents the distributors from competing with each other in giving cancellation privileges equal to or in excess of those proposed in the UMPI plan. Such a grant should not be conditioned upon express Departmental acquiescence in blind selling. The existence of the large backlog of features already completed, referred to above, will permit the consenting distributors to sell in blocks as large as thirteen, grant the cancellation privileges they have represented themselves as willing to grant in selling blocks of that size, and still trade show them before licensing.

"The Department recognizes that the preparation of the plan involved concerted action by the consenting defendants and organized groups of exhibitors. Such concerted action, however, was necessary to the presentation of the amendment and therefore will not be made the basis of any action by the Department. However, any agreement or concerted action by the consenting distributors to put into operation any uniform method of selling their 1942-43 features will be viewed by the Department in the light of its effect upon competition in the industry and with particular reference to its effect upon the ability of independent exhibitors to compete.

"In the judgment of the Department, the motion picture decree has not yet succeeded in accomplishing its objective. Its operation must be watched during the remaining period before a final decision is made as to whether it affords adequate relief without invoking the remedy of divorcement and dissolution."

VARIED SALES POLICIES ARE EXPECTED FOR 1942-43

Several Seen Using Blocks of Five or Less, Others Selling Larger Groups

Motion pictures will be sold during the 1942-43 season by as many methods, and in as many varying types of packages as there are distributors, it appeared this week.

The rejection by the Department of Justice of the United Motion Picture Industry's selling proposals left the five consent decree signers—MGM, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers—at liberty to sell in competitive market by whatever method they elected. The only apparent restriction was the Government's warning that films must be trade shown before they are offered to exhibitors.

Sales executives on Wednesday were predicting a wide variation in the way each company offers its product. Several probably will continue to sell in blocks of five or less. Others, led by MGM, will offer pictures in larger blocks. The size of packages may vary during the year as the supply of pictures ready for trade showing fluctuates.

Paramount and Warners both indicated that they would offer no cancellation from their small blocks.

Each of the consenting distributors was ready with its own sales formula for 1942-43 product, it appeared at mid-week, after they long had delayed product announcements and selling plans pending a decision from the Government on the Unity plan.

All five, in common, have either shown or announced trade screenings in exchanges for the first pictures of the new season.

At least two companies, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount, have indicated that they will continue to show their pictures to the trade and group them in blocks of five.

Cancellation Is Major Problem

Warners with trade showings set this week for three of its pictures, indicated that it probably will sell under the flexible group policy which it inaugurated last year.

RKO has announced trade showings for six pictures but has not yet instructed sales staffs how they are to be sold. Its field forces currently are working on two specials, "Pride of the Yankees" and "Bambi."

MGM, in an announcement by William F. Rodgers in Hollywood last Thursday indicated that it would follow the UMPI pattern as closely as possible, with eight pictures already trade shown, in its first group. Metro contracts were understood to allow for cancellation of two pictures from the block, in accord with the unity agreements.

The question of cancellations was one of the major problems over which sales managers and company lawyers were still working at mid-week. Only Metro had pledged cancellation on a definite group of pictures.

Mr. Arnold's message made it clear that it was still possible for the distributors to comply with cancellation promises. He pointed out, in fact, that cancellation may be used by the distributors as a competitive inducement. It appeared that this might be the ultimate result, with certain of the companies exceeding the minimum cancellation pledged in the UMPI plan.

Metro's eight pictures, which it is now selling, are: "Somewhere I'll Find You," "Tish," "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," "A Yank at Eton," "Panama Hattie," "Seven Sweethearts," "Apache Trail" and "Cairo." There is one special, "Mrs. Miniver."

Twentieth Century-Fox, whose season started on August 1st, in accord with a special decree exception, has 11 pictures trade shown, and is selling them in two blocks. One, "Tales of Manhattan," is being sold as a special.

20 Other Titles Listed by 20th-Fox

The first five include "Footlight Serenade," released August 1st; "A-Haunting We Will Go," released August 7th; "Little Tokyo, U. S. A.," August 14th; "The Pied Piper," August 21st, and "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe," August 28th.

The second Twentieth Century-Fox block, announced this week, includes "Orchestra Wives," September 4th; "Berlin Correspondent"; September 11th, "Careful, Soft Sholders," September 18th; "Just Off Broadway," September 25th, and "Iceland," October 2nd.

Twenty other titles for the new season were listed by Twentieth Century-Fox this week following the return of Spyros Skouras, president, from conferences at the studio. Eleven are completed, or before the cameras, while the others are in preparation. The pictures are:

"Springtime in the Rockies," in color, with John Payne, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda, Cesar Romero and Harry James' orchestra.

"Meanest Man in the World," with Jack Benny, Priscilla Lane and Rochester.

"China Girl," starring Gene Tierney and George Montgomery.

"The Ox-Bow Incident," with Henry Fonda.

"The Black Swan," a Rafael Sabatini story in color with Tyrone Power and Maureen O'Hara.

"Girl Trouble," with Joan Bennett and Don Ameche.

"Thunder Birds," Air Corps story, in color, with Gene Tierney, Preston Foster and John Sutton.

"Crash Dive," in color, starring Tyrone Power and Anne Baxter.

"My Friend Flicka" with Roddy McDowall and Preston Foster.

"Life Begins at 8:30" with Monty Woolley and Ida Lupino.

"The Young Mr. Pitt," a British production with Robert Donat and Robert Morley.

Warner Brothers' general sales manager, Ben Kalmenson, listed the first three pictures for 1942-43 release. They have been trade shown.

"Across the Pacific" with Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor and Sidney Greenstreet, will be released September 5th.

"Busses Roar" with Richard Travis, Elisabeth Fraser and Julie Bishop is set for September 19th.

"Desperate Journey," starring Errol Flynn, Ronald Reagan, Nancy Coleman, Raymond Massey, Alan Hale and Arthur Kennedy is set for September 26th.

"Now Voyager" with Bette Davis and Paul Henreid; and "Secret Enemies" with Craig Stegens and Faye Emerson have also been shown to the trade but no release dates have been set. Warners has a backlog of at least 18 completed films.

Paramount Has 30 Ready Thus Far

Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution at Paramount on Tuesday said that the company would sell again in blocks of five pictures, after they have been trade shown. Paramount contracts will not include cancellation provisions. The company also will not set any national release dates for pictures, releasing them regionally.

Paramount in its first group will release "The Major and the Minor" co-starring Ginger Rogers and Ray Milland; "The Glass Key," starring Brian Donlevy, Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd; "Priorities on Parade" with Ann Miller, Betty Rhodes, Jerry Colonno, Johnnie Johnston and Vera Vague and "Henry Aldrich, Editor" with Jimmy Lydon. Trade screenings are being arranged for August 27th and 28th.

"Wake Island" will be sold as a special.

Y. Frank Freeman, head of production for Paramount, this week reported that the company has about 30 pictures for the 1942-43 season in the can or editing.

RKO also has trade-shown seven pictures for its new season. They are "The Magnificent Ambersons," "They Flew Alone," "The Big Street," "Highways by Night," "Pride of the Yankees" (to be released as a special), "Journey Into Fear" and "Mexican Spitfire's Elephant."

Release dates have not been set for any of the pictures and the company has not yet revealed its plans for selling them.

Monogram Sets Dates To November 2nd

"Here We Go Again," starring Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy and Fibber McGee and Molly will be trade screened on Tuesday, August 25th, in all RKO exchanges.

Monogram has set release dates in late September and October for four pictures from its 1941-42 product list and seven from its new season's roster.

The 1941-42 pictures and dates are: "Arizona Stage Coach," September 4th; "King of the Stallions," September 11th; "Police Bullets," September 25th, and "Phantom Killer," October 2nd. The first 1942-43 releases are: "Isle of Missing Men," September 18th; "Foreign Agent," October 9th; "Texas to Bataan," October 16th; "Crime Reporter," October 23rd; "Bowery at Midnight," October 30th, and "West of the Law," November 2nd.

$653,000,000 IS IN SIGHT AS BOND DRIVE OPENING NEARS

Elaborate Program Set for September 1st, with All Houses Participating

Within a week of the start of the industry's $1,000,000,000 War Bond and Stamp drive, headquarters of the campaign in New York announced complete mobilization and started rehearsing its troops for the zero hour. Advance estimates this week showed $653,000,000 in sight, with the rest to be brought in from other sources during the month.

Approximately $90,000,000 in sales has been estimated by the field men in charge of the first 10 days of the Stars over America tour which starts September 1st. (See next page.)

Previously estimated were payroll allotment sales during the drive period of 250,000,000. The Commando committees of industry leaders promise to fill their quota of $33,000,000; the remaining two-thirds of the cities on the Stars over America itineraries are expected to contribute $200,000,000, and actual sales by theatres qualifying as War Bond issuing agents are expected to total $75,000,000 for the month. The remainder is to be made by cities outside the star itineraries and by individual efforts elsewhere.

This week the drive leaders urged every theatre in the country to participate in the opening program at 9 P. M., Tuesday, September 1st. The "Salute to Our Heroes" month will open with a four-minute ceremony to be enacted throughout the country. Color guards will march into the theatres and stand at attention on the stages while the "Star Spangled Banner" is played. Local speakers will start the bond sales and at 9:04 P. M. audiences will be asked to stand and cheer the men in the armed services. Arrangements are being made for coast-to-coast broadcasts of the ceremonies. Theatre operators are asked to report their sales for the first night by wire to Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury.

Trailer Available To Exhibitors

A 100-foot trailer on the War Bond drive will be available to exhibitors starting September 1st. Through the cooperation of National Screen Service it is being offered to exhibitors at $1.50 and can be obtained through that company's exchanges. One-sheets, window cards, valances, burgees and Government postal cards which theatres are to give to bond buyers as messages to the men at the front also are available through the National Screen exchanges.

Newspaper display advertising space will play an important part in the drive, according to bulletins sent out by Oscar A. Doob, public relations director for the campaign. Every first run theatre in the country which uses daily newspaper space has been asked to devote a minimum of 10 per cent of the month's budget to space for the campaign. The larger theatres in some 400 cities have been asked to increase their usual space to give more prominence to the Bond and Stamp drive.

James Sauter, executive director of the United Theatrical War Activities Committee, has been named by Mr. Doob to head a special national radio committee for the billion-dollar drive. The radio committee will coordinate the nationwide efforts.

Gus Eyssell, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, announced Tuesday that he was arranging a special "Salute to Our Heroes" stage presentation for the drive. He heads a national stage events committee which will urge every theatre in the country to use stage shows in connection with the drive.

Earl Wingart and Milton Crandall this week were named to assist Mr. Doob in the organization of the campaign.

The New York Executives' Committee met Thursday at Toots Shor's restaurant. The committee has pledged to sell $33,000,000 worth of war bonds by September 1st.

Exhibitor Regional Meetings Held

Several important regional meetings of exhibitors already have taken place and many more are scheduled for the forthcoming week. In every instance, these meetings have proved successful and all theatres represented have pledged their support to the industry's billion-dollar drive and have subscribed funds to pay expenses for their individual state campaigns.

One hundred and fifty exhibitors and exchange managers, more than two-thirds of the theatres in the Boston exchange territory, met in the Grand Ballroom of the Copley Plaza, last week, to get the Massachusetts campaign under way. Francis S. Harmon, coordinator of the War Activities Committee, and Harry Brand, chairman of the Organization Committee, addressed the theatre men. The Massachusettes division, of which Sam Pinansky and Nathan Yamins are co-chairmen, have a complete pressbook in readiness and a number of stunts planned. One for this area will be "The Ride of Paul Revere," who will leave Boston Common on the midnight of August 31st and will stop at every hamlet and town between Boston and Lexington to get pledges for war bonds. Another stunt will be announcing of the "Motion Picture Industry's Billion Dollar Baby," the lucky newcomer to be the first born after midnight, August 31st.

400 Iowa Showmen Answer Call

In Des Moines, more than 400 Iowa exhibitors answered the call of A. H. Blank, War Activities chairman for Iowa and Nebraska, to hear Howard Dietz and Arthur Mayer announce plans for the drive.

Slater O'Hare, who sold over $18,000 worth of bonds at his Grand Theatre, in Wellman, Iowa, a 200-seat house, was elected state drive chairman. Iowa exchanges announced seven prize awards for theatres in seven population classifications and a grand prize (a trip to Hollywood) for Iowa's champion bond salesman.

There are statewide rallies scheduled for

4,104 Theatres Now Official War Bond Issuing Agents

The Treasury Department thus far has certified 4,104 theatres in the country as official issuing agents for United States War Bonds, Series E, according to the War Activities Committee.

The Committee pointed out that it is unnecessary for a theatre as issuing agent to post cash or collateral for the War Bonds it has for sale, that accounting is made after the Bonds are sold. It is suggested that a full supply of blank Bonds be kept on hand, especially for weekends and holidays. The first group of theatres in the country to be designated official issuing agents were the 66 Skouras theatres in Greater New York, followed by 74 Loew's houses in the area. In both cases, sharp increases in War Bond sales were reported.

The War Activities Committee advises that when a theatre is designated an issuing agent by the Federal Reserve Bank of the district, a "certificate of qualification" is provided, which should be displayed prominently in the theatre. Application forms for the War Bonds may be obtained from the Reserve Bank or local post office. This form is to be filled in by the purchaser of the War Bonds.

The bonds should be paid for in cash, the WAC advises. Checks should be accepted by the theatre only if its management is willing to guarantee them. Typewriter should be used in filling in the information on the Bond itself, and erasures are not permitted. The information should be made in carbon, and a duplicate retained by the theatre. If an error is made in preparing a bond, it should be marked "Spoiled," and a new bond issued.

The WAC advises also that the official issuing agent's dating stamp be locked in the safe or similar place, and be used only by the manager or his assistant. At designated intervals a report should be made on sales to the local Federal Reserve Bank.

Quota in Sight in Industry Bond Drive

Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire sectors. Loew's Theatres this week reported a total of $247,656 for the 10th week of their War Stamp and Bond sales. This includes $100,000 in bonds sold by the Loew Station WHN. Total sales for the first 10 weeks in the circuit's 143 theatres stand at $2,357,552, an average of $235,755 weekly. Since Loew New York houses have been certified as official issuing agents, offering bonds for immediate delivery, there has been a considerable spurt in bond sales.

Urges Devoting All Time to Drive

"During the next month it is more important that we get money for the Government by the sale of War Bonds and Stamps than to make money for the circuit," J. J. Rubens, head of the Publix-Great States Circuit, told his managers at an all-day meeting at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, last week. Mr. Rubens advised the men that they would have to devote practically all their time to the sale of bonds. If necessary let the ushers run the theatres, he told them.

The meeting was attended by 35 city managers of the Great States circuit; all Balaban & Katz district managers; Edward Zorn, chairman of downstate Illinois and president of the United Theatre Owners of Illinois; John Balaban, Chicago chairman; Henry Stickelmier, chairman, Great States group; and Walter Immerman, W. K. Hollander, Morris G. Leonard and Elmer C. Upton, Balaban & Katz executives.

Mr. Rubens, who is an assistant national director of the War Activities Committee, is in charge of Illinois and Indiana. He planned a meeting of Indiana chairmen at Indianapolis on August 20th, Illinois, he said, had been divided into 20 zones all headed by a chairman. These zones comprised five or six counties. The zone chairmen will appoint county chairmen, and they will appoint district chairmen.

Organization Pushed For Connecticut

Following a meeting of 250 theatres and exchange men at the Hotel Taft in New Haven, organization of the drive for Connecticut is proceeding with the naming of committees and outlining of new plans. In addition to I. J. Hoffman, Warner zone head, and Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, the meeting was addressed by Major L. E. Thompson, liaison man for this state; S. H. Fabian, executive vice-chairman; Thomas Smith, deputy administrator of the Treasury Department; John M. Hurley, local Treasury Department, representative; William A. Falsey, local bond activities chairman, and Harold Welch, banker.

Lou Brown, Loew-Poli publicity chief, was appointed regional director of publicity, and has already spread copy all over the state to start the wheels rolling. Harry Shaw has undertaken enlisting the cooperation of various contractors in the state to build new Victory House of Heroes structures on the various Greens for central sales booths and rally centers. They are to open September 1st. The Mariani Construction Co. has volunteered to build such a house in New Haven.

Following the first meeting, city-wide meetings and luncheons were held all week with Robert Russell, Loew-Poli manager as chairman. Lou Schaefer, of the Paramount theatre, and John Hesse of the Roger Sherman theatre, assistant.

Figures computed from the opening of the sales drive in May to August 5th showed a total of $1,612,872 for the Warner and Loew-Poli circuits in the combined 65 theatres. Of this sum, the 16 Poli houses totaled $1,025,765, and the Warner 49 houses, $587,107. The Poli theatre, New Haven, had the largest single total, $420,712, while the 1,307-seat Palace, Norwich, was second with $274,365.

A meeting of all Philadelphia distributor and exhibitor executives to coordinate local activities for the campaign was held August 16th in the office of Ted Schlanger, Warner Zone Manager. Mr. Schlanger, who was selected as one of the 15 Commandos in the country, in charge of Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and South Jersey, presided.

Among those present were Robert Lynch and Salem E. Applegate, MGM; Harry Bodkin, United Artists; Charlie Zagrams, RKO; Earle Swiegart, Paramount; Harry Weiner, Columbia; Sam Gross, Twentieth Century-Fox; Al Davis, Twentieth Century-Fox; William Mansell, Warners; Sam Gillis, Republic; Sam Rosen, Monogram; Ulric Smith, Paramount; Sam Schwartz, Warners; Lewin Pizor and Sidney Samuelson, exhibitor leaders, and Raymond Schwartz of the exhibitors association.

Benjamin Ludlow, State Administrator for the Treasury Department, addressed the meeting explaining details of the Drive and instructing the group about the 10 per cent payroll plan for exhibitors in the entire area.

Mr. Lynch was selected as state chairman for the distributor group and immediately opened the drive with an offer to purchase a $1,000 bond from everyone present. His offer was accepted. With the program set and activities assigned, the meeting adjourned.

Charlotte motion picture theatres have pledged themselves to sell $1,000,000 in War Bonds and Stamps during September. Employees of the theatres are asked to pledge time, effort and 10 per cent of their salaries

"We're really going to town in this drive," said Larry Waters, manager of the Charlotte theatre, who is a division officer in the drive. The Charlotte drive is under the general chairmanship of Jack Austin, manager of the Carolina theatre.

Herbert Jennings, manager of the Colonia theatre, Norwich, has been designated by J. Myer Schine to direct the Schine circuit houses' participation in the billion-dollar War Bond and Stamp campaign during September. Mr. Jennings will devote full time to the assignment, visiting each situation and planning an individual campaign for each theatre.

A tryout of a stage show exploitation plan convinced the War Activities Committee, Northwest Division, that it would be an important part of their War Bonds and Stamps drive in September. A "Merry Makers" stage unit, its services donated by Zuhrah temple of the Schrine, Minneapolis, staged a single performance at Auditorium theatre, Stillwater, Minn., a suburban center.

Sales of $42,000 in War Bonds and Stamps resulted and the same troupe will be used on a tour of key points in the northwest territory.

$5,780,000 Bond Sale at "Dandy" Opening

The Coast premiere of Warners' "Yankee Doodle Dandy" last week topped the New York opening in war bond sales with a total of $5,780,000. This is about $30,000 more than the total sales at the New York premiere, it was said.

Admission at the Hollywood theatres was by War Bond, ranging from $25 to $25,000. Bonds sold at the premiere will finance construction of three Liberty ships.

Most of the cast, with the exception of James Cagney, the star, who is on a bond-selling campaign in the east, were at the opening.

Small Circuit Offers Use of Houses in War Effort

A 10 point "War Effort Plan" which in effect places the theatre properties of the company at the disposal of the Government, all accredited war and patriotic organizations and in emergency, the public, has been drawn up by Bailey Enterprises, Princeton, Ill., and issued to its managers.

The circuit's eight theatres are in seven small towns in Southern Illinois and Oklahoma. Officials of the circuit are H. U. Bailey, president; J. W. Bailey, vice-president, and Samuel T. Traynor, general manager. The 10-point program follows:

1. Allow any Civilian Defense Group free use of the theatre at any time, before or after our regular performance, for any kind of meeting relative to the war effort.
2. Allow draft boards to use the theatre if they see fit to do so, in order to handle draftees for induction, regardless of the hour.
3. Allow any soldier or group of soldiers, who might be stranded in your city, the use of the theatre for all night sleeping quarters.
4. Cooperate to the fullest extent with all governmental civilian agencies or with any individual or groups, who are meeting or working for the war effort.
5. Run all governmental reels furnished and supervised by the Government.
6. Have on hand War Stamps at the box office for sale and, through proper display of signs and trailers, urge patrons to purchase them.
7. See that all rules and regulations governing blackouts are adhered to to the letter.
8. In furtherance of Rule No. 1, allow free use, before and after our regular performance, to any chapter of the American Legion or Red Cross, the theatre and its facilities for training courses or to other civic institutions, which are working for the war effort.
9. Regardless of the hour, if a bomb or bombs should fall in your city, throw open the doors of the theatre so anyone on the streets can take refuge there.
10. Bear in mind at all times that we must and will win this war, and no sacrifice its too great on our part that lends itself to aid the war effort.

WAR SERVICES STRESSED AT FAMOUS PLAYERS MEETING

Dominates Toronto Talks; Balaban and Premier Hepburn Are Speakers

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

There were fighting speeches, somber addresses, cheers and gaiety in the combined two-day business conference and the annual home office outing of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, which occupied the attention of officers, department heads, district managers and partners from all the Eastern Canadian Provinces and about 200 employees in the Toronto district. All-out aid by the company and industry in the war service was the dominant note of the meeting.

Those in attendance heard a re-affirmation of faith in the Allied cause, ultimate victory and a future of security, coupled with expressions of unqualified support in the prosecution of the war and confidence in the maintenance of the film business at a high standard during the new season despite problems and increasing difficulties.

At the conclusion of the conference J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, was asked, "What is the big thing that developed from the meeting?"

Mr. Fitzgibbons replied: "The resolve to do everything possible for the Government in support of the war effort and the determination to accomplish even more in cooperation for the cause, as an industry, than has been done. We do not know what the Government will want from us in manpower, war financing and the use of facilities but, whatever it is, Famous Players Canadian Corporation and its associates are ready and eager to extend full support. We will give complete cooperation in all campaigns for War Savings Stamps, war loans, the armed forces, whatever they are. We are prepared to give complete support to the Government, regardless of the nature of the calls."

Partners, Associates Attend Meeting

The words of the president were given with a seriousness which indicated the determination of the Famous Players organization to go "all out" in support of the country's leaders. Otherwise, it was learned that the closed sessions did not constitute a meeting of the Famous Players' circuit but a conference with partners and associates and there was a hint that the general position had been consolidated as compared with the situation one year ago when there had been a shakeup in the Canadian theatre scene.

The highlight of the conference was the luncheon at which guests of honor were Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, and Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario, both of whom made addresses. Officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board had been expected but declined the invitation, apparently on the ground that their presence with one group of the Canadian film business might lead to misunderstanding.

Mr. Balaban said that he had seen the features for Paramount release during the coming nine months and that they measured up to the quality standard to be expected. He spoke more of the cooperation which the film industry was extending to the U. S. Government. The film companies had started by providing 200 prints of features for Army camps but this had been increased to 3,500 prints for all parts of the world, thus indicating the quick expansion of the armed forces of the United States.

Washington had asked the industry to gear up production in 1942-43 for the making of 2,000 different training films. Paramount and other stars were touring the Army and Navy stations, he said. The United States had asked the industry to sponsor the selling of a billion dollars worth of war bonds in September and, in telling of this, Mr. Balaban gave a cue to the Canadian film business by saying that this would be equivalent to the sale of $150,000,000 of bonds in the Dominion. All of these activities were being carried out at the expense of the industry itself, with one slight exception. There were no contracts with Washington—"and after this is all over, there will be no contracts to be cleaned up," he said.

Hepburn Cites Importance Of Film Industry

"We can be proud of what the industry is doing," Mr. Balaban said. "There will be nothing of which we need to feel ashamed in comparison with others when the final checkup comes."

Premier Hepburn declared that his presence at the luncheon was intended to show his appreciation of the importance of the film industry and recognition of the value of films as propaganda, asserting his belief that the screen was more effective as a medium of propaganda than either the press or radio. He had adopted a sympathetic attitude toward films and, as long ago as the Japanese attack on Shanghai, he had decided to release newspictures to impress upon the people the meaning of mechanized warfare, he said.

Dealing with the subject of propaganda, Premier Hepburn said that the young Germans had been turned into brutal killers, stopping at nothing in their ruthlessness, and the same could be said of the Japanese. There was need for propaganda to combat the aggressors, he said.

The Ontario Premier paid tribute to the theatre men in connection with war taxation, in declairing that the Ontario Government had abolished the "nuisance tax"—the only government to do so, and the Province had been advertised as the land devoid of such taxes. But the Dominion Government had found it advisable to impose an amusement tax for special financing "and the film industry took it without complaint, believing it to be a part of the war effort." Hepburn gave a somber picture of the war situation, declaring that the final battle for the survival of democracies might even be fought on the North American Continent.

Fitzgibbons Promises Complete Support

In expressing thanks to Premier Hepburn, Mr. Fitzgibbons gave promise of complete support to the Ontario leader in the days to come and suggested that the Ontario Government might fight it advisable to reopen its training school for projection operators to relieve the labor shortage in the event of a heavy manpower demand for the prosecution of the war. The international aspect of the luncheon, incidentally, was reflected in the room decorations of British and American flags and in the toasts to King George and the President of the United States.

On the opening day of the convention President Fitzgibbons struck the keynote of the deliberations after calling the assembly to order by declaring that "we are not doing the things we might do and we do not appreciate what we have, many of us, because we think it can't happen here. We become absorbed in business. At this meeting I want you to consider what we can do for the war, individually and collectively, as a moving picture industry in Canada."

At the closing dinner at the Rouge Hills Golf Club, he said, "Gatherings like this are a good thing. The year rolls around, some have gone and some will be going on a job we cannot do. But there is a job even we can do in the coming year and I know everybody in Famous Players will do it wholeheartedly and with a will." R. W. Bolstad, vice-president said, "We are all closer to each other because of the war" and called for a minute's silent tribute to "those on active service."

HEPBURN STRESSES VALUE OF SCREEN

Addressing the annual meeting of Famous Players Canadian Corporation at Toronto last week, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario described the screen as "the most powerful medium of propaganda that we have available for our services". He said further, "Impressions received from the screen are more engraved and become more ingrained on the minds of patrons of motion pictures than through any other medium."

New Theatre Permitted

Richards-Lightman Theatres Corporation, Pine Bluff, Ark., has been notified that a special committee has approved the construction of a new motion picture house in that city, following protests.

WPB FREEZES FILM STOCKS; TOP USE AT 1941 LEVELS

Is Effective August 20th; Requires Authorization to Obtain Raw Stock

The War Production Board in Washington on Wednesday froze all use of raw film stock by the motion picture industry, in an order No. L-178, issued at Washington by Donald M. Nelson director.

It prohibited the transfer of all motion picture film in the hands of manufacturers, effective at midnight Thursday, August 20th. It required that producers and all other users of 35 mm film apply to the WPB for authority to acquire unexposed raw stock.

Film consumption will be stabilized at 1941 levels under the directive. It immediately will limit the producers of theatrical motion pictures to the aggregate level of 1941 film consumption "for the time being," Harold D. Hopper, chief of the motion picture section, declared.

Raw stock for commercial advertising motion pictures was completely banned.

Government motion pictures and special propaganda subjects which have received the approval of Lowell Mellett, chief of the Bureau of Motion Pictures of the Office of War Information, will receive all the footage they require. The WPB order does not apply to Army or Navy motion picture activities, which will continue to have unrestricted priority over all other users.

Armed Services Get Priority

The main purpose of the order, it was said, is to enable the armed services to obtain all the film they need. It was issued after the manufacturers of raw stock had shown that they could not meet military requirements and full commercial demands as well.

The order provided as follows:

Beginning at 11:59 P. M., August 20th, and continuing for 90 days thereafter no person may transfer any unexposed 35 mm film (except that packaged for still cameras) without specific authority from the director general of operations of the War Production Board.

Every person, except the Army or Navy, must file with the WPB within 15 days after issuance of the order a statement on the linear feet and type of 35 mm film in stock on the effective date of the order.

Mr. Hopper gave assurance that the motion picture industry will continue to receive film with which to produce pictures and make the prints.

"For the present, at least, the producers will not be permitted to use more film than they did in 1941, and will be expected to use less under the conservation plan now in effect," Mr. Hopper said. "Further discussion of the allocation of film under the order will be held at a meeting of the industry's advisory committee on August 25th."

Fewer prints are seen as an inevitable result. Also it is probable that many of the studios will drop at least a few "program" pictures from the schedules to save footage for better grade pictures which are likely to secure longer playing times.

The WPB directive limiting the use of increasingly scarce cellulose nitrate motion picture film stocks set only an overall ceiling on the amount of film which the entertainment screen may use. Proration of this total footage, based on the industry's consumption in 1941, among the major producing companies in Hollywood is to be left to the industry.

The industry conservation committee, composed of studio and distribution representatives, is to meet on Tuesday, August 25th, at Washington with Harold D. Hopper, head of the motion picture section of the War Production Board. He is the ex-officio chairman.

The committee will work out the details for applying and enforcing the film curtailment order. Each company will be required to file detailed and frequent schedules of current consumption and estimates of future needs.

The producers film conservation committee was summoned to a special session in Hollywood on Wednesday afternoon to discuss the application of the WPB order.

Mr. Hopper explained that 35 mm film for still cameras is not covered by the order because raw materials for the manufacture of amateur film already have been controlled under the production requirements plan.

Amateur Order Due Shortly

A WPB order affecting film for amateurs will be issued shortly.

While no film will be available for commercial advertising pictures, the WPB section chief said, "factual and morale films now being made by, or for, various Government departments when approved by Lowell Mellett will be given sufficient film to handle the subjects properly."

It was considered likely that the voluntary rationing formula submitted by the industry to the WPB on August 3d would form the basis for division of the approximately 780,000,000 feet of film per year which will be available on the basis of 1941 averages. The voluntary plan called for cuts by individual companies of from 10 to 24 per cent of their 1942 film volume.

Last year, for 1941-42 season product, it is estimated that the industry used 960,000,000 feet of 35 mm stock. The 1941 ceiling would pare 180,000,000 feet from this figure, leaving about 780,000,000 available for 1942-43 pictures.

The restriction on commercial advertising films is expected virtually to shut down the large industry which has made these pictures for exhibition both in theatres and for special industrial customers. Only industrial films used for training war workers, such as those being produced by General Motors, and several other war production firms are given to chance to survive.

It was not clear on Wednesday if the advertising film ban would also be interpreted as applying to motion picture advertising trailers.

EXHIBITORS TO MEET WITH WPB

Christopher Dunphy, head of the Amusments Section of the Consumers Division of the War Production Board, was to meet at Washington with the Motion Picture and Speaking Stage Advisory Committee Thursday. It was understood Mr. Dunphy would tell the committee that none of the materials needed for theatre operation are available in anywhere near normal quantities, with a serious situation in projection apparatus containing copper, rubber and steel.

The group, representing exhibitors before the WPB, was expected also to discuss priority limitations of theatre supplies and theatre salvage collections.

Objections Seen To Sponable Plan

Skepticism, and a multitude of objections from New York projection and Hollywood studio authorities, follows the announcement, last week, in New York, that consideration was being given by the distributors to the so-called "Sponable" method of saving film.

The method, named after I. E. Sponable, technical expert of Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone News, which was worked out in the company's Coast laboratory, and imparted in a few details to distributors and some projection men, in the New York home office of Fox last week, would reduce the height of motion picture frames from a ratio of approximately 3 to 4, to a ratio of 5 to 8, narrow the separation between frames, and reduce the number of film sprocket teeth perforations from the present four per frame, to three per frame. In this way, it is hoped to have three frames per nine sprocket holes, compared to the present two frames per eight. The narrowing of the frame separation, which now accounts for approximately one-tenth of the film area, would save about 25 per cent in film.

Mechanical Problems Are Anticipated

New York projection authorities see mechanical difficulties in the plan. They feel the amount of metal necessary for conversion of cameras, projectors, and laboratory printers, would be more difficult to obtain and more objectionable than other film saving methods; and that the burden of conversion would fall upon the exhibitor.

Thursday evening, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, in New York, the projection practice committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Eastern section, was to meet for discussion of the Sponable plan, and announcement of its opinion.

Although it has been indicated that a feature of the plan would be manufacture of sprockets, idlers, film guide shoes, and tracks, and apertures, all of which would have to be changed in the projector, doubt was cast upon ability of one or all projector manufacturers, to obtain priorities for the metal needed.

Mr. Sponable, who arrived in Hollywood Monday from New York to demonstrate his system to production executives and to the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, said it would save 500,000,000 feet of film annually.

Harold Hopper, head of the War Production Board's film division, said 80 tons of steel would be needed for the projector, printer, and camera parts corollary to adoption of the system. He added, however, that the WPB had told the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America this amount would be made available if requested.

PARAMOUNT BACKLOG OF 30 FEATURES STUDIO RECORD

Pictures Now Ready for Release Include Comedies, "Tried Formulae"

A fortnight ago Paramount announced completion of 30 features as establishing the largest backlog of pictures in the 30-year history of that company and the whole history of the industry, a claim that no one rose to refute.

One week ago Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of production, was asked whether, and if so how, it was possible in these times to stack up that many attractions—enough to supply the market for six months at the prevailing rate of consumption—without risking obsolescence, depreciation of values in storage through dating of subject matter, shifting of star popularity and other hazards of delay between shooting and screenings.

The builder of the biggest stockpile in the annals of the industry didn't say there was no risk involved. He did say such risk had been minimized by observance of teachings of experience which have become, if not hard and fast rules of thumb, truisms dependable enough to be applied as basic principles in amassing a store of product under the circumstances and for the purposes prompting the doing.

He made it no secret that one of these purposes was to have on hand for trade showing and marketing at a moment's notice a block of 12, 13 or whatever number of features might turn out to constitute a sales block under conditions of selling ordained to govern the 1942-43 season.

He did not discuss the taking of time by the forelock in view of the reduction of leading-man talent and critical materials, and it is of calendar record that the stocking of the backlog was well along before these considerations became urgent, although it was expedited after they had.

"Comedies Have Never Lacked Demand"

Comedies, he explained, have never lacked demand. "I don't mean just escapist pictures, necessarily," he said, "although those are included. I mean, experience has shown that, no no matter how depressed and intense people in general have been, for whatever reasons, they always have welcomed entertainment that gave them a chance to laugh and enjoy themselves while they were in the theatre."

Next day the production head went to New York to confer with home office executives on the matter of sales policy for 1942-43, regarding the number of pictures per block, and then came announcement of the trade showing of the first group of five pictures, inclusive of "Priorities on Parade," previously excluded from the count of 30 due to its advance opening for extraordinary reasons.

Analysis of the 27 pictures now in the backlog—by which is meant, exactly, that camera work has been finished on all, with editing and scoring still in progress on many of them—reflects observance of the Freeman principles.

Nine of the 27 stack up as A product (the term, frowned upon for external use but standard parlance in Hollywood, meaning upper-bracket attractions fitted by personnel and budget for the top half of double bills, top houses in single bill territory and top prices).

Four are Sol C. Siegel productions, budgeted considerably lower. Two by other producers rate alongside these. Four are Pine-Thomas action melodramas. Eight are Harry Sherman productions, three of these specials and five Hopalong Cassidy Westerns.

"Road to Morocco" looks to be the pick of the unseen product in point of dependability based on the record books. It's got Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour and is from a script by Frank Butler and Don Hartman, who furnished the trio with the two earlier "Road" pictures. Production is by Paul Jones, direction by David Butler and songs by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, dependables all.

On the basis of marquee strength, "Star Spangled Rhythm" figures, theoretically, to attract virtually all of the star-conscious theatre goers, for its presents, portraying themselves, all of the personalities under Paramount contract, plus some of the off-screen notables.

Quartette of Stars in Sturges Film

"Palm Beach Story" assays a quartette of names that have sold plenty of tickets—Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea, Mary Astor, Rudy Vallee—and there is assurance of merit in the record of Preston Sturges, who wrote and directed it, as there is in that of Paul Jones, producer. It's a comedy in the Sturges manner ("Great McGinty," "Sullivan's Travels," etc.) and Mr. Sturges has yet to turn out a flop.

Claudette Colbert, opposite Fred MacMurray in this instance, does comedy also in "No Time for Love," directed by Mitchell Leisen and produced by Fred Kohlmar, a Claude Binyon screenplay about a picture-magazine photographer (Miss Colbert) who sets out to get some shots of a sandhog (MacMurray) at work and encounters varied experiences.

Fred MacMurray is placed opposite Paulette Goddard and Susan Hayward and switched from comedy to melodrama in "The Forest Rangers," one of the company's most elaborate and costly films, which is described also as the first ever made with complete cooperation of the U. S. Forest Service.

"Happy Go Lucky" is another Technicolor job, pigmentation doing its part this time for a musical offering such experienced and marketable talents as Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Eddie Bracken, Betty Hutton and Rudy Vallee, all experts in the field of song. Musical numbers are by Frank Loesser and Jimmy McHugh, dependables, and three writers supplied a script to the tunes together

Studio Ventures into Realistic Fantasy

"Young and Willing" is the film title for the stage play, "Out of the Frying Pan," another commodity stocked in conformity with the Freeman conviction that comedy does not stale on the shelf. Produced and directed by Edward H. Griffith, accountable for some of the best Paramount comedies in the past and a few of the worst (Examples: "Honeymoon in Bali," "Bahama Passage"), the item could fall in either class.

"I Married a Witch" is Paramount's first venture into the field of realistic fantasy explored by the late Thorne Smith, author of "Turnabout," the "Topper" stories and this.

Last in the list of A product appears a solid attraction on all points. "Great Without Glory" is the biography of Dr. William Morton, the Boston dentist accredited with discovery of anaesthesia, who is portrayed by Joel McCrea. Betty Field, Harry Carey, William Demarest and Franklin Pangborn are in the cast. Preston Sturges wrote and directed the picture, leaving not much room for doubt that a sound job has been done with a subject which may or may not catch and hold public interest.

Most marketable of the four Sol C. Siegel lesser-budget productions in the backlog appears to be "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," beneficiary of the fame of the novel by Alice Hegan Rice, the play by Anne Crawford Flexner and a number of previous screen versions. Fay Bainter is to be seen in the title role, with Hugh Herbert, Vera Vague, Carolyn Lee, Betty Brewer and others in support.

Four of Backlog Are Siegel's

Burgess Meredith, now in the armed forces, and Claire Trevor are the names with which to sell Mr. Siegel's "Street of Chance," a murder mystery with amnesia coloration. Jack Hively, who has turned out many low-cost films that satisfied, directed. Not much is in evidence to support forecast.

"My Heart Belongs to Daddy" is another Siegel offering of provocative title, borrowed from the song made popular by Mary Martin, but in no wise related to the same. It's a comedy about a college professor, with Richard Carlson, Martha O'Driscoll, Cecil Kellaway and Frances Gifford as names to bill.

Mr. Siegel's "Lady Bodyguard" supplies showmen somewhat more to work with in the way of names—Eddie Albert, Anne Shirley, Roger Pryor, Raymond Walburn, Ed Brophy, Donald MacBride—and gives these players a story by Edward Haldeman and Vera Caspary to work in.

"Lucky Jordan," produced by Fred Kohlmar, can be exploited on the shoulders of "This Gun for Hire," as the first starring vehicle of Alan Ladd, who made history for himself and money for showmen in that melodrama. This is similarly handled, and directed by Frank Tuttle, who directed the other, being the story of a racketeer drafted into the Army who learns the hard way the lesson of service to his country.

Action Melodramas From Pine-Thomas

"Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour," of course, carries forward the series, with Jimmy Lydon, Charles Smith, John Litel, Olive Blakeney and others playing a yarn about Henry's going to Hollywood, exposing himself to glamour and returning home. Looks about right for this point in the series.

Most exploitable of the four action films from producers William Pine and William Thomas appears to be "Submarine Alert," presenting Richard Arlene, Wendy Barrie, Nils Asther.

Chester Morris, Jean Parker, Ralph Sanford, Dick Purcell, Roger Pryor, Elizabeth Patterson and Douglas Fowley are the names for billing of "I Live on Danger," reportedly a peak in the Pine-Thomas production career.

"Silver Queen," Sherman's first straight dramatic production in seven years, is about a society belle of yesteryear who undertakes to recoup her father father's fortune.

Mr. Sherman's "American Empire" is similarly strong as to talent—Richard Dix, Leo Carrillo, Preston Foster, Frances Gifford, Robert Barrett, Jack LaRue, Chris-Pin Martin.

Warners Show Net Profit of $5,371,875

A net profit of $5,371,875 was reported by Warner Bros. this week for the 39 weeks ended May 30th, compared with profit of $4,433,455 for the corresponding first three-quarters of the company's 1941 fiscal year.

The result is after all charges, including Federal income and excess profits taxes and a provision of $1,225,000 for contingencies in respect of the net assets of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories. Provision for normal Federal income tax amounted to $2,600,000, calculated at the rates of the 1941 Revenue Act, due to the fact that the company's current fiscal year ends August 29th. Provision for Federal excess profits tax was $1,500,000, based upon tentative estimates made by the company.

Accounts of subsidiaries operating in Britain, Australia, India, Egypt, Sweden and Switzerland have been consolidated in the statement and their operations are included for their most recent 39-week period.

Net profit from operations for the current year's 39 weeks before Federal income and excess profits taxes was $9,471,875, compared with $5,491,445 for the same period last year. Gross income was $87,790,224, compared with $76,609,471 last year.

Cash in the United States at the end of the period amounted to $8,805,455, compared with $10,202,288 at Feb. 28, last.

Earnings were equivalent to $1.37 per share on 3,701,090 shares of common outstanding, after allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred, and to $53.92 per share on 99,617 shares of preferred outstanding. Dividends in arrears on the preferred amounted to $33.68¾ at June 1.

30 DAYS IN HOLLYWOOD

The progress of the conservation of critical materials during the month of June on the studio lots of Hollywood is reported below by the Screen Actors Guild.

Gray areas indicate proportionate savings of war-necessary materials. Pre-conservation consumption is shown by the full 10 units. Savings were effected by salvage, substitution and new production rules.

Tronolone Elected Pathe Lab. Vice-President

Nick Tronolone this week was appointed director and vice-president in charge of laboratory operations, production and sales for Pathe Laboratories, Inc. He had been sales manager.

Other officers were reelected. They include: Kenneth M. Young, chairman of the board; George J. Bonwick, executive vice-president and treasurer; Robert Benjamin, vice-president and general counsel; Earl Herzog, assistant treasurer.

Mr. Tronolone has been in laboratory work in the film industry for 38 years. He began his industry career at the Biograph Studio in 1904. Since then he has been with the Kinemacolor Motion Picture Corporation; the Edison Motion Picture Company; the Paragon-Laboratory of Jules Brulatour; his own firm, "Nick's" Film Laboratory, and Consolidated Film Industries, Inc. He joined Pathe in 1937.

During the first World War, Mr. Tronolone was President Wilson's personal photographer, accompanying him to Europe for the signing of the peace.

See Selznick Unit Ending

Liquidation of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., is being accelerated, so that it might be accomplished by the end of the month, observers believe.

Principal stockholders are John Hay Whitney, now a captain in the Army; David Selznick, United Artists producer-partner; John D. Hertz, financier, and Robert Lehman.

It is reported Mr. Whitney and Mr. Selznick each have purchased several old picture properties of the company. However, "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca" are to remain under trustee's control indefinitely, and the income from them is to be divided among the stockholders.

With the New York office of the company expected to close at the end of the month, Lowell Calvert, distribution manager, probably will leave the company at the same time. It is thought Leonard Case, accountant for Mr. Whitney, will handle final liquidation.

Mr. Calvert this week did not announce his plans.

Paramount's GO

"WAKE ISLAND"

BRIAN DONLEVY · Macdonald Carey · Robert Preston
Albert Dekker · William Bendix · Walter Abel · Directed by John Farrow

WHAT IT'S GOT—The greatest boxoffice title that any theatre can today put on a marquee. A name that has appeared and will appear on the front pages of the nation's newspapers day after day.

WHAT'S BEHIND IT—The picture will help four great organizations in their efforts—The War Relief Fund of the American Red Cross, The United States Treasury in its sale of bonds and stamps, the recruiting campaign of the United States Marine Corps and the Marine Corps League. These groups are prepared to utilize the picture to help them—the press book carries all details.

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT— FILM DAILY—"Stirring epic which will thrill the nation." VARIETY—"One of the most striking pictures of the year."

"The MAJOR and the MINOR"

Is she a kid? or is she kidding?

starring Ginger Rogers · Ray Milland with Rita Johnson · Robert Benchley · Diana Lynn Directed by Billy Wilder

WHAT IT'S GOT—Ginger Rogers at the peak of her boxoffice career in her best performance—Ray Milland fresh from his triumph in "REAP THE WILD WIND"—a great supporting cast—ace direction.

WHAT THEY THINK ABOUT IT—LIFE thinks enough about it to make it its "Picture of the Week." REDBOOK thinks enough about it to make it the picture of the month for October. Every magazine has picked it as the picture of the month.

MUSICAL NOTE—We have had written a tune called "THE MAJOR AND THE MINOR" which is headed straight for the Hit Parade!

Brian Donlevy · Veronica Lake · Alan Ladd
Bonita Granville · Richard Denning · Joseph Calleia
Directed by Stuart Heisler • Based on the Novel by Dashiell Hammett

"The Thin Man's" two older brothers and little Miss Dynamite!

WHAT IT'S GOT—What's it got? Well, there's Dashiell Hammett's greatest story—there's Alan Ladd, hot as a pistol at the boxoffice—there's Brian Donlevy, sure to be a marquee national hero after "WAKE ISLAND"—there's little Miss Dynamite, Veronica Lake. What a trio and what a story! Who could ask for anything more?

"PRIORITIES on PARADE"

Ann Miller • Betty Rhodes • Jerry Colonna
Johnnie Johnston • Vera Vague • Directed by Albert S. Rogell

WHAT IT'S GOT—The Number 1 gams and the hottest and most exciting dancer today—Ann Miller—Jerry Colonna and Vera Vague, the raves of the air waves—Betty Rhodes, a solid singer with a real punch and the Mutual network buildup behind her—and some great numbers, including "CONCHITA LOPEZ," soon to be queen of radio music.

WHAT THEY SAID ABOUT IT—FILM DAILY—"Grand boxoffice entertainment." BOXOFFICE—"Solid entertainment." SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW—"Swell array of entertainment. Must be entertaining—what? After all that's what films try to do."

"WILDCAT" Richard Arlen · Arline Judge

William Frawley • Larry "Buster" Crabbe • Arthur Hunnicutt • Elisha Cook, Jr.

THE PEAK YEAR!

IN PRODUCTION — Paramount's great Technicolor version of the Ernest Hemingway best-seller — directed by Sam Wood and starring Gary Cooper — "FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS"

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

London in the War sorely misses "American coffee," as they call it. And Aubrey Flanagan, our London correspondent, said so, a few weeks ago, in an exchange of inter-office correspondence with New York MOTION PICTURE HERALD staff member Gertrude Merriam.

Anyway, Aubrey Flanagan got his "American coffee," direct from New York. And an American plane this week brought back word from Flanagan that "it arrived in all its aromatic glory, and already we have brewed a dish of it, to the joy of myself and our John Lynn, and, judging by the twitching nostrils of the folk across our office hall, to the gastronomic envy of Messrs. David Shackman and Sons, Ltd., Jewellers and Dealers in Rare Stones.

"You know," continued Flanagan, "that none of our real homey, genuine, dyed-in-the-blue U. S. coffees are being imported into England now. Corn in Egypt has nothing on coffee in London's Golden Square.

"Incidentally, the coffee fulfills a purely clinical role this morning, because we had an Alert in London and I was on the Fire Guard squad. There was plenty of whanging of 'Ack Ack' (anti-aircraft fire), and there was a plane, or two, but that seemed to be all. Indeed, my fellow Fire Guards, drawn from this block of Golden Square, did not seem to mind being turfed out of bed at that early hour, but were just burned up at having nothing to do when they were awake. But every time I am awake, I give thanks for that 'American coffee.'"

Three officers and 18 privates of the United States Signal Corps, Photographic Center, at Long Island City, formerly were artists or technicians at the Walt Disney cartoon studios in California. They include Colonel Melvin Gillette, Commanding Officer, Captain Ellis Smith, Lieutenant Robert Leffingwell, and Privates Frank Onaitis, John Barron, George Baker, M. Fairbairn, C. L. Hartman, Rod Johnson, Vic Michonski, Paul Moore, Art Moore, George Peed, Bob Perry, Wilbur Streech, Mel Grau, Toni Chierichetti, Bob Majors, Nick Gibson, Lars Calonius and Richard Mosher.

Walt's brother, Roy Disney, in New York, took them all out, the other night, to a big blowout and to see "Bambi."

Alois Havilla told the story, over New York radio station WHN, the other morning news broadcast, about the soldier up at a camp in Massachusetts, who went to his superior officer and requested a furlough because his wife was "expecting." Leove wos granted. The soldier returned, and the following week he again requested a furlough, for the some reoson—"my wife is expecting." Again a furlough was granted. But when the buck private repeated the third time, again giving as the reason the excuse that his wife was expecting, his officer, impatient, asked the soldier who could his wife be expecting. The soldier, in all candor, replied: "She's expecting me, sir."

Russia has no Red Cross. Their's is the Red Crescent.

America's legion of hay-fever sneezers, of which the motion picture business has a goodly share, will be welded into a non-dues paying organization whose sole mission is to eliminate the expression "Gesundheit" from the American idiom.

Radio-station WOR's Jim (Happy Jim) Parsons, a ragweed-sneezer himself, and a strong anti-Gesundheiter, anticipating a barrage of Gesundheits from misguided friends during the annual hay-fever sneezing season —August 15th to about two o'clock on the afternoon of September 15th—says he wants no Gesunderheit good-wishes in the language of a people who haven't a good wish left among all of them.

Happy Jim Parsons proposes the formation, by hay-fever-sneezers only, of the 'Ho Sai Gai Club," whose members will out-shout all Gesundheits with a loud Ho Sai Gai. Mr. Parsons thinks that Ho Sai Gai means 'Good luck,' like Gesundheit, but in Chinese.

Anyone calling CI-7-8282, and asking for Twitterpated Toni learned from Walt Disney press agent Miss Toni Spitzer, that twitterpated is the language of love which the cartoon animals talk in Mr. Disney's new "Bambi" motion picture.

Members of a naval oir squadron being recruited in Centrol Indiana will be known as Lombardiers, in honor of Carole Lombard, who was killed in an airplone occident en route from an Indiana Wor Bond drive to Hollywood, and whose husbond, Clork Gable, was ot the moment of this writing, en route from Hollywood to Florida, to become a soldier in the Air Corps.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., with all of the millions passed on to him by his dad, the late Carl Laemmle, from Senior Laemmle's sale of Universal Pictures, is a plain private in the Army, and likes it. He's with Colonel Melvin Gillette's crew of Signal Corps filmers, over at the old Paramount Studios at Astoria, Long Island.

All of which reminded Damon Runyon, of Junior Laemmle's pronounced hypochondria before he got into the Army. Junior hasn't been sick since he's been in the Army. Or, at least, he hasn't once thought he was sick.

Runyon remembers when once at a football game in California, a friend inflated his cheeks and surreptitiously blew his breath on the back of Private Laemmle's neck and Junior got up and hurried home in his heated limousine, saying the stadium was full of drafts and that a man might easily catch his death of cold there.

Of course Private Junior Laemmle was not a private then. He was a youthful movie tycoon, head of Universal Pictures, and owner of the largest collection of medicines in the country outside some of the more important drug store chains.

Runyon reminds you young Laemmle was ever a fugitive from germs. All one had to do to quit winner on Private Junior in a gin rummy game was to cough in his kisser when you were ahead and he would hasten away to sterilize himself, leaving you in possession of your spoils. He had as many sprays as the Mayo Clinic.

One may judge of Runyon's astonishment then, when in a New York cafe the other evening some of the guests complained that there was something wrong with one of the courses and called on the waiters to make a change, Private Laemmle calmly continued with his portion and said it tasted fine to him. He sat coatless and disdained a suggestion that he switch chairs because he was in a cross-current of air and then Runyon realized the miracle worked by the Army.

"Are you ever sick?" he inquired.

"I should say not," said Private Junior. "They give you big pills if you get sick and I would rather stay well than take them."

Tragedy entered Laemmle's soldier life the other weekend. He was hoping for a pass to see the last day of racing at Empire and he had polished himself and his accoutrement up to the fineness of the hair on a cat's back, as it seems that perfection in that respect is a requisite for leave in his Army outfit. He forgot, however, to wipe the woodwork around his bunk and that was the first place the inspecting officer poked a finger. No pass.

"I had a couple of hot tips, too," said Private Junior, so reported Damon Runyon.

Allied Unit Poll Aimed at End Of Dual Bills

In line with the campaign for the elimination of double features, Allied Theatres of Illinois is conducting a nationwide poll among exhibitors to determine the difference in running time, in hours per week, between a policy of single features and duals. The support of every exhibitor association in the country has been solicited in conducting the poll and to date the response from the various state organizations has been good, according to the Allied unit officials in Chicago.

The Illinois group believe that the elimination of double features will reduce actual running time in theatres and result in saving electrical power, wear on equipment, parts and film and conserve vital materials needed in the war effort.

Reaction among the exhibitor groups has all been favorable to the plan.

L. O. Lukan, chairman of the single bill committee of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, wrote Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, as follows:

"In response to your letter of July 31st to which you attached a sample card relating to single and double bills, it is refreshing to know that somebody actually is trying to do something constructive about this very important matter.

"I read in the trade papers where it is proposed that 'credits' be eliminated in order to conserve raw stock. Other similarly ineffective and silly proposals have also been suggested. How ridiculous these measures appear when we continue to play double feature programs, particularly when independent theatres throughout America have certified their preference for single bills."

Leo F. Wolcott, president of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, Inc., said: "I believe you have something here which is of vital interest to the industry and the war effort. I am very much in favor of it."

Other endorsements of the plan have been received from R. X. Williams, president of the MPTO of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee; O. J. Miller, executive secretary of the ITO of Oregon; Don R. Rossiter, executive secretary of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana; Ray Branch, president of Allied Theatres of Michigan, Inc., and Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Discuss Dropping Duals In Connecticut

Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut at a meeting on Monday, in New Haven, with Dr. J. B. Fishman presiding, discussed changing policy to single features in a territory which has always had double features. Film rentals also were discussed, as well as cooperation in the September War Bond and Stamp drive.

"Pride of Yankees" Played Single Bill

All RKO theatres throughout the country will play the Goldwyn-RKO film, "The Pride of the Yankees," as a single feature and at increased prices, Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio Pictures president, said last week. It is playing as a single bill in several situations already, it was said.

Fire Damages Theatre

Fire on August 5th destroyed 15 dressing rooms in the Century theatre, Camden, N. J. Five stores in the building were damaged.

Simons in Ad Talk To Schine Managers

Mike Simons, editor of The Distributor, house organ of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, last week visited four of the Schine circuit's manager meetings, at the request of Schine executives. Simons gave a talk on "Basic Principles of Motion Picture Advertising in American Newspapers." He gave the same talk at a recent meeting of Schine district managers in Gloversville, N. Y.

The advertising treatise grew out of an original slide presentation on the subject originally prepared for MGM's exhibitor forums by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Vinson Heads New RKO Exploitation Section

RKO Radio has added an advertising-exploitation section to its studio publicity department, with Elliston Vinson, assistant studio publicity director, in charge.

Milton Howe of the public relations staff has been named publicity manager and will take over some of the duties formerly handled by Mr. Vinson. The latter will continue to supervise activities of the department under Perry Lieber's direction. The new section will prepare campaigns for films well in advance and will have them available for pre-release test runs as well as regular bookings.

"Blue Laws" Dropped By Two Tennessee Cities

Knoxville, Tenn., shortly will have its first Sunday shows. The City Council this week was to pass modification of the "blue laws," which have forbade them. The modification permits theatre operation on Sundays from 1 P.M. to 6 P.M.

The Lebanon, Tenn., City Council has agreed to lift that city's ban on Sunday shows, between August 15th and November 15th. This is for the benefit of soldiers maneuvering in the area.

Manage Texas Theatres

A. D. Deason, formerly manager of the Tyler and Liberty theatres in Tyler, Texas, has been named manager of the Interstate circuit's 12 suburban houses in Houston, succeeding Weldon W. Parsons, transferred to San Antonio as manager of the Majestic there. Thomas E. Jones has been named manager of the Varsity at Dallas, replacing Joseph Jackson, who has entered the Army.

Columbia Closes Deal

C. D. Hill, St. Louis manager for Columbia Pictures, announced that he had closed a deal with the Kerasotes Circuit southern Illinois for the entire 1942-43 products. The circuit has 14 houses, and the Columbia films will play the first run at the Senate theatre in Springfield.

"Ice-Capades" Is Booked

The third edition of "Ice-Capades," now in production at Hershey, Pa., will play at the Duquesne Gardens, Pittsburgh, the week of November 9th. It will open in Madison Square Garden, New York, September 4th.

Rocky Mountain Outing

The eighth annual outing of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club will be held August 27th at the Lakewood Country Club in Denver. Golf and bridge and a softball game are on the program.

Arkansas House Burns

The Cozy theatre at Norphlet, Ark., was destroyed by fire on August 5th, with a loss of $5,000 to building and equipment.

Wisconsin Unit Rejects Bid

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin this week rejected membership in the Central States Conference of Independent Theatre Operators, the Conference office in Minneapolis was notified.

Officers of the Wisconsin organization previously had indicated they favored membership in the conference, it was reported, but the proposal was voted down by the membership.

Formation of the conference will proceed despite the Wisconsin organization's action, it was said. Membership will include the Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska independents. Their representatives are scheduled to meet following the annual convention of Northwest Allied in Minneapolis September 1-2.

Meanwhile, reports were heard of efforts to form a rival organization to Northwest Allied in the territory. The organization has been more or less inactive in national Allied affairs since its sponsorship of the Minnesota anti-block-of-five law. Saul G. Lebedoff, Minneapolis exhibitor, and leader of an independent group which has been at odds with Northwest leadership, is reported to have contacted national Allied officers recently on the subject of establishing a new organization in Minneapolis.

Mr. Lebedoff's reply was that he did head a group which wants Northwest Allied to become more militant in its feelings with distributors, and which was disturbed by Allied's "crackdown" on giveaways, but that he knew of no attempt to depose present Allied leadership.

Pennsylvania Allied Sets Convention

The annual convention of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania has been set for October 19-20 at either the William Penn or the Roosevelt Hotel in Pittsburgh.

Members of the motion picture industry in Detroit and surrounding territory held a moonlight boat ride and outing Wednesday. The affair was sponsored by the Variety Club of Michigan, under the direction of J. R. McPherson, new chief barker.

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, Inc., will hold an outing Tuesday at the Hollywood Hotel, West End, N. J. Golf and swimming are on the program.

Clevenger in FCC Post

Russell R. Clevenger, public relations man who established the public relations department for Broadcast Music, Inc., has been appointed director of information for the Federal Communications Commission. He will succeed George O. Gillingham, now in the Army.

Honor Union Official

A testimonial dinner was held last week at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, Conn., for Louis Mellow, treasurer of Local 84 of the IATSE, who will enter the Army.

"Stooges" On Tour

The "Three Stooges," Columbia comedy players, opened August 14th at Philadelphia, first stop on a personal appearance tour.

John Hubbard Signed

Republic Pictures has signed John Hubbard for two pictures, the first of which will be a musical.

Color for Beery Film

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced this week that "Salute to the Marines," starring Wallace Beery, would be made in Technicolor.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

The Emergency Has Its Points

Without challenging or discounting the late General Sherman's observation with respect to the hellishness of war, it is to be reported that eight months of emergency have brought Hollywood some changes which begin now to take shape in full view of the professional population as gains to be consolidated in the interests of the art and industry.

Out of stresses and deprivations born of the conflict have come changes of attitude and procedure viewed at first as hardships but beginning to be recognized as benefits.

At top of the list and accounting for many of the improvements effected and pending is a return of ranking executives to the sleeves-up-job-to-be-done state of will and purpose which animated and guided them in the years of their beginnings. They've cut away a lot of loose rigging and scraped off a lot of barnacles since the blow started, and they've been too busy doing it to talk much. They still are.

Confronted with a limitation on expenditures for sets, they have taken their cameras out of doors and substituted color for carpentry.

Faced with a shortage of leading-man talent, they have turned to stories (Example: "The Pied Piper" with Monty Woolly), which do not depend upon handsome males to entertain the ultimate consumers.

Forced to conserve tires, they have sent their location companies back into the adjacent fastnesses of Hollywood's hills, not photographed for years, without sacrifice of screen result and with considerable economy of time and money. (Example: The Virginia City sequences of "The Adventures of Mark Twain" were shot 1½ miles from the corner of Hollywood and Vine.)

Mastered Many Technical Problems

Experts always in the devising and use of ersatz, they have mastered a score of technological problems without pausing to shout about it.

Caught with a number of pre-Pearl Harbor subjects on their shelves, they have brought them into harmony with post-Pearl Harbor conditions by inserting a line of dialogue, a montage of stock shots to denote a time lapse, by minor deletions and substitutions which neither get nor rate chronicling but do solve problems.

Convinced by experience before Pearl Harbor that war themes were poison at the box office, and invited by the Government after Pearl Harbor to produce a lot of them, they fumbled a bit, muffed a few tries and came up with the knowledge (Example: "Mrs. Miniver") that pictures about people in wartime, instead of pictures about war itself, are the answer to all the needs.

With or without causation from the front office, other benefits have accrued.

Labor disputes, save for scattered jurisdictional squabbles, have subsided.

Pictures and people intent upon selling a variety of isms and ologies via the screen have vanished from the scene.

The conflict which ended the usefulness of drawing room dramas, continental comedies and merely clever conversation pieces provided a wealth of stirring melodramas to take their place.

Film conservation sheared off miles of red tape cluttering production procedure, whetted writers' wits and brought directors down off high horses.

Salaries are about what they were, up some if anything.

Unemployment has ceased to be a problem, scarcity of talent is just around the corner, and the record to date suggests that a way will be found to cope with that matter also when coping becomes necessary.

It is not to be denied that fears and jitters shook the seat of production at the outbreak of the war, but it is to be affirmed and certified that Hollywood has landed and the situation is under control.

Seek Ayres Substitute

Provocatively titled with a view to inducing communications from the customers, "Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant" has gone into production with not one but three young men replacing Lew Ayres as aides to Lionel Barrymore in his surgical and psychological undertakings. The hope behind the project is that the public will indicate its approval of one or another of the young men in terms that will facilitate the ultimate substitution of that one for the former star. The young men are Van Johnson, Richard Quine and Keye Luke.

Eight pictures were started during the week and six were finished, to bring the production index to 44.

"B" Producers Get "A" Rating

Twentieth Century-Fox producers who have been making "B" pictures (the studio's own written word for them) are being given "A" budgets to work with for the new year's schedule, upshot of the company's decision to release eight more major productions next season than this.

Ralph Dietrich is at work now on "My Friend Flicka," a Technicolor job budgeted above $500,000, and is preparing "Margin for Error," similarly financed.

Walter Morosco has been assigned "Arctic Convoy", starring Ida Lupino, and promoted to "A" rating.

Sol M. Wurtzel has completed "Manila Calling," costing over $300,000, to be offered exhibitors on percentage, and will start "The Impostor" on a similar scale in September.

Bryan Foy has been assigned the percentage features, "Seventh Column" and "Sioux City."

Leshin Associate Producer

E. D. Leshin, unit producer for Paramount Pictures, has been named an associate producer in the B. G. De Sylva unit.

New Contract for Mayo

Archie Mayor, director, has signed a new two-year contract with Twentieth Century-Fox.

Paramount To Remake Film

Paramount will remake the French picture, "The Man Who Seeks the Truth," with an American background. The company has taken an option on the story.

Union Sues Loew's, RKO Over Browne

Seeks $3,000,000 Damage, Claims Payment Affected 306 Circuit Contracts

Local 306, New York projectionists union, and 400 of its members in RKO and Loew's metropolitan circuits filed suit in the New York supreme court on Tuesday against Loew's, Inc., Marcus Loew Booking Agency and RKO Service Corp., seeking $3,000,000 damages for claimed bribery of George E. Browne, former president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and revision of employment contracts which run until 1945, to give the union an additional total of $750,000 for those four years.

The complaint charged the defendants with payment of $150,000 to Browne in 1935 by Charles C. Moskowitz, representing Loew's and Major L. E. Thompson, RKO, during the course of negotiations for a new contract for the alleged purpose of influencing the IATSE president to withhold his consent to a strike which the local allegedly wished to call.

Local 306 contended that the alleged bribery of Browne was disclosed at the extortion trial of Browne and Willie Bioff which resulted in the conviction of the two former IA officials and their imprisonment.

According to the complaint, in August, 1935, the defendants notified 306 that as of August 12th the projectionists employed in Loew's and RKO theatres in New York would be paid at $1.25 an hour instead of the previous rate of $2.12, a reduction of more than 40 per cent. The union, the complaint continues, negotiated with Mr. Moscowitz and Major Thompson, and the charge is made that the company representatives "induced Local 306 to believe that throughout the negotiations with the defendants, Local 306 was being accorded the benefit of the free exercise of discretion and judgment on the part of the international president, George Browne.

Union Requested Browne's Aid

This free exercise of discretion and judgment, the local contended, was never given because Browne was allegedly "fettered, hampered and eliminated through the bribery, corruption and fraud perpetrated by the defendants through their agents upon Local 306, its representatives and members through the acts of the defendant and the corrupt bargain made between the defendants and George E. Browne."

In August or September, 1935, it is alleged, the union requested Browne's assistance in negotiations and his authority to call a strike against the defendants. The union goes on to say that "the duly authorized representative of the defendant, Charles C. Moskowitz and Major L. E. Thompson, with the knowledge, consent, approval and ratification of officers and directors of the defendants, and in collaboration, collusion and conjunction with each other., for the purpose of illegally, unlawfully and wrongfully influencing the discretion and judgment of Browne, as international president, by the payment to him, directly or through his personal representative, William Bioff or others, upwards of the sum of $150,000."

Seek Revision Of Contracts

Subsequently, it is stated, the union entered a 10-year contract with Loew and RKO which provided for wage adjustments every two years and the payment of $1.87 per hour to the union members. The complaint asserts that had Browne worked to prevent the reduction in wages and authorized the strike, the union would not have been compelled to consent to the reduction. The suit seeks in addition damages and a revision of the contracts which is estimated to bring in an additional $750,000 for the period from 1941 to 1945, when the employment contracts expire.

ASC Chief In N. Y. Talks With IBEW

In New York this week conferences were scheduled among officials of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, and Fred Jackman, president of the American Society of Cinematographers, the IBEW's Local 1318.

The charter for the latter is a reflection of the fight between the ASC, formerly independent, and the IATSE Hollywood photographers' Local 659, which attempted to absorb the ASC.

Charges by the latter, that the studios violated the Wagner Act by refusing to bargain, were rejected last week by the National Labor Relations Board. The local and the ASC have ordered cameramen not to hold cards in the other organization.

AFL-IA and CIO Push Office Worker Units

The drive to organize office workers in exchanges is being continued by the IATSE, its president, Richard Walsh, said last week in New York. He added 15 "F" locals have been chartered. More will be organized, so they will cover all key cities. He said full support of the IA also will be given the AFL's unaffiliated Motion Picture Office Employees Union, which last week won a contract for clerical workers in the Warner home office, has one with the Universal office there, and seeks to organize in Paramount.

Of the CIO's similar organization attempts, in exchanges, and home offices, through its Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, the IA chief said "proper action" will be taken later. He added that, while non-union office workers would be the first objective, the IA did not relinquish its asserted jurisdiction over those who have joined the CIO unit.

The latter, meanwhile, extended its campaign to Philadelphia. There it has already enrolled Universal exchange workers.

Jonas Rosenfeld, Jr., president of the Screen Publicists Guild, New York, will represent it at the biennial convention of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, of which the Guild is Local 114. The convention, at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel, Albany, will run from September 5-10.

The Guild last week reached an accord with Warners over a contract similar to that it has with the other seven major distributors. The membership ratified the contract terms last week. The contract calls for minimum salaries of $25 weekly for apprentice publicists; $40 for associates; $65 for full publicists. Those receiving above these minimums get a 10 per cent increase. Terms are retroactive to May 15th.

Agree On Coast Union Conditions

Agreement on working conditions of clerical employees in Los Angeles and San Francisco exchanges, was reached at parleys in New York last week in the office of Pat Casey, producers' labor contact. The employees were represented by the Screen Office Employees Guild, affiliated with the AFL's painters' international union. Wage scales were to be discussed this week.

Clerical workers of the Warner New York home office, as the Motion Picture Office Employees Union, AFL Local 23169, met Monday night to approve a settlement of a dispute over a closed shop contract. The settlement came last week after 10 days' strike, called because the union charged the company repudiated points of an agreement over the contract.

FCC Questions Broadcasters In Petrillo Investigation

This week broadcasters received a 10-page questionnaire from the Federal Communications Commission, asking information about the activities of the American Federation of Musicians, and its president, James Caesar Petrillo. The activities led to the filing two weeks ago of a Department of Justice antitrust suit which will be heard in Chicago Federal court September 16th.

The activities are Mr. Petrillo's ban on the manufacture of recordings after August 1st by union members and the numerous disputes between stations and AFM locals, which have enlisted the powerful aid of the national organization, several times resulting in "boycotts" of networks and banning of services from such stations.

A shortage of between $8,000 and $10,000 was discovered in the funds of New York exchange Local B-51. IATSE, last week, by Lou Johnson, president. It was ascertained the union's treasurer had used the money to pay gambling debts. He was removed from his job at the Warner exchange.

In New York, workers at the De Luxe Laboratory struck briefly Tuesday in protest against alleged failure of the company to grant wage increases sought by their union, Local 702, from all companies. John Rugge, president of the local, ordered them back to work Tuesday evening.

AMERICA AT WAR MEANS

SCREEN TIME IS MORE VITAL THAN EVER BEFORE

This year we're all sitting in on the biggest game of all—with Uncle Sam taking a hand.

Today there's no place on any showman's program for "fill in" shorts. Every screen minute must COUNT—in terms of information or entertainment. Every foot of film must have PROVEN audience interest.

With this in mind, Paramount went to the nation's exhibitors for its 1942-43 Feature Shorts program. Through a continuing survey by a special sales staff of ten Short Subject contact men, we asked YOU what shorts to make and how to exploit and pre-sell them nationally. HERE'S YOUR ANSWER—

You Planned Paramount's

You asked for

12 SUPERMAN One-Reel Cartoons
IN TECHNICOLOR!

You quoted Time Magazine: "Some 20,000,000 Supermaniacs can hardly wait for Superman's ten-minute, one-reel cartoon to appear once a month in more than 7,000 U. S. movie houses." You recognized the percentage in the presold audience of 50,000,000 who follow SUPERMAN in more than 300 newspapers and magazines and on more than 200 radio stations. SUPERMAN caught on like wildfire—that's why you asked for those one-reel adventures in Technicolor based on the famous character created by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster.

You demanded

6 George Pal MADCAP MODELS
One-Reel Puppetoons IN TECHNICOLOR!

We didn't even need the survey to know you demanded more of George Pal's genius. We got fan letters from exhibitors all year 'round! And we knew what you meant when MADCAP MODELS played more top A theatres consistently than any other short subject.

You wanted

6 SPEAKING OF ANIMALS
One-Reel Shorts

Here's the short subject series that proves there is something new under the heading of fun, is the way you put it. And here's the way Besa Short of Interstate put it: "THE BEST NOVELTY SHORT FROM ANY COMPANY THIS YEAR!" Jerry Fairbanks and Bob Carlisle will produce the six one-reelers by their patented process!

52 FEATURE SHORTS +12

942-43 Feature Shorts Program

You insisted on

12 POPEYE One-Reel Cartoons

Before the boys popped the question, you insisted on Popeye. You pointed out how Popeye and his spinach still pulls in the "long green" after ten solidly-booked years. Famous Studios will keep dishing it out! And you'll get the same pre-selling in the widely-syndicated King Features comic strip.

You called for

6 UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS
One-Reel Shorts IN MAGNACOLOR!

You called for more of those seat-filling star sequences. Last year: Amos 'n' Andy, John Barrymore, Richard Arlen. This year more names worth any showman's marquee wattage. Fairbanks and Carlisle continue to keep one eye on the Unusual.

You ordered

6 POPULAR SCIENCE
One-Reel Shorts IN MAGNACOLOR!

"Hot" as a newsreel . . . more entertaining than ever—that's what you said. And it might interest you to know that Jerry Fairbanks and Bob Carlisle have lined up more "firsts" on how Science is perfecting new ways of war.

You proposed

10 Grantland Rice SPORTLIGHTS
One-Reel Shorts Narrated by TED HUSING

We took your dictation. It went like this: "Tops for 22 years! America's foremost sports authority plus the networks' Number One Commentator! Whatta team! And keeping in tune with the times with emphasis on sports and their new place in the world is a terrific idea!" Produced by Jack Eaton.

You chose

6 Paramount HEADLINERS
One-Reel Shorts

You ordered Paramount to turn out those pace-setting feature shorts with headline ideas, headline names, headline production. You asked for more of those outstanding subjects with the "twist" that means box office!

SUPERMAN" CARTOONS
IN TECHNICOLOR!

EXHIBITORS BUYING U. S. WAR INSURANCE, JUST IN CASE

War Damage Corporation Writes Policies; Estimate 3,000 Theatres Apply

War damage insurance is proving a popular safeguard among theatre men against the losses that might happen here should enemy bombers reach our shores.

In addition to stirrup pumps, sand bags, new fire extinguishers and the other implements of physical protection from war damage, the large circuits and many independent exhibitors in coastal areas are safeguarding their investments with insurance policies underwritten by the Government of the United States.

Increasing numbers of theatre owners and operators are taking out insurance policies with the War Damage Corporation, a special war time U. S. agency, to compensate them for property damage which might occur as a direct result of enemy attack. The new policies cover all losses to real property and equipment in consequences of attack or from the efforts of the U. S. forces to drive off the enemy.

New York insurance sources recently estimated that between three and four thousand theatres have already applied for war damage coverage. Exact figures are not yet available in Washington.

The insurance is underwritten by the War Damage Corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation created by a special act of Congress. Established insurance companies are issuing the policies as fiduciary agents for the Government and applications may be filed through any established general insurance agent.

Distributors Now Have Insurance

Premiums are calculated at a basic rate of $1 per $1,000 of insurance. The same rate applies to all sections of the country, seaboard or on the prairies, to spread the risk. There are allowances for fireproof construction, sprinkler systems and the type of occupancy of a building.

Equipment, records, stocks and all real property may be insured with the War Damage Corporation. But the Government will not underwrite potential war time losses of revenue or other intangible assets. Policies may be written with up to 50 per cent of co-insurance.

New York's key first run theatres, as well as many of the large houses in Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Angeles, San Francisco and other sea coast cities, virtually all are insured for full value by the War Damage Corporation. All of the distribution companies with theatre interests have policies, as do most of the studios, many exchanges, and a substantial portion of the largest independent circuits. They have insured all or some of their theatres within the last two months.

The War Damage Corporation insurance became effective last July 1st. Up to that time Congress had granted blanket coverage to all business and residential property in the United States against damage or destruction by enemy action.

Two of the largest circuits, Loew's, Inc., and RKO, have insured all of their theatres. They have taken out full coverage war damage policies regardless of location. Warner Brothers have fully insured all of the theatres in which they own the controlling interest. Paramount has insured most of the theatres in which it owns a direct interest when they are within 200 miles of the sea coast and has advised its partners to take similar coverage. National Theatres, operating affiliate of Twentieth Century-Fox, has insured approximately 200 of the theatres in which it is principal owner.

The largest independent circuits are also taking out war damage insurance. The extent of coverage varies considerably. Most have purchased full policies for all theatres within 200 miles of the coasts or near vital defense areas. Others are insuring partially and those operators who lease their theatres or are in partnerships are urging owners to insure.

Small Independents Take War Policies

In New York City the Skouras, Randforce, Trans-Lux, Century and Brandt circuits all have taken out full insurance policies. They were placed with the War Damage Corporation through their regular agents.

Additionally, many small independents have taken out coverage against possible destruction of their theatres and equipment. Banks, mortgage holders and trust companies with interests in theatre properties generally are insisting that they be covered by war damage policies.

The Skouras circuits and several other operators have also taken out special policies privately to cover them against potential loss of business should their key houses be put out of business by the war. This "Use and Occupancy" insurance is relatively expensive in comparison with the Government damage policies, but protects against the threat to circuit revenue which the loss of one or several key situations might entail. It pays policy holders a sum based on past average earnings.

Two Companies Handle "Use and Occupancy"

This "Use and Occupancy" insurance is being underwritten by two companies, the General Insurance Company of America, a Seattle company, and the Rhode Island Fire Insurance Company. The majority of insurance underwriters voted against issuing this coverage.

Theatre operators and their agents who have taken this type of coverage declared that they considered it an important extra safeguard. They pointed out that priority regulations and the growing scarcity of theatre equipment might make it impossible to restore a bombed theatre immediately. Other business can move to a new location and reopen, they said. But bombed theatres generally are closed. The "Use and Occupancy" insurance, they said, was a safeguard which would insure the continued solvency of a theatre circuit after bombing.

This form of insurance is expensive. Rates vary, as with the Government insurance, according to construction and protection of a building. Also the rates in zones within 100 miles of the coast line are higher than for the rest of the country. Premiums are based on 35 cents per $100 for fire resistant construction and 50 cents per $100 for other buildings, according to Cosgrove and Company, theatre insurance agents who have issued policies on the Skouras, Century, Randforce and other New York circuits.

"Many Millions" for Radio City Music Hall

Several circuits have insured only their key houses for "Use and Occupancy," pointing out that much of the circuit buying power and most of their revenue were derived from these theatres.

The Radio City Music Hall, the world's greatest theatre, is covered in the general war damage policy which Rockefeller Center, Inc., has taken out on its property. Officials refused to specify the exact evaluation placed on the theatre, asserting only that it was "many millions."

The Roxy, Capitol, Paramount, Strand and other first run New York houses also are fully insured against war damage.

Home offices, and the records of distributors in New York have been fully covered, as have their exchanges and other property in sea coast areas. Film vaults, product inventories and records are insured. However, the war damage policy covers only the physical property and does not insure against losses of potential revenue from the destruction of prints, negatives or records.

Distributors Reluctant to Discuss Valuation

Hollywood's studios, with their offices, libraries, equipment, film vaults and permanent settings likewise are fully insured. They were one of the first film properties on which policies were sought. As one insurance man said, "they are too close to the Pacific, and to Los Angeles defense industries" not to be covered as fully as possible.

Distributors generally were reluctant to disclose what valuation they had placed on studios. It was understood that policies had been issued ranging from several million to over $50,000,000. The Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Westwood, one of the largest, was reported to be covered by the War Damage Corporation for $30,000,000. Insurance on National Theatres properties was estimated by the same source at $31,000,000.

Whether to insure this theatre against war damage is another question which each independent exhibitor must work out on the basis of his individual situation. The value of his house, possibility of replacement, proximity to the sea coast, war production areas or other military targets are factors to be taken into consideration, it was said.

Rental Increase Is Protested

The Indignant Exhibitors Forum, a group of members of the Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors League, representing 28 theatres, has been organized "to protest the way distributors have increased film rentals and preferred playing time for percentage pictures." The organization will fight for "the welfare of suburban theatres."

Willis Vance who was instrumental in forming the association, declared at a meeting in the Hotel Gibson this week that "the indignation of the exhibitors had reached such a state that the Forum is being established to change producers and distributors policies which now are working great hardships on exhibitors."

A manifesto listed indignation over film rentals, preferred playing time, percentage pictures, non-operation of the consent decree, availabilities, and charged that distributors and producers, through the decree, are making more money at the exhibitors' expense.

Riskin To Supervise OWI Foreign Films

Robert Riskin, screen writer and producer, has been placed in charge of the overseas motion picture program of the Office of War Information. He recently was named a special assistant to Robert Sherwood, head of the OWI overseas division in New York. He will have charge of newsreels, short subjects and other foreign screen projects for the agency.

Mr. Riskin, for many years at Columbia, won an Academy Award for the screenplay of "It Happened One Night," in 1934, and wrote the stories for many of the highly successful pictures directed by Frank Capra for Columbia. Last year with Mr. Capra he was co-producer of "Meet John Doe."

Republic Signs with Schine Circuit

Republic has closed a deal for its 1942-43 product with the Schine Circuit for 129 theatres in northern New York State, Ohio and Kentucky.

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic, negotiated the deal, assisted by branch managers Jack Bellman of Buffalo, Arthur Newman of Albany, George Kirby of Cincinnati, and Sam Gorrel of Cleveland. The circuit was represented by J. Meyer Schine, Louis Schine, George Lynch and Lou Goldstein.

Skouras Returns From Coast Talks

Spyros Skouras, Twentieth Century-Fox president, returned to the company's New York home office Monday, after three weeks of conferences at the studio in Hollywood. Returning by plane, Mr. Skouras stopped off at Denver Sunday to meet Frank "Rick" Ricketson, president of the Fox Inter-Mountain circuit.

At the conferences on the coast, product for the new selling season was discussed.

Acquires Theatre Ground

Complete ownership of the ground on which the Palace theatre, Buffalo, is located has been acquired by Dewey Michaels, operator, according to the deBock Realty Corporation, which negotiated the transaction. Mr. Michaels formerly owned the auditorium portion and a one-third interest in its Main Street approach.

British Operator Advises Theatres Take Policies

"By all means take out war insurance," was the advice of a man who knows from experience.

Jack Davis, British operator who had two of his London theatres destroyed in the Nazi blitz, was emphatic in his advice to American exhibitors to take advantage of the insurance offered by the War Damage Corporation. He now is operating the Little Carnegie theatre in New York. The house was one of the first theatre properties in the city to receive a war damage policy.

"It is a cheap but valuable safeguard. And it can't be replaced," Mr. Davis said. If a theatre is bombed or burned, he warned, on the basis of British experience, it probably means that it is closed for the duration. The exhibitor's only compensation, and often his only means of continuing in business at a new stand, is his war insurance.

Another important problem, so far not covered by any form of government or private insurance here or in England, he said, is the loss of audiences which results from population evacuations, or the closing of defense areas. This is a contingency which he urged city exhibitors to keep in mind when they are calculating means of protecting themselves against losses from the "fortunes of war."

In England, he said, insurance was compulsory and premiums were collected by the Government much in the form of a tax. Partial payments now are made for repairs, but in case of total loss in Britain the balance of insurance will be held until reconstruction begins after the war.

Botsford Settles 20th-Fox Contract; May Produce

Settlement of his contract with Twentieth Century-Fox was made this week by A. M. Botsford, former advertising and publicity director for the company, and—after his replacement by Hal Horne at the New York home office—for several months studio representative of the distribution department.

Mr. Botsford this week announced he intends to return to production, but did not give details.

Raise Philadelphia Prices

Philadelphia first and second run houses in the downtown section, operated by the Warner circuit, have increased Saturday and Sunday prices from 68 cents to a 75-cent top. The circuit's Earle theatre, vaudeville house, was the only one with a 75-cent top. Under the new policy, weekend prices will prevail on weekdays as well at the Earle.

Weil Heads Newsreel Unit

Robert Weil has been made president of the Scoop 14th Street Corporation, and the Scoop Louisville Theatre, Inc., operating the City Newsreel Theatre, on 14th Street, in New York City, and the Scoop Newsreel Theatre, Louisville. He was with MGM in Europe for seven years.

Hammons on Third "Hand"

The E. W. Hammons short subject series, "Hands of Victory," will include "Hands of Women at War," which went into production this week and will be released as a Paramount "Headliner."

Seltzer Joins Rogers

Frank Seltzer has been appointed publicity and advertising director for Charles R. Rogers Production in Hollywood, releasing through United Artists.

Joins UA Sales Staff

Ernest Tickler, formerly with United Artists in Omaha, has joined the company's sales staff at Des Moines.

5,000 Shorts Pledges Reported by Paramount

At least 5,000 pledges have been obtained thus far to play Paramount's "Victory" short subjects, Oscar Morgan, the company's short subjects sales manager, announced in New York last week.

The first of the subjects, to be released one per month, is "A Letter from Bataan," featuring Richard Arlen and Susan Hayward.

Yandell On Leave

Lunsford P. Yandell, treasurer of the Blue Network, has been granted a leave of absence to take over a Red Cross post in London. However, he will continue as a vice-president and director of the company. Charles E. Rynd, sales service manager, has been appointed treasurer in addition to his sales duties.

Leases Bronx House

Vinegrad Theatre Enterprises, Inc., has leased the Tower theatre, Bronx, New York, from the East River Savings Bank. It formerly was operated by the Leff Myers circuit, and is expected to reopen about September 15th. It seats 1,693.

Buy Land for House Exit

The Charleston, S. C., City Council has adopted a resolution authorizing city purchase for $1,000 of a strip of land adjoining the new Carolina theatre, to be used as an emergency exit for the theatre. The land is to be bought from the Southern Railway.

David Rose Here

David E. Rose, managing director for Paramount in Great Britain, arrived from London last week with Mrs. Rose. He was to have returned to his London headquarters this weekend.

Carroll Theatre To Open

Earl Carroll's theatre, combination night club and restaurant, is scheduled to open in the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, September 14th.

Run Is Exempt From Clearance Change

Appeal Board Upholds Arbitrator Decision in Case at Philadelphia Panel

The Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration system this week in its 33rd opinion upheld a Philadelphia arbitrator's finding that since the Consent Decree gives him no power to affect or change the run allotted to an exhibitor, any relief given in a clearance complaint must be within the framework of the run allotted complainants and intervening runs.

The Board dismissed the appeal of the Liberty-Parkside Theatres Company, operating the third run Parkside in Camden, N. J. Costs were assessed against the partners, A. M. Ellis, Martin B. Ellis, A. J. Rovner, Louis Rovner and Gertrude Handle. It was the 11th Philadelphia action.

Findings of fact by Robert J. Callaghan, arbitrator, were quoted extensively by the Appeal Board in approving his conclusion that the second run Lyric by reason of its size, history, three to five times as much revenue for distributors and competitive status in relation to the Lyric was entitled to 21 days' clearance. It also affirmed the portion of the award which cut the clearance over the Lyric of the Broadway, Tower, Lyric, Victoria and Rio theatres from 21 to 14 days on "slough" first run pictures which play first at the second run houses.

"The complainant in its appeal does not seek a further review of the facts. It contends that, since there is no explicit 'run' provision in any contract with the Lyric, the Lyric cannot be considered to have a second run," the Board wrote.

"Even if Lyric had no second run, the facts amply justify the arbitrator's conclusion that the present clearance in favor of the Lyric over the Parkside is reasonable and proper, and that complainant's plea to be placed in an equal playing position with it of 14 days after first run is unjustified. The arbitrator's decision is in accord with cases previously decided by this Board (Matter of Piedmont, No. 21; Matter of Dickinson, No. 27; Matter of Rowlands, No. 13)."

MGM, Paramount, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox were defendants. The Warner circuit and Victoria Amusement Company intervened.

Chicago

The Ken Theatre, Chicago, has filed another arbitration complaint, this time against Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO, claiming that the clearance granted to the Shakespeake Theatre, operated by the Schoenstadt & Sons circuit, is unreasonable. It asks that the arbitrator fixe a maximum clearance between the two houses. It is case No. 20.

In June, 1941, the Ken filed the first case at Chicago naming the five consenting companies and the Shakespeare theatre. At that time it was revealed that the Shakespeare theatre played in the second week of Chicago general release and contracts provided that the Ken was not to play prior to the third week of Chicago general release. The arbitrator was asked to make an award striking from the Shakespeare contracts the provision that the Ken theatre was not to play prior to the third week of general release.

He held that in Section VIII proceeding he had no power to make such an award and granted a motion to dismiss the complaint.

The new arbitration case is a separate and distinct proceeding from the recent anti-trust suit filed in the U. S. district court, Chicago, by the Ken theatre.

The original complaint, filed on June 11, 1941, named all the consenting companies. Loew's, Inc., Warners and Paramount Pictures were not named in the present complaint, the Ken theatre having made satisfactory deals with these companies during the past few months.

Los Angeles

Two theatres which previously had filed and lost arbitration cases, in Los Angeles and Chicago, this week again filed complaints.

At Los Angeles George Bromley and Alex Mounce, operating the Campus theatre on North Vermont Avenue named all five distributors in a clearance action. It is the city's 10th case. The second Los Angeles action, filed in April 1941 by the Campus was dismissed.

The Sunset and Clinton theatres, operated respectively by F. O. Adler and Ben Lichtenberg are named as interested parties. The Campus claims their clearance on 15 cent availability is unfair and asks that the houses be found not in competition and the Campus granted the same availability.

St. Louis

The Marre Theatre Company of St. Louis, owners of the Rivoli, downtown subsequent run house, last week filed a clearance complaint against all five distributors. Named as possible intervenors was the Marvin Amusement Company, operators of nearby Senate and Lyric and until July 31st lessee of the Rivoli.

Since the expiration of his lease, the distributors have refused to sell the Rivoli film under this prior arrangement, the petition said. When the lease expired the Marre family took over operation of the Rivoli.

John M., Leo F., Angelo J. and Louise M. Marre are the owners of the Rivoli, which is located at 208 North Sixth Street. The case raises for the first time in arbitration the question of whether film franchises and clearance position remain with a theatre when its operators change.

Adolph Rosecan, operator of the Princess theatre, in South St. Louis, on Monday appealed the dismissal of his clearance case against Warners, RKO, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox. It is the ninth case.

Oklahoma City

Jacob Jones, operator of the Ritz theatre, Shawnee, Okla., withdrew his specific run action at Oklahoma City last week after the defendant RKO had agreed to sell the Ritz first run pictures from its 1942-43 program.

Absolve Majors In Boston Suit

Major distributors have been absolved by Special Master J. J. Kaplan in the anti-trust suit brought against them by E. M. Loew's Drive-In Theatre, Miami, Fla. Special Master Kaplan heard preliminary testimony for the U. S. district court in Boston.

The complaint charged that the distributors conspired to deprive the Drive-In of new product and thereby injured the plaintiff's property to the extent of $100,000.

In his findings the special master said: "Plaintiff says he expected to get fresh pictures when he opened the theatre and if he could have had them the plant would have been worth the $100,000 claimed. The statement of his expectation is false. I find . . . that he knew when he entered the field that he must be content with old pictures."

"In conclusion," he said, "I must find that there is nothing in the evidence to indicate that Mr. Loew's theatre suffered any damage as a result of the clearance granted his competitors, or of any other act by these defendants, or any of them."

The report is being submitted to the Federal court in Boston in advance of a possible trial.

Set Momand Trial For October 5th

The long pending Momand anti-trust case has been called for trial in Oklahoma City on October 5th. A. B. Momand, formerly operator of a circuit of theatres in Oklahoma, asks $5,000,000 triple damages, charging that he was forced out of business by the entrance of the Griffith circuit into town in which he operated theatres. The eight major companies and the Griffith circuit are defendants.

Massce-Barnett Open New Orleans Branch

With a substantial portion of film shipments to South America now leaving from New Orleans and other Gulf ports, Massce, Barnett and Company, film forwarder, has opened an office and film warehouse in New Orleans.

Offices are located at the Queen and Crescent Building. The warehouse is at 315 Gravier Street. William Barnett opened the new quarters this week.

Local 572 Elects Rodgers

Local 572 of the IATSE in Staunton, Va., on Sunday elected Lewis Rodgers of Lexington as president and business agent. Other officers are Raymond Bowers, vice-president; Donald Patee, corresponding and financial secretary; Anthony Peduto, treasurer; Weldon Holsinger, sergeant-at-arms. All except Mr. Bowers were reelected.

Named Tribunal Clerk

Joseph S. Handford has been appointed to succeed John H. Brink as clerk of the motion picture arbitration tribunal in Kansas City, and branch manager of the American Arbitration Association there. Mr. Brink is in the Air Force.

On Cleveland Panel

Gordon Lind, an attorney, has been appointed clerk of the Cleveland AAA tribunal. He succeeds Luke Lyman, who resigned.

Acquires Ontario House

Morris J. Weiss, owner of the Colony theatre, Toronto, has acquired the Temple theatre, Windsor, Ont., and has appointed Barney Mechanic as manager.

INDEPENDENTS SAY CANADA FAVORS MAJOR COMPANIES

Brief Attacks Price Board, Charging Prejudice and Failure to Consult

Attacking the Canadian Government's Wartime Prices and Trade Board for what it charges is prejudice in favor of the major circuits and distributors, the National Council of Independent Exhibitors of Canada has published a brief detailing the memoranda it has submitted to the Board since last spring demanding protection under the wartime regulations for the independent theatre operator.

Organized to insure representation for the independent exhibitor on the Motion Picture Advisory Council, the brief charges that the Prices Board did not consult the Advisory Council until after representations had been made by "those not entitled to represent the industry as a whole," and that when the Advisory Council did submit recommendations to the Board they were ignored.

Arranged in chronological order the brief includes three memoranda submitted by the exhibitors to the Prices Board, all charging that the circuits and distributors use the wartime regulations to destroy competition. Also listed in detail are quotations designed to show the general policy of the Prices and Trade Board and of its administration, and the complete text of the section on "Overbuying" from the monograph "The Motion Picture Industry, a Pattern of Control," published last year by the Temporary National Economic Committee of the United States Government.

Says Circuits Seek Existing Houses

Outlining its main argument, that the major circuits are expanding at the expense of the independent, the brief points out that the suspension of theatre building activity "has sent the chains on a concentrated hunt to acquire existing theatres from established independents. The weapon now employed by the chains for absorbing independent theatres," the brief continues, "is that of taking away their pictures, or as it may be otherwise stated, worsening the product of independent theatre, by depriving them of the pictures of certain producers, by selecting the top bracket pictures, leaving the poorer pictures to the independents, by taking away their runs of particular producers—in short, by overbuying."

The brief contends that it is detrimental to the public morale in time of war and against the public interest, therefore, to allow anything to interfere with the normal supply of motion pictures to neighborhood theatres. The rationing of gasoline is mentioned as having made it impossible for the public to shop around for their entertainment, and a possible shortage of product because of wartime cuts is listed as an argument for more rigid control of supply and distribution "to prevent the biggest buyer from obtaining unfair preferences at the expense of the small individual buyers."

Taking up the enforcement of ceiling prices the brief says: "Since the admission prices are being held to the ceiling levels of the basic period, it must of necessity follow that the entertainment offered should likewise be held to the standard of the basic period. Loss of a theatre's product and substitution of inferior or older pictures, is in effect a cheapening or lowering of the standard of the entertainment sold to the patrons. Since costs on wages, supplies, rents, etc., are pegged, the independent owner is in no position to lower his price.

The maximum price regulations went into effect on November 1, 1941, and provided that admissions and rentals during the four-week period from September 15, 1941, to October 11, 1941, were to be considered the maximum admissions and rentals. The Prices Board may set maximum prices for product not sold to an exhibitor during the basic period.

In spite of these clear regulations, the brief charges, expressions of policy and rulings on complaints have been so variable as to give the independent section cause for anxiety.

In the third memorandum contained in the brief, dated July 14, 1942, the Council says its representatives were "stunned by the surprises and shocks" contained in the latest draft of the Board's proposed regulations which was read to the Advisory Council.

According to the brief, the new proposals would: (1) move the basic period forward a whole season in disregard of previous statements of policy which affirmed that the original period would provide the sole yardstick; (2) allow distributors to allocate more pictures into the top group for higher prices or allow them to sell these pictures away if they fail to get such prices, and (3) impose an obligation on the exhibitor to buy what product and where he had bought before.

On the first point the brief argues:

"The draft now under consideration defines the basic contract to be the contract for the 1941-42 product. That suits the chains and distributors, but would be disastrous for the independents. While some of the 1941-42 deals may have been made by the chains prior to or during the basic period, the independent deals for the 1941-42 product were made, all or practically all of them, after the basic period, late in October, in November, in December, 1941, and in January and in subsequent months in 1942. The only contract in force and effect in independent theatres during the basic period were the 1940-41 contracts.

Special Deals Should Be Limited

"We respectfully suggest the following rewording of this clause to make it conform with the facts and the truth of the situation: 'The basic contract is the latest contract in force and effect between any distributor and any exhibitor during the basic period.'

(2) The draft contains another unique and dire proposal. By lumping top category pictures with special features, the door is swung wide open to allow for the entrance of an increased number of these over the number so designated for the basic period. Almost never in the past was there any thought or move on the part of distributors to withhold any top category pictures from the regular contracts for the season's product; and rarely were 'specials' made the subject of special contracts with regular customers except when a distributor was selling the productions of an outstanding producer, not on its own regular producing units. These special contracts were rarely sold away from the regular customers.

"Top category pictures should continue to be kept within the framework of the main contract as hitherto and their number should be held to that of the basic period.

"As to special deals, these should be confined as heretofore to the pictures to be designated as 'Specials' by the industry generally. These are announced at the beginning of each season at the sales convention of each distributor in the United States.

(3) The forced buying clause is called in the brief "the most startling surprise of all." Its operation, the brief continues, "if carried out here and used as a model in the United States, as it well might be, would lead to a lowering of the entire standard of motion picture product. Pre-sold, season after season, on a non-competitive basis, should the war last the quality of pictures generally would be bound to suffer.

"While harnessing buyers to certain distributors may be immediately profitable to the latter, such an innovation would hamper the exhibitor and would be against the public interest. It seems to us that this proposal is a distinct departure from the intention of the Act which had nothing in it aimed at protecting or coddling distributors of goods and services to the embarrassment of buyers.

COUNCIL REPRESENTS INDEPENDENT UNITS

The membership of the National Council of Independent Exhibitors of Canada, organized to insure proper representation for the independent Canadian exhibitor in industry councils, is composed of A. J. Mason, chairman, nominee of the Allied Exhibitors of Nova Scotia; Henry Falk of Ontario, president; B. E. Laxer of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Ontario; R. E. McTavish, Independent Theatres Association of British Columbia; B. R. Johnson, Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of Saskatchewan; H. G. Stevenson, Independent Theatre Exhibitors of Alberta; A. A. Fielding, Independent Exhibitors, Ltd., of New Brunswick, and H. J. Schulman, Independent Exhibitors of Manitoba.

Tourist Drop Hits Canada's Box Office

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

A sharp reduction in the tourist traffic into the Atlantic provinces, from the United States, is being felt at the box offices in the territory. The volume of tourist cars moving across the boundary from Maine into New Brunswick and for stays there and in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland has been about 15 per cent that of 1941. The vital factor in the decline is the rationing of gasoline and tires. A U. S. tourist car is allowed only 12 gallons of gasoline for a stay in Canada, insofar as the Maritime Provinces are concerned. Resident motorists are allowed three gallons per rationing coupon now, an increase of one gallon. Originally, the coupon was worth five gallons, and this still prevails in the Central Provinces.

The U. S. motorists had been liberal spenders on theatre entertainment every season from late in May until mid-October, in the Atlantic region of the Dominion, and this patronage is missed this year. There have been improvements in bus and rail movements, but accounting for only a small percentage of the business from the car parties.

A complication is the greatly reduced business available for the theatres in towns depending on patronage from a wide area. The practice of driving more than 10 miles just to see a picture program has been materially affected by the three-gallon value of the coupon. Most motorists seem to be concentrating their driving on Saturdays and Sundays, and using up their three gallons on these splurges. As the theatres are not open on Sundays except in a few spots, all located on the international boundary, there is only slight benefit to exhibitors from this trend. Rural residents are seeing fewer pictures. Thousands of them had been in the habit of driving up to 60 miles, primarily to go to the theatre.

Radio-Theatre Tieup

Program advertisers on WKRC, Mutual affiliate in Cincinnati, are getting additional coverage by the distribution to 16 theatres in Cincinnati and the surrounding territory of lobby displays carrying three photographs of program personalities and promotional copy, which are rotated every two weeks.

Employees on Sea Duty

Ten former employees of the Capitol theatre, Springfield, Mass., not only are in the service but all are with the sea forces, Andrew Sette, manager, has reported. A service flag with 10 stars has been placed in the lobby. Two former assistant managers, Raymond Kaskeski and Anthong DeCarro, are in the Navy and the other eight are in the merchant marine.

Title Paramount Film

"So Proudly We Hail" will be the title of the Paramount picture based on the work of Army nurses at Bataan and on Corregidor. The film, which will be produced by Mark Sandrich, had been tentatively titled "Hands of Mercy."

WORKERS FLOCK TO LATE SHOWS

Success of special midnight shows for war workers was emphasized last week by Harry Crawford, manager of the Missouri theatre, the only first-run house in St. Louis with such shows. He told the city's Advertising Club that attendance is often so great that a waiting line before his box office stretches for a full block. Half the patrons are women, he added, who often wear factory slacks and identification badges.

RKO Cuts and Re-edits "Wings and the Woman"

For American release under the title "Wings and the Woman," RKO has cut almost one reel from Herbert Wilcox's British picture, "They Flew Alone." It is understood also that several new scenes on women in war work have been inserted into the story based on the life of the late Amy Johnson, British aviatrix.

When reviewed by MOTION PICTURE HERALD from London on May 2nd, the running time was reported as 102 minutes. It has been cut to 94 minutes. Anna Neagle and Robert Newton have leading roles.

Kalmenson Returns From WB Studio

From the Coast studio, where he participated in conferences, Benjamin Kalmenson, Warners general sales manager, returned to the New York home office on Monday.

Still at the studio this week was Mort Blumenstock, eastern director of advertising and publicity.

Drive-in Permit Denied

An attempt to curtail operation of the Motor-In Theatre, first drive-in in the Seattle territory, was refused by the local Board of County Commissioners. Mrs. E. G. Payne, operator of a motor-court in the adjoining property to the theatre, protested that nightly operation of the shows kept her tenants from getting sleep.

"Sky Dragons" Started

Republic Pictures has started preparation of "Yankee Sky Dragons" as one of its most ambitious pictures for next season. Republic will also make a film "Sky Dragons." Both productions will be built around the exploits of the United States Army Air Forces with the Chinese armies.

Three Mutual Affiliates

Three new affiliates will join the Mutual Broadcasting System next month, bringing the total to 208. The new affiliates are: WGOV, Valdosta, Ga.; WSAP, Portsmouth, Va., replacing WGH, Newport, News, Va., and WCNC, Elizabeth City, N. C.

Navy Cameramen in Florida

Eight Navy cameramen, under direction of Lieut. Robert H. Duncan, have arrived in Ocala, Fla., to film under water scenes for a water safety picture the Navy is making.

Conn. House for Sale

The New Colony theatre at Sound View., Conn., has been offered for sale. It long has been closed.

Increased Tax Hits Halifax

Theatremen in the Atlantic provinces see significance in a straw vote or poll initiated by a Halifax, N. S., daily. Of those consulted by representatives of the paper and asked to express an opinion of what they planned on doing without when the payments for the new drastic income tax go into effect in September, most said they intended cutting down on theatre attendance. Self-denials named included reduction in cigarette smoking and use of tobacco generally, use of autos, eating of candy, but the only cut mentioned in all the opinions was that of buying theatre tickets. It is conceded that to meet the tax payments, retrenchment will be essential and some exhibitors expect a reaction at the box office when people start budgeting to meet the war budget of Canada, an all time record.

Wing Commander C. W. Carleton of the Royal Air Force and commanding a personnel depot at Moncton, N. B., has announced himself as favoring motion pictures as excellent in building and maintaining morale for the R.A.F.

He cited the need of entertainment and relaxation for the airmen, far removed from their homes, and undergoing an extensive program of training for their future roles in air combat for the United Nations. He highly recommended the theatres and pictures and considered them necessary, from the standpoint of morale. The testimonial in favor of theatres and pictures was given by the R.A.F. commander without solicitation. Members of the R.A.F. have become ardent devotees of American films since arriving in Canada to participate in the British Commonwealth air training program.

See Northampton Boom

Exhibitors in Northampton, Mass., anticipate increased business, as a result of the action of the Navy Department in taking over the Hotel Northampton, for the use of 900 women in training in the WAVES, women's auxiliary of the Navy.

Cut Circus Time

Several Aldermen in Milwaukee last week opposed a request for a three-day operating permit made by the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus. As a compromise the circus was granted a two-day permit for September.

Bergen Signs Midget

Jerry Maren, midget stand-in for Charlie McCarthy, in RKO's "Here We Go Again," has been signed by Edgar Bergen to a seven-year contract.

Resumes Operation

The Rand theatre, Greenfield, Ohio, has resumed operation after damage, estimated at $500, resulted when a film in the projection booth caught fire and exploded.

Legally Changes Name

Jinx Falkenburg has been granted her request in Hollywood court legally to change her first name to Jinx, instead of Eugenia.

Oriental Raises Prices

The Oriental theatre, Chicago, has increased admissions on Saturdays and Sundays from 55 to 65 cents.

THEATRES ARE ANTICIPATING PROBLEM ON OIL HEATING

Many Eastern Houses are Changing to Coal; Scrap Matinees Continuing

Possible nationwide gasoline rationing, and the prospect of fuel oil rationing in the eastern states already affected by gasoline curtailment, were regarded with some anxiety this week by exhibitors, even while they continued to aid the war effort with the widespread use of special shows to collect scrap metals and rubber.

Preparations for a shortage of fuel oil are already being made in the northeastern metropolitan territory.

The Warner circuit in Philadelphia has converted oil burners to coal use at all its theatres. Coal already has been purchased for the houses and stored in yards for houses lacking suitable storage space for the fuel. For the Mastbaum theatre alone, scheduled to reopen on September 4th for first run showings after being dark for a number of years, 600 tons of coal have been assigned. More than 100 tons of coal are required over the winter for each of the large Warner houses in the central city section.

The Liberty Theatre Corporation, Springfield, Mass., is preparing to convert the oil plants to coal in some houses. In others, heat will be supplied by pipeline from the Springfield Gas & Light plant.

The Wernick theatre, Chicopee, Mass., announced it will close for several weeks next winter to conserve its oil supply.

Many houses in the area have heat supplied by building owners, so that a shortage of fuel oil is their problem. However, this indirection does not change the situation for theatres, it was said.

Scrap Matinees Held in Pennsylvania Houses

More than 300 motion picture theatres in eastern Pennsylvania staged special "scrap matinee" performances last week in an effort to collect at least 250,000 pounds of scrap metal. Three pounds or more of any scrap metal was the standard admission and a fleet of trucks from the Salvation Army, Goodwill Industries, St. Vincent de Paul Society, Volunteers of America and the Sunday Breakfast Association, all of Philadelphia, were utilized to collect the scrap. Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied, served as chairman of the Motion Picture Salvage Matinee Committee, who assigned quotas for each theatre to film salesmen acting as salvage wardens.

All independent exhibitors and those associated with the Warner Bros., Loew's and Comerford circuits in the area cooperated. In Philadelphia, every neighborhood Warner house staged a scrap matinee, and even in the downtown district, the circuit's Aldine theatre, closed all summer, reopened for the scrap metal performance only.

Motion picture operators, stage hands and service employees all donated their services for the special shows. J. Lester Stallman, manager of the Schad houses, was in charge of the 11 cooperating theatres in Reading, Pa.; William Hissner, manager of the Academy theatre, Lebanon, Pa., assisted by Jack Weber, of the Comerford circuit, was in charge for that territory; David Kaplan, manager of the Stanley theatre, Atlantic City, for that territory; Larry Peterson, manager of the Lyric theatre, Camden, N. J., for the theatres in that territory, and Harry Gammett, manager of the Globe theatre, Bethlehem, Pa., committee chairman in that district.

More than 30 tons of scrap metal were collected and turned in during the week by 136 Philadelphia houses, an amount far in excess of the 300 pounds expected from each, as a result of the scrap metal matinees staged on August 10th by the industry.

St. Louis Theatres Plan Scrap Drive

In St. Louis, the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company circuit will launch a scrap rubber and metal drive in its 30 theatres in conjunction with the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. The campaign will be climaxed by a free show, September 5th, at the Fox, Missouri and St. Louis, first run houses.

Lincoln, Neb., theatres have collected more than five tons of metal scrap. In Omaha, children left 85 tons at theatres.

In a drive next week, the Brandt theatres, New York, hope to collect 100 tons of rubber and copper.

The Poli theatre, Norwich, Conn., offers free admission to any child with two old phonograph records.

Two Massachusetts theatre managers are aiding the nationwide campaign to salvage phonograph records and discs to assure a supply of new records for the men in the service. They are Ernest L. Hickey, Interstate Colonial theatre, Brockton, and Edward L. Selette, E. M. Loew's Strand, New Bedford. Mr. Hickey is giving free admission for five records, and Mr. Selette a ticket for 10 records.

Records Collected In Pittsburgh

M. A. Silver, Joseph Hiller, John H. Harris, C. C. Kellenberg and Frank Harris were members of the "War Records Ball" committee which sponsored a collection of phonograph records for men in the armed forces, at a dance held at the Hotel William Penn, Pittsburgh.

More than 4,000 people, mostly girls, attended. Admission was by contributing five records, which were turned over to the American Legion. Three ballrooms and the street were used for dancing to music by Sammy Kaye, Howard Baum and Billy Yates. Frank Harris was chairman of the affair's finance committee and Harry Schreiver, Allegheny County Legion Commander, was general chairman of the affair.

Records also are being collected in boxes in the lobbies of the nine Harris theatres in Pittsburgh.

In only 10 days, the Wometco circuit, Miami, collected 59,000 pounds of rubber. In Rochester, the RKO Palace collected 3,800 records at a special show. Local Schine theatres held "coat hangar matinees" and record matinees. The Arnett theatre held a Tin Can Salvage Day.

Chicago's First Blackout Felt

Chicago had its first blackout test on August 12th from 10 to 10:30 P.M., and with it came a considerable decrease in box office receipts throughout the city. Earlier shows in the Loop were well attended but customers were scarce later in the evening. The theatrical district was almost deserted at blackout time. Downtown houses suffered an approximate 20 per cent loss in business.

In the outlying houses receipts were off as much as 33⅓ per cent in some neighborhoods, particularly in residential sections where people apparently stayed at home all evening. The drop in business was higher than anticipated.

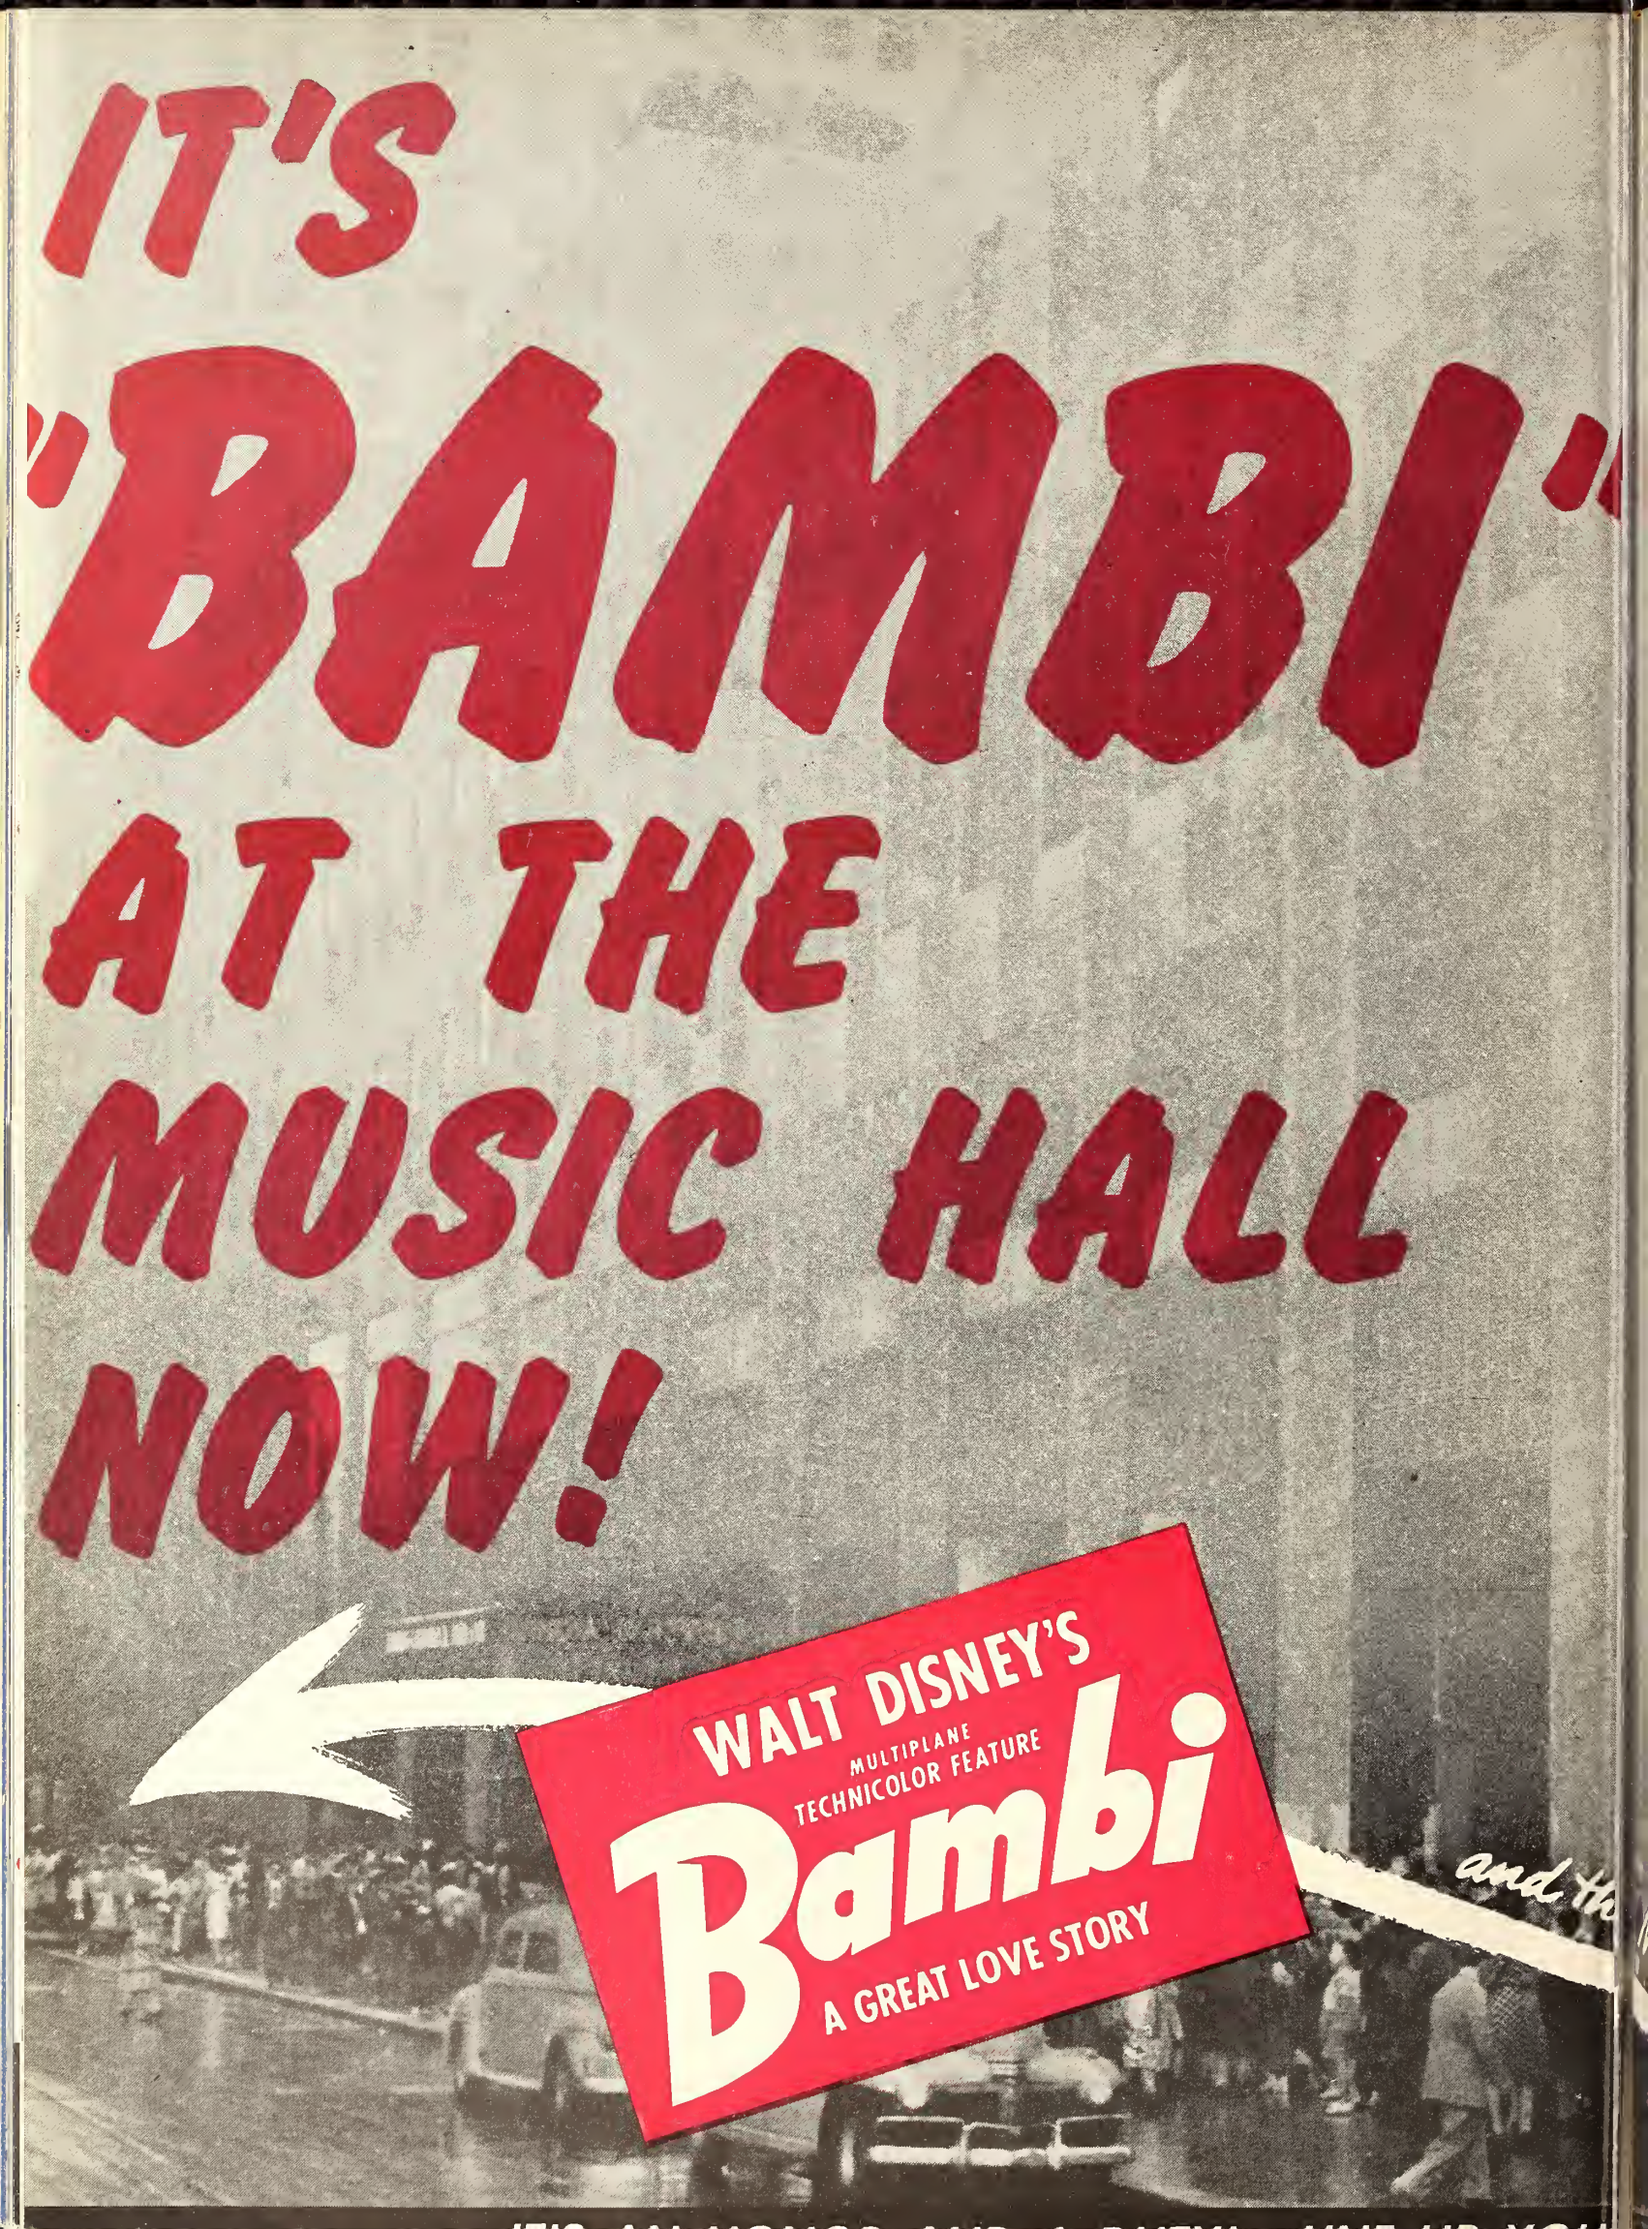
The theatres presented their shows without interruption during the blackout but were entirely blacked out on the outside. Box offices were closed during the half-hour period and no persons were allowed to enter or leave the theatres during the blackout.

Detroit's fourth blackout caused a decrease in receipts of 10 to 20 per cent, it was said.

In Los Angeles, the Office of Civilian Defense is sending inspectors with light meters to theatres, to determine whether marquees in dimout zones are dimmed to the required one-foot candle density.

New York Dimout More Stringent

In New York, the dimout was stiffened by the requirement that automobiles travel not more than 20 miles per hour, and use only parking lights.



After extensive and careful preparation, Civilian Defense organizations are getting into high gear in Kansas City. About 8,000 men and women who have taken the several courses, such as fire watchers, fire wardens and first aid, will be graduated in a ceremony on August 23rd. These include many in the motion picture industry in exchanges and theatres, now prepared to function in their residence neighborhoods, and in their business establishments. Exchanges already are well organized, some also having the prescribed equipment.

Randall to San Francisco

Heaton F. Randall, manager of the National Theatre Supply Company's Seattle office for the last two years, will leave late this month for San Francisco to take over the management of the company's office there. His successor was not announced. Mr. Randall was formerly with the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company in San Francisco and Seattle.

ANXIOUS BRITISH INDUSTRY WAITS GOVERNMENT MOVE

All Branches have offered Formulae for Wartime Maintenance of Product

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

All, or nearly all, industry sections having during the past weeks made their way to Whitehall to present their palliative formulae for the retention of a war time motion picture production, and Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, having listened, blessed and promised, producers, exhibitors and labor, now await the answer to the riddle. The future may well bring forth something tangible or concrete. For the nonce, however, the answer would seem to be a lemon.

Producers have made their suggestions to Mr. Dalton in which a vein of rationalization, explicit assurances of action in the direction of more studios and no less manpower, and a more virile and helpful attitude from other Government departments, each have played a part. Employees within the studios have presented a like case. Exhibitors have sought guarantees that they will not be penalized for not doing what they are physically unable to do. Even the Cinematograph Films Council itself has in its third annual report gone to town with an impassioned plea for survival.

Ask Healthy Nucleus During War

The demands of the production side of the industry have been crystallized in the Films Council's: "The first essential lies . . . in maintaining a healthy nucleus of the industry during the war." To this the president of the Board of Trade, enchanted by the musical theme of this critical symphony, has replied . . . "It is the policy of His Majesty's Government to maintain a sufficient nucleus of production during the war."

Just what form the nucleus will take has yet to be seen. Unlikely is any abandonment of the Films Act, although technical amendments are not impossible. Urgencies and uncertainties of the war situation would seem likely to prevent any further release of men, although a more constructive and ordered arrangement of studios and materials easily, students of the situation suggest, could bring about an amelioration and a keener efficiency of operation. No formula has been publicized yet which would seem likely to strike at the roots of the problem, or remove the fundamental difficulties upon which wartime operation of production is based.

The lack of a clear cut Government policy, the refusal so far to clarify the industry's role in the war machine, has been the greatest obstacle to achievement. Even Mr. Dalton himself would seem to speak with two voices. Whilst trade deputations have found him the soul and essence of sympathetic attention, and whilst his comment on the Films Council's report has inspired him to voice his belief in the "sufficient nucleus," his other voice recently in the House of Commons cast a chilly atmosphere with an emphatic statement that he could not guarantee that the present low figures of men and studios allowed the industry would be maintained as a minimum.

The Films Council with its industry and lay members takes a more than anxious view of the present position. It sees the very existence of feature production endangered, sees the fact, too, as odd in view of the boom in cinema attendance and the increase in public purchasing power.

Films Council Takes Serious View

Surveying the past 12 difficult months and the present serious position, they stress that it is of immediate concern that the Government take steps to preserve a residue of production in the present emergency. "The position is deteriorating rapidly. There is little time to lose and we regret that its urgency is not as fully recognized as the Council would wish."

It would seem that the Council again and again have sought to impress on the Government the urgency of an easement of the studio and manpower position, agreed that there was a strong case for granting the industry a wartime status, pleaded that no further disintegration be allowed, that all the resources still left be used to the utmost. As one member summarized it, "It was essential that the Government's intentions be clarified and a decision reached concerning the resources to be left available to the producers of feature films."

The appreciated quality of the British film which, during the war, may have depleted its quantity but put up its saleability, incidentally, is recorded and lauded by both the Films Council and Mr. Dalton himself.

To this view of the situation taken by the Films Council Mr. Dalton, however, does not subscribe. "I am much concerned at the views expressed by the Council about the present position and prospects of film production. I have made careful enquiries which do not confirm the gloomy and alarming view . . . activity in the studios has . . . been maintained over the past 18 months and has even increased during the last two quarters."

This careful enquiring undertaken by the Board of Trade's president has not been taken too pleasantly by the Council elected under the Films Act to advise on the administration of the law. It has not been stated in what quarters and by whom the investigations were made, nor is it of necessity accepted that they are any sounder in judgment than the findings of a Council upon which all industry sections are represented with an equal proportion of lay members.

Feeling Runs High Between Board, Council

Feeling between the Board of Trade and the Council has run high at times and what is colloquially known as a poor view had been taken of the Board's inactivity and unhelpfulness in regard to the industry. It is stated on reliable authority that efforts were even made to erase some of the criticism contained in the Council report before this was published. The attempt was abortive and the report issued as devised. Mr. Dalton's public duelling with his Films Council, and the pains to which he has gone to place before Parliament his unreadiness to concede the Council case, or for that matter its authority of comment, sets a new standard in legislative procedure.

The major portion of the Films Council's report of necessity deals with the past year and the operations of the Act. Therein, for instance, are recorded that during the Renters Quota year ended March 31st, last, there were no less than 10 long film defaults in quota, six of them major American distributors, who had adopted the quality quota formula.

The exhibitor position was worse even than recently has been stated. Some 1,402 picture houses failed to screen their requisite quota of British footage in the 12 months ended September 31st, 1941. The figure was only 316 the year before but was 437 in 1938-39. In the face of the depleted product the Council nonetheless took a serious view, scouted the exhibitor suggestion that a blanket figure of 12½ per cent—as opposed to the statutory 17½—should be allowed under which the exhibitor could seek protection.

EXHIBITORS SHOWED MORE THAN QUOTA

Despite criticisms of the impracticability of the Quota Act, British exhibitors in the 1940-41 period actually showed more than their required minimum percentage of British films.

The Films Act requires them to show 17 per cent. of British features and 15 per cent. of short films. From October, 1940, to September, 1941, British houses screened a footage equal to 21.3 per cent. of features alone.

The total British footage screened, however, showed a decrease on the previous year's figures. This was 10,188,000 feet (of which 8,458,000 feet were features), approximately 2,000,000 feet less than in the previous year.

83 London Houses in New Odeon Setup

The Odeon circuit in London has launched a £1,500,000 (approximately $6,000,000) company, acquiring complete financial ownership of 83 theatres which originally were financed by individual mortgages.

However, despite the move for financial control, the direction and management of the theatres, which are already complete, will not be altered.

OWI Bulletin Cites Banned Material

Points Out War Data Which May Not Be Exported in Any Photographic Form

The Office of Censorship in Washington, whose activities fall under the supervision of the Office of War Information, of which Elmer Davis is director, has issued a bulletin advising on "basic information prohibited for war time export or import in film or other photographic form.

The text of the bulletin follows:

"The purpose of film censorship is to keep information concerning possible bombing objectives, technical data, military or economic conditions, and adverse propaganda harmful to the war effort from leaving the country. Likewise, film censorship is designed to prevent enemy propaganda and information leading to subversive activities from entering the country.

"There is no hard and fast rule of thumb applicable to censorship. Interpretation and application of the following principles must be governed by the knowledge, understanding and judgment of those applying them.

Responsibility with Boards of Review

"The final responsibility with respect to wartime export or import film censorship rests with the Film Censorship Boards of Review of the Office of Censorship. Certain types of material also require written approval from the War Department, Navy Department, or other Government agency having direct supervision over the subject involved. Written approval by any other agency represents only release insofar as that agency is concerned, and is not binding on the Board of Review.

Some Shots Require Written Approval

"Photographic shots requiring such written approval include:

"1. All aerial photographs and detailed closeup air shots of war production plants, docks, shipyards, railroad terminals, dams, power plants, storage tanks, reservoirs, radio towers, arsenals, munitions dumps, forts and all other military installation, including air fields, and military depots; detailed closeup shots or panoramic shots of civil as well as military air fields, cities, factories, or terrain showing distinguishing buildings or landmarks in relation to each other or to the general landscape; any pictures of new-type planes, tanks or guns.

"2. Detail photographs of identifiable beaches and coastlines which would aid enemy landing parties on any seacoast of the United States, its territories or possessions. This does not include conventional scenic views of coastline.

"3. Technical data of any kind (other than that which discloses well-known processes, installations and other information of no importance to the military, naval or economic war efforts of the United States) which could be used or adapted for use in connection with any process, synthesis or operation in the production, manufacture, reconstruction, servicing, repair or use of any article for any phase of warfare. The list is so comprehensive that technical data generally should be prohibited except that contained in industrial films approved by the Board of Economic Warfare or a Board of Review.

"4. Movements of land, air or sea forces, and merchant ships, when identification, origin or destination is indicated.

"5. Views of Army, Navy or Marine Corps activities and detailed views of equipment.

Movement of Armed Forces Not Shown

"6. Movement of naval or merchant ships in the coastal waters of the United States, its possessions, or naval bases which might be of value to the enemy with regard to attack, sabotage, or otherwise.

"7. Pictures of internment camps or of persons interned.

"8. Labor, class or other disturbances which might be distorted into enemy propaganda.

"9. Undue emphasis on rationing of essentials or other information revealing economic preparation by this country for prolonged war effort.

Halt Information of Value in Sabotage

"10. Derogatory pictorization or presentation of nationals of South or Central American countries or nationals of other United Nations and of India. These nations never should be placed on an uncivilized plane or one of inferiority to that of the Anglo-Saxon.

"Censorship examination of photographic information and communications coming into the United States has the basic functions of preventing enemy propaganda from entering the country, and halting information which might lead to sabotage or other subversive activity.

"Classes of photographic information prohibited for import include subjects of a propaganda or counter-propaganda character; details of United Nations' troop or ship movements, stations, or equipment, with the exception of newsreels or commercial films approved by the Boards of Review or news photographs passed by U. S. Postal Censorship authorities, and films or photographic material suspected of containing code messages.

"The foregoing list is not all-inclusive but is provided as a guide. It will be amplified from time to time."

"Blackout Murders" Ready

Republic announced last week that production will begin soon on "London's Blackout Murders," a new season film, with talent assignments to be made shortly.

Refugee Seeks To Start Anew

Hope for a place in the production of American features was expressed this week in New York by Simon Schiffrin, French producer, lately returned from Hollywood, and a refugee from France.

Mr. Schiffrin commented that producers in France were forced by the competitive nature of the country's film industry not only to be "promoters," to obtain money for production, but also to be participants in production, to a greater degree than here. He explained that a producer in France was also an adept director, with a knowledge of all other phases of production.

He produced approximately 35 pictures in France—including "Le Bal," in which he "discovered" Dannielle Darrieux; "Ordonnance," in which he used Fernandel for the first time as a comedian, and "Le Quai Des Brumes" ("Port of Shadows"), in which he starred Michelle Morgan and Jean Gabin. Mr. Schiffrin was called into the French propaganda ministry at the outbreak of the war.

There he made one propaganda picture, and one, under his company, the Flag Company, for entertainment, but also with a morale message. The latter, "Abris" ("Shelter"), starred Josephine Baker.

The Germans stopped showings of the film. and compelled authorities in Vichy France to seize a lavender which Mr. Schiffrin hurriedly sent from Paris.

Another Print Sent To Bottom by Nazis

Another lavender print, Mr. Schiffrin shipped to Montreal and it sank with a torpedoed ship. Two million francs thus were lost. Mr. Schiffrin also lost his occupation, because both the Germans and the Vichy French forbade Jews to produce motion pictures.

Mr. Schiffrin, born in Baku, Russia, received schooling there and in St. Petersburg. He came to France in 1924 as a film technician. Two years later he became associated producer of "Michael Strogoff," which was distributed in this country by Universal.

For a period he was a producer in France for the German UFA company, and asserts he was the first producer in the country to make pictures in both languages. He asserted last week he also was responsible for the rise of Corinne Luchaire and of Jean Louis Barrault, and that many of the French directors and technicians now in Hollywood worked with him.

'Wake' Handling Is Planned

Plans for the national handling of "Wake Island" were discussed at the Hotel Pierre in New York Monday by Paramount home office advertising executives, field exploitation men, theatre executives and advertising directors.

Eastern and western military previews of "Wake Island," previously announced for last Tuesday, will be held this coming Thursday instead, Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, announced. The picture will be screened simultaneously at Camp Elliott, West Coast Marine Corps base at San Diego, Cal., and the Marine Corps Post at Quantico, Va.

The following field and theatre representatives attended the New York meeting: Hunter Perry, Dominion Theatres, Charlottesville, Va.; Dale McFarland and Ray Blank, A. H. Blank Theatres, Des Moines; William Hollander, Balaban & Katz, Chicago; Maurice Rubens, Great States Theatres, Chicago; Harry Browning and Hy Fine, M. & P. Theatres, Boston; Emmet Rogers, Wilby & Kincey, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Charles Winchell, Minnesota Amusement Co., Minneapolis; Don Chambers, Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., Springfield, Mass.; Lou Finski, Comerford Theatres, Scranton, Pa.; James Nairn, Famous Players Canadian, Toronto; Jerry Sigmund, Newman theatre, Kansas City; Helen Garrity, Intermountain Theatres, Salt Lake City; Alice Gorham, United Detroit Theatres, Detroit; Harold Martin, Lucas & Jenkins, Atlanta; George Hoover, Paramount Theatre Enterprises, Miami; George Fetick, North Ohio Theatres, Cincinnati; Win Barron, Toronto; W. C. Llewellyn, Dallas; Ralph Ravenscroft, Los Angeles; James Lundy, Denver; Charles W. Nebel, Kansas City; E. G. Fitzgibbons, Cincinnati; Maxwell Joice, Cleveland; F. Bartow, Chicago; William F. Brooker, Philadelphia, and James C. Furman, Atlanta.

Speakers Include Marines

Speakers included Mr. Gillham, Leonard Goldenson, theatre executive; Alec Moss, Captains Daniel W. Bender and Remsen J. Cole, U. S. M. C., who are tying in the picture with a recruiting drive; Christopher Cunningham, national commandant of the Marine Corp League; Frank Spaeth, vice-president of Stensgaard Company, on window displays; S. J. Cohen, representing Major Benjamin Namm of the Retail Advisory Committee; Martin Lewis, of Paramount, on radio exploitation, and John Krimsky of Buchanan and Company on the advertising approach.

Similar meetings will be held by the Paramount theatre associate advertising executives and exploitation staff.

"Wake Island" will open at the Rivoli theatre, New York, September 1st, the proceeds of the reserved seat premiere to go to the American Red Cross. Marines will be guests of honor.

"Dandy" Test Openings Set in Four Cities

In four out-of-town test openings, under a continuous run policy at $1.10 top, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" started last week with business as high as 160 per cent over average, according to theatre managers' reports to the Warner home office. The first day figures on three openings were New Haven, $4,091; Hartford, $4,506, and Philadelphia, $6,590.

The picture also opened in Albany, N. Y., last week at the Strand theatre. According to C. J. Latta, Warner zone manager, it is running 50 per cent ahead of "Sergeant York." The opening was an all-time record for the house.

At the Hollywood theatre in New York, in its 11th week, the film topped all the grosses of the preceding six weeks, according to the company. The approximate gross for the 11th week was $20,700.

'Hollywood Canteen' Planned by Industry

A "Hollywood Canteen," patterned after but having no connection with New York's 'Stage Door Canteen," is being set up in Hollywood by industry groups as an entertainment spot for men in uniform. Approval of the plan was given by the Hollywood Victory Committee last weekend.

A site for the Canteen was to be selected at a meeting of the various organizations which have promised to aid the project. Participating in the enterprise will be the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Cartoonists Guild, Screen Directors Guild, Screen Office Employes Guild, American Federation of Musicians, American Federation of Radio Artists, American Guild of Variety Artists, Federation of Amusement and Allied Crafts and Film Technicians, Local 683.

Army Relief Show Set

The entertainment, publicity and advertising committees for the Army Emergency Relief Show, to be held at Madison Square Garden, September 30th, have completed final plans for the benefit's campaign and entertainment program.

The executive committee of the benefit, of which Nicholas M. Schenck is honorary chairman, includes Ed Sullivan, head of the entertainment committee; Robert Weitman, Bert Lytell, Alan Corelli, Leon Leonidoff, Erno Rapee, Jack Rosenberg, Solly Pernick, Jim Sauter and Antoinette Perry.

The Motion Picture Theatre Committee includes G. S. Eyssell, chairman; Charles C. Moskowitz, Spyros Skouras, J. R. Vogel, L. E. Thompson, Jack Cohn, Leonard Goldenson, Joseph Bernhard, Harry Brandt and William White.

The Hollywood Committee includes Charles K. Feldman, Abe Lastfogel, Nate Blumberg, Oscar Doob, Jack Alicoate, Charles Einfeld, Abel Green and Howard Dietz.

Advance ticket sales for the show this week reached $35,000.

Plans for the production, which will be complete with script, producers, writers and stars, have been completed by Leon Leonidoff, of the Radio City Music Hall. One feature of the program will be a Jeep Ballet, performed by Army jeeps. The guest star list now includes Myrna Loy and Edward Arnold, who volunteered this week.

Frank on Committee

Morton Frank, Pittsburgh Press Roto manager and Quigley correspondent, has been appointed chairman of the Post-War Planning Committee of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, by William M. Shepherd, president, of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Named Club Secretary

Bert Thomas, booker for Columbia Pictures in Des Moines, has been named permanent secretary of the Iowa Motion Picture Club at Des Moines, according to W. H. Eddy, president. Mr. Thomas replaces Joseph Archer, now in the Army.

No Seattle Slump

For the first time, Seattle theatres have not experienced a summer slump. Tire and automobile rationing and defense projects are assigned by managers as reasons.

Winkler Leaves RKO Radio

Daniel Winkler, talent contact chief at the RKO Radio studio for three years, has returned to the agency field, in association with Charles K. Feldman.

Ambulance Fund Drive Started

Washington territory exhibitors and distributors, combining the efforts of such organizations as the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland and Eastern Delaware, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia and the Variety Clubs of Washington and Baltimore, pledged to purchase ten field ambulances for the American Feld Services, at a meeting held in the office of John P. Payette, Warner Bros. zone manager, co-chairman of the drive with Ed Fontaine, Paramount branch manager.

The meeting was presided over by A. Julian Brylawski, in the absence of Mr. Payette, with Mr. Fontaine as co-chairman. Exhibitors and exchange representatives attending the meeting were Rudolph Berger, Ben Pitts, Tom Mudd, Fred Beiersdorf, Bernie Seaman, Rodney Collier, Lawrence Schanberger, Carter Barron, W. W. Grist, Jr., Hunter Perry, Louis Bernheimer, Frank LaFalce Al Sherman, Sam Wheeler, Fred S. Kogod, Frank Storty, Nat B. Browne, and Wade Pearson. Nat Browne was secretary of the meeting.

The following committees were appointed: Virginia M.P.T.O.A., Hunter Perry, Ben Pitts, Morton Thalheimer; Baltimore Variety Club: Bernie Seaman, chairman, Rodney Collier, Nick Weems, Elmer Nolte, Bill Hicks, Barry Goldman, Eddie Perotka; Maryland M.P.T.O.A.: Frank Hornig, chairman, Frank Durkee, Louis J. Rome, Lawrence Schanberger, Izzie Rappaport, Lauritz Garman, Lou Gaertner; Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties and Western Maryland: Sidney Lust, chairman, George N. Payette, Jack Forney, Mrs. Grace Fisher; M. P. T. O. A. of District of Columbia: Fred S. Kogod, chairman; Louis Bernheimer, Lloyd Wineland, Hardie Meakin; Variety Club of Washington: Rudolph Berger, chairman, Carter Barron, Sam Galanty, Ed Fontaine, Sam Wheeler.

More than $6,500, sufficient for three fully-equipped ambulances, was raised at a luncheon meeting of 200 film industry representatives in the St. Louis territory at the Hotel Coronado Monday, August 17.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., co-chairman of the ambulance drice in Missouri, said first-run theatres would be asked to contribute $200 apiece; seven-day second-run houses, $100, and subsequent-run houses, $50.

Mr. Arthur said Fanchon & Marco, Inc., of which he is general manager, would buy one ambulance at $2,200, and he personally would donate $500 toward another. Fred Wehrenberg, co-chairman with Mr. Arthur of the St. Louis War Activities Committee, was another large donor, pledging $200 personally.

$200,000 for USO Collected in New York

Theatres in New York City collected $200,000 for the United Service Organizations, Jack Cohn, chairman of the Amusements, Arts and Sports Division, announced this week. Collections in the theatres were part of the $300,000 raised by the Division.

Three more film stars have volunteered to tour the USO Camp-Shows circuit during the last week of August and through early September. Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth and John Garfield will make personal appearances at the military posts.

Producers, Distributors, Exhibitors and Government Representatives unite to bring to the nation's screens

A VITAL SERIES OF 12 "AMERICA SPEAKS" FIGHTING FILMS!

KEEPING FIT (Universal)—Showing the entertaining way to health—so vital in war time.

MR. BLABBERMOUTH (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)—Dramatic presentation of the necessity for civilians to sift fact from rumor.

LETTER FROM BATAAN (Paramount)—Stresses necessity for conservation of materials which help make tanks and planes for soldiers.

THUNDERBIRD FIELD (20th Century-Fox)—Showing the training of English, Chinese and American pilots at Thunderbird Field, Phoenix, Arizona.

CONQUER BY THE CLOCK (RKO Radio)—An exciting presentation of how laxity on the part of our war workers may result in unforeseen tragedy to our armed forces.

LET YOUR CONSCIENCE BE YOUR GUIDE (Columbia)—A call to all Americans to fight the bootlegging of tires and other rationed materials.

BACK THEM UP (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)—The tremendous organizational job entailed in the moving and disposition of troops and supplies.

WE REFUSE TO DIE (Paramount)—Story of Lidice pointing out how free people will fight for freedom forever.

PLAN FOR DESTRUCTION (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)—The Nazi technique with its well organized plan to conquer and dominate the world.

ARSENALS OF MIGHT (Universal)—The giant effort whereby peace-time work shops, (in this case a Detroit auto plant) are converted to the war job.

ALDRICH FAMILY GETS INTO THE SCRAP (Paramount)—The story of how youth helps the war effort; conservation, salvage, cooperation with Civilian Defense officials.

THE MAGIC ALPHABET (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)—How Science learned to control disease by retaining the natural vitamin content of food-stuffs.

PLANS FOR RELEASE: A UNIFIED EFFORT!

The following has been carefully studied for the greatest good to the nation by a joint Committee of Distributors and Exhibitors through the War Activities Committee:

1. All receipts, above actual cash expenditures for production and for print costs, are to be donated to war charities.
2. All clearances are to be waived.
3. Each film can be purchased separately.
4. The rental is to be worked out amicably by each distributor and each exhibitor, both keeping in mind (a) that clearance is to be waived; (b) that all profits go to war charities; and (c) that a quick play-off and national coverage are essential to the maximum usefulness of these informational short subjects.

NOTE: In the event any distributor and exhibitor are unable to reach quick agreement on terms, it is requested that the picture be played immediately and the rental be arbitrated by the local chairman of the Theatres Division and of the Exchange Managers Committee of the W. A. C. in the territory.

R NOW!

"Worth Fighting For!"

Just as the conduct of military operations requires a united action, so it is on the home front. Be proud to do your part. All together now for a fighting America. A pledge from a fighting motion picture industry.

A MESSAGE FROM THE COORDINATOR OF GOVERNMENT FILMS

The action of motion picture producers in volunteering to make a series of 26 shorts on subjects suggested by theOffice of War Information and deemed important to the nation and its allies, constitutes a further contribution to the lengthening list of services rendered by the American motion picture industry.

Theater owners have indicated their desire to give speedy and widespread distribution of the pictures made in this voluntary undertaking. This assures that vital messages of importance to the American people will actually reach the people. Everyone participating in the production, distribution and exhibition of such films is making a definite and appreciated contribution to our war effort.

WEAF Has 20th Anniversary

Station WEAF, New York, "key" of the National Broadcasting Company, celebrated its 20th anniversary on Sunday.

The network saluted its station with a special program Saturday night, for 45 minutes beginning at 11:15, featuring Dinah Shore, from Hollywood; Dr. Frank Black and the NBC Symphony, Bill Stern, Anne Nichols, and a play, from New York; Jane Cowl, from Philadelphia, Roy Shields and orchestra, from Chicago.

WEAF's special program was Sunday, 4:30 to 5:30 P.M., featuring Ben Grauer, Pedro de Cordoba, Lucille Manners, Bill Stern, Dr. Samuel Calvert and Dr. Black.

Broadcasting over WEAF began on the 24th floor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company Building, in downtown New York. The first day's broadcasting was from 7:30 to 10:30 P. M. Then came a 13-hour weekly schedule. There were no broadcasts on Sundays. The first sponsor, a real estate company, was obtained 12 days after regular broadcasting began. It took a 10-minute period which ran five time at a cost of $100 each time.

Higley Chief of OPA Film, Radio Section

Philo Higley, writer under contract to Columbia, has been appointed chief of the Film and Radio Section of the Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration. His job will be to supply specific ideas for film and radio scripts of every-day American life. He also will act as liaison between the Consumer Division and other Government departments which have their own radio programs designed to reach consumers.

Mr. Higley is the author of the play, "Remember the Day," which was filmed this year by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Hotels Showing Pictures

Many New Hampshire hotels now are showing films one to three nights a week for the entertainment of their guests, partly because of the lack of summer theatres. Among the large hotels showing first run pictures this season are the Mount Washington at Bretton Woods, Mountain View at Whitefield, Crawford House at Crawford Notch, Forest Hills at Franconia, Sunset Hill House at Sugar Hill and the Wentworth Hall at Jackson.

Seattle Distributors Win

The highlight of the annual Northwest Film Club picnic, the baseball game between exhibitors and distributors, was won this year by the latter group, at the gathering at Lake Lucerne near Seattle. Attendance was the largest in history, being augmented by the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit and Sterling circuit picnics held in conjunction with the Film Club affair.

Army-Navy Award to Kodak

The Eastman Kodak Company at a ceremony in Rochester, N. Y., Monday night was presented with the Army-Navy production award. High officers of the services attended as the award was presented to Thomas J. Hargrave, president of the company, and William J. Lehle, a machinist representing the workers, by Brigadier General Herman W. Schull, Ordnance Department.

"Plane from Chungking" Set

Paramount plans early production of "Night Plane from Chungking," which will describe the new sky route to China piloted by American fliers. Ellen Drew, Robert Preston and Albert Dekker will have the leading roles. Walter MacEwen will produce.

Close Release Deal In Chicago Area

Albert Dezel has concluded a distribution deal to handle the reissue of Chesterfield and Invincible Pictures in the Chicago, Detroit, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, and St. Louis areas.

The first 12 pictures ready for release are: "Lady in Scarlet," "August Week-end," "Missing Girls," "I Have Lived," "Green Eyes," "Murder at Glen Athol," "House of Secrets," "Condemned to Live," "Dark Hour," "Shot in the Dark," "Death from a Distance" and "The Ghost Walks."

Murdock Joins WCAU

Henry T. Murdock, former film and dramatic critic for the defunct Evening Public Ledger in Philadelphia, has joined the staff of WCAU in that city as assistant director of publicity and station promotion. Since the closing of the Ledger earlier this year, Mr. Murdock has done special publicity for Columbia Pictures on "The Invaders" and then went to Hollywood to handle publicity for Pare Lorenz.

Fill UMPI Tax Boards

J. W. Robb, Jr., operator of the Playhouse in Randolph, Vt., has been named chairman of the Vermont state tax committee of the United Motion Picture Industry. Eugene C. Keenan of the Burns theatre, Newport, Vt., and Thomas Cuane, of the Paramount exchange staff in Boston complete the committee. In New Hampshire E. Fahey, operator of the State theatre in Manchester, N. H., has been named chairman of that state's UMPI tax committee.

Leaves Ad Agency

Lou Barlow, production manager at the Hammer Advertising Agency, Hartford, Conn., has resigned. He had been with the agency for the past three years. He plans to start his own advertising agency in Oklahoma City.

Adams U.A. Branch Manager

Byron Adams, salesman for United Artists in Dallas, has been appointed branch manager in Charlotte for the company. He succeeds Frank Drew, formerly of Cleveland.

U A to Distribute Series in Britain

United Artists, which distributes in the United States the Canadian National Film Board's "World in Action" documentary series, also will distribute them in Great Britain, it was anticipated in New York this week, following conferences at the company's home office, among NA executves, John Grierson, director of the Board, and Basil Wright, director of the British Film Center, London.

The latter, a New York visitor, here for the purpose of advising United Artists on the technical details of distribution of the subjects in Great Britain, remarked that approximately half a dozen were ready for immediate distribution. They include "Battle for Oil," "Strategy of Metals," "Food—Weapon of Conquest," "This Is Blitz," and "Geopolitiks."

The films had been held up in British allotment by the Parliamentary Act making them, as foreign films, ineligible for import. This difficulty had been cleared, Mr. Wright said.

Mr. Wright noted that the Film Center lately had been chiefly occupied with supervision of short subjects made by commercial studios for the British Ministry of Information. These subjects, while still boosting such industries as the electric, and petroleum, are now tied directly with the war, and so are in accord with MOI desires.

Coast Song Writers Study Payment Plan

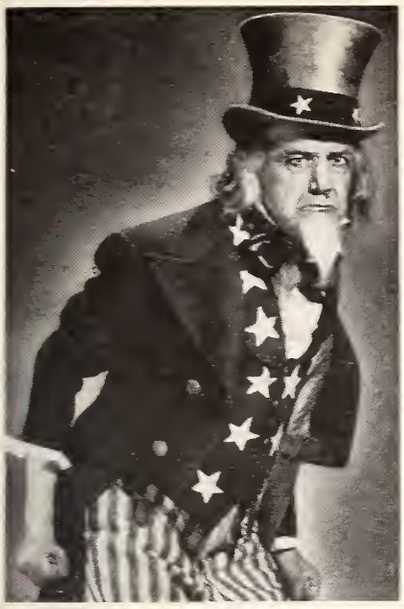
Seventy Hollywood song writers, members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, met at the Hotel Knickerbocker on Tuesday to hear an explanation by Pinky Herman of his proposed revision of payments to members. His plan, explained to the Hollywood group at the behest of New York supporters, calls for a scaling of payments according to seniority.

L. Wolfe Gilbert, who presided, read a telegram from E. C. Mills, former ASCAP executive and now an officer of the Song Writers Protective Association, declaring the plan "workable and legal."

Not Sponsoring Football

Atlantic Refining Co., Philadelphia, the largest sponsor of football games on the radio, announced that it will not return to the air this autumn because of the gasoline situation. Last season, the oil company sponsored the games of 83 colleges, high school and professional football teams extending from New England to Florida. As a company official explained it, "No gas, no sales, no profits, no advertising budgets—no broadcasts."

Staff Changes in Canada



Edward Goldsmith has resigned from the Exhibitors Booking Association in Toronto, operated by Nathan Taylor, general manager of Twentieth Century Theatres, to become booker for Pioneer Films, Ltd., Toronto, of which Oscar R. Hanson is president. Hanson has named Sam Jacobs St. John manager, J. E. Archer Vancouver manager, Victor Racow Winnipeg manager, and John Levitt manager in Montreal.

Back from Mexican Tour

A fashion group from Fox Movietone News, headed by Vyvyan Donner, fashion editor, which has been on a goodwill tour of Mexico, returned from Mexico City this week.

Sells Chicago Theatre

Gus Economy's Grand Theatre, Chicago, has been sold to Albert Trilling, owner of the Lyric there.

ZERO HOUR!

A few days more and we'll all be going over the top! A few days more, and then—for "30 fighting days" we're going to knock the zeros out of $1,000,000,000, zero by zero, bond by bond. September 1st—at dawn—the big drive starts!

ARE YOU READY?

Are you ready for the 4-minute, 3-cheer nationwide salute on Tuesday night, September 1, at 9 p. m.?

Are you ready to announce some big bond purchases on September 1?

Are you ready to put on at least one big event every week in September, Hero rallies? "War Mothers Nights"?

Are you ready to give those postal cards (see illustration) to every bond-buyer?

Are you ready to put the Drive trailer on your screen? You can get it—it's very short—at any National Screen Exchange. Available to you at less than cost!

Are you ready—right now—to sell your share of a billion dollars in bonds every day in September?

SURE!

There's plenty of excitement in the 300 cities to be visited by the stars. But what about the thousands of other cities in the U. S. A.? Are you all ready out there? And if you do have a star-visit scheduled, what have you planned for the other 29 days? Remember, the star-tours are just one part of the 30-day Drive which will show the whole world that the Motion Picture Industry will

No Curfew for Radio Service Seen by Fly

Alive to the war contribution of the broadcasting industry, the War Communications Board will not permit that service to be impaired, James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said this week in commenting on the War Production Board recommendation for a midnight curfew on stations.

Mr. Fly explained that the WPB suggestion, together with others that have been received, had been turned over to the Domestic Broadcasting Committee of the Board of War Communications for study in connection with a survey on tubes which is nearing completion. Tubes, he said, are the "choke point" of the situation.

"No measure has been suggested, by anyone in the Government or in the industry, which is not aimed toward establishing and maintaining stability and durability of broadcasting," he said. "No suggestion has been made which would result in any real impairment of the service being rendered to the public by radio or the service rendered to advertisers."

Stories "Overdrawn," Chairman Says

Daily newspaper stories on the WPB recommendation were "over-drawn," Mr. Fly said, adding that "I have great confidence that we shall come out with some constructive results in terms of conservation and in renewed assurance of continuity and stability of service."

The WPB has merged its civilian radio section with the military radio unit into an enlarged radio and Radar branch, bringing all wireless communications requirements under one organization.

Frank H. McIntosh, chief of the civilian section, will continue to head their work under Ray C. Ellis, chief of the enlarged radio and Radar group.

Mexican radio stations will be able to carry on at normal for at least another year, in the opinion of managers of the leading Mexico City stations, because they are equipped with material that must be obtained from the United States.

Mexico Radio Able to Carry On for Year

It had been reported that most if not all Mexican stations might close soon because of the lack of such material and equipment. Nevertheless, there are fears that some of the smaller stations soon will feel the lack of servicing and that probably before long they either would curtail work or perhaps totally suspend.

The board of governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, which with its general manager, W. Gladstone Murray, was criticized recently in a report by a parliamentary committee which inquired into its affairs, met Monday in Ottawa.

The meeting was expected to last several days and to deal with a lengthy agenda. Members of the board are Rene Morin, Montreal, chairman; N. L. Nathanson, Toronto; Rev. W. E. Fuller and Rev. J. S. Thomson, Saskatoon; Mrs. Nellie McClung, Victoria; Dean Adrien Pouliot, Laval University, Quebec; Rowe Holland, Vancouver, and E. H. Charleston, Ottawa.

Sir Cecil G. Graves, director general of the British Broadcasting Corporation, is in New York to discuss exchange of programs between the BBC and American chains. He said on his arrival that radio summaries of baseball scores were being broadcast to American troops in Britain and that a daily commentary on American baseball was given them by a British announcer.

Set Reorganization of Baltimore Theatre

A plan for financial reorganization of Keith's theatre, Baltimore, operated by the Maryland Theatrical Corporation, has been given final approval by the United States court there. As a result of the court approval, attorneys for all parties concerned agreed to drop pending appeals, and a lease of the theatre to its former owners, Frederick C. Shanberger, Sr., and J. Lawrence Schanberger, was turned over to them.

Terms of the plan provided that: payment of $20 in cash will constitute full settlement for each of the 3,409 $100 general mortgage six per cent sinking fund gold bonds. The Mercantile Trust Company, trustee under indenture securing the corporation's bonds, will receive $14,853.82 for funds advanced since July 22, 1932. The Lexington Theatre Company, headed by Morris A. Mechanic, operator of the New Theatre, will record the release of the first mortgage of $538,686.76, plus interest, it holds on the Keith's theatre property in exchange for all of the outstanding capital stock of the Maryland Theatrical Company. The lease provides for rental payments totaling $50,000 a year.

Canadian Managers In War Service

Ernest Warren, manager of the Midtown theatre, Toronto, of the Twentieth Century circuit, has enlisted in the RCAF, and has been succeeded by Al Perley, manager of the Kenwood theatre. Gordon Shea has resigned as assistant manager of the Midtown to enlist in the Canadian Army and has been replaced by Allen Smith.

W. J. Burke has resigned as manager of the Capitol theatre, Sarnia, to serve in the Canadian Army and his place has been filled by Thomas Dunbar, promoted from the staff. Myer Axler, manager of the Victory theatre, Toronto, has volunteer for service with the RCAF.

Murray Mitchell, assistant booker of Empire Universal Films, Toronto, has joined the Royal Canadian Navy, and has been succeeded by Irving Stern.

Unanue in CBS Relations Post

Roberto Unanue has been appointed assistant director of Latin American relations for the Columbia Broadcasting System. He replaces Dr. Antonio C. Gonzales as aide to Edmund A. Chester, director of short wave broadcasting and Latin American relations. Mr. Unanue also retains his former post of Latin American news editor. Dr. Gonzales has left the organization.

Carlos Palacios, Chilean diplomat and news analyst, will be Mr. Unanue's assistant.

Tim Holt in Service

Tim Holt, RKO Radio player, has begun training for the Army Air Corps on the west coast, after a trip east during which he participated in the United We Stand victory rally at the Albert G. Waters Stadium, Perth Amboy, N. J.

Gallup Succeeds Jopling

Hugh S. Gallup has been elected president of Delft Theatres, Inc., Marguette, Mich., succeeding the late Morgan W. Jopling. The company operates theatres in Marquette, Escanaba, Munising and Iron River, Mich.

Reopen Pittsburgh House

Presenting a policy of 90 minutes of short subjects and a like period of burlesque and vaudeville, George Jaffe's Casino in Pittsburgh will reopen with a midnight show August 30th. Admission will be 30 cents and 50 cents, weekdays and evenings, and 75 cents Saturdays, Sunday midnight shows and holidays.

Stage Season in Philadelphia to Start Labor Day

Philadelphia's 1942-43 legitimate theatre season, which last year grossed $1,318,400 in 80 playing weeks for the three Shubert theatres, will start Labor Day with four shows booked for September. Clifford C. Fischer's vaudeville revue, "Priorities of 1942," is the opening attraction at the Forrest theatre, for two weeks. Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady in the Dark" will open at the Forrest on September 28th for three weeks. The Locust Street theatre will open on September 21st with Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn Is Green," scheduled to remain three weeks. The Walnut Street theatre will open either on September 7th or 14th with Gladys Cooper in "The Morning Star."

In addition, a fourth legitimate house is expected to enter the field after Labor Day. Samuel Berns, for many years identified with the motion picture industry, has taken over operation of the dark Shubert theatre, which he will operate independently as a legitimate house apart from the Shubert interests here. In addition, there is talk of transferring "The Merry Widow" revival after its New York run to the Academy of Music, local concert hall.

Shows already booked for next season also include "Papa Is All," opening at one of the Shubert houses on October 5th, with the Philadelphia Forum, concert series group, announcing "Angel Street" and "Porgy and Bess" to its subscribers. Also definitely listed for next season at the Shubert houses are: "This Is the Army," "Junior Miss," "Blithe Spirit," "Let's Face It" and "Sons o' Fun," local dates depending on the length of their Broadway runs.

Robin Hood Dell, outdoor symphonic series in Philadelphia representing a major competitive factor for the film houses each summer, has closed its most successful season in its 13-year history. For the seven-week season ended August 11th, the Dell attracted a total audience of 191,450, an increase of 36,550 over the 1941 season. Moreover, a new all-time attendance record for a single concert was set on July 30th with an all-Gershwin program offering Oscar Levant and Anne Brown as soloists and Edwin McArthur conducting. Normally seating 6,500, the concert drew a crowd of 14,250. The "Pop" concerts on Thursdays were the best attended.

Soloists during the season included James Melton, John Charles Thomas, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Lawrence Tibbett, Marion Anderson, Yehudi Menuhin, Jose Iturbi, Artur Rubinstein, Paul Robeson, Jan Peerce, Jarmila Novotna and Alec Templeton. The guest conductors for the 90-piece orchestra included Eugene Ormandy, Pierre Monteux, Andre Kostelanetz, George Szell and Eugene Goossens.

Mrs. Dockray Joins WAAC

Mrs. Marion Barnes Dockray, secretary to Ed Hiehle, city manager of the five Shea theatres in Zanesville, Ohio, has joined the Women's Army Auxiliary Corp.

Hearn Forms Service

Hank D. Hearn, former salesman for United Artists in Charlotte, has formed Exhibitors' Service in the Charlotte territory and is doing the booking for a number of exhibitors in the territory.

Announces Short Subject

S. R. Kunkis, New York, has announced the production of "It's the Law," with color and special music. It points out oddities in laws still on the statute books with a humorous treatment. It is the first of a series.

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

. . . the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box-office performance of product—providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.

Columbia

CANAL ZONE: Chester Morris, John Hubbard—A real good airplane picture that has been a lot of entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO SING: Virginia Weidler, Ray McDonald—Fair little picture, but not much business. The talent did well with the material they had to work with. Leo Gorcey seemed to draw plenty of laughs. Would like to hear Darla Hood sing some more. Played Saturday-Monday, July 4-6.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S VICTORY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—Good picture, but poor business, probably due to the feeling against Lew Ayres, the conscientious objector. Played Sunday-Monday, August 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD RUSH MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Lee Bowman—Good picture, old, but did as well as any mid-week picture. Played Tuesday-Thursday, July 14-16—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh—Played to above average business, on mid-week. Made more money than any other picture would have done. This was the second showing of this picture at reduced prices. Played Tuesday-Thursday, June 30-July 2.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—Well, they don't come any better than this one for good clean entertainment. One of the best releases that I have had the privilege to show in my house for many years. Action, drama and mystery. I can certainly recommend this picture. Played Saturday, August 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Saskatchewan, Rural and small town patronage.

RIO RITA: Abbott and Costello—Good small town picture. They like this kind of comedy. MGM would do well to borrow this team again. Miss Grayson has a very nice voice, but very few folks like Grand Opera in this situation. Played Saturday-Monday, August 1-3.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson—A swell picture, and well played, but needed some bigger names in the cast to make it one of the biggest pictures of the year. Played Tuesday, August 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD, A: Lorraine Day, Barry Nelson—Good action picture. Played to average business. Played Tuesday-Thursday, July 7-9.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Sterling Hayden—So many bad reports had me worried about this picture, but it held up very well and I was agreeably surprised. Played Saturday-Monday, July 11-13.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—Just what my public likes, plenty of good music (by Dorsey and his band), and lots of comedy, supplied by a big cast of real talent. Played Saturday-Sunday, July 18-20.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

I WANT A DIVORCE: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Really went to town on this one. Was surprised this team seemed O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—A good comedy enjoyed by all my patrons and I can recommend this as good entertainment. Played Friday, August 7.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Saskatchewan, Rural and small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE DESERT: Bill Boyd, Andy Clyde—A nice picture for weekend dual bill. Business good. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

PACIFIC BLACKOUT: Robert Preston, Martha O'Driscoll—Fair. Played Friday-Saturday, July 24-25.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—Did nothing extra, but those that came were pleased. Veronica Lake would have more following if she would change the way of fixing her hair. Played Tuesday-Thursday, July 28-30.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BASHFUL BACHELOR: Lum and Abner—The plot and the acting were corny, but it brought in radio fans who had not been in the theatre for years. Business was average. Played Wednesday-Thursday, August 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—It pleased the kids and the farm boys and business was very good. If your folks like Tarzan pictures, play this one. Running time, 79 minutes. Played Friday-Saturday, August 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

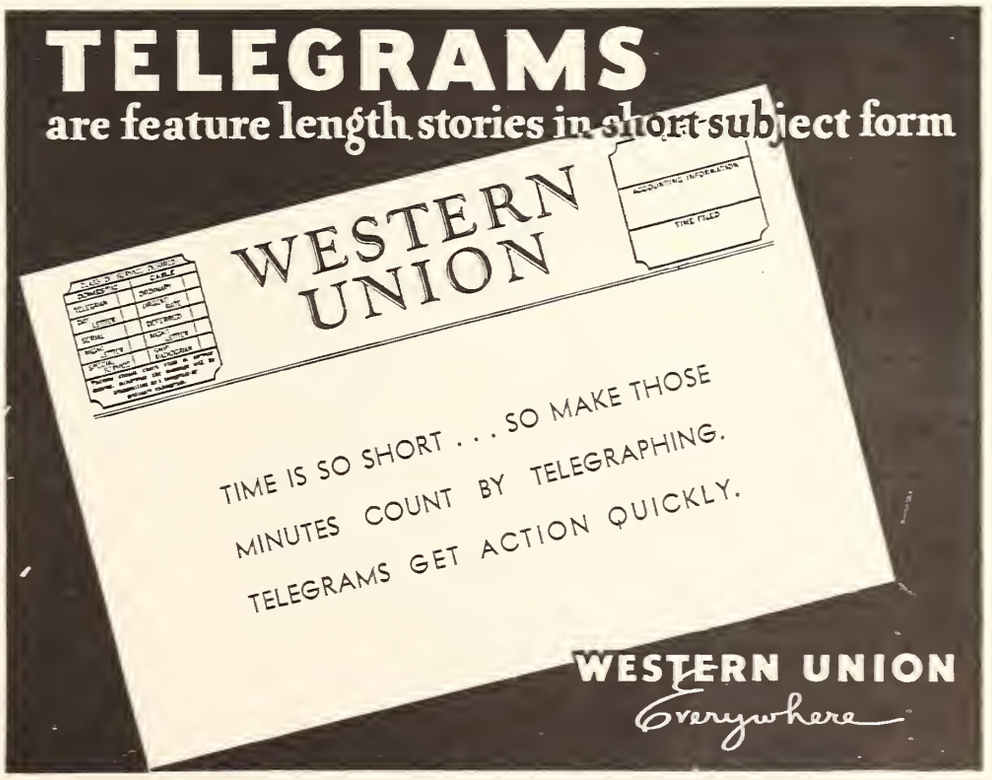
TUTTLES OF TAHITI: Charles Laughton, Jon Hall—An entertaining picture which did average business. Played Wednesday-Thursday, July 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. mall town patronage.

Republic

BEHIND THE NEWS: Lloyd Nolan, Doris Davenport—Good picture. Lots of action. Played it on dual bill with western to nice week in business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

DESERT BANDIT: Don Red Barry—Good action picture which pleased the Friday-Saturday crowds. Played July 31-August 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CALIFORNIA: John Wayne, Binnie Barnes—Good picture, played to average Friday and Saturday business, July 10, 11.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.



IN OLD CALIFORNIA: John Wayne, Binnie Barnes—A real entertaining picture. Did some fair business. Nothing to write home about. Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

SAILORS ON LEAVE: Shirley Ross, William Lundigan—A fair program picture that did nice business. Lots of good laughs.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

SHEPHERD OF THE OZARKS: Weaver Brothers, Elviry—Good picture which did average business. Played Friday-Saturday, July 3-4.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

STARDUST ON THE SAGE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This picture proved to me that Autry is still in the saddle, and going good. Smiley gives out with some very good comedy. We will miss Autry when he leaves the studio for his duties in Uncle

Sam's Army. Good luck to him and I am sure when he comes back he will be just as popular or more so. Played Friday-Saturday, July 17-18.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUNSET ON THE DESERT: Roy Rogers, Gabby Hayes—A fairly good western, that seemed to satisfy everyone. Nice weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

WESTWARD HO: Three Mesquiteers—Good western.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

IT HAPPENED IN FLATBUSH: Lloyd Nolan, Carole Landis—Good baseball picture which pleased on Family Night. Played Tuesday, July 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOONTIDE: Ida Lupino, Jean Gabin—This is an entertaining picture and business was good. Played Sunday-Monday, July 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY GAL SAL: Rita Hayworth, Victor Mature: Nice color musical, but I have yet to discover why they choose pictures in which two-thirds of the action takes place at night for their color features. However, there are some sequences that show it off to good advantage. The older folks liked this a lot, but the younger ones have different ideas of popular music. All this explains why we did only average business with an expensively produced picture. Well, only a month to Labor Day. Played Thursday-Friday, August 6-7.—N. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Universal

GHOST OF FRANKENSTEIN: Lon Chaney, Evelyn Ankers—These horror shows shown periodically do business, and we have found about every six weeks the patrons like them, as they do business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.

SABOTEUR: Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane—A real good picture, well produced. Did nice business. Glad to have played it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

WOLF MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Lon Chaney—This horror combination of pictures (played with "Monster and the Girl") really did business. If you can book one of this type occasionally, you'll do nice business. Try it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont.

Warner Brothers

DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE: John Garfield, Raymond Massey—Good picture, played to average midweek business. Played Tuesday-Thursday, July 21-23.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

The Theatre and the War

Lots of businessmen, whose stocks have been reduced by priorities, whose prices on their remaining goods have been fixed, and who may even have been practically forced out of business, point to the theatre owner and cry, "Well, look at him—he's doing even better than he did before the War."

Let's see if he is. And let's see if we don't have a pretty good argument with which to counterattack.

In the first place, of course, it is ridiculous to assume that anyone in any business is unaffected by the war. The increased taxes, the shortage of manpower and difficulty of obtaining replacements of parts are common to all businesses, industries, or stores. But whereas the theatre is making a distinct contribution to the war effort, it is doubted whether any other retailer, as such, can compare his efforts.

First of all, the theatre is acting as agent for War Bonds and Stamps. By September 1st, it is expected that 5,000 theatres in the country will be authorized to issue Bonds. At present practically every theatre is selling War Stamps. This is quite an accomplishment when it is considered that the theatre each day has a larger audience than any one store has customers; even if every store sold War Stamps and Bonds, the opportunities it would have to sell them would be limited by the number of customers.

Next, the theatre is disseminating information which the Government wants the public to have. Next to the radio and the newspapers, both of which are doing their share, there is no better method of spreading news and information. The theatre is doing this not only through the subjects it would normally show, such as the newsreels, or "Mrs. Miniver" for which the theatre alone cannot claim credit; but theatres are giving over a part of their screen time to Government-sponsored pictures, the Victory Films.

Third, the theatre is contributing toward keeping up the morale of the citizens who cannot fight or those whose fighting is done at a work bench, a desk or machine. It is providing them with an inexpensive means of escape from the grim realities of the war, even if only for a few hours at a time: The Government itself is fully aware of the importance of this factor; as a result of this awareness, the motion picture industry has been declared essential.

In addition, there are many lesser and incidental services which the theatre performs. For example, the amount of scrap rubber collected by the showhouses of the country was a considerable proportion of the total. Theatres have enlisted hundreds of men in the Armed Forces. Louis Charninsky at the Capitol Theatre in Dallas, for instance, signed up 152 men for the Navy in one week alone.

Now, as to the charge that business is better than it ever was, we of the theatre have a simple answer. While the resale prices of most stores have been fixed, so has the wholesale price and thus the store's profits per item have been frozen. But the theatre with a new stock of merchandise to dispose of each couple of days or week has no fixed profit to rely on; as a matter of fact, its supply, too, will be cut down and it must make its goods last longer than ever before.

These arguments, if they fit a situation, bear repeating to those who would complain. For it is from minor complaints like this that unfavorable legislation arises.

Every theatre which uses newspaper advertising has been asked to devote at least ten per cent of its space to the industry's "Salute to Our Heroes Month". It is hoped that Round Table members will, as always, come to the fore in this and, if necessary, increase their space to put the message over.

Worn-out Phrases

Verne Touchett of the Fox Wisconsin Theatres has voiced his objections to certain time-tattered phrases which continually appear in press book advertising. These are Verne's pet aversions:

"Her greatest triumph

"The picture all America is cheering

"Greater than the stage play (no one saw the stage play)

"Torn from the pages of a mighty novel (which no one read)

"Greater than the book".

The parenthetical expressions are also Verne's. He carefully points out that these phrases have been used by every distributor. They suggest the effort of a tired young man in front of a typewriter reaching for something out of his head instead of out of the product. —BOB WILE

Something for Every Day In Sept. War Bond Drive

September should be a full month for the exhibitor. The campaign below in connection with the War Bond Drive to raise a billion dollars through theatres was devised by Harry Browning of Mullin and Pinanski, chairman of publicity for the War Activities Committee in Massachusetts. These ideas have been made available by the War Activities Committee General Headquarters in New York.

Tues., Sept. 1.—Open drive with parade and rally. Four-minute "Salute to Our Heroes" in every theatre at 9 P.M.

Wed., Sept. 2.—Unveil "Heroes Gallery" in department store window or in your lobby. (Pictures of local men in service. Obtain them through newspaper stories.)

Thurs., Sept. 3.—War Sweethearts' Night. Sweethearts of fighting men to take over stamp and bond selling in theatre lobbies. Later they are guests of management at last show.

Fri., Sept. 4.—Kiwanis Night. Kiwanis Club members to take over stamp and bond selling.

Sat., Sept. 5.—Dedicate Service Flag.

Sun., Sept. 6.—Stamp and bond booth outside or in the vestibule of every church. Ask ministers, priests and rabbis to include some reference to bond drive in their announcements.

Mon., Sept. 7.—Labor Day. Each theatre to invite the five families having the largest number of members engaged in war industries. Stage a special tableau in tribute to labor. Short speech by your city's most popular labor leader.

Tues., Sept. 8.—War Mothers' Night.

Wed., Sept. 9.—War Stamp Matinee. Souvenir photo of film star to every youngster buying a war stamp.

Thurs., Sept. 10.—Department Store "White-Out". Every store to stop selling merchandise for 15 minutes (12 noon to 12:15 P.M.), during which period only War Bonds and Stamps will be sold. (Every big New York City store did this during Retailers for Victory month.)

Fri., Sept. 11.—Heroes Day. Theatres to entertain local service men on leave and to honor any local heroes whose names have made news. Bring to the theatre any surviving vets of the Civil War. Introduce them. Be sure you get newspaper coverage.

Sat., Sept. 12.—Factory Day. Ask every factory to include a special piece of printing in pay envelopes—or provide special envelopes. (Despite 10% payroll deduction plan, many workers are buying extra bonds and stamps.)

Sun., Sept. 13.—General Pershing Day.

Mon., Sept. 14.—Boy Scout Night. Massing of the colors. Scouts fife and drum corps . . . buglers . . . demonstration.

Tues., Sept. 15.—War Mothers' Night.

Wed., Sept. 16.—Masonic Night. Obtain cooperation of local Shrine, Grotto, Eastern Star, etc. Quick appeal from stages by Masonic leader.

Thurs., Sept. 17.—Elks' Night. (Same as above.)

Fri., Sept. 18.—Knights of Columbus night. (Same as above.)

Sat., Sept. 19.—Stamp-A-Dance Stomp. Outdoor block party.

Sun., Sept. 20.—Church Day. Same as last Sunday.

Mon., Sept. 21.—A guest ticket to every bond-buyer tonight.

Tues., Sept. 22.—War Mothers' Night.

Wed., Sept. 23.—A day in honor of the boys on the cruiser named after your city. Obtain cooperation of local Navy recruiting officials.

Thurs., Sept. 24.—American Legion Night. Massing of the colors. Displays of World War I trophies. Quickie speech by Legion Commander.

Fri., Sept. 25.—Florists' Night. An American Beauty rose free to every lady buying a 25-cent War Stamp . . . and inexpensive corsage to every bond buyer.

Sat., Sept. 26.—War Wives' Night. First so-many war wives writing in to local newspaper to be guests of each theatre. (Assign about 25 to each house.)

Sun., Sept. 27.—Church Day. Big public picnic. Hay wagons to take 'em into the country. To attend picnic, each guest must buy at least $5 in war stamps. (Good color stuff for newspapers.)

Mon., Sept. 28.—Honor American Women's Voluntary Services. WAAC's, Ambulance Corps, Red Cross, etc. (They have all been active in stamp and bond selling.) Luncheon that day to bond booth salesladies.

Tues., Sept. 29.—War Mothers' Night.

Wed., Sept. 30.—Torchlight Parade . . . exciting final rally . . . bands in front of every theatre.

BRIEMANN HONORS SOLDIER BOYS

To aid in pushing his War Stamp and Bond sales at the Ambassador, in Baltimore, William Briemann has worked up an ingenious slant. Each week at the theatre he honors some local boy serving in the Army, Navy or Marines by naming a particular week after him. In other words, he specifies a "John Doe Week". The lad is then given credit for all the bonds and stamps sold during that week.

A letter is then sent to Mr. Doe telling him that the week has been named in his honor, also submitting a list of the names of the purchasers together with the total amount sold. A photograph taken of the marquee with the honored man's name on it, together with the program, is then mailed to camp. Briemann states that until the man receives the letter, photograph and program the stunt is a total surprise to him.

"What Would You Do?" Is Hamilton's Teaser Herald

"What would you do?" was the headline on pages 1 and 4 of a herald issued by Jack Hamilton for the engagement of "In This Our Life" at Schine's Riviera, Rochester, N. Y. Inside the story continued, ". . . if someone said 'I can get anything I want even your husband.'"

Jack also reports that he has started a Community Sing night at the Riviera every Wednesday. "The reaction is good," says Jack, "and in these troubled times, I think that a little singing helps divert the mind from the war for a while at least."

"Juke Girl" inspired Jack to get juke box for the lobby with a cut-out of Ann Sheridan sitting atop it; every nickel played in it goes to Army and Navy Emergency Relief.

The engagement of "Broadway" prompted Jack to stencil arrows on the sidewalk leading toward the theatre in all directions.

Holden's Health Club Tie-Up

William Holden, manager of the Chicago Theatre, promoted a popular Loop health club for a "Magnificent Dope" tie-up and also a picture feature in relaxing and popular exercise. The health club distributed cards reading "Don't be a magnificent dope. Keep in shape here and then go and see 'The Magnificent Dope' at the Chicago Theatre."

Boyle's "Mr. V" Teaser

Advance teaser stunt used by Joe Boyle for "Mister V" at the Loew Poli Broadway, in Norwich, Conn., consisted of readers in the local dailies calling attention to the fact that at Saturday noon a "Mister V" would be on the streets. Observant movie-goers were invited to try their luck at capturing him, the paper supplying readers with a few clues. To those properly identifying the man, guest tickets were given.

Martha Raye Personal Sold by Fitzpatrick

Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., effected a neat tieup with one of the local chain stores to sell the personal appearance of Martha Raye. The Round Tabler promoted the stores for a smash half-page cooperative ad which was preceded by a couple of 20-inch teaser ads. The store also shared in the cost of printing up 5,000 heralds plugging Raye's appearance on the stage. These were handed out a week in advance of the show.

Miss Raye was also guest starred on both local radio stations, during both of which interviews her appearance at the theatre was generously plugged.

Theatre Hosts Mothers Of West Pointers

Mothers of cadets now at U. S. Military Academy were invited to a luncheon prior to a private screening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" at the RKO Palace Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, and the wife of the Commanding General at Ft. Hayes was the hostess at this luncheon. The radio campaign for this engagement as reported by Douglas George, 20th Century-Fox exploiteer, included a quiz contest between 10 army men and 10 WAAC with defense stamps awarded the winners. The record of the Artillery Song "Caissons" was played on all radio stations.

Direct Mail Campaign

Chamber of Commerce of Wilkes-Barre decided that it was a civic duty to see "This Above All," and cooperated with Manager Tommy Hilleen of the Comerford by initiating a direct-mail campaign to 1,100 leading Wilkes-Barre-ites.

Displays Servicemen Photos

For "True to the Army," Paul O. Klinger, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Lewistown, Pa., solicited photos from friends and families of all local boys in the service. All the pictures were placed on a giant display board in front of the theatre.

George Seed, city manager for Fabian Theatres in Cohoes, N. Y., used this horse and carriage as a ballyhoo for "My Gal Sal". It attracted a lot of attention and showed results at the box office, he reports.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

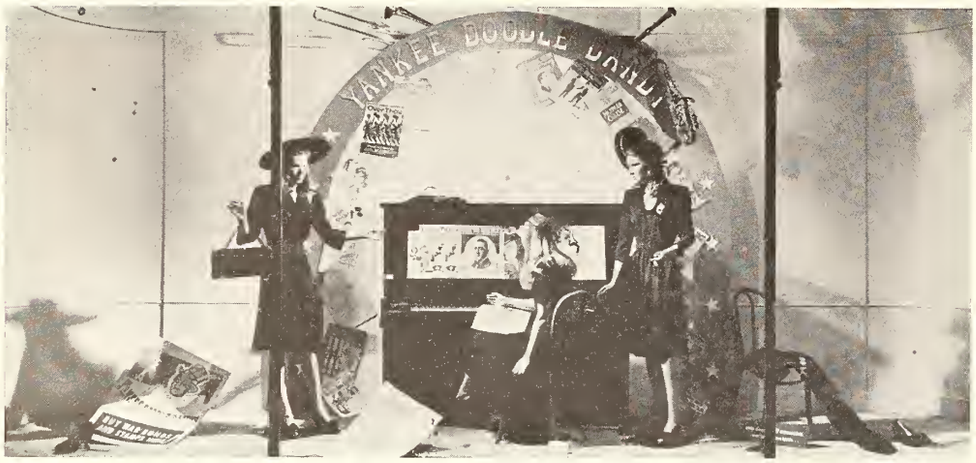
[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

PRIDE OF THE YANKEES (RKO): Although Gehrig was essentially a baseball player, this is by no means being sold as a baseball picture. On the other hand, the baseball angle is not ignored in selling. It is simply subordinated to other slants which would, in most instances, be more compelling. The romance, particularly, is a saleable slant. Lou and Eleanor Gehrig were supposed to have had an ideal romance. For instance, they courted to Irving Berlin's tune, "Always", which is used in the picture. There's a cue for music tieups. Paul Gallico has written a book, entitled "Lou Gehrig—Pride of the Yankees", which furnishes the exhibitor with opportunity for book tieups. The couple were college sweethearts and that might suggest a campus romance contest idea. There's an excellent still of Teresa Wright selecting her furniture, which can be used for tieups with furniture stores, etc. Another angle to the romance is its oddity which can be pointed up by a contest for other odd and unusual proposals and romances. One way in which the baseball slant of the story can be put over is through the cooperation of sporting goods stores. Of course, plenty of advertising should be carried in and around the ball parks. Invite the local pro or semi-pro team to your opening. If there is a softball league, offer a prize of free tickets to the best scorers, the best pitchers, etc., with plenty of emphasis on newspaper publicity. A die-cut baseball herald is available which should attract attention. Pictures of the crowds at baseball games can be blown up and one or two faces circled. The lucky ones would get free tickets. This stunt can be worked in cooperation with the newspaper. Ask your radio station for spot announcements on "Pride of the Yankees" immediately after announcement of the day's baseball scores. The sports pages of the local newspapers should be opened to various pieces of publicity.

THE PIED PIPER (Twentieth Century-Fox): Biggest tieup in connection with this picture is an arrangement with the Eleventh Annual Children's National Photograph Contest of the National Association of Department Store Studios whereby a trip to Hollywood is being offered to the winner as the guest of Roddy McDowall, star of the picture. In addition, $10,000 in prizes is being offered by the Association. Parents Magazine is sponsoring the contest. The press book carries a list of stores which have studios. A "walk to the theatre" might be staged in connection with this picture. It could be almost a parade with just a few properly bannered walkers starting the procession and encouraging others to join in. This can be almost costless, since there is no vehicle hire involved and there need be no bands. The picture will appeal to children, so it is advisable to make a strong appeal to them. Refugee groups will be glad to assist in publicizing the picture, since it deals so directly with their plight. There is a "Pied Piper Pledge" idea suggested in the press book which entails printing of pledges to be signed by children agreeing to conserve for the war effort, etc.

"Reap the Wild Wind" Contest

Starting three days before the opening of "Reap the Wild Wind" at the Poli Palace, in Meriden, Conn., Joe Samartano landed a newspaper contest which asked readers to identify scenes from previous DeMille screen hits. Second contest also for guest tickets required readers to color scene stills from the picture and run in the paper.



Helson's Street Bally

What proved to be a street-stopper for Ray Helson at the Elmwood, in Penn Yann, N. Y., for "The Fleet's In" was a three-sheet cutout showing Dorothy Lamour and the lads in the picture. This was mounted on a coaster wagon and pulled around town by a boy in a sailor suit. A portable victrola inside played Navy tunes.

Flag Books Distributed By Byers on "Tripoli"

Promoting 500 copies of "The Marines Hymn," imprinted with playdates, Lee Byers, at the Ritz in Clarksburg, West Va., distributed them well in advance of his date on "Shores of Tripoli." In addition copies of the book, "Our Flag," were given away at the first show to the first 500 attending. In addition, Byers got in a plug on the back page for his next attraction, "Juke Girl."

Ceremonies for the swearing in of 20 recruits was held on the theatre stage with the marines doing the honors. This was plugged on the air by the marines a week in advance. Three-sheets were posted at the bus terminal, the entire staff wore badges well ahead, and special newspaper stories and art were landed.

By Zev Pressman

Everett Callow, publicity director of the Warner Theatres in Philadelphia, arranged this "Yankee Doodle Dandy" window while the picture was current at the Boyd Theatre.

Plants Serialization Of "Tortilla Flat"

For three days ahead of the opening of "Tortilla Flat" at Loew's State, in Boston, publicist Joe Longo planted a serialization with art, which included theatre and playdates credits. In addition, a two-column roto break was secured on Sunday. Teaser ads were run six weeks in advance and prior to opening a walking book ballyhoo aided.

Rollins' Angel Kites Aid "I Married an Angel"

Ingenious were the kites made up like an angel with wings which were flown from the top of the marquee of Smalley's Theatre, in Hensonville, N. Y., as part of Lloyd Rollins' advance on "I Married an Angel." Each kite carried the title copy. Lloyd cautions his brother Round Tablers who might care to adapt the idea to be sure not to get the strings too long, or they will get caught in electric or telephone wires.

"Magnificent Dope" Roams Street

The man on the street stunt which has been used for many pictures, is adaptable to most situations playing "The Magnificent Dope." In Evansville, Ind., a local boy was engaged to understudy the screen character of Henry Fonda and stroll through the shopping districts. Humorous copy in the newspapers advised readers that guest passes would be given to persons who approached this boy and correctly identified him as "The Magnificent Dope."

Elder's Three-Column Co-op Ad

Ties "Jones" to USO Drive

On learning that United Artists was distributing "Mr. Gardenia Jones," A. J. Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., made a quick booking to time for the county to start its USO drive. A special screening was held for the chairman and his drive captains and Kal was able to break both papers with the opening of his Stamp and Bond Drive.

Mechanic's "West Point" Teaser

Morris Mechanic of the New Theatre and George Gomperts teased Baltimore critics into attention by sending them three tin soldiers each day for three days. On the fourth day a solitary tin soldier arrived with an attached card reading: "I'm the Tenth Gentleman from West Point."

Bickerstaff's "Blonde" Herald

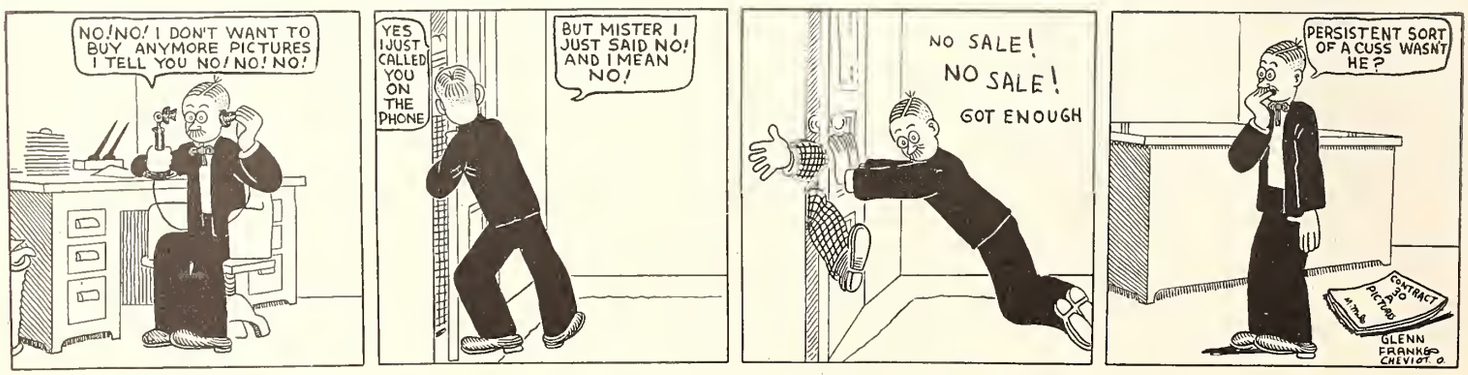
Receiving favorable comments was Frank Bickerstaff's special herald printed in red which was distributed ahead of "My Favorite Blonde" at the L. & J. Palace, in Athens, Ga. Headed "Do you drive recklessly," the herald was followed by copy tied directly to the picture, "Why drive recklessly when you can save gas and tires and live to see," etc.

Novel Front Aids Conner On "In Old California"

For an attractor on "In Old California" at the Capitol Theatre, in Madison, Wis., Marlowe Conner's front consisted of an imitation cart built in perspective out of compoboard and filled to the top with small rocks covered with gilt paint. Copy overall read: "Join the Gold Rush in California."

In addition, Conner made up 100 "gold bricks" out of two by four wood cut to brick size and painted gold. A card was tacked on the brick advising holders that if it was presented at the boxoffice and a 25-cent war stamp was purchased, a guest ticket would be awarded. The bricks were dropped all over town after midnight, for finders to pick up. Conners reports the stunt creating a lot of talk, selling stamps and rating a feature story in the paper.

Dallas Holds Blonde Revue For "My Favorite Blonde"



In connection with the showing of "My Favorite Blonde" at the Wareham Theatre, in Manhattan, Kan., Dave Dallas arranged for the local chapter of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologist's Association to present a "My Favorite Blonde" revue. All the beauty shops in the local organization chose their favorite blonde and gave her one of the latest hair-do's. The music for the occasion was supplied by the Manhattan Philharmonic, the event being covered by the daily paper with front-page breaks. In addition all the cooperating beauty parlors came through with a full-page ad.

Holds "Gold Rush" Sales

Ray O'Connell, manager of Warners' Capitol Theatre. Lancaster, Pa., promoted the following for "The Gold Rush." Heralds were distributed at schools, spot announcements were promoted on the radio. Gold Rush sales were promoted at the stores with the paper bags carrying picture title imprints and playdates. Announcements were placed on all hotel bulletin boards and ushers attired in Chaplin clothes made for a street bally.

Cohn's "Clouds" Boxoffice

An attractor used by Ben Cohn for "Captains of the Clouds" at the Warner Hamilton, in Chicago, was an 18-foot cutout plane which he planted atop his boxoffice in front of the theatre. The wing spread carried a card selling Cagney in the picture. In addition, Cohn featured a model airplane contest, with promoted prizes going to youngsters. The slant was sold through use of a lobby easel and the house program.

May Sells MOT Reel

Ed May at the Russell Theatre, Maysville, Ky., got not only front page newspaper publicity but also a three column layout of pictures on the March of Time's release, "Men in Washington". A 4-sheet display was used in advance and during the run of the subject.

A Pass to Each Bond Buyer, Kornblite-Pawley Offer

War Heroes' Day was celebrated in Waverly, N. Y., with Bud Kornblite, manager of the Capitol taking advantage of the occasion to sell as many Bonds as possible through the theatre. Bud cooperated with Tom Pawley, manager of the Sayre Theatre in nearby Sayre, Penna., in taking a big ad which offered a pass to anyone who bought a Bond in the lobby of either theatre on a particular night. The newspaper mentioned this idea on the front page.

In Waverly, Bud sold $500 worth of Bonds and $36 in Stamps that night—plus another $500 in Bonds the next day to a man who read the newspaper publicity and wanted to let Bud handle his Bond purchase as a reward for what he considered a good job being done by the theatre. In Sayre, Tom Pawley sold $175 worth of Stamps and Bonds. The boys take pains to point out that the combined populations of the towns are only 11,000. In eight weeks, Bud sold $3,700 in War Stamps and Bonds.

As part of his promotion for the pass for a War Bond idea, Bud obtained the services of a sound truck which covered every street in town announcing the offer and playing military tunes.

West Coast Theatres Stage Candy Show for the U.S.O.

Knowing that men in the service enjoy candy, Terry McDaniel's district of Fox West Coast theatremen arranged a special all-cartoon show in cooperation with the U.S.O. These shows were staged at the largest theatre in each key town with admission tickets obtainable with the purchase of two or more candy bars at candy counters in all theatres. The candy was picked up daily by soldiers from nearby camps, under the supervision of the local U.S.O. who had keys to the special locks on the barrels.

The city manager in each town appointed a man to handle the publicity and promotional work. In Pasadena James Runte assigned Homer Skillion; in North Hollywood "Doc" Crews handled the job and in Glendale it was Ed Harris, named by Earl Rice.

The comment on this idea was so favorable and the whole stunt so successful that the candy barrels are being maintained in the theatre lobbies indefinitely, the candy being turned over to the U.S.O. every week.

When a group of people were on line in the lobby of the RKO Albee Theatre, in Providence, to purchase war stamps, Manager George E. French, acting as salesman, had a picture taken of the aggregation and planted it in the local dailies. The caption read: "This is one theatre line patrons of the RKO Albee don't mind standing in, for it was for the purchase of War Stamps."

Relic Display, Auction Open Brown's Campaign

The Bertha Theatre in Chicago started its War Bond and Stamp campaign with a lobby display consisting of war relics, guns, helmets, rifles, grenades, cavalry sabers, pistols, etc., which were collected by Norman Brown, manager, from two neighborhood Legion posts. Alongside of each display stood the colors of the Post. The portion attracting the greatest attention and admiration was a collection of ten model U. S. Navy boats, all in scale, from tiny assault craft and mosquito boats to a heavy destroyed eight feet long. All ten boats are fitted to the tiniest detail and represent four and a half years of spare-time work on the part of their builder, Jack Holm, an Amundsen High School student. A card next to each vessel showed the details of its construction, armaments, crew and the cost to the government. Planes were suspended on individual wires above the boats. At a flag-draped table beside the display, ladies representing the Treasury Department invited stamp buyers to autograph a shell for the Japs. Three highly polished shells were furnished by Legion Posts, and after lacquering were autographed with India ink.

Merchants Cooperate

Prior to the opening of the campaign, Brown contacted local merchants, held several morning meetings and presented his ideas for a giant War Bond and Stamp rally. The merchants and the theatre contributed cash toward the purchase of a $50 Bond and two $25 Bonds as prizes. Each merchant also contributed an article of merchandise to be auctioned off, the highest bidder to receive the full amount of his bid in Bonds and Stamps, plus the article.

The front and marquee of the theatre were decorated with flags on the night of the grand rally which climaxed the campaign. Each person who bought a War Stamp from the theatre was entitled to a ticket for the Midnight Defense Show. They were also permitted to autograph a shell to the Japs.

On the night of the rally, thousands of people thronged the street which was closed to traffic by the police. On a truck in front of the theatre was a piano and all the merchandise to be auctioned off. The auctioneer was on the roof of the building opposite with assistants scattered in various places, all equipped with mikes attached to an elaborate public address system. Five huge loudspeak carried the voices of the sub-auctioneers to the public.

Bidding ran higher than expected and no article went for less than a Bond. As soon as a person won the bid, he was escorted to the lobby of the theatre by a Legionnaire. Treasury Department representatives took the money for the Bonds, filled out bond applications and issued receipts. Odd amounts were issued in Stamps. Between auctions the public was entertained by numerous vaudeville acts from the illuminated platform.

May Appointed Head Of Parade Committee

Ed May at the Schine Russell, in Maysville, Ky., was appointed head of the parade committee for a citywide mass meeting for sale promotion of War Stamps and Bonds. All business establishments closed at 4:30 with the parade of patriotic organizations, bands, etc., marching throughout the business area and ending at the high school auditorium, where Government speakers held a huge rally.

All parade arrangements were made by May and tied in with "Remember Pearl Harbor" then showing. The Round Tabler got plenty of additional favorable newspaper publicity and goodwill by inviting the members of the Police and Fire Departments as "Guests of Honor" at the opening performance. Numerous window displays were promoted, each tied directly to the sale of bonds and the picture.

By Robert J. Arnold

Frank Murphy had been building up interest in "Mrs. Miniver" at Loew's State, Syracuse, in advance—so "She's Here" attracted attention when the film arrived.

Berman's Colored-Scented Ad Attracts on "Mrs. Miniver"

What proved to be a distinct attractor for M. E. Berman at the Orpheum theatre, in Springfield, Ill., was the full cooperative ad page he promoted for his engagement of "Mrs. Miniver." The outstanding feature of the page was the fact imprinted from one side to the other was a "Miniver Rose" printed in red and green. To give the thing a real send-off, a rose scent was used in the ink.

A contest angle was also injected in the page, through an offer of cash prizes and guest tickets to those submitting a list of the 10 best pictures. The lists which compared with pictures receiving the most votes were the winners. The catchline across the top of the page read: "Uncle Sam is as Proud of the Women of Springfield as We Are of 'Mrs. Miniver'."

50-Year Old Machine Used for "Juke Girl"

During the absence of John Makemson, manager of the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, Bill Humrickhouse, assistant, promoted a 50-year-old juke box which he planted outside a week in advance of "Juke Girl." A guessing contest in conjunction with this idea offered guest tickets to the first 15 persons coming closest to guessing the correct age of the box. The contest was publicized in the newspaper ads and in a free story which was planted with a scene mat.

Longo Distributes Nuts Ahead of "Rio Rita"

A costumed Abbott & Costello pair, wheeling a barrow loaded with peanuts distributed the fruit at Boston's busiest intersections as a feature of Joe Longo's campaign for "Rio Rita" at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres. Copy on the wheelbarrow read "Here's nuts to you from two screwballs in their nuttiest picture yet." In addition 25 localities named Abbott or Costello were guests of the management at the opening.

"Blind Date" Party

Haddon Matthews, manager of Warners' Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia, promoted a "Blind-Date" Party in advance of "This Above All." Fifty sailors and soldiers were invited to a special screening in the auditorium of WCAU, at which time they were coupled with Navy "Nells." The stunt resulted in newspaper and radio breaks.

This lad, James Brady, seven years old, brought his bed to the State Theatre, Hanover, Penna., to aid the war effort. Of course, Jimmy knew that there was going to be a scrap iron matinee at the State, which Charles Moyer, manager, had arranged. So Jimmy told his dad he would give up all of his bed but the springs if dad would build him a bunk bed around the spring. Dad agreed. So, on the morning of the matinee, Jimmy decorated the bed with a large flag and a "V" and dragged it down to the theatre. Charlie got a good break in the newspaper on the story which estimated the pile of scrap at two tons, including pipe, flatirons, auto parts and Jimmy Brady's bed.

Gillespie's Double Truck Lauds Girls' War Work

Even though he reports tieups as difficult to effect in his territory, Stew Gillespie at the Marks Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, forwards proof of his double truck on "To Be or Not to Be." The center spread was devoted to a large two-column cut of Carole Lombard with copy "Killed in Action on the Home Front." This was followed by copy lauding the girls on their part in the war effort, while each merchant's ad also carried congratulatory copy to the girls in active service.

"The Big Shot" was playing at the Paramount in Syracuse, so Dick Feldman, manager, got this scout car to park in front of the theatre. He planned to have a tank, but two soldiers detailed to Fort Ontario to get it came back with the scout car instead.

Schultz Gives "Tripoli" Special Front Treatment

To help sell his date on "Shores of Tripoli" at the Columbia Theatre, in Erie, Pa., John R. Schultz covered the entire front of the boxoffice with life-size cutouts of the stars together with giant title banner directly under the marquee. A Marine A Board out front carried special one-sheet material. To his mailing list, Schultz sent postcards, the front of which featured the Marines Hymn, while the correspondence side carried picture copy.

For the personal of Blue Barron and His Orchestra, John stories and cuts in the local papers, while the dailies came through with excellent art work, covering the appearance of Barron and his boys at the local Bond Rally.

Notaro's Mystery Lady Exploits "Miniver"

A four-day mystery lady contest was arranged by Pat Notaro for his advance on "Mrs. Miniver" at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa. For four days a "mysterious lady" covered the downtown area and each person who identified her on the street received guest tickets. Notaro sold a series of co-op ads five days in advance, promoted three book displays and also promoted a local florist for the gratis distribution of 100 Miniver roses to the first 100 women attending his matinee.

Fitzpatrick Uses Westmore Tieup on "This Above All"

A week in advanec of his showing of "This Above All," Ed Fitzpatrick of the Poli, Waterbury, Conn., handed out coupons plugging the Perc Westmore tieup by which every lady who attended the theatre during the engagement of that picture would receive Westmore's make-up guide. Ed gave out 5,000 of the coupons and two cooperating stores distributed 1,000 apiece. These and other stores also gave window displays and radio plugs from their respective broadcasts. Every one of these publicity arrangements gave full credit to the picture and mentioned playdates as well.

Stunt for Parents Of West Pointers

La Salle's Department Store, one of the largest in Toledo, Ohio, cooperated with the Paramount Theatre for the opening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" by entertaining the mothers and fathers of the cadets in the classes now at the Academy. The fathers were presented with a boutonnierre of 10 defense stamps on a green leaf background and the parents were invited to a screening of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point."

Prytz's "Shangri-La"

As a teaser ahead of his date on "Lost Horizon" at the Granada Theatre, in Duluth, Minn., Round Tabler Roy O. Prytz ran ads in the daily on the classified page with copy reading: "Found. Shangri-La, the mythical bomber air base our President talked about in 'Lost Horizon' now playing. Granada." In addition Prytz also planted a Chuckle Ad contest for guest tickets.

Mayor's Proclamation Ties "Invaders" to War Bond Sale

Carl Herman, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Pottsville, Pa., had the Mayor issue a proclamation tieing in "The Invaders" with the city's drive for sale of war bonds. Other features of the campaign included a talk at the local high school, a special bulletin board at the public library, with displays of special stills, and a booth was set up in the lobby on opening day under Army supervision for recruiting. In addition, Herman promoted a four-day contest in the local newspaper on "How well do you know your invaders?" Moreover, officials of the women's clubs, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion were contacted to endorse the picture.

Frye's Laugh Ration Card

Distributed well in advance of "The Magnificent Dope" at Loew's Palace, in Memphis, was B. E. Frye's Laugh Ration Card. The giveaway bore space for the recipient's name, entitling him to the maximum of laughs during the week of the show.

Baker's Telephone Stunt

Red Cross chapter of Spokane, Washington, volunteered to start a chain telephone campaign in behalf of "This Above All" when Al Baker, City Manager of Evergreen Theatre Corp., told them of the arrival of the picture at the State Theatre.

First-Time Serialization Promoted on "Ambersons"

Reported as a first-time in the history of the local paper was the landing of a six day serialization on "Magnificent Ambersons" by Jack Flex of the Keith, in Syracuse. The first installment broke on the Sunday preceding opening day with art and credit lines. In addition, the paper also ran a contest in which readers were invited to submit essays on true life stories. Prizes consisted of War Bonds. Second contest was based on the naming of the 10 most prominent families connected with American history.

A special mailing campaign was put on with letters to all members of Movie Clubs, Photographic and Camera Clubs, etc., with a specially imprinted postcard going to a select list including women's clubs, professional men and women. For his street bally, Flex used a special giant-size book with six-sheets mounted on both sides which was sent on a tour of the city. Window and counter displays were promoted as were cooperative ads, while the public library system came through with a display of scene stills and cards in all branches together with an assortment of books written by Booth Tarkington.

"Mrs. Miniver" Search Staged in Chicago

A search for the local "Mrs. Miniver" was held recently in Chicago in connection with that picture's opening at the Apollo Theatre. Through a tieup with the Daily Times, readers were invited to submit names of women who, by their example of quiet fortitude and earnest striving in various activities, are helping the nation in the current struggle.

The winner and two runners-up received prizes of war bonds at presentation ceremonies on the stage, the next 100 best letters naming candidates receiving guest tickets to the show.

Teschner Uses Teaser Cards

Thousands of cards reading "'Rubber Racketeers' are watching your tires" plus playdates, were inserted in car windows throughout New Haven by Ted Teschner, manager of the Bijou, for the engagement of "Rubber Racketeers."

Drissel Cracks Norfolk Paper for "Mrs. Miniver"

Norfolk, Virginia, is one of those cities where newspapers never give any publicity to theatres. The papers charge the theatres the commercial rate for advertising, though. When "Mrs. Miniver" came to town, Roscoe Drissel, manager of Loew's Theatre, determined to crack that situation—and he did.

Although the Ledger-Dispatch seldom runs a review of a motion picture these days, it is moved to depart from its self-imposed rule by the rare quality and dignity of 'Mrs. Miniver'". That was the lead on a two-column story.

Next day came an editorial with this lead. "Because we are at war and thus are suspending for a period a number of rules or habits, and because this newspaper is not convinced that all our people fully realize how much we are at war, we are departing from custom and saying something about a motion picture while it is on view in Norfolk. The picture is "Mrs. Miniver." It is being shown at Loew's State.

Woman Jury for "Moontide"

One hundred volunteer War Bond and Stamp salesladies attended a preview of "Moontide" at the invitation of Ralph Martz, Century Theatre, Rochester, Manager. Twelve of the ladies formed a jury to pass the verdict on Gabin's charm to other ladies.

Callow's Blind Date Party

Fifty gobs and fifty socialites of the Philadelphia Navy League were the guests at the "blind date" party arranged by Everett Callow for the Boyd Theatre engagement of "This Above All."

Morning Matinee for Kids

Special morning matinee for the kids who belong to the Rochester Redwings' Knothole Club was set by Manager Ralph Martz to start the campaign for "It Happened in Flatbush." Club has 8,000 members and its own band.

Hosts "Women from West Point"

Invited as guests of the RKO Keith's in Dayton for the premiere of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" were ten ladies from West Point. They were the wives and mothers of famous West Pointers who were guests of Manager William Clark.

JUNIOR SHOWMEN

JOHN C. EBERSBERGER, on Thursday, August 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ebersberger. The proud father is manager of the Sheboygan Theatre, in Sheboygan, Wis.

1,000 Postal Cards, Four-Day Contest Aid Selling of "Reap"

A thousand postal cards, printed locally, were mailed to people in towns within a radius of 50 miles by Harry Stearn and Ken Carter, prior to the engagement of "Reap the Wild Wind" at the Manring Theatre, Middlesboro, Kentucky. They also planted a four-day contest in the local newspaper without cost to the theatre. The three-column coloring contest mentioned in the press book was planted in the weekly paper also without cost. Banners were placed on the trucks of the Royal Crown Cola Company, tying in with the fact that the product is endorsed by Paulette Goddard. A giant flag, 12 feet by 15, was flown from the theatre roof, before and during the engagement.

Easson Constructs Animated Setpiece

To sell his current and forthcoming attractions at the Oakwood Theatre, in Toronto, A. Easson has built a giant easel on which is painted a lighthouse with a beacon from the top of which this copy emerges in type: "Always a mariner's guide to safety. Let it be your guide to the best in entertainment at the Oakwood." At the base are cards with title cards. The light tracts the anticipated attention.

Party for Stamp Salesmen

Scotty Keller, manager of the Earle Theatre, Allentown, Pa., arranged a special preview of "Eagle Squadron" for war stamp salesmen. Some 500 newsboys of the local newspapers who have sold over 1,000,000 War Saving Stamps to their customers were admitted to the screening. In addition, Keller promoted co-operative ads in the newspapers with a half a dozen merchants.

Ballyhoo Man Walks Across Stage Like a Trailer

In advance of "Ball of Fire," Syd Poppay, manager of Warners' Majestic Theatre, Gettysburg, Pa., had a young man attired in Gary Cooper make-up parading through busy intersections of the city. After his trek through town, he was seen in the lobby and at the break of the show, walked across the stage to remind folks that "Ball of Fire" was due soon at the theatre.

He tied in with a local bank to link war bond sales with "Ship Ahoy." A one-sheet was placed in the lobby of the bank calling attention to the bond buying campaign and the picture. Music and record displays at local stores also helped.

Swearing In Ceremonies Sells "Tripoli" Date

Locating nine local boys who were being inducted into the army, Grattan Johnston at the Ohio Theatre, in Mansfield, Ohio, arranged for special Swearing In ceremonies to take place on his stage in connection with his opening of "Shores to Tripoli." In addition to his newspaper campaign, Grattan used bumper strips on a taxi fleet, supplied the radio station with a free transcription which was run three times a day one week in advance. The entire staff of ushers wore Marine caps one week ahead, while a recruiting office was set up in the lobby.

OBITUARIES

Phillips Holmes Dies in Crash

Phillips Holmes, stage and screen star, who joined the Royal Canadian Air Force last December, was killed August 13th in a collision of two planes near Armstrong, Ontario, according to word received by his father, Taylor Holmes, character actor. He was 33.

Five other airmen were killed in the collision. The planes, on their way from Winnipeg to Ottawa, had stopped at the Armstrong airport and collided immediately after taking off. Mr. Holmes, an able flier, had finished his ground school work and had been stationed at Regina, Saskatchewan.

Surviving, besides his father, are his mother, Mrs. Edna Phillips Holmes; a sister, Miss Madeline Holmes, and a brother, Pilot Officer Ralph D. Holmes, of the RCAF, husband of Libby Holman, radio and stage singer.

Mr. Holmes began his film career about 1928 and in the next five years was known to thousands. He appeared in such pictures as "His Private Life," "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," "Pointed Heels," "Only the Brave," "An American Tragedy" and in "Nana" with Anna Sten.

Jacob Lavene, Theatre Manager, Dead

Jacob C. Lavene, manager of the Academy theatre, Buffalo, until two and a half years ago, died August 16th. Mr. Lavene, former national director of the Variety Clubs of America, began his career by organizing stock companies and film tent shows with which he toured the United States and Canada.

Going to Buffalo about 25 years ago. Mr. Lavene was first associated with the old Garden and Gayety theatres, managing the latter for about five years. To the Academy he brought burlesque and later subsequent run motion pictures.

An honorary life member of the Buffalo Variety Club and three times its president, Mr. Lavene served for three years as national director of the Variety Clubs of America.

Russell Phelps Dies on Coast

Russell Phelps, 51, screen publicist, died August 14th at Sawtelle Veterans Hospital in Hollywood. Mr. Phelps was born at Prairie du Chien, Wis. He was a newspaper reporter and editor in Minneapolis, San Francisco and other cities before going to Hollywood. He did publicity work for United Artists producers from 1925 to 1938. He has also been associated with Twentieth Century-Fox and Fox West Coast.

Ollie Edwards

Ollie Edwards, who became manager of the Poli theatre, New Haven, under the old Poli management in 1915, and stayed there until 1929, died at his home in Long Meadow, Conn., August 13th. He was 50 years old.

William P. Meade, 73, first manager of the Richmond theatre in North Adams, Mass., and in recent years advertising manager of the North Adams Transcript, died August 13th.

Mrs. Sara Silver

Mrs. Sara Silver, 79, mother of M. A. Silver, zone manager of Warner Theatres in the Pittsburgh area, died at her home in Chelsea, Mass., August 12th.

Deane Heads Foreign Relations Service

Albert Deane this week became editor of the motion picture industry International Film Relations Committee feature service. Mr. Deane, head of Paramount foreign department publicity, succeeds David Blum, under the Committee's rotation system.

The Committee met last week. Fortunat Baronat of Universal and John Agell of Columbia reported progress on a new radio project, in cooperation with the radio section of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

The radio project will be in addition to the Committee's regular weekly short wave broadcasts, over the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System facilities. These are in their fourth year. The Committee will meet again on September 14th.

Ayres "Good Soldier", Superiors Comment

Lew Ayres, former motion picture star, briefly a conscientious objector, and now a private in the Army's Medical Corps, at Abilene, Texas, is a "good soldier," his superiors announced publicly last week.

Brigadier General Roy C. Heflebower, commander of the Medical Corps replacement training center, at Camp Barkeley, Abilene, said of Mr. Ayres: "I am confident he will render valuable service before his Army career ends. I wish I had a whole battalion of men just like him."

Meanwhile, Republic's western star, Gene Autry, this week reported to the Army air base at Santa Ana, Cal., for basic training. With more than 200 hours in the air as a civilian flier, he enlisted Aug. 1st, and was rated a technical sergeant.

Clark Gable, MGM star, was in Miami Beach Army Air Force school this week, on the first leg of a career expected to make him an officer. With Mr. Gable, and also a private, was Andrew J. McIntyre, Hollywood cameraman, a close friend who enlisted with him.

Freedman, Gourfain To Stage Musical

Harry A. Gourfain and Zac Freedman have formed a producing company, and have scheduled "Green as Grass" as the first production. The musical revue will open in Bridgeport, Conn., the week of September 20th, with a cast recruited from summer hotels. George Jessel will stage the production. The producers plan to bring the show to Broadway after the Bridgeport opening, they said.

IN THE COURTS

Seek Pre-Trial Examination

Examination before trial of Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president of Loew's, Inc., William F. Rodgers, general sales manager; Jack Bone, manager of the distribution department; A. W. Smith, Jr., formerly an RKO sales executive, and Walter V. Derhan, assistant treasurer, was asked this week in New York supreme court by the Signal Theatre Corporation and Copark Theatres, Inc., in their anti-trust suit against the eight major companies and Republic Pictures, Inc.

The plaintiffs, as operators of the Fortway, Park and Coliseum theatres in Brooklyn, charge the defendants and Loew's and RKO in particular with setting up a monopoly in Brooklyn with a resultant deprivation of product. The suit seeks unstated triple damages and an injunction to restrain the alleged conspiracy.

Gell Loses Plea for Summary Judgment

Application of William Gell for summary judgment in his favor was denied last week by Federal Judge William Bondy in the $225,000 damage suit of Arthur Levey pending against Mr. Gell, Pathe Pictures, Ltd., Monogram Pictures Corporation and W. Ray Johnston. Mr. Levey is seeking five per cent commissions for allegedly acting as agent in a deal made in 1937 which gave Pathe exclusive distribution rights to Monogram pictures in Great Britain.

Mr. Gell had asked for the dismissal, claiming that he had acted in behalf of his company and was not responsible personally. The court cited a conspiracy charge made by Mr. Levey and said it was sufficient to compel Mr. Gell to fight the suit. An application of Pathe to dismiss the action on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter as a British company, was referred to a special master for hearings.

Columbia Files Suit Against Two Cities

Columbia Pictures has entered an action in London against Two Cities Film Company to enforce its claim to the next five films to be produced by Two Cities, on which Columbia claims to have an option.

Writs already have been issued and a speedy hearing of the action has been ordered in court.

Sonja Henie Appeals

Sonja Henie has filed a notice of appeal in New York from a judgment of $77,658, obtained against her by Dennis Scanlan, promoter, on July 3d. Mr. Scanlan based his action for the judgment on an oral agreement he claims to have made with Miss Henie in France in 1936.

Vallee Suit Dismissed

Worth W. Trammell, circuit court judge in Miami, Fla., has dismissed a $10,000 damage suit against Rudy Vallee under a Florida statute providing for such procedure when the plaintiff does not follow up his original action within three years. The suit arose from the claim that Mr. Vallee struck Dillard Rodney Borden, 18, a busboy, at the Royal Palm Club, February 4, 1939.

Drops Plagiarism Action

The dismissal of a $250,000 plagiarism suit brought against Walter Wanger, producer, by George Brandt, screen writer, over "Foreign Correspondent" was recorded in superior court in Los Angeles this week.

Study in Psychiatry

Showmen who inform their customers that this picture gives Bette Davis opportunity to display her versatility to the utmost in a story that they're not going to forget will have done her followers a service. The picture they will see is in some respects a departure from her style and in all respects a document to fascinate them.

At core a study in psychiatry, with Miss Davis portraying the patient most of the way and the healer later on, the narrative is unfolded with a clarity, coherence and command of interest which few pictures of its type have achieved.

Miss Davis enters the story as the daughter of a Boston socialite who resented her prior to birth and has dominated her since. A psychiatrist leads the girl out of her confusion and sends her on a cruise alone. She meets an unhappy husband, father of another unwanted child, and they fall in love, spend a few days together in South America and separate, presumably forever.

Back home the girl resists her mother's efforts to regain domination of her but is thrown back into mental difficulty when her mother dies during an altercation. She returns to the psychiatrist's sanitarium and is attracted to an unhappy child which turns out to be the daughter of her shipboard sweetheart. She befriends the child, becomes the psychiatrist's assistant, finding happiness finally in dedicating her life to the child's upbringing in platonic collaboration with its father.

In portraying the changes of personality wrought by the psychiatrist and by experience Miss Davis surpasses most of her previous performances.

Hal B. Wallis' production is of the finest, from selection of material to final details of execution, and Irving Rapper's direction is without flaw. Casey Robinson's screenplay from the novel by Olive Higgins Prouty tops his recent works. It is a subject primarily for grownups.

Across the Pacific

(Warner Bros., 1942-43)

Melodrama With a Punch

Humphrey Bogart, Sydney Greenstreet, Mary Astor and John Huston, director, who struck a note of melodrama in "The Maltese Falcon" which echoed throughout the trade, collaborate here in an enterprise designed to do about the same for showmen and their customers.

Their subject this time is Robert Carson's Saturday Evening Post serial concerning the thwarting of a plot to blow up the Panama Canal simultaneously with the attack on Pearl Harbor, and the presentation of the material achieves a realism suggesting that just such a plot may have existed and may have been thwarted in the manner shown.

Bogart plays, in Richard Macaulay's screenplay, a U. S. Captain of Artillery who is court martialled and dishonorably discharged from the Army at the outset of the story. He goes to Canada to enlist, is turned down on account of his American record, then boards ship for the Orient with declared intent to offer his services to the Chinese or any nation that will buy them. Shortly after this the audience is informed that he is secretly serving the Army Intelligence.

Aboard ship he meets a girl (Mary Astor) whom he suspects of sinister purpose and a man (Greenstreet) openly sympathetic to the Japanese philosophy and interest. The man ultimately reveals himself as a traitor in Japanese service and employs the discharged officer to obtain information which will facilitate the bombing of the Canal. From this point on the story moves swiftly through surprises, captures, escapes, battles and thrills to an ending agreeable to everybody but Hirohito.

Produced by Jerry Wald and Jack Saper, the picture is packed with interest, sticks to plausibility and delivers a punch.

Call of the Canyon

(Republic)

Western

This is one of the best Gene Autry has made, which is by way of saying that it is a very good picture. Listed as a special by Republic, the production shows the extra effort and attention given it and profits thereby. It has the usual western ingredients, plus comedy and song.

The musical portion of the picture is especially good. Gene sings "Boots and Saddles" and the title song "Call of the Canyon" to good advantage. The latter tune is a favorite and is fast becoming a western classic. The Sons of the Pioneers also contribute to the musical portion of the picture. Other songs are "When It's Chilly Down in Chile," "Somebody Else Is Taking My Place" and "Montana Skies."

The comedy angle is taken care of by that perennial, Smiley Burnette, abetted this time by a smaller prototype, Joe Strauch, Jr. Poor Joe loses the annual pie eating contest when Smiley puts him on a diet and shrinks the boy's stomach. Other players are Ruth Terry, for romance; Thurston Hall, for big business man returning to the West of his youthhood; Cliff Nazarro, for double talk; Dorothea Kent, also for comedy, and Edmund MacDonald, the villain of the piece.

The purely western part of the story is concerned with a fight between the cattlemen, led by Autry, and a racketeering purchasing agent of a large packing company. The cattlemen refuse to sell their cattle to the price cutting purchasing agent and trail herd their stock across country. This leads to violence and a death before the criminals are caught. The other part of the plot has to do with Miss Terry, who herds her radio troupe to the Autry ranch in an effort to sell a western radio program to the big meat packer.

Harry Grey was associate producer and Joseph Santley directed.

Previewed in the Republic home office projection room, New York. The picture was well received. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Desperate Journey

(Warner Bros., 1942-43)

Three Musketeers 1942

Errol Flynn, Ronald Reagan and associates, whose names make for sale of tickets, engage here in a 1942 treatment of the three musketeers idea packed with action, shorn of romance and utilizing the third Reich for terrain. The handling of the material suggests the technique employed for serials and the picture boils down to an enterprise in the field of wish fulfillment for benefit of the Flynn fans in general and the adolescents among them in particular.

The screenplay by Arthur T. Horman opens with the sending of a British bomber over Germany. It accomplishes its mission, but crashes in that country, killing all but five of its crew. These are captured, escape, then make their way through a series of adventures toward Holland, where they seize a British plane from the Nazis and fly back to England with military information acquired.

The exploits in Germany include destruction of an incendiary bomb factory, stealing a ride in Goering's private railway car, escapes over rooftops and otherwise from the military and the Gestapo, and the one-punch knocking out of scores upon scores of German soldiers, sentries and so forth. Two of the five are killed in the course of the adventuring.

Produced by Hal Wallis and directed by Raoul Walsh, the picture has speed, expense and a world of action, plus a list of names that recommend themselves as marquee copy. Its weakness as entertainment save for the devotees of fisticuffs seems to stem from its depictment of the Nazis as dullards, bunglers and softies.

Previewed at Warners' Beverly Hills theatre to an unnotified mid-week audience which applauded the main title and laughed at some of the incidental comedy, cheered some of the one-punch knockouts, but manifested no excitement about the experience. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—W. R. W.

Phantom Killer

(Monogram)

Crime Melodrama

One of the best crime melodramas to come from Monogram for some time, "Phantom Killer" is a concisely made, wallop-packing piece of cinema entertainment. It contains more audience values than many of the pictures in its category from the major companies.

A deaf-mute civic leader is accused by an assistant district attorney of a murder. The civic leader is freed of the charge, but the prosecutor, with the aid of two detectives, follows his trail. They expose a series of cold blooded killings with help from a newspaper woman with whom the prosecutor is in love.

Dick Purcell as the prosecutor and Joan Woodbury as the girl head a competent cast consisting of John Hamilton, Warren Hymer, Mantan Moreland, J. Farrell MacDonald, Gayne Whitman, Kenneth Harlan, George Lewis, Karl Hackett, Isabel Lamal, Robert Carson, Frank Ellis and Harry Depp.

Direction by William Beaudine is tops and the screenplay by Karl Brown contains excellent dialogue, although the explanation for the killings may seen improbable. A. W. Hackel, the producer, imparted to the mounting a quality that belies its budget.

Secret Enemies

(Warner Bros., 1942-43)

Spy Melodrama

When his best friend, an FBI agent, is murdered by poison gas in a hotel room to which he took him, a young attorney joins the FBI and tracks down a ring of German spies in New York City. That is the story of "Secret Enemies," a double bill item. The new agent manages with the help of others to round up the ring, which uses a hotel owner, whose wife is in Germany, as a "front."

Craig Stevens, Faye Emerson, John Ridgely, Charles Lang, Robert Warwick, Frank Reicher head the cast.

The screenplay by Raymond L. Schrock telegraphs the succeeding events. Ben Stoloff was the director.

Billy the Kid's Smoking Guns

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Western

Another in the series of "Billy the Kid" westerns, this tale is as incredible as most. Buster Crabbe, who was a good swimmer, seems a bit out of place on horseback. As Billy the Kid he roams the countryside with two pals but no baggage, like a Rocky Mountain Robin Hood.

This time the tale is of a cattlemen's association, run by the town doctor, who allows the ranchers to run up credit to such an extent that they cannot meet the payments. He uses a simple device to effect this: he merely quadruples the price of each article. In any event, it seems that the main idea is to obtain control of the ranches. Since it is simpler to kill the ranchers than cheat them out of their property, he resorts to the former method occasionally, which brings him and his gang up against Billy the Kid.

The usual ingredients of the western are all present to some degree. Buster Crabbe, Al St. John and Dave O'Brien are the three exponents of justice; the villains are represented by Milton Kibbee, John Merten, Ted Adams and others. Sherman Scott directed from an original screenplay by George Milton.

Seen at the New York theatre where the salesmen at the morning show received the picture without comment. Reviewer's Rating: Mediocre.—ROBERT WILE.

Busses Roar

(Warner Bros., 1942-43)

Sabotage Melodrama

Warners' "Busses Roar" is a melodrama dealing with the attempts of a Jap spy ring to plant a time bomb on a bus going through a military zone in order that the resultant fire might guide the shells of a submarine off the California coast to their oil field target. Slow to start, the picture goes through to an action-packed climax, then fades as a Marine sergeant, the hero of the story, delivers some patriotic speeches.

Richard Travis, Julie Bishop, Charles Drake, Eleanor Parker and Elisabeth Fraser have the leads in the film, apparently made for the lower half of double bills.

All the standard ingredients of such stories are used—a murder, a counter-espionage agent posing as a panhandler, fights and the chase. D. Ross Lederman directed from a script by George R. Bilson and Anthony Coldeway, who adapted the latter's original story.

Seen at a trade press showing at the studio. Review's Rating: Fair—V. K.

HITLER'S PLAN (UA)

World in Action (No. 7)

Much has been written about the Nazi conquests as they progress but the overall plan of Hitler for world domination is little known to the mass of the people. Little is known, for instance, by the general public of Geopolitics, the Military Control of Space. Here in the latest release of the World in Action series is a clear picture of what geopolitics means to the Nazis and especially to Dr. Karl E. Haushofer, the retiring 73-year-old geography professor, who has been described as the master planner of Nazi world conquest. Utilizing maps and mixing them with factual scenes scattered over Europe, Asia and Africa, the picture presents its case with clarity. A good deal of the footage is of soldiers marching, fighting and convoying material of war. Stuart Legg edited the subject for the National Film Board of Canada. It is being distributed in this country by United Artists.—P. C. M., JR.

MOVIE QUIZ, Nos. 1 and 2

(Movie Quiz Distributing Co., Ltd.)

A novel audience participation stunt is offered in "Movie Quiz," a new series of short subjects being produced and distributed by Movie Quiz Distribution Co., Ltd., headed by R. U. McIntosh. Combining the most popular features of the radio quiz programs, each subject poses a series of eight questions, with the audience invited by narrator Grant Withers to answer them via notched cards distributed at the box office.

The questions vary, as does the material shown on the screen. Stock, travelogue, newsreel or shots taken especially for the reels give the pictorial backgrounds of the questions asked. Also inserted in the dialogue is a patriotic appeal to buy War Stamps and Bonds. In the two reels shown at a press preview in Hollywood, the queries ranged from "are the elephant's tusks his only teeth?" to "how many brigades constitute a division?"

Press reaction at the showing was highly enthusiastic, despite the fact that the newspapermen's showings were lower than those of the other guests.—V. K.

DeMille, Betty Rhodes, Marjorie Reynolds, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard, Fred MacMurray, Veronica Lake, Zorina, Rochester, Katherine Dunham, Alan Ladd, Lynn Overman, most of them portraying themselves.

SYNOPSIS

This is a tale about the gateman at the Paramount studio, the switchboard operator, sundry sailors and soldiers who want to see the wheels go around, and about the production of pictures and the staging of wartime entertainments by all and sundry among the Paramount employees, including all the stars on the lot and quite a number of the executives. It's full of music, dance routines, humour and general entertainment, a sort of omnibus item compounded for, as and of the times.

GIRL TROUBLE (20th Century-Fox)

Inter-American Comedy

PRODUCER: Robert Bassler. Directed by Harold Schuster.

PLAYERS: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett, Billie Burke, Alan Dinehart, Frank Craven, Helen Fortescue Reynolds.

SYNOPSIS

Don Ameche plays in this comedy a young South American sent to New York on a trade mission and confronted there with such an array of femininity, attracted by stories of his great wealth, that he forgets business and speedily finds himself involved in various conflicting affairs of the heart. He meets the right girl in time, however, and she recalls to him his duty in the matter of the trade mission, which he thereupon attends to before the wedding.

FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS (Paramount)

Drama

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: Sam Wood.

PLAYERS: Gary Cooper, Vera Zorina, Katina Paxinou, Akim Tamiroff, Mikhail Rasumny, Joseph Calleia, Eduardo Ciannelli, Fortunio Bonanova, Vladimir Sokoloff, Alexander Granach, Duncan Renaldo.

SYNOPSIS

This is Ernest Hemingway's widely discussed best selling novel brought to the screen in Technicolor. It is the story primarily of an American, Robert Jordan, played by Cooper, who as a member of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, fought in the Spanish Civil War on the side of the Loyalists. It deals with his adventures with a little band of guerilla fighters headed by a woman, and with his romance with a young girl who joins the band after the Rebels despoiled her village. It will be one of Paramount's most expensive pictures. No disclosure has been made whether the ending of the book, in which the band and Jordan are wiped out, will be adhered to in the script.

ONCE UPON A HONEYMOON (RKO Radio)

Wartime Comedy-Drama

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: Leo McCarey.
PLAYERS: Ginger Rogers, Cary Grant, George Sanders, Walter Slezak.

SYNOPSIS

The things that happened to Vienna, Warsaw, to Paris and in Berlin in the days when the Nazis were overruning Europe furnish background of setting and circumstance for this tale of interruptions sustained in midromance by Cary Grant and Ginger Rogers. He portrays an American newspaper man, who becomes a radio correspondent as did William L. Shirer and others, and she plays an American dancer who has come to Vienna posing as a rich girl for the purpose of marrying a title plus money.

Now brought up to date from the period when Dr. A. Conan Doyle knew them so well, and playing their part in present emergencies, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson discover that their old enemy, Moriarity, has become a Nazi agent and is doing his best to steal a British bombsite for Hitler. They don't let that happen.

THE MAN IN THE TRUNK (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mystery

PRODUCER: Walter Morosco. Directed by Mal St. Clair.

PLAYERS: Lynn Roberts, George Holmes, Raymond Walburn.

SYNOPSIS

A novelty in the field of murder mystery, this melodrama presents the spirit of the victim in the role of detective. Returning after death, interested in finding out how it happened, he finds a young couple accused of his murder. Knowing them to be innocent, he unravels the mystery surrounding his murder and manages to establish the truth of the matter.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD (Republic)

Bucolic Melodrama

PRODUCER: Armand Schaefer. Directed by Frank McDonald.

PLAYERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Maris Wrixon, Robert Conway, Dick Purcell.

SYNOPSIS

The Weavers, holding political office in a small town, are met with the people's blasts because of the crime wave. Elviry gets an out of town gang to oust the local bad men, but the newcomers take over and engage in more crime. Finally, with the aid of a newspaper editor and the disclosure that the newcomers had violated a federal law, the town triumphs.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Romantic Comedy Plus Music

PRODUCER: William LeBaron. Directed by Irving Cummings.

PLAYERS: John Payne, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda, Harry James and Orchestra, Edward Everett Horton, Charlotte Greenwood, Cesar Romero.

SYNOPSIS

Designed primarily for the performance of musical numbers by the players listed above, with interpolations of comedy by the comedians also listed, this undertaking centers about the coming of a South American to a resort in the Rockies where he finds romance.

NO TIME FOR LOVE (Paramount)

Sophisticated Comedy

PRODUCER: Fred Kohlmar. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.

PLAYERS: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Oscar Levant.

SYNOPSIS

The time is the present and the place is New York. Miss Colbert plays a photographer for a national magazine (which ought to get the picture some publicity) and MacMurray plays a tunnel digger at work on a tube under the Hudson River. She goes there to photograph him, and what happens from there on is about what always happens to Fred MacMurray.

YOU'RE A SAP, MR. JAP (Par.)

*Popeye Cartoon (E*1-11)

Popeye, the one-man navy in this, shows that spinach has it all over rice as a fighting food. Popeye in his Navy patrol boat sights a Japanese fishing boat and captures it. The Jap fisherman turns out to be an Imperial Navy officer and the fishing boat is sitting atop a battleship. The battleship comes to the surface and blasts Popeye's boat to the bottom. Popeye swallows his spinach and in a series of fast action gags he spikes the guns of the battleship and kicks the crew into the ocean.

CRATER CITY (Univ.)

Variety View (6365)

In peacetime rarely more than two boats a month arrive at the "treasure island" of Saba in the Leeward Islands, Dutch West Indies, on the fringe of the Panama Canal Zone. Saba doesn't worry about U-Boats since the water is so shallow that a sub couldn't operate near enough to do harm. Bottom City is located in the bottom of the crater of an old volcano. Saba is so mountainous that there is not a wagon, carriage or auto on the whole island. There are about five girls to every man on the island.

700 Pages of up-to-the-minute data that every projectionist needs!

THE REVISED BLUEBOOK MOST ADVANCED MANUAL ON MODERN SOUND REPRODUCTION AND PROJECTION

The Bluebook does a threefold job: (1) It gives a detailed description of the construction, wiring and functioning of every piece of sound and projection apparatus used in a modern projection room. (2) It gives careful instructions on the operation and maintenance of this equipment. (3) It is a quick and effective trouble-shooter with sound trouble-shooting charts that enable the projectionist to spot and repair sudden breakdowns both in the projection and sound apparatus. The new edition is handy to keep and handy to use, with an alphabetical index system for quick, easy reference.

You will find the revised Bluebook the most complete treatise of its kind and a sure solution to every projection problem.

SECTION TWO

"NO PRIORITY NEEDED!"

U. S. War Production Board Rules

YOUR LAST CHANCE to Air-Condition Your Theatre !!

Production has been stopped for the duration
But S. O. S. has stock and can ship AT ONCE!

HERE'S WHAT "COOLA-WEATHER"* WILL DO!

1. Draw in 100% fresh outside air. 2. Clean out all dust, dirt, odors, smoke and pollen. 3. Cool this fresh, clean air to the proper comfort temperature, which is 70% of the difference between the wet bulb and dry bulb temperatures. 4. Circulate this conditioned air to all parts of room — evenly and without objectionable drafts.

S. O. S. "COOLA-WEATHER"* UNITS AVAILABLE IN SIZES TO FIT EVERY THEATRE

Model No.	C.F.M.	Height	Width	Depth	Water Re-circulated	Size of Motor	Shipping Weight	Net Price
A-524	3,500	40″	40″	48¼″	2 Gallons Per Minute	⅓ h.p.	430 lb.	$150.00
A-526	5,000	46½″	45″	55″		½ h.p.	550 lb.	220.00
A-527	8,500	55½″	55″	61″		1 h.p.	800 lb.	350.00
A-528	12,000	60″	60″	66″		1½ h.p.	925 lb.	450.00

"COOLA-WEATHER"* units can be made completely automatic by adding a Recirculating Pump and Motor Assembly; Float Valve and Galvanized stand with shield for motors; at a total cost $35.00.

Now the smallest theatre can afford evaporative cooling (washed air) at a small fraction of the cumbersome nozzle-type air washer.

YOU CAN ADD A "COOLA-WEATHER"* WASHED AIR COOLING CHAMBER TO YOUR PRESENT BLOWER AT SMALL COST

The "Coola-Weather"* chamber operates with any blower of proper capacity for the auditorium. Simply place it next to the blower intake, connect your water, and plug in.

The New Victory Carbons

Designed to Conserve Copper for War Needs

Winning this war is the first objective of every American. The will for Victory includes taking in stride whatever sacrifice or inconvenience may be occasioned by the demands of our war effort.

Government curtailment of copper necessitates reducing the thickness of copper coating on "National" copper coated high intensity projector carbons. This may result in a slightly longer spindle on the carbons, and in the case of the 7 mm — 6 mm combination, may result in some reduction in screen illumination, although there will still be sufficient light for satisfactory projection.

Fortunately, the culmination of research work on the 8 mm — 7 mm trim makes it possible to burn these new carbons, even with the thinner copper plating, and to obtain even more light with the same current formerly used (within limits of the new maximum). Savings as high as 30% in carbon consumption can be had for the same amount of light on the screen if the present light level is satisfactory. When using power sources designed for "Suprex" type lamps similar savings can be made, while retaining the same screen illumination as formerly, by shifting from 7 mm — 6 mm trims to the new 8 mm — 7 mm. To accomplish this may require enlarging present carbon holders, which can be done with little effort.

Operation at reduced arc current may also, in some instances, necessitate readjustment of the feed ratio of the projection lamps in order to maintain correct position of the carbons with a minimum of manual adjustment.

The trade-mark on these new Victory carbons is imprinted in white, instead of the familiar blue. Maximum allowable arc current is also stamped on each carbon. It is important that this current limitation be observed.

The words "National," "Suprex" and "Orotip" are trade-marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

Save the Copper

Most of the copper used for plating copper coated projector carbons drops to the floor of the lamp house when the carbons are burned. Continue to save these copper drippings and turn them over to an authorized scrap dealer or to such other agency as may be designated by our government.

MARKET NOTES

¶ News reports concerning equipment and materials, and those who make them

Adds Emergency Equipment

TWO NEW ITEMS have been added by the National Theatre Supply Company to its line of special equipment and supplies for wartime fire and blackout emergencies. One of the new devices is a "Fyremobile," designed to carry the necessary fire- and bomb-fighting equipment to various parts of the theatre. The other is a stirrup pump.

The "Fyremobile" is made largely of wood and is light in weight, so that any employe may easily wheel it swiftly where it is needed. The construction involves no critical materials, therefore it is obtainable without priority rating. It is painted in red enamel with gold and black trim. The overall length is 66 inches, the width 32 inches, the height 50 inches.

The stirrup pump that has been acquired for distribution in the theatre field is of heavy-gauge steel, has a double-action nozzle capable of throwing a stream of water 30 feet, or of spraying to a distance of 15 feet.

Want BRIGHTER Pictures?

REFLECTORS ARE MIGHTY IMPORTANT

● Since newly imposed war conditions and limitations (such as the necessity of reducing amperage), or modified type of carbons may affect your screen results, consider the importance of good reflectors.

The brilliancy of your projected pictures, regardless of the efficiency of all other equipment, is dependent directly upon the condition of the optical surface of the reflector in the lamphouse, since any light which reaches the screen must necessarily be reflected to the screen by this mirror!

All reflectors gradually deteriorate to a state where replacement cost becomes insignificant since a drop of only 10% in the reflective efficiency of your mirror results in a corresponding decrease in screen brilliancy, and represents a loss amounting to 10% of the cost of your current and carbons.

Genuine National Precision Reflectors are manufactured by projection equipment specialists and are available for replacement in all types and makes of arc lamps, and at a cost no greater than that of ordinary reflectors.

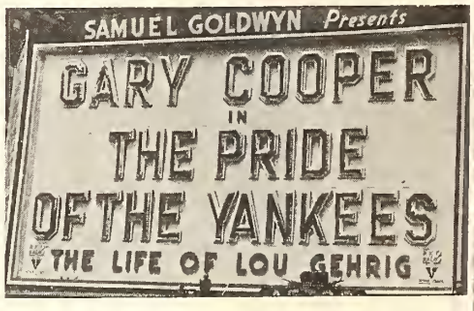
Wood Toilet Compartments

FOUR TYPES of toilet compartments normally made of steel by the Sanymetal Products Company, Cleveland, are now being made of wood, the manufacturer has announced. This is stated to be a war-time measure, and the use of steel will be resumed when metal becomes available.

The wood employed for each type is 7-ply Douglas fir plywood. The design and general construction is similar to those of the steel models.

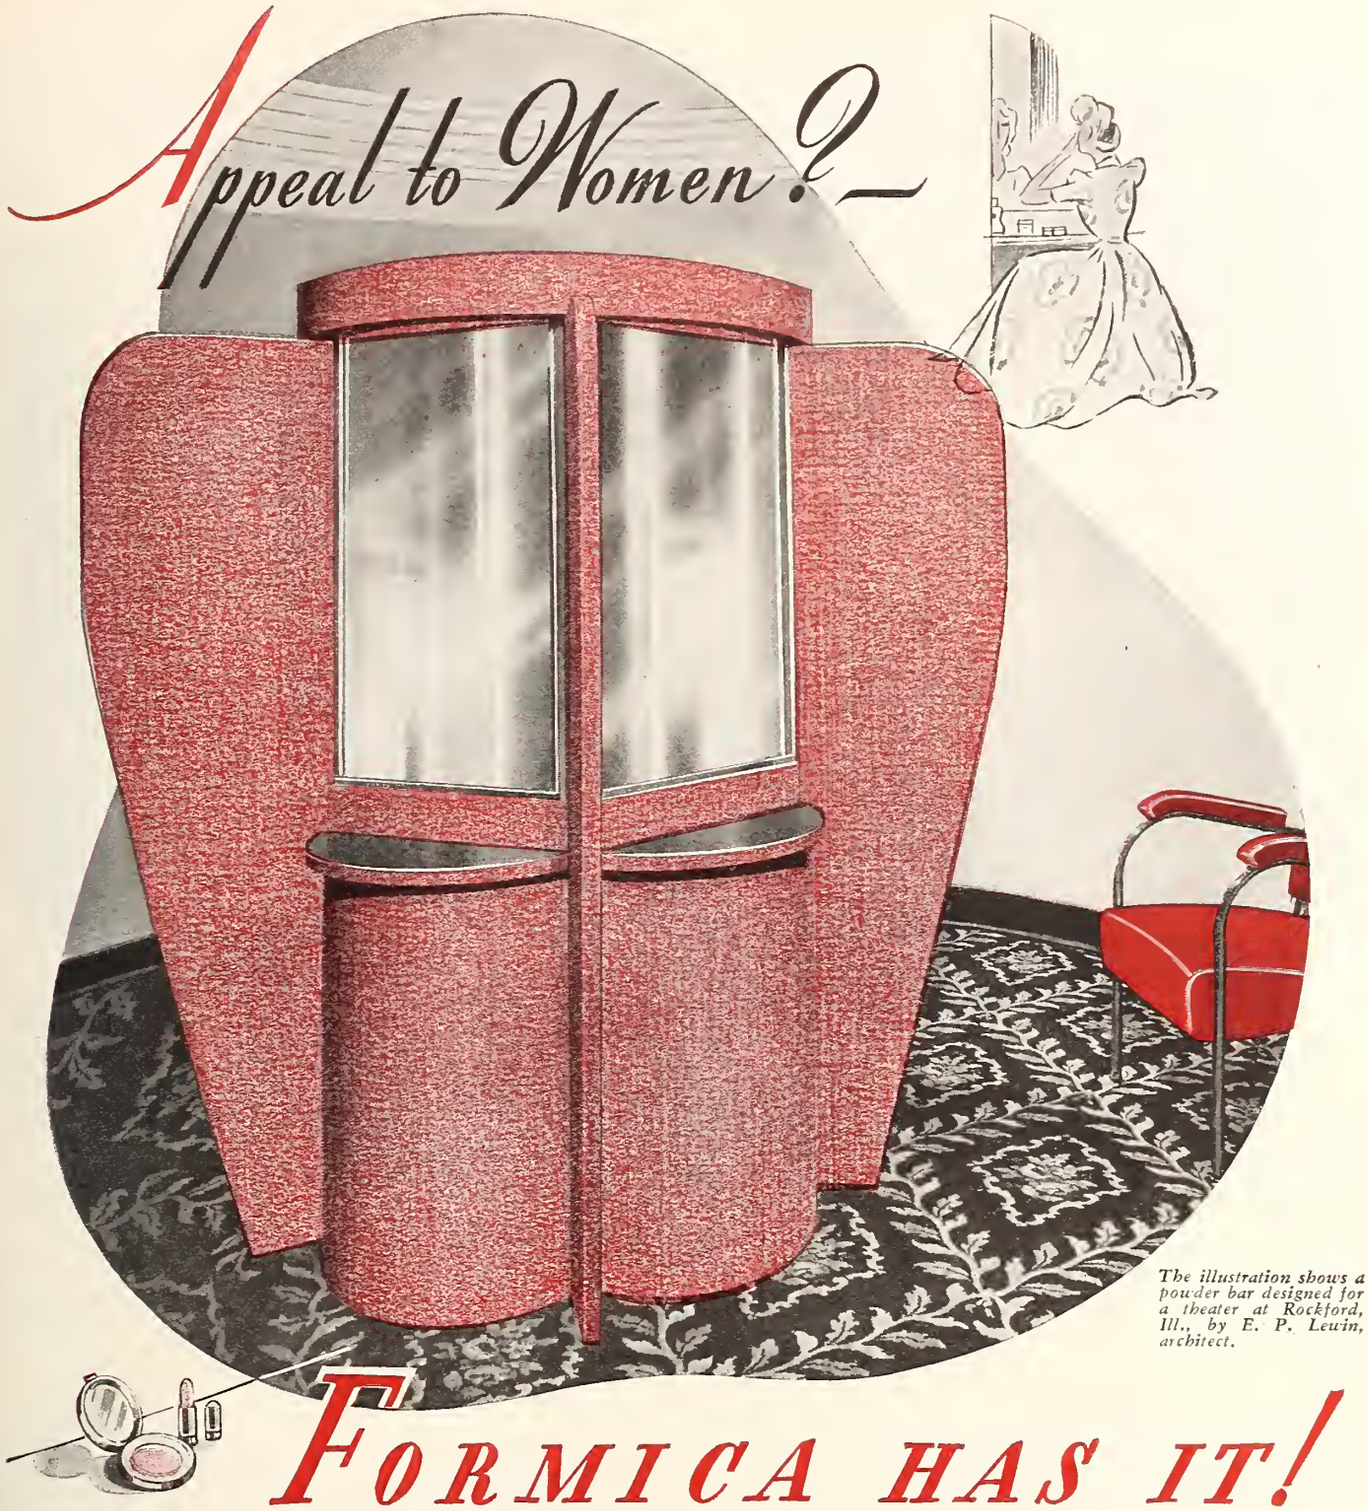
Cooling Unit Ban Lifted



THE FREEZING order on evaporative cooling equipment in stock has been lifted by the Government with respect to the smaller units not suited to Government requirements. The sale of all types of evaporative units had been restricted, under the required priority rating, to Government purchase.

Sales Office Removed

THE OFFICE of B. B. Buchanan, director of sales for the theatre division of the Kroehler Manufacturing Company, makers of retracting seat auditorium chairs, has been removed from Chicago to the company's factory at Naperville, Ill. Manufacture of theatre chairs has of course ceased as a result of the ban placed on this activity this summer, and the company is engaged in war goods production.



Chair Firm Executive Dies

HENRY B. MYERS, product manager of the theatre chair division of the American Seating Company, died recently in Grand Rapids, Mich., following a brief illness. He was 57 years old. He joined the American Seating Co. in 1912.

Appeal to Women?—

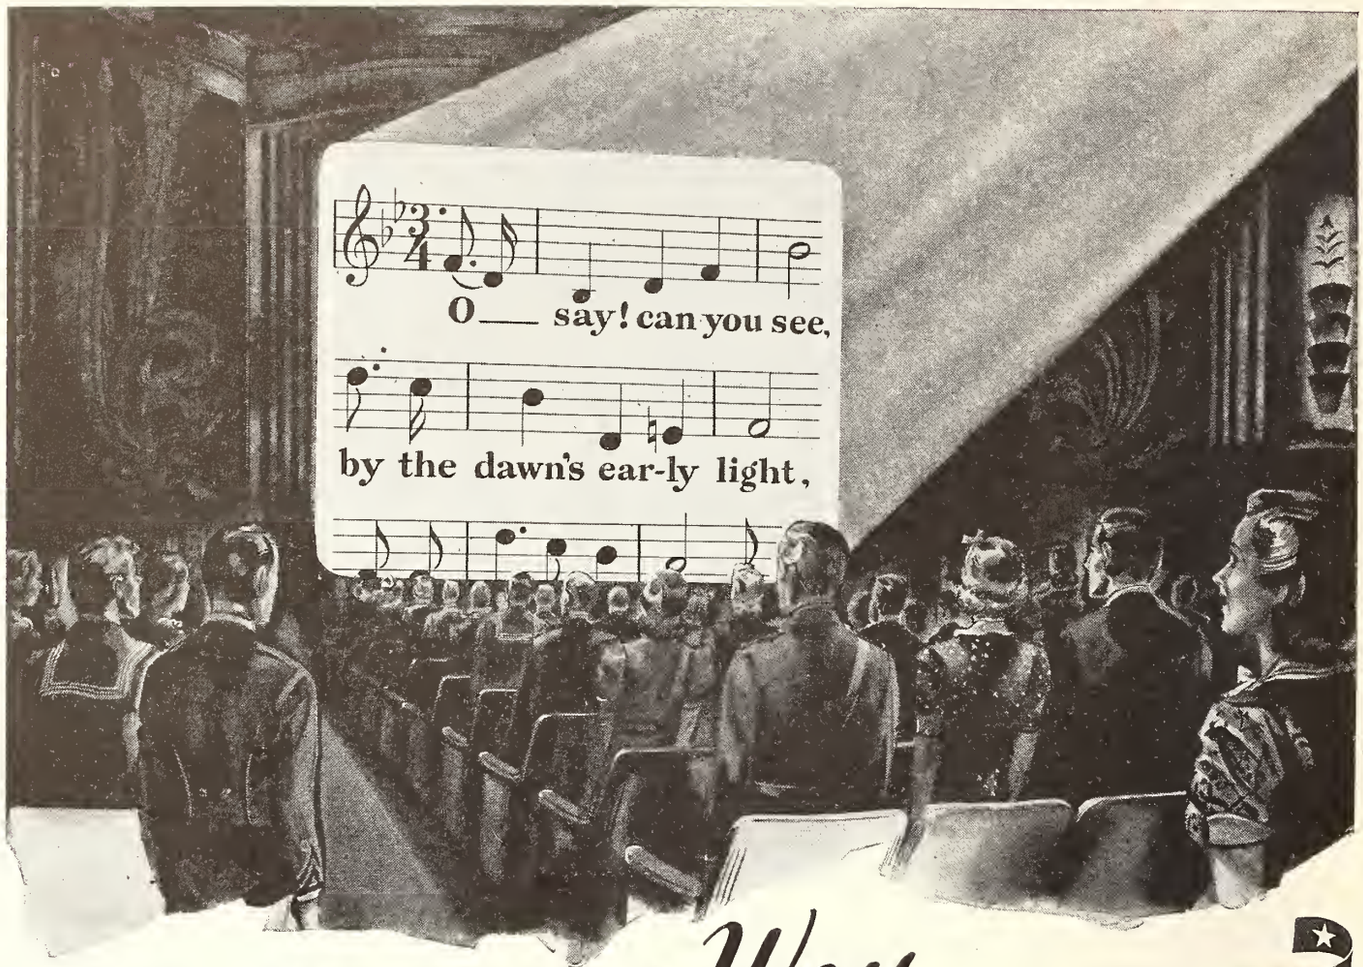
FORMICA HAS IT!



THE use, by leading designers, of Formica in cosmetic bars, powder bars, and the equipment of better beauty shops indicates their confidence that Formica has a strong appeal to women.

That appeal lies in the wide variety of colors, tints and patterns, which are deep and limpid—characteristic of plastics. In short here is a new and peculiarly modern beauty.

The smooth modern, plastic surface is non-absorbent and is not easily stained; it may be had in cigarette proof grade for horizontal surfaces. Cleaning and maintenance are simple to the last degree—usually consisting of nothing more than wiping with a moist cloth.

The American Way is the Better Way

FREE AMERICANS stand up and sing because they want to. Here in America a citizen's homage to his flag comes straight from his heart—freely and proudly!

Likewise, he comes into your theatre of his own free will. He'll leave when he wishes. And he'll come again if he likes what you offer.

Today, he's fighting a tough war to safeguard those precious privileges—and you're helping him. The relaxation you're providing is priceless in these days of wearisome work and worry. He needs to sit back and forget care for an hour or so in the comfortable seats you've provided.

You know of course, we are not making theatre seats now. Our duty, plain and urgent, is to build Tools for Victory—aircraft and armament parts of finely fashioned plywood and precision-machined metals—to build them The American Way, to help perpetuate The American Way of Life.

By service to America today, we can serve you all the better in the days of Peace to come.

Better Theatres

ISSUE OF AUGUST 22, 1942 VOLUME 148, NUMBER 8

The Seating Situation

THE MONTH of August saw the end of new auditorium seating. That is to say, the end of the kind of theatre chairs that have become standard—those which represent the developments of recent years, with metal back panels and seat pans, and of course cast-iron or steel standards, and all that the innovations in construction and styling that have been hailed in the last few years as definite advances in motion picture theatre chair design.

Because of this we publish in this issue a forthright discussion by John Sefing of the care that now must be exercised in the maintenance of seating, the reading of which should be done in anticipation of what condition our theatre seating may be in a year from now, or two years—or more, with the war still on, and restrictions on materials even more stringent, if indeed they can be.

As difficult as this situation may be, it does not mean that no replacements of any kind are possible, at least for the present. Previous references in these columns to the Government orders successively prohibiting manufacture and assembly of auditorium chairs have brought some assurances. An executive of one representative manufacturer states the current situation in this way:

"The impression should not be got that no new parts for chairs are available. That is not so. Most manufacturers have a stock of parts, and it would be a good idea for theatre operators to have a few extras on hand—seat cushions, covering materials and hardware (especially floor connecting type). Also, manufacturers have developed substitute materials.

"We manufacturers have some stock of fabrics on hand that can be bought now so that repairs will match, and now is the time to get these materials, for undoubtedly they will be difficult, if not impossible, to get.

"The so-called Victory chairs are at present available in limited quantities at reasonable prices, but the restrictions in the use of metal springs after November 1st will force us to use still more substitute materials, and it is doubtful that the substitutes will be able to provide comfort equal to that of the chairs that are now obtainable."

Condensed Film Idea

The proposal of E. I. Sopnable, 20th Century-Fox technician who has been prominent in the field of sound picture development, to reduce the amount of footage necessary per unit of frames so as to conserve film, was officially sprung just as these columns began their grind through the typewriter. These references to it aim only to report the reaction in New York projection circles. It is negative. Those best acquainted with the method suggest the possibility of impairment of the image due to the slowing up of the rate of projection, and also wonder to what extent the slower rate would increase heat on the film. That the longer period of rest would increase the illumination of the screen is doubted.

The cost of projector modification, the greater part of which would consist in reduction of the number of sprockets to allow for three instead of four holes per frame, is placed at $38 per projector for materials, and at $150 per theatre including labor.

MANUFACTURE OF STANDARD SEATING IS PROHIBITED . . . . BUT YOU CAN

Add to the Life of Your Present Auditorium Chairs

By JOHN J. SEFING

THE RESTRICTIONS that have been placed this summer on the manufacture of auditorium seating advise the strictest kind of maintenance of this vital element of theatre equipment. Only all-wood chairs (wood except for structural hardware) are now available, and beginning with November even these will not be obtainable with springs. Theatre management will therefore have to do many things to keep seating in acceptable condition that most exhibitors never bothered with before.

To freshen up the present end standards, only a good grade of lead paint should be applied. After the old paint or finish is thoroughly scraped off and the new paint is applied, they should be finished with a good grade of clear lacquer, to protect the paint. This lacquer will materially add to the life of the painted surfaces and it may well be applied to the arm rests and backs also.

UPHOLSTERY REPAIR

Where the chairs are of "soft" material, such as mohair, corduroy, etc., and they look shabby or torn, either comparable fabric or simulated leather can be easily purchased at this time and installed. However, fastening fabric is an upholsterer's job and should not be attempted by the inexperienced if a proper and long-lasting job is desired.

Another alternative when the upholstery covering is badly worn is to install slipcovers. Slipcovers of suitable material are readily available at this time and can be had in various colors. A good way is to buy the slipcovers in two different solid colors and alternate them on the chairs—that is, place each color on every other chair. It must be kept in mind, however, that such covers should be taken off and cleaned at least twice a week; if left on longer, vermin is likely to breed underneath.

REPAIRING

If the present chairs have wood veneer backs or bottoms and the panels are split or splintered, they can be thoroughly cleaned underneath at these breaks and a good grade of wood glue should then be used for cementing.

Another method of repairing plywood backs (and some chair manufacturers prefer it) is to remove the torn or split plywood, peal it from the panel, sandpaper the rough edge as smooth as possible and stain it in the color to match the rest of the panel, finally lacquering over the repaired section.

Plywood backs that show the least signs of breaking or peeling should be glued together to avoid complete breaks later on.

METAL PANEL REPAIR

When the backs or bottoms are of metal, any loose or burred parts should be remedied at once, as this protruding metal can cause serious trouble if left unattended to. All burred spots should be smoothed off with a fine file and any loose sections refastened with proper wood screws. When the backs have a metal finishing strip at the top and this strip is in such condition that further fastening is impossible, it should be ripped off entirely and a strip of fabric matching the finish of the back be installed.

A relatively common cause of patron complaint is a bad seat bottom. Any loose panel or protruding screw should be remedied immediately by installing new screws, or new paneling if necessary. If paneling material is not readily obtainable, the faulty panel can be taken off some seats in a spot where patrons very seldom sit. It is better to have a smaller capacity all of good seats than to have the maximum capacity with a number of chairs in a bad condition. Moreover, other parts from discarded chairs, taken from least desirable seating areas, can be employed for repairing chairs that are in use.

LOOSE STANDARDS

Make sure that all bolts or screws that hold the chair in place to the floor are fastened solidly. Loose chair standards not only endanger the well-being of patrons, but also cause breakage of the standard itself and misalignment of the seat hinges, and even cause the chair to tear loose from the floor. And at this time when almost everything is hard to obtain, such precautions will more than pay for themselves.

AISLE LIGHT WIRING

Another important item to check thoroughly at this time is the aisle light wiring and its attachment to the chairs. Faulty aisle light wiring can be a serious hazard to the patron and may even cause a destructive fire if the floor is of wood, and a fire in a theatre at this critical time can most certainly be an irreparable calamity to the exhibitor. What causes the trouble in so many cases is that the aisle light outlets are located improperly in relation to the light box on the standard; as a result, the BX conduit and its wiring is under a constant strain, and when the chairs are in use for some time they naturally become loose. Every time a patron sits or moves about in the chair, this strain is continued and intensified. If aisle light wiring or conduit shows signs of being strained, or the insulation is beginning to deteriorate, new wiring and conduit should be installed by competent electrician.

SEATING PLAN REVISION

Another good idea and one especially advised in these times, is to have a checkup by a competent chair man of your present seating layout. Perhaps your present layout is not the best possible for viewing the picture, and also in relation to exits. In the past most seating layouts were made with the sole idea of getting the largest possible number of chairs in the available space so far as fire regulations permitted. Now when theatre owners, especially those in the immediate danger zones are charged with unusual regard for the safety of patrons, the seating plan is more than a matter of comfort and sightlines, though these latter are important enough in themselves.

In any case, where the first two rows of chairs are installed closely against an outmoded orchestra pit, they should be removed. In this way additional exit space will be provided at the front, and a general pile-up of patrons into the pit in case of peril is rendered impossible.

In a balcony, where hazards are always greater, chairs that extend into an exit aisle should be removed. There is no question that in many cases these chairs would not be missed, for they were most likely installed just to fill in the auditorium. And as mentioned before, parts from these removed chairs can be used to make repairs.

CHECKING VANDALISM

One complaint of exhibitors in "tough," "hard-boiled" localities is that it is not worth the expense and trouble to maintain

Prepare Now to Make Your Quota Of Fuel Meet Your Heating Needs

● Summing up, for early planning, what the expected reduction of available coal and oil will require this fall and winter from heating equipment—and from management.

By CARL F. BOESTER

WITH THE assured scarcity of fuels of all kinds for heating purposes during the coming fall and winter season, it is only natural that we should, as early as possible, give much considered thought as to what we can do to make the fuel that we can get go as far as possible. Regardless of whatever we do, it is a double-barreled proposition, for in addition to serving the national interest by fuel conservation, we line our own pockets with the money saved by such conservation effort.

Because of the all-around material shortage situation, the only means we have at our command for such effort that does not require a priority are of two kinds: personal attention to this serious problem, and good common sense in the diligent application of well known means of fuel economy. We have all been entirely too busy or disinterested in the past to worry whether or not we make a $10 saving in our monthly fuel bill; however, in the terms of waste in the amount of fuel that such money would buy, this is likely to be the difference in sufficient heat at some time during the heating season in a large section of the country and in Canada.

CLEANING IS FIRST STEP TO FUEL-SAVING

The surest way to get the highest possible efficiency from your heating system is to make sure as to its cleanliness. It's more than just a matter of brushing that soot out of the flues that you can easily get to. Your heating system, probably for the first time in its history, should be subjected to an A-1 cleaning! If it is a steam or hot water system, not only should the boiler flues be thoroughly cleaned of soot, but also of all fly ash.

The inside passages of the boiler should also be cleaned, for there is undoubtedly much lime and sludge in these passages, and the special cleaning compounds available for this purpose should be employed to make sure that the water surfaces of your boiler are free of scale.

Where practical, the piping system should be taken down and checked for dirt and scale; and by all means, the valves, traps, vents, and water make-up devices should be double-checked to insure their cleanliness and proper functioning. The heating surface itself—that is, the radiator or the fin coils—should be flushed down and thoroughly cleaned of dust and lint.

If the heating system be of the warm air type, not only should the soot and fly ash be removed from the flues, but the furnace-proper should be thoroughly cleaned by dismantling the jacket around the fire box and a thorough brushing down of the steel or cast-iron heating surfaces, because they are heavily coated with dust and rust which retards a rapid heat exchange.

Make sure that all warm air ducts and grilles are thoroughly cleaned. There happens to be no priority on filters for dust stopping purposes, so be sure that new ones are installed at the beginning of the heating season, and once or twice during the heating season. Also make certain that all thermostatic controlling devices are in good mechanical shape.

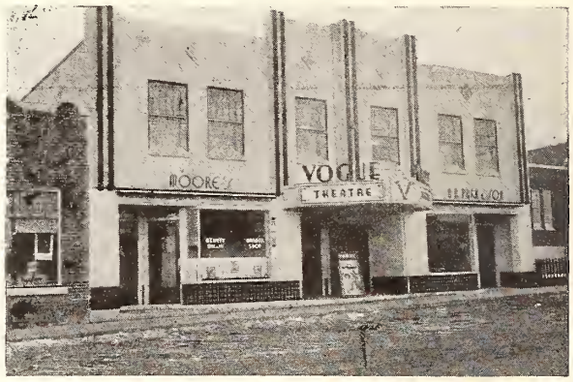
BURNING RATE AND PERIODS

Next in importance to a clean boiler, or a clean furnace, is a clean fire, whether it be gas, oil, or coal. All fuels burn with the greatest economy at one particular firing rate; any intermediate rate of combustion causes a certain amount of inefficiency. This brings up an old argument, particularly with respect to theatre heating, as to whether it is better to maintain a fire of some kind in the heating equipment over the 24-hour period, or to fire up just for that part of the day when the theatre is actually operated. From the viewpoint merely of fuel economy, it would seem wiser to start the fire just long enough before the period of operation to bring the theatre up to a comfortable temperature, and to operate the heating equipment at its fullest efficiency, which is usually the highest rate of fuel burning. Banked fires or modulated fuel input just does not make for the highest combustion efficiency, so that it would be better, by personal attention to the firing, for the manager to have the heating equipment operate intermittently, as needed. This, of course, will require more frequent trips to the basement in checking the operation of the heating equipment, but it certainly will be time well spent.

USE AUDIENCE HEAT

Learn to adjust your fuel requirements according to the weather and according to the occupant load of your theatre. It is certainly foolish to build a big fire for a long period of time during mild weather, and it is sure waste to overheat your house by misjudging the number of people you are likely to have in the auditorium, thereby making it necessary to cool off the house by ventilating methods. It must be remembered that people are heat machines, so if you are showing a good picture and anticipate a full auditorium shortly after opening, then don't operate your heating equipment very long before the opening period. The people themselves will warm up the theatre.

There are, incidentally, several theatres in the country which, even though located in severe weather areas, do not have any heating facilities at all because they are placed inside of big buildings and surrounded on all sides by stores and offices so that there is no building heat loss. In fact, in the dead of winter, with a full theatre, it is necessary for them to operate the cooling system because of the tremendous heat gain from the occupants alone. If it were possible to do a good enough insulating job in your theatre (which it isn't because of its construction) it would not be necessary for you to have any heating plant, either; so bear in mind that whenever possible you should try to use the heat of the people themselves to maintain the desired comfort.



Speaking of insulation, if you haven't already done so by now, insulate every portion of your building that you possibly can so to reduce its heat loss. Insulation also pays dividends in summer by keeping out heat and cutting down on the amount of work that your cooling system has to do. There are no priorities on insulating materials and none are likely. Use all the insulation you possibly can; use it on water pipes and heating pipes. By so covering such pipes it will not be necessary to keep any heat up during periods when the building is not in use.

Ventilation is one of the greatest fuel thieves. Some state laws require huge air changes in public buildings. Many such laws are antiquated, for it has since been proved that such volumes of air as they require are totally unwarranted, so check to be sure that your ventilating system is not admitting more air than is needed for good ventilation. By good ventilation is

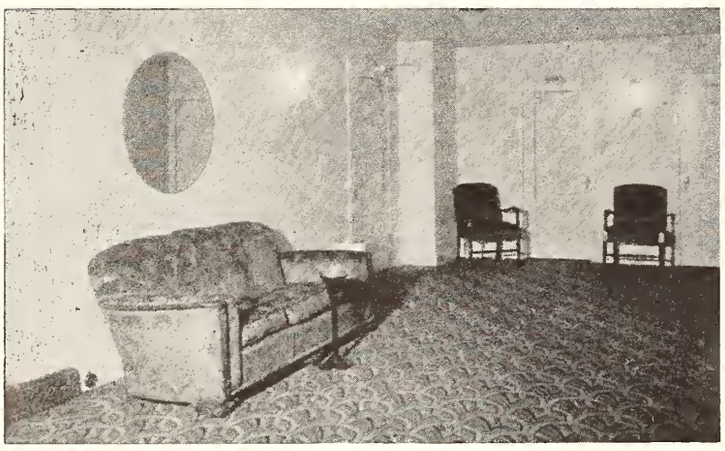
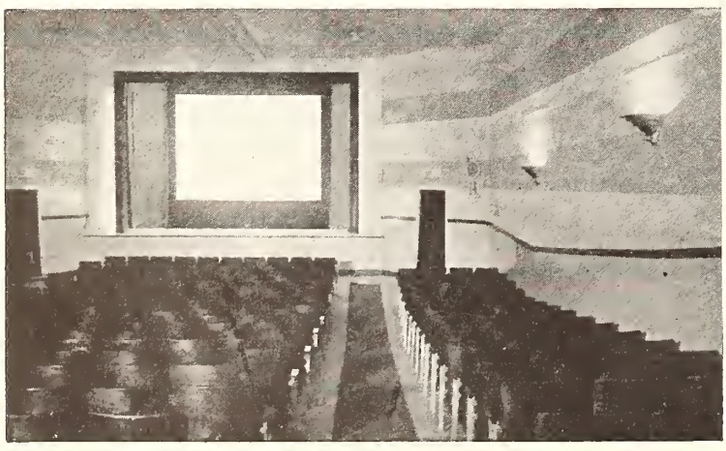
SERVING A SMALL RURAL COMMUNITY



How the Vogue theatre, seating 362, brings complete and modern exhibition facilities to the little town of Wynyard in a farming region of Canada



FRONT.

LOBBY.

SECTION OF FOYER.

AUDITORIUM.

CORNER OF POWDER ROOM.

SPACIOUS in plan for a theatre seating only 362, and with a simple architectural and decorative treatment essentially modern in character, G. R. Miller's new Vogue is an interesting example of the rising standards in small town motion picture exhibition. Wynyard has a population of only 1,110; it is the trading center, however, of a fine farming section of the Canadian province, and a divisional point on the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

The Vogue, which was designed by Webster & Gilbert, Saskatoon architects, is of brick and tile construction, 40x112 feet, with a 50x30-foot baseemnt under the front portion. Besides the theatre, the building contains two stores and three second-floor office suites. The facade is stucco with vertical pilasters and ceramic tile base course. Store entrances and theatre vestibule have terrazzo flooring.

LOBBY: Two sets of glazed doors lead into the lobby, where the ticket booth is built in on the right side. Walls are plaster painted light green, the color extending into the plaster ceiling 6 inches, to a narrow green stripe, inside of which the ceiling is painted ivory. The floor, which inclines one foot over its depth of 13 feet, is finished in asphalt tile green and onyx squares. A small countersunk rubber mat is placed inside each door. Illumination is by a central fluorescent fixture.

FOYER: Furnished in lounge style, the foyer measures 12x30 feet. Its plaster walls are painted peach-rose, the ceiling and woodwork ivory. The wall color here also runs into the ceiling, in this case 9 inches, to a band of dark rose. Foyer doors are solid wood units. The floor is covered in first-grade Axminster in a medium-scale circular pattern. Illumination is principally by four wall filament lamp luminaires, but there is a fluorescent ceiling fixture for high-level lighting.

AUDITORIUM: Decorative effect in the auditorium is obtained almost entirely from the natural tones of the finishing materials. Alon gthe walls is wallboard (Donnaconda) nailed horizontally on furring strips, effecting 2-foot stripes alternately light, medium and dark blue-green. The same board is used to make longitudinal panels down sides and center of the ceiling, between which is three-ply wood veneer on furring strips with cross-furring at varying distances to prevent resonance of the veneer, which was used to favor absorption of low frequencies and prevent acoustical "deadness." The seating is arranged in three banks with two aisles, with a floor having a pitch of 3 feet, 6 inches from rear to two-thirds of depth, and then a rise of 1 foot. Screen curtain is ivory. How Theatres Can Help the Police To Protect Them Against Burglary

An interview with one of the New York Police Department's specialists in burglary prevention

By FLOYD STONE

IT WAS A FEW minutes before the end of the last show at a certain Brooklyn, N. Y., motion picture theatre. A heavy-set man who had walked past the entrance, turned the corner just beyond, then came back again. He paused to look at a display of stills, lighting a cigarette. When an usher began to open the exit doors, he resumed his walk. By the time he reached an alleyway leading from a side exit of the theatre, people were beginning to come out. The man dropped his cigarette and turned into the alleyway. While patrons were still leaving through this side exit, he slipped among them and into the theatre.

After the theatre had been closed for the night, a car drove up to the front curb a short way from the entrance. Three men got out and went down the alleyway. A door of the side exit opened. They went in.

The rest would have been easy for these burglars. Their "lay-in" man had got them inside the theatre, quite according to prescribed procedure. But the whole business had been observed by detectives from the New York Police Department's Safe and Loft Squad. The criminals were arrested as soon as they set to work on the office safe.

It is the sole job of the Safe and Loft Squad to prevent burglaries. But few communities have a police organization like that of New York. In the vast majority of places, the owners of property have to take their own preventive measures. And anywhere, an ounce of precaution is worth a pound of cure.

"The best way to get rid of the professional burglar is to make his calling too hazardous for what he can get out of it," remarked Lieutenant Raymond F. Maguire, who had related the story of the Brooklyn attempt to illustrate how criminals can get into a theatre despite locks and the vigilance of the staff. Lieut. Maguire is second in command of the Safe and Loft Squad, which is headed by Capt. Richard A. Fennelly. This section of the New York Police has 38 men, all especially trained in the methods and personalities of professional burglary.

Asked to make suggestions as to what theatre managements may do to give themselves maximum assurance that they will not be victims of the burglar, Lieut. Maguire cited the use of night depositories of banks as the most effective guard against this class of criminal. By depositing their day's receipts in night receptacles of nearby banks, New York theatre owners have signally checked burglaries.

¶ When a Safe Is Safe And When It's Unsafe

Placing the day's receipts in a safe in the manager's office offers relatively little protection, he pointed out. The professional burglar is too skilled at opening a safe. Besides, if the safe is a small one, he and his helpers will carry it away with them, to open it where they are certain to escape detection.

The type of criminal who adopts burglary for his particular method of taking other people's money is not without intelligence, even though it is of a narrow or distorted sort. He at any rate has cunning, and he has learned his tricks as those of a skilled trade. He has to know enough to survey his operating territory accurately, to plan "a job" precisely, to direct assistants, to handle proficiently certain equipment.

Reminded that nightly trips to a bank depository expose the theatre man to robbery, Lieut. Maguire replied that the presence of a uniformed policeman, accompanying the theatre man to the bank, is the answer to that. The robber would have to "shoot it out" with the policeman, and it is only in desperate circumstances that "stick-up" men risk a gun fight with the police. Although it is violated now and then, the rule among criminals, asserted Lieut. Maguire, is that cop-killers get killed, in the fight itself, or later by the state executioner.

If a safe must be relied upon as a place to keep the day's receipts overnight, it should be located, if at all possible, so as to be visible from the street, with its door well illuminated. And of course it should be large enough to prevent removal to a concealed location. And certainly it should not be mounted on castors.

Once when a rookie cop, Lieut. Maguire reminisced, he made three rounds of the same block. On the third round he noted that a safe, which had been visible in a grocery store, had been removed. Investigation disclosed that the burglars had installed a large grocery box in place of the safe, piling merchandise on top of it to conceal the substitution.

"Which goes to show," he pointed out, "that a safe should be clearly visible really to do what it is supposed to do—keep money safely."

New York theatre owners are advised to have an alarm system. This may be connected to the alarm system of a private protective agency. Also recommended, if a substantial amount of money is kept in a theatre overnight, is a night watchman—"a live wire," added Lieut. Maguire, "not some old cluck."

Other recommended preventive devices are a system to light up the whole theatre, one to switch on a warning blinker system, and one to discharge tear gas in the office.

¶ A Tip to Managers: Be Suspicious of Everybody!

A manager, he continued, should make note of persons lurking about the theatre, and of cars parked. He should especially survey patrons who come to the manager's office to report some loss or make a complaint. This is a way for a burglar to learn the location of the safe and the main desk in a manager's office.

The manager also is presumed to know his employes, before admitting them to positions of responsibility.

A tip from Lieut. Maguire is, "Be suspicious of everybody." And be sure the entire theatre is "cleaned out" of people who do not belong there after the day's performances are over. If the Brooklyn theatre referred to at the beginning of this article had been "cleaned out," the police wouldn't have been necessary to prevent a burglary. The fellow who sneaked into the side exit while patrons were coming out illustrates only one type of "plant." There are many such; burglers largely depend on someone "planted" inside the place to be burglarized, for quick entry.

Some burglars "plant" their tools, doing so during the day. They may use sectional jimmies, which later can be screwed or bolted together. They sometimes carry the heavy sections around their necks, underneath their clothes, then deposit them in toilets, or under rugs, behind curtains backstage, in piles of rubbish. At night, entrance gained, they retrieve their tools.

Lieut. Maguire thus summarized the methods of theatre entry; breaking in a door; breaking a window; collusion with an employe; entrance through exit crowd; descent through skylight.

"And, if necessary, burglars will bore

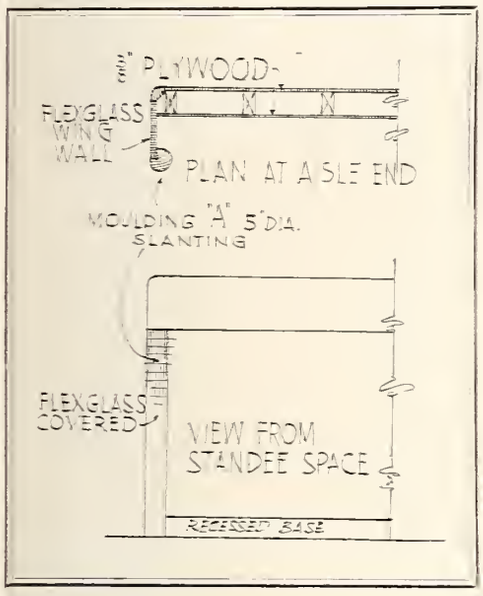
Give Your Standee Rail Better Lines, More Purpose



THE DECORATIVE quality of the standee wall or rail can readily be inspired by the functional requirements it has to provide for. To begin with, its shape in plan follows the curvature of the last row of seats. This in itself adds grace to its form and establishes the need for very little extra embellishment. The accompanying drawings show certain forms suggested to enhance the appearance and make the wall function properly.

The section drawing shows the position of the eyes of the standee patron closest to the rail, and the person sitting in the last row of seats. The sightline shown between these persons determines the height of the wall and the depth of the wall on the top. The edge of the wall nearest the screen must shield the view of the head of the sitting person.

This arrangement also makes it possible for those sitting in the last row of seats to be least aware of the persons in the standee space. To some exhibitors these points may be considered refinements, but it is just such thoughtfulness which makes for the comfort which will be appreciated by the patron.

The width of the wall at the top is about 18 inches at the widest level. The wider the wall is made the lower the wall may become. You can make your own layout fixing the height of the wall and the top width to suit your requirements. Space permitting the top width could be increased to advantage, since the wall is richer in appearance when it is relatively low. The top of the wall is shown slanting downward. This is done to add form as well as to discourage the placing of objects on the top. Note the slant is toward the standee floor to insure that all objects fall in the right direction.

The wing wall at the aisle ends is shown narrower at the bottom than at the top to make it easier for floor cleaning and to avoid the bulky appearance that a vertical shape would give. Moulding "A" at the edge of this wall is used to cover the thin edge of the wall. Moulding "A" and the aisle side of the wing wall are good surfaces for the application of a material like Flexglass. Light reflection from this material serves as an excellent aisle marker, and it can be readily applied to a curved surface having a radius as small as 2½ inches. All edges are to be rounded to be consistent with the general character. The entire wall may be constructed of a framework of 2x4-inch wood studs 16 inches on center, with top and bottom plates of the same dimension. The bottom plate should be securely bolted to the floor.

The large surfaces of the wall can be of plywood as shown, using maximum-length panels in the horizontal direction. All edges of the plywood are covered with solid wood. A recessed base is used on the standee side. The wall on the chair side can be finished with an inexpensive veneer and be stained and polished. These walls should not be painted since the stain wears better.

The standee side should be finished with one of the better wood veneers having a light color especially for the surface to re-

Renew That Lounge—with plenty of color

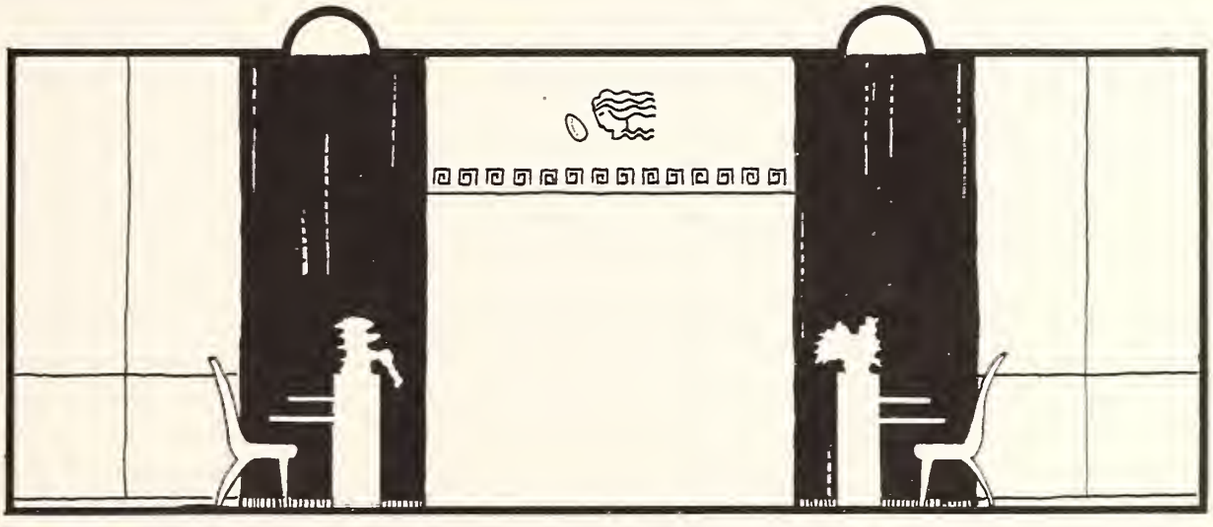
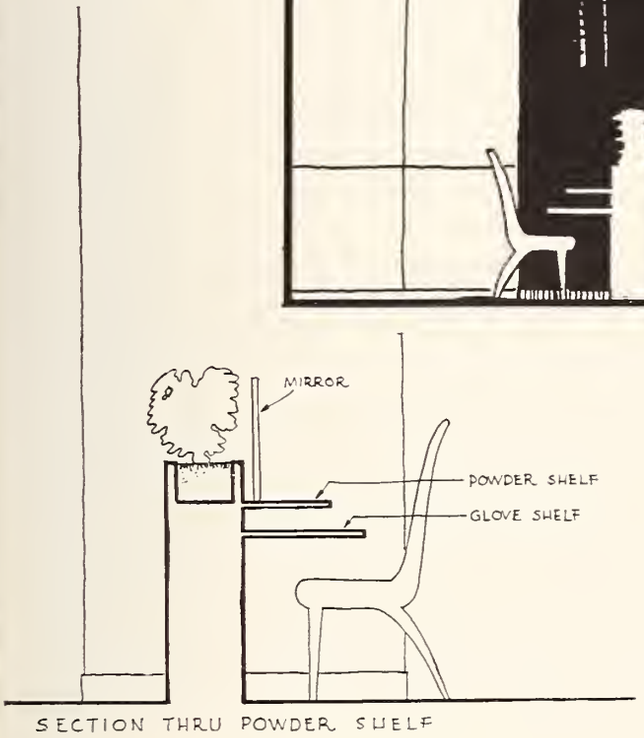
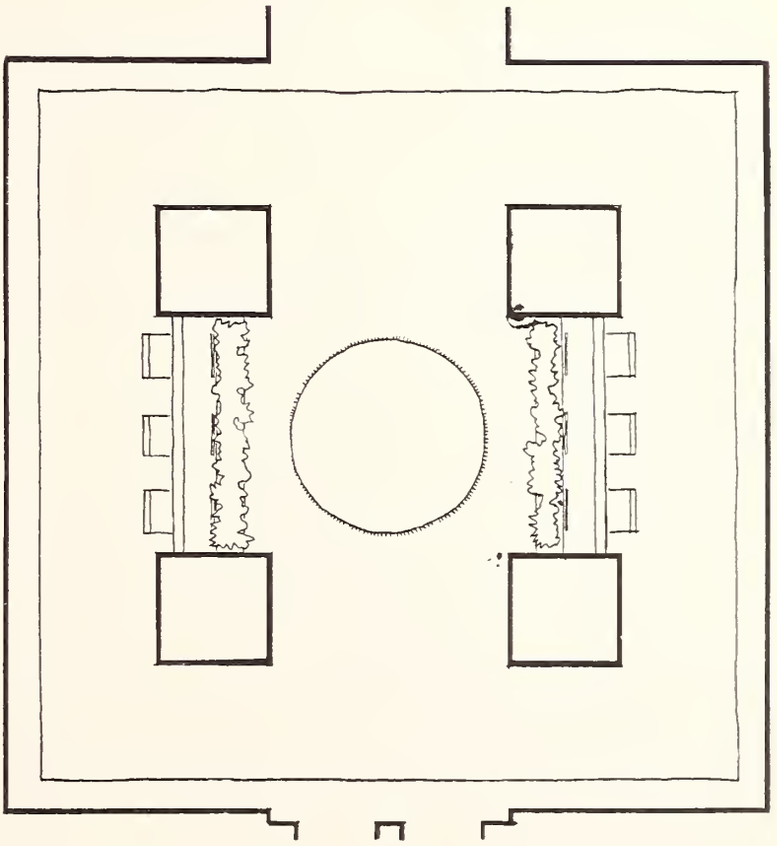


SCHEME I.—The women's lounge, or cosmetic room, indicated on this page is designed about a star motive of coral-colored Formica. There five mirrored nitches built-in, each nitch having Formica powder and glove shelves. The cosmetic unit is placed in the center of the circular room, and is surmounted by an inverted bowl luminaire throwing light upwards against the ceiling to illuminate the entire room with indirect light. The room floor is dropped three steps below the adjacent foyer area, which enhances its interest as well as provides privacy. The circular walls of the room are finished in Formica panels alternating with mirrors, the Formica here to be of a deeper coral than that of the cosmetic "bar." A circular built-in settee could be built in along the walls beneath the mirror and Formica panels, with flower boxes at each end. Small circular tables should be set in front of the settee for ash trays. At the end opposite the stepped entrance to the room a drinking fountain might well be placed, between doors, one or both of which would lead to the toilets.





WALL ELEVATIONS INDICATING BLACK COLUMNS AND LOCATION OF COSMETIC STRUCTURES AND PLANTING BOX.

SECTION THRU POWDER SHELF

SCHEME 2.—In this women's powder room design four large, black Formica-faced square columns form the key, with the general pattern conceived in straight lines. Double shelves for powder and gloves are ranged between the columns, with the structure supporting these shelves also supporting seemingly free-standing mirrors, behind which are placed artificial flower boxes. The area between the cosmetic structures may be clear, to permit passage to toilet room, or be centered by a circular palm or fern box. Mirrors may alternate with Formica panels to cover the side walls, in a shade different from and harmonizing with the powder and glove shelves. Metal inlay decorations might well be used in the Formica panels, for example, over the entrance, or bordering the door or double-doors leading to the toilet room.

NEW PATTERNS IN RAYON AND WOOL CARPETING

Four patterns which have been developed by Alexander Smith for its line of floor fabrics combining rayon with wool yarns and marketed under the name "Duration".

■ Carpeting combining equal amounts of wool yarns and rayon fibres has been announced by Alexander Smith in a line of weaves and patterns said to be specially designed for theatres. Wool and rayon carpet has been available in the carpet industry during the last two years, but experiments have been continued to bring such combinations of wool and synthetic fibres to the point where the resulting fabric could endure hard usage. Some in the carpet industry today regard wool-rayon floor coverings as having certain advantages; for one thing, rayon fibre is whiter than wool yarn, which increases consistency of color; another virtue cited is the tendency of the color to "spread" more uniformly than that of all-wool weaves. The carpet industry regards the wool-rayon combination as a permanent type, having certain applications. In announcing its line of theatre carpeting under the name "Duration", Alexander Smith states that the fabric is similar in construction to that same manufacturer's "Crestwood" Velvet. It is specified that the amount of pile is identical in each line, while the backing construction is also the same. The new carpeting is woven of 50 per cent wool and 50 per cent rayon yarn of a "staple" type developed by duPont for heavy-duty floor coverings. The rayon yarn has a distinctive crimp, or weave.

Burglary Prevention

through the wall of an adjoining building," he added.

With entrance into the theatre effected, the yeggs still face the job of opening the safe, for which there are many methods. These were cited as—

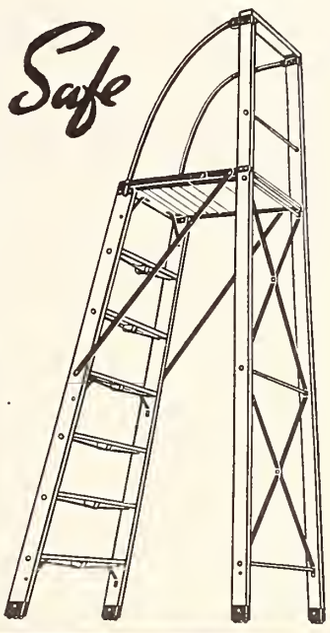
First, the "punch job." A sledge hammer is used to knock off the safe dial. A center punch and hammer then punch the lock out. Safe manufacturers have now placed lock mechanisms to one side of the dial.

Secondly, the "rip method." The burglar bores a hole in one corner of the safe door, usually the upper left-hand. With a jimmy in the hole, he pulls the door down by leverage. Safe manufacturers now use steel that it is almost impossible to drill, and certainly impossible to bend.

Thirdly, the "burn method." Acetylene torches burn the door out of the safe. According to Lieut. Maguire, this requires a lot of equipment, a "good mob," and "good workers." But this method is seldom used now. The equipment is too heavy and is too easy to trace, through the serial numbers and manufacturers.

Fourthly, the "blow method." This is the use of nitroglycerine, which is inserted in the cracks between safe door and safe. Soap is applied over it as a seal, the safe is covered with blankets, a fuse is lit—and blooey! This method, too, is now obsolete. It is too dangerous for the burglars—they sometimes blew themselves up!

Fifthly, the "combination method." This is the skillful twirling of the combination dial, "by ear," to unlock the safe. "But," Lieut. Maguire commented, with a laugh, "that type of operator doesn't exist, and I don't believe he ever existed. It's good stuff in the movies."



"Of course," he added, "people are sometimes careless in closing safes. They should not only give the handle a turn; they should also twirl the dials."

He recalled that once, while trailing a burglar gang to a store, he saw two in front of the store, the other in the manager's office. They left the store hurriedly. The officer didn't see any criminal action. But he ordered his men to continue trailing the men; then, entering the store quickly, he asked the manager if he missed anything. The manager said he didn't. A few minutes later Lieut. Maguire's men brought back the burglars—with the store's cash. The safe was intact. But it had not really been locked.

"Carelessness," Lieut. Maguire repeated, "is a big factor. Theatre managers and staffs should be educated in the ways of preventing burglaries. Modern policing, where it is available, is making it hard for the burglar to ply his trade, but business organizations must help by being alert to suspicious-looking loiterers by placing their money where it would be impossible or too hazardous for thieves to get at it, by providing locks and alarms and giving them proper attention, and by being sure that the premises do not conceal anyone that does not belong on it."

All-Steel Curtain Tracks

Automatic Curtain Controls

VALLEN, INC., AKRON, OHIO

John J. Sefing's WAYS & MEANS

in operation, installation, maintenance

John J. Sefing is a graduate mechanical engineer and has long specialized in theatre work

Emergency Care of the Curtain Control Equipment

AN ITEM of equipment that greatly contributes to a smooth, impressive show is the curtain track and control. At this time this equipment may be taken for granted; however, as with other equipment that makes up the whole scheme of theatre operation, it must be carefully and systematically serviced and maintained. New curtain track and control equipment is almost unobtainable now, nor are parts readily available; hence, your curtain control and track equipment needs serious attention if you are to continue it in trouble-free operation.

Make sure that the curtain track is hanging rigidly and solidly in place. The hangers, guide wires and even braces might become loose through hard and constant usage. A curtain track that swings or sways, even slightly, not only will cause the curtain to hang improperly and tear by dragging on the floor, but also puts a strain on the track itself. A track that has sprung out-of-line will cause rapid wear of the carriers, and fouling, as well as improper "bunching" of the curtain.

It is well to have a competent "drapeman" check the control, track and curtain and make the necessary repairs and adjustments. In this way not only can money be saved, but the life of the curtain operating equipment itself is lengthened. A track or control, if operating improperly, will quickly "eat-up" the wire cables, and wire cables as well as rope cables cannot readily be purchased. When not adjusted or lined-up properly, the cables will rub against the edges of the track, jump the grooves of the head and control pulleys, and cause bending. When operated under such conditions, a terrific strain is put on these cables when the control is turned on.

CHECKING CABLE CLAMPS

Another thing to be checked is the clamps that hold the ends of the cables together. They may have become loosened and have allowed the cables to "stretch" just enough to cause improper travel through the pulleys and track. Before tightening the bolts on these clamps, make sure that the cables are in the grooves on all pulleys, and that the cables are pulled in as far as possible. Also check very carefully the adjusting "dogs" or trip arms on the control that limit the curtain travel. In many cases where these trip arms were adjusted improperly, the track carriers, and especially the cable clamps, were "knocked" out of alignment by the sudden jar they received by having the control carry the curtain past its limit of travel. This is one sure way of pulling apart the strands of wire in the cables, for when the clamps hit the pulleys, a terrific strain is put on the entire curtain equipment.

ADJUSTING TRIP ARMS

When adjusting the trip arms on the curtain control, extreme care should be taken that they are moved only a fraction of an inch, as even this small movement will mean a couple of feet of travel of the curtain in one direction or the other. In case the present wire cable is worn or torn loose in strands, a good grade of manila rope can be substituted. However, the use of rope is only recommended as an emergency measure, for it stretches or tightens up with weather changes, and especially, it loosens quickly when used on a curtain control.

When pulling in rope through the track carriers care should be taken that it is fastened tightly in the "rings" and that it fits the grooves of the pulleys. One common fault found where the curtain control works improperly is that the fastening bolts have become loose from the floor. This condition should be expected in time as there is always a heavy pull on these bolts every time the control is operated. At any rate, these fastenings should be checked systematically, for when loose they will surely "knock" out of proper alignment the entire control and curtain.

When the control is fastened to a wood floor, the bolt holes that are chewed away should be plugged with wood and the control be moved slightly to one side, where new and solid fastenings can be made. One thing to remember is that when the bolts are turned down in new holes care should be taken that they are stopped when they reach their maximum holding strength in the floor. When they are "screwed" past this point, the threads will eat away the solid stock and a loose, or at best a very poor fastening, will be made. These same considerations apply as well where the floor is of concrete and expansion or lead shields are used as fastening plugs.

For the continued operation of the curtain control, the electrical connections at the control itself and the operating switches should be checked to see if they are making proper electrical contact. Many times only a loose terminal lug or wire is found to cause improper operation of the control. A little tightening or cleaning of the contact and the control works again like new.

In one case of this sort, however, the handy man around the theatre proceeded haphazardly to take the control apart, thinking that the internal mechanism was at fault. The interior mechanism is precision-made at the factory and is as perfect as any moving machinery can be fabricated for the particular work it is to do. This repair should be done only by a person qualified or experienced in doing this type of work, otherwise a small repair job can run into a big and expensive one.

When the control is operating unevenly, or the trouble traced absolutely to the control itself, make sure that it is not operating again until the trouble is rectified. It is better simply to slip off the cable from the pulleys on the control and operate the curtain by hand. Just because a control will run in spite of a slight noise in the housing, or even though the curtain moves in an unsteady "jerky" movement, it does not necessarily mean that by continuing to use the control the trouble will somehow disappear. In such a case a complete breakdown of the control will result. A gear or a shaft may be loose and not meshing properly, or perhaps a tooth is missing. Sometimes a cleaning of parts and the use of new grease will solve the trouble, whereas operating a faulty control without first finding the trouble is almost sure to cause a complete breakdown in a short time.

Adding Life to Auditorium Chairs

chairs in proper condition, because of the destructiveness of mischievous boys. The writer can state from experience that this is not necessarily the case. I recall the time I was asked to examine a screen that was badly deteriorated and even torn. In this particular theatre there were unmistakable signs of general rowdyism. On the floor near the screen, marbles, gum drops, tacks and so on, were very much in evidence. The walls at the side aisles had chalk marks the full length of the auditorium. The covering on almost all of the seats was torn or slit, and on the back panels, pieces were ripped off or left hanging. Altogether, the auditorium was in terrible condition.

Shortly after this survey the theatre was sold. The first thing the new owner did was to remodel the interior with a good grade of material and equipment. A year later I was called again to this house. I found the screen somewhat yellow with age, but there were no rips. All of the seats were checked and only two or three had shabby upholstery. The auditorium rest-rooms, etc., looked in very good condition.

While waiting for the exhibitor, who was busy in his office, I noticed a group of boys chatting in the foyer, waiting for the show to open. A candy stand was open, but there was no one in attendance. These boys had every opportunity to take some candy, but not one took advantage of it. The owner was questioned about this and he described his method.

A special children's show was regularly given at which candy, books or toys were gifts. Any mischievous boy was deprived of these gifts or barred from the theatre for some little time. The fellow who seemed to be a "leader" of these boys was appointed a "warden," to keep the others in line, and his reward was a free pass to the theatre if everything went well. Every so often a new "warden" was appointed. Trouble with mischievous boys was thus cut to a minimum.

Not all the destruction is caused by boys, however; sometimes grownups are destructive, too. At this time it might be a good idea to run a trailer or to post a notice, stating the necessity to conserve materials, pointing out that new items may not be available because they are needed in the war effort. This would show the seriousness of their vandalism from a point of view with which every patron, young or old, is practically certain to be in hearty sympathy.

HOW TO KEEP PROJECTION BULBS IN SERVICE

Wartime restrictions on many vital materials mean that present equipment must be made to serve even longer than ever. This means it must be given proper care and maintenance to keep it in service.

While G-E Tungar Projection Bulbs are built with precision and accuracy for efficient, long-life operation, they should be given regular attention. These suggestions are made to help you get even better and longer wartime service from your projection bulbs.

Check the socket to be sure it is clean and not corroded or pitted. A good contact should be maintained. If corrosion exists use sandpaper to remove it. Be certain that the center contact in the socket has plenty of tension to hold the bulb tight.

Keep the bulb tightly screwed in the socket. Check every few weeks to be certain the bulb has not come loose.

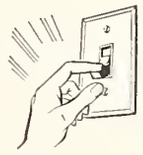
Check the anode clip (connection at top of bulb) and connection regularly to assure a good contact. If the clip has lost its tension or if the clip connector is corroded, replace the clip connector.



Check the power input to the rectifier to make certain that the a-c supply voltage corresponds to the transformer rating.

Voltage should be maintained as close as possible to the voltages specified for the bulb. The filament voltage should be checked against the specified voltage. Any variations of more than 10 per cent should be corrected.

In rectifiers used to supply power to projection arcs, always shut down the projector by breaking the a-c supply to the rectifier. Never open the d-c circuit.

Simplified Tests for Determining Efficiency of Projector Shutters

• Mechanical in operation, the shutter is a critical element of the projection lighting system. The tests presented in this article, which concludes a notable series designed to raise projection efficiency, have been specially developed by the author and to an important degree represent new data

By CHARLES E. SHULTZ

IN PREVIOUS articles in this series, the author has discussed various methods of obtaining maximum efficiency from the projection optical system. The following material deals with an element of the projection system which is both mechanical and optical in function. This element is the revolving shutter of the projector.

CHARLES E. SHULTZ

The shutter may be considered as an optical component because it intercepts and limits the light reflected or refracted by other optical components.

It may also be considered as a mechanical device because it is actuated by the movement of the projector and is synchronized to other mechanical moving parts.

Every text book on the subject of projection describes in detail the principles of shutter operation, and every projectionist is familiar with the basic principles of the shutter. The purpose of this article is to cover practical points of efficient disc shutter operation which are seldom recognized, and to provide tables for ready reference for tests against shutters in present use.

For the sake of reference let us assume that the following facts are familiar to most projectionists:

1. All shutters should have blades of equal width.

2. It is not necessary for the included-angle of the blades to be equal to the included-angle of the open spaces between the blades for direct current arcs. (With alternating current arcs, such as Cyclex, the included-angle of the blades must be 90° or greater.)

3. Flicker and travel ghost become more apparent as screen intensity is increased. (The exact intensity at which shutter flicker begins to appear is a difficult value to establish. An approximate figure for a 90° shutter is 9 to 10 foot-candles of light incident upon the screen, with 48 flashes of light per second passing through the optical system when viewed in a dark room. It is assumed that the reflecting efficiency of the screen is 75%, and that the projector is operated without film. This figure will vary slightly, depending upon the point of interception of the shutter.)

4. Shutter flicker becomes less apparent if the included-angle of each of the blades is greater or less than 90°.

5. If travel ghost appears simultaneously at the top and bottom of the picture image, the blades are of insufficient included-angle.

6. The film is in motion during 72° of each complete shutter revolution of 360°, or 1/5th of the time.

7. The speed of the optical system limits the width of the blades of the shutter.

8. The larger the diameter of the beam of light intercepted by the shutter, the greater must be the included-angle of each blade.

9. A projector with a worn gear train requires shutter blades of greater included-angle than one with a new gear train.

10. The "covering angle", or number of degrees required for the shutter to cover the beam is controlled by three things: First, the distance from the center of the light beam to the center of the shutter shaft; second, the size of the light beam; third, the speed of the optical system producing the light beam.

11. The covering-angle, plus 72°, equals the maximum included-angle of each blade.

With the preceding review of well known facts before us, let us establish a basis for deciding which types of shutters are capable of efficiency tests and improvements, and which are not. In this discussion the various types and makes of shutters will not be compared in relation to the efficiency they bear to one another, as we are interested only in the efficiency of the equipment already in use.

Let us first identify all types of shutters which can*not* be altered in the projection room. Into this group fall all shutters of the compound type which intercept the beam simultaneously from opposite directions. This group includes the following make projectors: Simplex E-7, Brenkert 80, Century CC, Motiograph K, HK and HU. (Projectors having front or rear disc type shutters should be carefully checked for efficiency.)

TRANSMISSION AND INTERRUPTION OF PROJECTION LIGHT

To demonstrate the effect of increasing the included-angle of the blades, Table 1, below, indicates the percentage of light transmitted and blocked by two blade shutters of the disc type.

Number of Degrees of Included-Angle for Each Blade	Percent. of Light Blocked by Shutter	Percent. of Light Transmitted by Shutter

118	65.5	34.5
119	66.0	34.0
120	66.6	33.4
121	67.1	32.9

These values remain unchanged, regardless of the diameter of the shutter, and are true for front or rear disc type shutters.

Because of this constant relationship between the included-angle of each blade of the shutter, and the percentage of light transmitted, it is possible to determine the included-angle of each blade with a fair accuracy in the following manner:

First: Take a reading with a photometer of the number of foot-candles of light incident upon the screen with the shutter in operation.

Second: Take a second reading from the same point with the light passing through the optical system without the shutter in operation.

Third: Divide the figures obtained in the first reading by those obtained in the second reading. The result is the percent. of light transmitted by the shutter.

Fourth: Find this percentage in the column indicating light transmission in table given above. On the same line in the first column you will find the number of degrees of included-angle of each blade for the shutter you are testing.

For example, if the photometric reading for the first case with the shutter in operation was 13½ foot-candles, and the second reading taken without the shutter in operation was 30 foot-candles, you would divide 13½ by 30, which equals .45. The transmission would therefore be 45%. By referring to the table, we see that a shutter of 45% transmission capacity has an included-angle for each blade of 99°.

REAR SHUTTER EFFICIENCY

The first consideration in rear shutter efficiency is the relationship between the optical speed of the reflector and the size of the beam of light which must be intercepted by the shutter.

If we assume conditions such as those found with standard Simplex projectors in which the rear shutter intercepts the light beam at a distance of approximately 5 inches from the aperture, and the center of the light beam is 3-15/16 inches from the center of the shutter shaft, it may be seen in Table 2 that a beam from an f/2.2 reflector has a diameter of approximately 3⅜ inches, while a beam from a reflector set at an optical speed of f/3.0 has a diameter of only 2-9/16 inches.

Obviously, it requires a blade of greater included-angle to intercept the beam from an f/2.2 reflector than that required to intercept the beam from a reflector of f/3.0 optical speed.

To find the f-speed of any ellipsoidal reflector, measure the distance from the aperture to the reflecting surface at the center hole of the reflector. Next, subtract the depth of the reflector from this working distance, and divide this result by the diameter of the reflecting surface.

Table 2, below, gives the approximate included-angle required for each blade of the rear shutter of a standard Simplex projector at various optical speeds, providing the screen is of average brightness. The column headed "covering angle" indicates the number of degrees that the shutter must travel to cover completely the light beam. In other words, this indicates the number of degrees the shutter moves from the time it just begins to intercept the beam until it has "sliced" completely through the beam.

In Table 2, below, the figures show:

COLUMN 1—Approximate diameter of light beam in inches.

COLUMN 2—f-speed of reflector system.

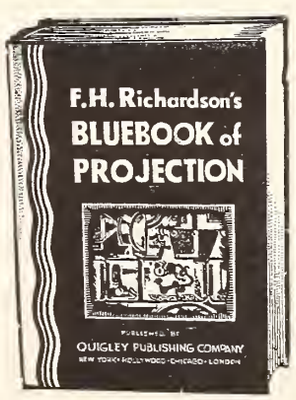
Crown Jewel for Victory

THIS is a chunk of optical glass. It has been broken out of a porcelain pot which came from the furnaces of the Bausch & Lomb Glass Plant.

It may be destined for use in binoculars —the long-range eyes of Army and Navy. It may be one of the types of glass that comprise the optical system of a medical research microscope. Or it may go into service as a range-finder prism, finished to accuracy limits of one second of arc, an error so small that it amounts to only one foot in 39 miles.

Fathered by William Bausch, the B&L Glass Plant was born in 1914. Under impetus of glass shortages in the first World War, it grew to full manhood. Research and development have continued without interruption since, so that today America need not look beyond her own borders for an adequate supply of this essential war material.



One hundred ten types of optical glass come regularly from the Bausch & Lomb furnaces, to provide the various refractive indices and dispersions required in the lenses and prisms for thousands of scientific instruments.

For a quarter of a century, Bausch & Lomb has dedicated itself to the task of perfecting and producing optical glass,— that America may never again be deprived of this prime military essential.

3 1/16"	2.3	39°	111°	99°
3 1/8"	2.2	40°	112°	100°

These figures are given in degrees of angle and minutes of angle. You would read the first figure in COLUMN 3 thus: 32 degrees, 30 minutes.

As every degree of angle is divided into 60 minutes, it follows that 45 minutes of angle is equal to ¾ of one degree, 30 minutes equal ½ of one degree, 15 minutes equal ¼ of one degree, etc.

These figures are computed for average screen intensity. Lower screen intensity would permit blades of less included-angle, and higher screen intensity would require blades of greater included-angle.

The number of degrees of included-angle for each blade of a disc type rear shutter will be between the maximum angle shown in Column 4, and the minimum angle shown in Column 5 of Table 2.

The number of degrees of angle between the figures given will depend upon the six following local conditions:

1. The intensity of the projected light.
2. The reflecting efficiency and type of screen.
3. The definition of the screen image.
4. The color of the light.
5. The amount of illumination used in the auditorium during projection.
6. The amount of lost motion in the projector gear train.

Because of number of combinations which can occur with these six conditions, it is necessary to determine the exact number of degrees of included angle for each blade by trial for each individual case.

To make this test, reduce the included-angle of each blade to the minimum shown in Table 2; and projecting a trailer or test reel of high contrast, observe for travel ghost. (This observation should be made from the front of the auditorium so that the observer is surrounded by conditions identical to those encountered by the patron.) If any ghost is visible, increase the included-angle a few degrees and repeat the test until all ghost disappears.

It is usually a very simple matter to change the included-angle of the blades of a rear shutter as most of them have an adjustment for this purpose. To make a direct measurement of the included-angle of any type disc shutter proceed as follows:

1. Remove the shutter from the projector and place it on a piece of paper.
2. Draw along the edge of each blade from the hub to the outside. (It is not necessary to draw around the curved part of the outer diameter.)
3. Remove the shutter from the paper and with a ruler continue the lines which could not be traced because of the hub. The point at which these lines cross is the center of the shutter.
4. Obtain a protractor with as large a radius as possible and place its center at the point where the continued lines cross.
5. Read the included angle on the scale of the protractor.

There are four conditions which are related to the included-angle of each blade of a disc type front shutter—(1) optical speed of the projection system; (2) equivalent focus of the projection lens; (3) length of throw for any given projection lens E.F.; (4) position of the shutter in the beam of light. The following rules govern these:

1. The faster the speed of the optical system the greater must be the included angle of each blade.
2. The longer the focal length or equivalent focus of the projection lens for any given fixed length of throw the greater must be the included angle of each blade.
3. The shorter the throw for a projection lens of fixed equivalent focus, the greater must be the included angle of each blade.
4. The farther the front shutter is placed in either direction from the point of aerial image, the greater must be the included angle of each blade.

Table 3 indicates the approximate number of degrees of included-angle required for each blade of a disc type front shutter, based on the beam diameter at the point of aerial image. It is assumed in this table that the front shutter is placed 3-5/16 inches from the center of the shutter shaft to the center of the light beam. The figures indicate:

COLUMN 1—Diameter of light beam in inches.

COLUMN 2—Approximate covering angle for a front shutter with a distance of 3-5/16 inches from the center of the shutter shaft to the center of the light beam.

COLUMN 3—Approximate MAXIMUM included-angle for each blade.

COLUMN 4—Approximate MINIMUM included-angle for each blade.

2¾"	45°	117°	105°
2⅞"	47°	119°	107°
3"	49°	121°	109°

It will be necessary to make the same tests as those described to determine the exact required angle between MAXIMUM and MINIMUM as for the rear shutter.

As the front shutter is not adjustable, it is suggested that experimental blades be constructed from cardboard for this test.

These tests are most important to obtain maximum results with minimum carbon and power consumption, and they are given in the hope that the simplified tables will induce the projectionist to test for, and correct, the unnecessary waste which results from improperly adjusted disc type shutters.

Make Your Quota of Fuel Meet Your Heating Needs

meant just enough air to keep down odor concentration. Let your nose be your guide and as long as there is not much difference between the freshness of the air inside and that outside, you are doing an adequate ventilating job. There is no use throwing away tons of fuel in warming up unneeded air. No boss is coming around to see that you observe the simple rules of good heating practice, but it is a sure thing that unless you do, the amount of fuel that will be allotted to you will not last the entire heating season.

SOME ECONOMY TRICKS

There are practically no mechanical changes you can make because of the critical material situation, but if you can pick up a new or a used water circulating pump and can draw water out of one side of your heating boiler and inject it into the other side, the agitation caused by the circulation of the water will materially increase the efficiency and capacity of your boiler whether it be heating water or generating steam.

If you have a warm air furnace you can help the rate of heat exchange many times by speeding up the circulation of air through and around the furnace. In either case, however, be guided by the recommendations of your heating contractor. He knows how and is well equipped to bring your heating system up to its fullest efficiency. An investment of one dollar now in this direction will save ten dollars later on, to say nothing of making your allotted quantity of fuel go further. And now is the time to put your house in order for the heating season.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S COMMENT on PROJECTION

Care for Long Wear: The Projection Arc

IN THESE days when supplies are becoming more and more scarce and replacements are hard to obtain, at any rate without long waits, it is especially necessary to obtain the utmost in efficiency of the equipment you are in charge of. Here let's consider the care of projection arcs.

F. H. R.

In order to insure the longest life possible and the best results it is essential that the lamphouse be kept thoroughly clean, both inside and out. Any drippings, carbon ash, etc., must be carefully removed every day, and special care should be taken to keep clean the bushings, shaft and gears of the arc control operating parts.

Make it a weekly job to tighten up all electrical connections to the arc controls. Make it a daily job, before the first show, to clean the mirror with soft tissue or soft, clean cloth. Care must be used so as not to turn the mirror around in the holder or the entire surface will soon become pitted. If the clips which retain the mirror are too tight it is possible for them to cause cracking when expansion due to heat takes place, so watch these clips carefully.

For best performance of straight arcs, condensers must be cleaned each day and a check made on the retaining rings for proper tension. Do this before the first show.

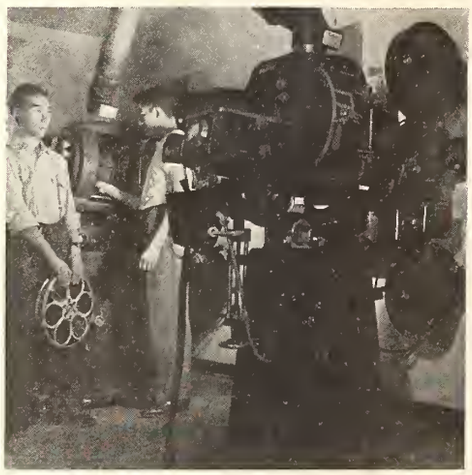
Oil with a light projection oil, but never over-oil any moving part inside the lamphouse.

It is advisable to have an extra negative and positive carbon jaw assembly on hand in case of emergency. Be sure you take the carbon jaw holders out once a week and clean them thoroughly.

Oil arc control motor bearings once a week, using a very few drops of light oil. Over-oiling causes much damage, so use care.

Once each month clean the arc control commutator with a clean cloth to which has been applied a small amount of vaseline. If the spaces between the commutator bars are clogged with grit, a tooth pick, carefully used, will remove it, after which wipe the entire commutator perfectly dry and clean.

By checking once a month, any uneven wearing of the brushes of the control motor may be detected. If there are signs of wear, or rough hard spots have formed, install new brushes as soon as possible.



Clean out all packing boxes of grease of the arc control gearing mechanism once a month at the very least, flush with kerosene and repack with fresh grease.

Once every three months, or oftener, the arc exhaust ducts and dampers from the lamphouse should be thoroughly cleaned of carbon ash, dust, etc., since any stoppage, no matter how small, will affect the proper burning of carbons, cause gradual accumulation of ash within the lamphouse and cause pitting of the mirrors.

Answering That Question About "Vertical Sound"

LAST MONTH William Goewey of Elmhurst, Ill., asked for an opinion as to whether a soundhead could be mounted vertically.. Since then several opinions have been received in, all of which are in the affirmative. Gilbert R. LaPoint, our old friend and correspondent from Westboro, Mass., writes in to express his opinion thus:

"Sound, I would say without a doubt, can be made to run in a vertical position, upside down or at any angle. To prove my point: Set the soundhead in the vertical position and attach driving assembly to it

At last comes the long awaited picture which Barney DeVietti, once projectionist, now manager, of the Price theatre, Huish Theatre Enterprises house in Price, Utah, promised us. He also promised faithfully he would include in the picture their new projectionist, Miss Thomas, but, alas, she was not to be found when the "shooting" started. At any rate we appreciate a view of part of the Price theatre projection room. The Price has Super-Simplex heads, Cyclex lamps, and a Western Electric sound system. The room measures 15x25x12 feet. Rest rooms and drinking fountain are located in a separate room off the projection room. Projectionists shown are Mario Capitolo of the Utah theatre, who is standing by the lamphouse; and Yoshiro Budo, projectionist at the Carbon theatre, also in Price. Unfortunately the Price theatre projectionist, Jimmie Drossos, was out of town the day this pitcure was taken. Barney tells us with justifiable pride that he, himself, took the picture, using a Rolleicord camera. He also developed and printed it.

without the projector assembly entering into the experiment in any way. Thread the film into the soundhead and draw it out at the other end with the hand (after soundhead is running and soundhead connected to any sort of amplifier input). You should get sound just as good as though it were set in a normal position, which is common sense and could not possibly be any different no matter which position the head is operated in.

"Proof No. 2: A small portable sound projector may be made to operate (with sound) from or at any angle while holding the projector in one's arms."

Brother John Griffith, Jr., suggests the use of a film roller to provide clearance for the film leaving the soundhead before entering the lower magazine.

How to Aid Passage Of Green Film

I HAVE a letter from Walter Dunkelberger of Fargo, N. D., correcting the statement in these columns in the July 25th issue on the use of eucalyptus oil to facilitate the passage of green film. The solution of eucalyptus oil and ammonia should be applied to the mechanism, not to the film.

Walter Dunkelberger

"Prepare a solution of 2 ounces of a ammonia and several drops of eucalyptus oil," he writes. "Apply this with a small 'eyebrow brush' occasionally to the spots in the mechanism where the 'cake' collects and the trouble is eliminated. Ammonia cuts the wax, and eucalyptus oil lubricates the surface. Of course the sound slit should be cleaned regularly, as usual, in addition to this treatment."

Eucalyptus oil is not detrimental to film; in fact, sometimes it is used as a film preservative, therefore it is recommended as a lubricant for the film rather than another oil. The solution must be well shaken before using. If used as advised the ammonia would remove the hardening substance that the distributors place on film to make it wear longer.

"Dunk" is interested these days in O.C.D. work out in Fargo. He says, "The co-operation in this region is 100%. In July we had a mass meeting of all owners, managers, employes, etc., at the Fargo theatre. At this meeting, thanks to Eddie Kraus, city manager for the Minnesota Amusement Company, the managers volunteered to assume full responsibility for their own places and asked for only occasional inspections by the O.C.D. staff. The meeting that night really got things off to a great start with talks, movies, singing, etc.

"Since then the managers have started to function. They have registered at least two from each place of business in the Air Raid Warden's School and have started to check over their houses. We held our first 'unannounced inspection' July 22, finding many violations of fire ordinances, etc., but have adopted the policy of suggesting improvements rather than ordering them, and the managers are certainly doing their part. Many of the staff members have volunteered for O.C.D. work when off duty, and about half of Local 510 are taking air raid warden training. The 'Morale Units,' headed by the theatre, are the first business group to get organized in this territory. Our slogan is: "The amusement industry the first business to be 100% prepared for any emergency, as usual!"

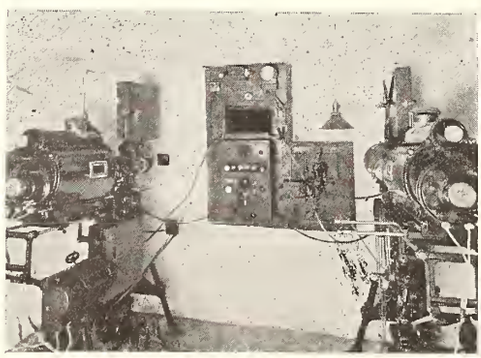
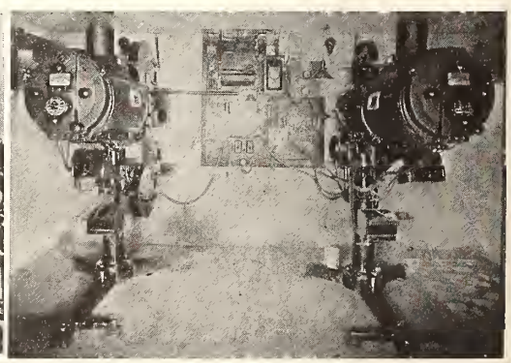
The Course for Beginners In Landing a Job

HUBERT DUPUIS, of Lake Linden, Mich., feels there should be a place for him in the projection field now that the war is on. He writes:

"I am from a small town, have just graduated from High School and am planning on going to the city, probably Detroit. I have been projecting pictures in a small theatre in this town. We possess two projectors, Western Electric sound and Peerless Arc lamps. I like this work very much and hope to continue it. I am very familiar with the mechanism, but I do not know much about sound since we have a special sound engineer to take care of all our troubles. I am anxious to learn, however.



"Because this is a small theatre in a small town I am not making steady wages, and it occurs to me that with the war on many theatres might be looking for men with experience who are out of the draft age. I am 18 years old [that's within draft age!—F.H.R.], have had two years' experience and am at this time working. Perhaps you will be good enough to advise me as to how to get started as an apprentice in some larger projection room?"



As I have said so many times in the past,

These pictures, which interestingly demonstrate that enterprising showmanship and pride in ownership are to be found in a remote little community as well as in our cities, come from my good friend W. T. Stratton of Challis, Idaho. And with them comes this message: "It has been about 11 years since I have written to you, but I never fail to read all your comment and projection helps in BETTER THEATRES. I have been projecting pictures now for nearly 18 years and I have one advantage that some of the boys do not have. I own my own theatre and have since 1932. It is grand never to have to ask the boss for a new sprocket, or for that matter, any part pertaining to the perfect operation of the show. When I want anything, I simply order it—though there have been times when I have had a great time paying for a lot of it! I find that good projection pays, however, so never allow my projectors to fall apart before repairing them. I am enclosing four views of my theatre. Two pictures were taken in 1939 before I started to remodelling them. The other two are recent pictures. My projection room is equipped with Simplex "High" lamps, Simplex sound, and Simplex rear-shutter heads. I have a Goldberg enclosed rewind set, Neumade film cabinet and table, plus Neumade hand rewind set. At the present time this town, which in good times has a population of only 630 people, is pretty badly affected by the war and I have had to close down to only two nights a week. Fortunately, I have a club and bar across the street, so manage to keep busy. The Lyric seats only 212 people, but all seats are new and the theatre is completely air-conditioned in summer and heated with an automatic oil furnace in winter. "I have always taken pride in projection and even now seldom let anyone other than myself do the job of projection, and I have built up the reputation of having the finest sound and projection around here."

I can only advise such young chaps to go to the business agent of the union in the district in which they wish to work. He is in the field and on the job. It is utterly impossible for me, here in New York, to know local working conditions in distant places. The union business agent is the fellow who can give the beginner a straight steer.

Reviving Some Good Theatre Staff Rules

I ONCE saw on one of the walls of a B. S. Moss theatre some rules for the staff to follow: I came across them again the other day, in looking through some old papers. I think they are worth repeating:

"Courtesy is Politeness originating in kindliness habitually exercised, civility, and graciousness. The mark of good breeding is due consideration for others and a proper courtliness of manner.

"Rules—

"1—Loyal service is respected. Be willing in service.

"2—Be polite to all—especially women.

"3—Be patient with and gentle and considerate to those under you.

"4—Do not laugh or jest at defects and faults in others.

"5—Show deference to the sick, the old and the afflicted.

"6—At all times observe quietness.

"7—Do not judge or act too hastily.

"8—Reserve decision until you have heard both sides of a discussion.

"9—Let your discourse with business men be short but comprehensive.

"10—Repeat only the good you have heard—forget all else.

"11—Learn to smile. A smile and pleasant word carries on.

"12—Carefulness is contageous. Strive to make those around you happy. Life is not so short but that there is always ample time for courtesy."

Somehow, such thoughts seem to fit into these times—to jibe with what we are fighting for.

An Equipment Maker's Generous Gesture

THE OTHER DAY, in reading a New York newspaper, we noted in the column of "movie comment" by Jimmie Fidler, what Bill DeVry, son of Herman A. DeVry and now head of the DeVry Corporation in Chicago, had done to provide means of entertainment for the soldiers in Alaskan army bases.

It seems that the film comedian, Joe E. Brown, while on a tour of camps, found the chaps in Alaska to be without motion picture projection equipment, despite the fact that the Government has been most liberal in supply camps with such equipment. Joe told Mr. Fidler, and Mr. DeVry learned of the situation from the columnist, whereupon he promptly dispatched four complete projection and sound outfits to the neglected fellows in Alaska—all costs paid.

The Vogue Theatre

LOUNGE AND TOILETS: Off the foyer is a powder room with one mirror and shelf. Walls and carpeting are the same as in the foyer. A men's toilet room is off the opposite side of the foyer.

PROJECTION AND AIR SUPPLY: The projection room, 10x16 feet, has asbestos and iron walls and ceiling; walls are painted cream, the ceiling ivory. The concrete floor is covered with linoleum. Ports are closed with Donnaconda wallboard perforated for the light beam, with optical glass inserted to close the perforation acoustically. Equipment includes Powers 6B projectors (to be replaced after the war), Morelite lamps, Forest rectifiers, Mellaphone soundheads. . . . The Vogue is heated by a forced hot-air system (another system supplies stores and offices), air being introduced into the auditorium through ceiling outlets. Air is returned through floor mushrooms and stage fascia grilles. On summer evenings the cool night air characteristic of the region is admitted to the basement fan room and blown into the auditorium at high velocity.

ceive the light from the cove shown at the top. This illuminated wall should not be stained since it will darken it unnecessarily. Clear varnish and polishing only should be used. Plywood is most adaptable because of its ability to bend to the curved forms.

The light cove can use 1-inch diameter lamps of 7 watts each, placed about 16 inches on center. Stronger wattage lamps should not be used since too much light at this point will compete with screen light. Larger lamps would also be difficult to conceal. White light is preferable because it is most neutral.

The idea of providing receptacles in theatres, with placards announcing that candy placed in them will be sent to army camps, has rapidly caught on. And above the Army is shown collecting, in a jeep! This picture was taken by Jim Runte, United Artists publicity manager, at a Fox West Coast house in Pasadena.

about People of the Theatre

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

The Affiliated Circuit in Philadelphia will reopen its remodeled Lorraine theatre, long dark, as the Booker theatre. Located opposite a housing project for colored people, the house will be re-named in honor of Booker T. Washington, Negro educator.

EVERT CUMMINGS has purchased the Meralta theatre at Downey, Calif., airplane manufacturing center.

ROBERT KILGOR, who has managed theatres in various sections of the country, has been named manager of Loew's Broad theatre, Columbus, Ohio, succeeding ROBERT H. SUITS, who has resigned to enter another business.

MERVYN MOONEY, assistant manager of the Fox theatre, San Francisco, has joined the United States Coast Guard and is taking an active part in the entertainment section of the recreation program at the new training station near San Francisco.

FRANK WEITZEL of the Alpine circuit has been placed in charge of the Monte Vista, Emery and Shard, Cincinnati, suburban theatres operated by MRS. ELMER SHARD. He succeeds RALPH KINSLER, who has joined the Warner sales staff in Chicago.

Nineteen managers of Golden State and San Francisco Theatres, Inc., in San Francisco, gathered at a luncheon there recently for the awarding of prizes to 13 winners in a quarterly quota drive. ROY COOPER, who made the awards, congratulated the winners on behalf of R. A. MCNEIL and SAMUEL H. LEVIN, general managers of the two circuits.

The Tower theatre, located at 1175 Boston Road, Bronx, N. Y., has been leased for a long term of years to Vinograd Theatre Enterprises, Inc., by the East River Savings Bank. The theatre will be completely renovated and modernized both interior and exterior. EDWARD I. BROWN and ALBERT STRAUSS were the brokers.

JOHN DICKSON, former city manager for the Frisina Circuit, Springfield, Ill., has acquired the Elmo theatre at St. Elmo, Ill.

HENRY GOLDENBERG, for the past six years manager of the Berkeley theatre, Berkeley, Calif., owned by Blumenfeld Theatres, Inc., has been made manager of the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, recently acquired by this concern and reopened as a motion picture and vaudeville house. Mr. Goldenberg was at one time manager of the Fox theatre in Berkeley.

BEN LEVIN'S Avenue theatre, San Francisco neighborhood house, is being reseated by the B. F. Shearer Company.

WILLIAM E. CHAMBERLAIN, who operated the Campus theatre, Berkeley, Calif., for several years, featuring foreign language pictures, has been made manager of the Berkeley theatre, a unit in the Blumenthal Theatres, Inc.

H. O. PIERCE, owner of the Broadway theatre, announces a complete remodeling of his theatre, including a new foyer and booth equipment, and a full-week of program to replace the three-nights-a-week policy.

A. O. ("ANNE") BOURDON, manager for several years of the Buck theatre at Biloxi, Miss., has retired from active duty, with the intention, he says, of spending his "remaining days" at his country lodge on Biloxi Bay. A painter, baker, shrimp factory manager, railroad man and restaurant operator in his younger days, Mr. Bourdon found his most interesting work as theatre manager, he declares. Mr. Bourdon opened the Gaiety theatre, now the Buck, shortly after the war, later selling the house to Saenger interests. He also operated the Crown at Biloxi for several years.

The 700-seat Ivanhoe theatre, subsequent-run house in South St. Louis, owned by MRS. FRANK C. TABLER, has been purchased by DAVID KOMM, circuit owner in Missouri and Southern Illinois.

A son was recently born to MR. and MRS. FRANCIS F. EAGAN, Scranton, Pa. Mrs. Egan is the former Helen Comerford, daughter of Mrs. Comerford and the late M. B. Comerford, general manager of the Comerford Circuit.

JOHN W. FLETCHER, theatre operator and mayor of Unalaska, a town on Unalaska Bay, on which Dutch Harbor is located, was a recent visitor to the States, to confer with the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs on the evacuation of natives from the area.

ROBERT L. LIPPERT is remodeling a garage at Vallejo, Calif., into a theatre. He also plans the erection of a theatre in Vallejo, and one in South Vallejo.

F. J. ROBERTSON has opened the Crystal theatre at Corning, Calif.

The Rivoli, subsequent-run house in downtown St. Louis, has been taken over by the Marre Company, while the Lyric has been taken over by CHARLES GOLDMAN, who has closed it for renovation.

D. W. ODOM has purchased the Granada theatre at Morgan Hills, Calif., from A. BLANCO.

The Victory Theatre Corporation, Norfolk, Va., has been chartered with maximum capital of $15,000, to conduct an amusement business. J. F. FALLS, of Lynchburg, Va., is president of the new corporation.

A Great-Grandmother But Still Rialto's Housekeeper

IT was just a few years after World War I that Carrie Betz went to work for John A. Schwalm, manager of the Rialto theatre in Hamilton, Ohio, as porter—or janitress, if you prefer—of that Northio circuit unit.

During the first World War she had worked in a factory manufacturing war goods; the other day, in her twentieth year as the Rialto's "housekeeper," and at the age of 65, she had an offer from the same manufacturer to take a similar job.

"I could do the work," she assured her interviewer, "but I just couldn't think of letting Mr. Schwalm down after all these years."

Her working day begins at 5:30 every morning.

She doesn't work according to a set schedule of hours. "I quit when the theatre is spick and span," she explained.

Her hours of relaxation nowadays are spent mostly with her family, which, during her twenty years at the Rialto, has grown to include two grandsons, three granddaughters, and two great-grandchildren.

The American theatre, Winnemucca, Nev., was badly damaged by fire recently, with an estimated loss of $8,000. The building is owned by HARRY OESLER and was under lease to JAMISON SELLECK.

The Tri-States Theatre Corporation of Des Moines, Ia., and JAKE COHEN, copartners of the Ottumwa Theatre Company, have assigned the following managers: C. RUSSELL HILL, to the new Ottumwa; ERNEST MURTFELD, to the Capitol; CHARLES PLOW, to the Rialto; HAL ACHOULES, to the Strand, and CHARLES WILSON, to the Zephyr.

PVT. DANIEL PALERMO, formerly of the Feeley theatre, Hazleton, Pa., and now stationed at Camp Wheeler, Ga., has been promoted to sergeant.

Warner Theatres has embarked on several reseating jobs, including the 2,067-seat Roger Sherman, New Haven; the 1,800-seat Garde, New London; the 1,800-seat Warner, Torrington; and the 1,297-seat Commodore Hull, Derby. At the Palace, Danbury, the lobby has been modernized and walnut display frames have been hung. The 1,300-seat Capitol, Danbury, is being completely redecorated.

The 470-seat Cameo theatre, Watertown, Conn., operated by VIC DEL ROSSO, has reopened, following installation of International seats, Motiograph projection equipment, Ashcraft Cyclex lamps and power units, and a cooling system.

CLIFF ANDERSON has sold his Royal theatre, Lohrville, Ia., to C. A. PRATT.

A. A. SALZAR has taken over the Nippon theatre in Sacramento, Calif., and has renamed it the Valley.

D. L. RHEEM, owner of the Orinda theatre, Orinda, Calif., and B. B. RANDALL, manager, have begun, as a policy, to act as host two evenings a week to a number of men attached to military units in the neighborhood.

PAUL MURPHY, manager of Loew's Ziegfeld, New York, is on leave of absence because of ill health. He is recuperating at Southampton, L. I.

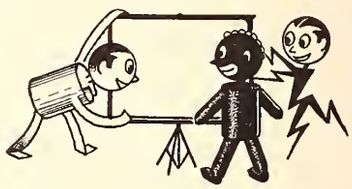
FREE THE 3 C'S FOR WAR WORK!

Here's how you can cut down their use without impairing projection light!

Copper, Carbon and Current are vital to Uncle Sam's war efforts—and important for morale building movies, too.

You can cut down on your use of these needed production tools by taking these three steps—



1. PUT YOUR PROJECTOR IN GOOD WORKING ORDER

Call in your nearest RCA Theatre Supply dealer or RCA Field Engineer and have him thoroughly overhaul your projector. By putting it in good condition and keeping it that way you will use less current, and avoid breakdowns.

2. RCA MAGICOTE YOUR LENSES

Increase your effective projection light by having your projection lenses treated with RCA Magicote. This marvelous process puts more light to work on the screen—permits you to cut your use of Copper, Carbon and Current.

3. GET AN RCA SNOWHITE SCREEN

Third way to save on the 3 C's is with an RCA Snowhite Screen. It's really white—requires less projection light for good results. Order one today.

"M-G-M exhibitors are starting the season of 1942-43 doing Miniver business with 'Somewhere I'll Find You.' That gives you an idea of our New Season releases."

GREAT EIGHT FROM M-G-M!

(Our First Group in 1942-'43)

CLARK GABLE, LANA TURNER in "SOMEWHERE I'LL FIND YOU"

Opening business in four of first seven test runs beat "Mrs. Miniver." In other three spots slightly behind where Miniver played advance prices. Being held for 2 weeks in all Loew engagements (some even longer!) America is flocking to popular Clark's latest with lovely Lana.

"TISH"—Test engagements top biggest hits of the season! Comedy sensation!

Another proven success to start your M-G-M year. Three cities were selected for test runs: Houston, Atlanta, Providence. These tests are literally astounding! They beat such top-grossers as "Tortilla Flat," "Ship Ahoy," "Courtship of Andy Hardy" and "Rio Rita." Mary Roberts Rinehart's beloved character, played by Marjorie Main, is audience riot!

"PANAMA HATTIE" starring RED SKELTON, ANN SOTHERN

When you read this, the first test engagements will have opened. Our prediction based on the uproarious Previews East and West is that box-office history will be made. The big Broadway musical comedy is packed with stars, song-hits; teaming with talent and hilarity. Extended run for your SRO sign!

"APACHE TRAIL"—A great Western Production on a Big Scale!

Let the trade critics describe it: "Big classification"—Box Office Magazine. "Meat for fans"—Film Daily. "You can recommend without reservation"—Showmen's Trade Review. "Bang-up job all around"—Hollywood Reporter. When Leo invades the Western field he does it in style!

MICKEY ROONEY in "A YANK AT ETON"

When Mickey as an all-American football guy gets into swank English Eton School it's the high-spot of his comedy career. "Grade-A entertainment"—Showmen's Trade Review. "All out for laughs"—Hollywood Reporter. "Should bring Rooney fans to box-office in droves"—Film Daily. "Howling piece of merriment" —M. P. Daily.

"THE WAR AGAINST MRS. HADLEY"—as newsworthy as "Mrs. Miniver"

Selected for big radio tribute on Kate Smith program, September 24th, as part of high-powered World Premiere promotion. (Every picture launched on this nation-wide hook-up thus far has leaped into the million-dollar class!) Timely, thrilling with unforgettable performances by Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Richard Ney (of Miniver fame) and others.

JEANETTE MacDONALD, ROBERT YOUNG in "CAIRO" with Ethel Waters

A new twist in spy melodramas that hilariously kids the menaces. The stars at their best with torch-singer Ethel Waters repeating her stage triumphs and a production that spares nothing in magnificence. De luxe show, with roster of talent, hit songs and sultry sirens. "Audiences will enjoy thoroughly"—Daily Variety.

"SEVEN SWEETHEARTS" with Kathryn Grayson, Van Heflin, Marsha Hunt

Watch the nation-wide publicity as M-G-M conducts survey for the seven most romantic cities (those with the most marriages) for simultaneous World Premieres. A sweetheart of a show with romance and gayety, gorgeous singing and those seven seductive sweethearts.

HONOR and OBLIGATION

DISTINCTION extraordinary is conferred upon our industry by the certification of more than four thousand theatres as issuing agents of United States War Bonds, Series E.

The lowly nickelodeon of 1905 has indeed come into high estate.

No institution of our government has ever stood in more official dignity and deep public responsibility than the Department of the Treasury.

The election of the motion picture theatres of the land as representatives and agents, authorized to convert documentary forms into the securities of the United States is recognition without pattern of precedent in the history of the institution of the theatre or of government.

In the acceptance of this signal deputation of honor and responsibility the motion picture has added commitment to the September Bond and Stamp drive for a billion dollar "Salute to Our Heroes". It starts next week.

FILM for WHAT?

THE freezing and rationing of film stock by the War Production Board will be received by the motion picture industry with considerably more equanimity if the subsequent official councils on the subject should indicate that the prodigal consumption of material by the many and assorted government bureaus and departments not directly related to the war is to be curbed adequately.

In the name of the government, and at its expense, an array of amateurs and alleged documentary experts have been consuming a deal of film, much of it in support of ideologies and special political designs. The circulation of film of that order has been slight and its service, even to its interested producers, negligible. It has included several pictures much heard about in the writings of critics and commentators, but little seen on any screen. Any restriction of the normal flow of entertainment film to the theatre of the people in behalf of film pamphleteering will incur sharp resentments.

Also the flat decision that there shall be no film at all for advertising pictures carries some radical implications. This sweepingly takes from business a prime merchandising implement in which it had quite as decided and positive an interest as in the printed word. The advertising film has been a source of revenue in some thousands of motion picture theatres. Also the use of film by advertisers has contributed extensively to the dissemination of projection equipment and the creation of wider channels to non-theatrical audiences, most especially with the development of 16 mm. pictures.

One government department devoted to public relations on a majestic scale has for months been tinkering with plans to go to the country with its messages through those sixteen millimeter machines with ramifications down to every one of the nation's 3,070 counties. There are yards of graphs and diagrams on the subject.

That, if it gets a-going, will be taking some film, too.

ARNOLD ECONOMICS

THAT Mr. Thurman Arnold, the assistant attorney general who is so much a factor in motion picture trade practises by authority of an untried suit, delivered a lecture, or possibly a speech, in Chicago last Saturday, before trade organization executives, demanding a "free economy".

"This nation needs to get rid of the idea of a security economy and return to competitive industry," he is quoted. That sounds fine, like so much that Mr. Arnold says. As they say in Hollywood: "He talks a swell picture."

Examination of what he calls a "free economy" as opposed to a "security economy" discovers that he opposes a conduct by corporations tending to conserve their special interests and those of their stockholders. He assails the industries of aluminum, steel and transportation especially for failure to reach needed production months ago, and holds that steel and aluminum production have been held down in fear of a surplus and post-war competition. He says that fluorescent lighting was withheld from the market to keep up the consumption of electrical energy.

It is to be noted, however, that Mr. Arnold did not, so far as is revealed by lengthy press reports, go into the matter of the slaughter of pigs to keep them off the market, of crops plowed under, or subsidies for not raising crops.

ON FROZEN DOLLARS

A RECENT dispatch from our London Bureau to Motion Picture Daily by Mr. Aubrey Flanagan says: "The general impression here is that all monetary restrictions pertaining to the British operations of the American film companies will be lifted at the end of the current agreement year, October 1."

That, to be sure, will be the subject of some more conferences in London and Washington, and between them.

To the objective observer it would seem about time.

The quota system in Britain, the semi-freezing of funds, and the like related to an assortment of considerations which are now in a fading perspective. There was, as of then, a movement to fortify the British picture producing industry behind walls of restriction, somewhat for the industry as an industry and considerably to conserve for Britain as much as might be of the world trade propaganda value of the screen. There was also more empire politics than trade in the situation. A lot of it was Far East. Since then have come certain eventuations, including the fall of Hong Kong and Singapore.

Meanwhile, both the British pound and the American dollar, so long based on the age-long and symbolic value of gold, have been smelted in the world ordeal to a concentrate of the faith and hope of the civilization for which both Britain and the United States are fighting.

Today the identity of interest is so intensely accentuated by the whole of world political and economic forces that dollar-sterling barriers, such as have obtained in motion picture commerce, appear more than outmoded.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Good Neighbor Films

TO AID in hemisphere defense, and to counteract Axis propaganda where it has been most effective, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs is planning an exchange of United States Army training films with the military staffs of the Latin American republics. Training pictures made for the Army in Hollywood by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science and by the Signal Corps will be translated into Spanish and Portuguese by the Rockefeller office.

These pictures will be shipped to the American missions in South America. They will be available for the general staffs and war colleges of the American nations, and will be shown by U. S. military attaches at private screenings. A number of special productions are contemplated, it was said. Major Arthur M. Loew, formerly chief of MGM's foreign department, will supervise.

Nelson Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, was to leave this week on a trip to Brazil, Chile, Peru and Colombia. The trip was arranged by the State Department some time ago to permit Mr. Rockefeller to be in Brazil for the Pan-American Sanitation Conference in Rio de Janeiro September 7th to 18th and in Chile for the Inter-American Public Health Conference September 10th to 16th. Francis A. Jamieson, director of the press division, will accompany Mr. Rockefeller.

Selznick Plans

DAVID O. SELZNICK returned to the production news columns this week with the signing of the British film actress, Valerie Hobson, to a seven-year contract, with annual options. Miss Hobson's debut under the Selznick banner will be delayed for at least 90 days pending the completion of a commitment in London and her arrival in this country. Mr. Selznick, however, was planning to leave New York for Hollywood by the end of the week to complete plans for the start of at least one of the three pictures he has lined up. They are "The Keys of the Kingdom," "Claudia" and "Jane Eyre." At mid-week, Mr. Selznick was said to be undecided as to which of the three would be produced first.

Miss Hobson, before leaving England, will appear in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Sabotage Agent," with Robert Donat. Harold S. Bucquet will direct the picture, which is to be started next week. The actress previously appeared in four Hollywood productions when she came to the United States in 1934 for Universal. The films were "The Bride of Frankenstein," "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," "The Were Wolf of London" and "Dark Corner."

Miss Hobson's recent British films have been "This Man Is News," "This Man in Paris," "U-Boat 29" and "Atlantic Ferry."

VERSATILE, volatile, gifted and scintillating Orson Welles, rocketed into New York at last weekend and was based, so to speak, on the Hotel Plaza. From there he was about many errands here and in Washington. He was fresh and vigorous from a two-month tour of all the Americas south of Panama, following upon the making of his RKO picture, "It's all True," which remains in process.

According to Herbert Drake, Mr. Welles' representative, speaking from the Plaza, the agenda included editing the picture for RKO, negotiations for settlement of differences and accounts with RKO, consideration of offers from Twentieth Century-Fox, negotiations with Louis B. Mayer and MGM, Broadway offers, and some issues about clearing his 180,000 feet of negative through customs. It seemed to be indicated that Mr. Welles hoped to keep his Mercury Players intact as a production unit and move it under another release banner.

The statement that Mr. Welles' picture negative was awaiting development and screen examination made even more extraordinary some semi-official peans of praise of its utter magnificence. If it looks so tremendous even undeveloped in the can, one can only fancy what the materialization will be when it actually is seen.

The picture project, despite its uncertain status, continues under a guaranty to RKO in the sum of $300,000 from the Office of Inter-American Affairs, thus underwriting, so far, that much of Mr. Welles' pictorial expedition to Brazil. It is said that Mr. Welles' Latin-American adventure has cost about $600,000—and that includes a debate, probably yet to be had, on an item called overhead.

It appeared a reasonable forecast that when the dust had all settled there would be a picture, and that Mr. Welles would be on a new project somewhere, with his Mercury Players.

Recruits

HENRY FONDA and Tyrone Power, two of Hollywood's favorite leading men, this week became members of the armed services of the United States. Mr. Fonda joined the Navy and Mr. Power the Marines. A third star, Lyle Talbot, applied for enlistment in the Army Air Corps at Los Angeles. It was expected that he would be sworn in later in the week and would be allowed two weeks to finish a picture. He has appeared on the New York stage for the last two years.

Battle of Midway

THERE is many a slip between the battle of Midway and the nation's screens—and a few hot battles in Washington. Films of the action around the Pacific island which sent the Jap fleet scurrying have been in Washington for many weeks. Navy censors are understood to have cleared many of them for release. But a fight is raging on how they will be shown to the public.

The battle was filmed under fire in 16mm Kodachrome by Lieutenant Commander John Ford, Hollywood director, who is on loan from the Navy to the Office of Strategic Services. It is the first battle ever recorded in color motion pictures.

Experts who have seen the pictures describe them as "a superb technical accomplishment." And they are said to be good news.

It is reported, however, that the Motion Pictures Division of the Office of War Information, under the guidance of Lowell Mellett, has refused to release the pictures, or black and white excerpts, to the newsreels. Mr. Mellett, it was said, plans to hold them for release as a two-reel Technicolor special. He now is reported to be working on plans for their distribution through the War Activities Committee, or by a distributor.

Newsreel men are annoyed. News is news, they say. And two-reel Technicolor history can come later.

OK in Argentina

ARGENTINA has lifted its ban on Columbia's picture, "The Invaders," which was ordered withdrawn after a highly successful week at Buenos Aires' first run theatres because of its "unneutral" portrayal of the Nazis. Columbia's home office on Wednesday said it had been informed that the picture might now be shown in the Argentine. The action came a day after Brazil declared war on the Axis. Twentieth Century-Fox also was expecting word that it might now show "Little Tokyo, U.S.A." in Buenos Aires.

New Interest

HOWARD HUGHES, motion picture producer, aeronautical engineer, speed flyer, tool maker and multi-millionaire, now is associated with Henry J. Kaiser, dam and ship builder, in a project to build a fleet of air freighters to carry war supplies to the United Nations' fighting fronts. Mr. Kaiser won permission from Donald Nelson of the War Production Board in Washington to produce 500 freighters which are to be designed by Mr. Hughes.

Announcement of the new association was made from San Francisco by Russell Birdwell, who had represented Mr. Hughes in connection with his latest and as yet unreleased picture, "The Outlaw," and who, according to his own announcement, would continue to do so. "The Outlaw" was completed some months ago and was carried for a while on the Twentieth Century-Fox release schedule but since has been dropped. A Production Code seal was given the picture May 28, 1941, on condition that certain scenes be cut. The seal was never picked up and presumably the cuts were never made.

Mr. Hughes is especially remembered in the motion picture industry for his $4,000,000 production, "Hell's Angels," which introduced Jean Harlow to the public.

Mr. Hughes, these many years, has had a lucrative business in the reissuing of his old motion pictures, among them "Hell's Angels," "Scarface," and others, and distribution rights to which had reverted to him, as owner, principally from United Artists, as distributor under term agreements.

Mr. Hughes' "Scarface," of 1932, for example, recently turned in a 13-day run at the independent Arico theatre, near Eighth Avenue, on 42nd Street, just off Times Square, in a highly competitive theatre belt. The 10-year-old "Scarface" has played the immediate vicinity of Times Square on 98 different bookings, at a number of theatres in the area, according to Astor Pictures, New York, Mr. Hughes' film agent. It was produced by Howard Hughes, directed by Howard Hawks and will be remembered as bringing Paul Muni to the fore in films. When first shown, Mr. Muni received little or no billing. His performance forced recognition, a parallel to Rudolph Valentino in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Feature by U.S.

THE U. S. Government's first venture into feature picture production, "The World at War," will have its premiere on September 3rd at the Rialto theatre, New York. It is a 66-minute documentary compiled from U. S. and confiscated German, Japanese and Italian films to show the "pictorial record of a decade of war that led inevitably to the attack on Pearl Harbor and the Western Hemisphere."

The opening will be a reserved seat affair, with $100 War Bonds as the price of tickets. The picture is to be distributed without charge by the War Activities Committee in three and six-reel versions. The shorter version is for single feature houses.

Sam Spewack, Hollywood scenarist, and now a consultant for the Motion Pictures Division of the Office of War Information, edited the picture and wrote the commentary. The Paramount, MGM, Warner, RKO and 20th Century-Fox exchanges will share the distribution of the picture.

Walt Disney again will send his characters to all screens through the War Activities Committee on September 8th in a three-minute short, "Out of the Frying Pan Into the Firing Line," urging housewives to save cooking fats for their glycerine content. The RKO exchanges will handle it for the War Activities Committee.

Too Hot

LOWELL MELLETT, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of War Information, this week requested United Artists to withdraw from circulation, "The Real Glory," Samuel Goldwyn production, which was being reissued. The picture already had played several hundred engagements, Paul Lazarus, head of the contract department of United Artists, said. The withdrawal was requested because of scenes in the picture showing conflict between Americans and Filipinos. It was the fact that part of the picture was concerned with the first Philippine campaign that prompted its reissue. Mr. Lazarus said the withdrawal took effect immediately upon receipt of the Government order.

Greetings to Moscow

GREETINGS were sent this week to the Soviet Union Conference on American Films in Moscow from the Film War Service Council, composed of motion picture industry unions in the New York area. Addressed to the Soviet Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries and the Committee on Cinematography of the Soviet Union, joint sponsors of the Moscow conference, the letter of greeting hailed the Council's "fellow film industry workers in the Soviet Union as heroic fighters against fascism, not only on the battle field but also on the field of culture."

Editor, Product Digest Section

THE exhibitors of the United States and Canada, buyers and sellers of product, and expert judges of the relation between talent and box-office response, have made their nominations for the ten most promising players for future stardom. The results of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's second annual "Stars of Tomorrow" poll of independent and circuit theatre operators award the honor to four men and six women, reversing the proportion of the winners in 1941.

The first poll taken last year brought enthusiastic comment from exhibitors and press alike and had its influence as well on the course of product, as may be judged from the subsequent careers of the ten favored players. This was, moreover, no fleeting reaction to novelty. The "Stars of Tomorrow" quest has taken its place beside the HERALD's famed "Ten Best Money Makers" poll, now in its eleventh year and an annual news event of international import. This year the returns poured in by the thousands above last year's great response.

The tone of comment suggests that the exhibitor has accepted the election as a constructive part of the performance of his office of showman, and is encouraged to participate by the reflection of his choice in announcements of new product. He is eager for new faces and new marquee names, and his judgment of talent is confirmed by the agreement of thousands more of the men who sell the pictures to the public.

Each of the top ten names in a field of 120 nominations was mentioned by more than a quarter of the exhibitors, while the name of the leading candidate, Van Heflin, appeared on almost two-thirds of the ballots. His performance in "Johnny Eager" brought him to the attention of motion picture audiences, and his roles this year in "Kid Glove Killer" and "Grand Central Murder" gave the exhibitors an opportunity to test his drawing power. The majority decided he had it.

In second place is another male performer, although last year the first three places went to women. Eddie Bracken, who won critical acclaim and a sizable following for his appearance in "The Fleet's In," received the vote of almost half of the exhibitors. He is the first comedian to have gained a leading place among the "Stars of Tomorrow," a reflection of the increasing demand for comedy in our present world.

The leading feminine contender, Jane Wyman, is hardly a newcomer to the screen. Her more recent performances have, however, convinced theatre operators that she has served her apprenticeship and is now ready for more important roles. This would not mean, in the view of several admirers, a try at heavy drama. They hoped to see her featured in light comedy, her usual metier, and a type of entertainment which appears in high favor.

Representing the increasingly popular musical film is the Number Four star prospect, John Carroll. His singing lead in "Rio Rita" established his appeal in the minds of showmen, many of whom expressed a demand for Carroll with music rather than in straight romantic roles.

Fifth place is held by an actor whose sudden recognition is based on but one picture. Alan Ladd has played bits in others and received a principal role in "Joan of Paris," but his performance in "This Gun for Hire"

Inevitably the line between the Stars of Tomorrow and the stars of today is often a thin one. Several of the players designated in the poll might be considered to have already reached stardom. However, this list represents exactly the exhibitors' choices for the Stars of Tomorrow.

HOW THE SHOWMEN VOTED

is responsible for his very recent notice. The fact that this picture has not been available to all exhibitors sending in nominations would suggest that a complete gauge of his prospects has not yet been had.

The positions from six to ten are all occupied by young women. They include three recent recruits from the stage and a girl whose acting career dates from 1941. Leading them, however, is Lynn Bari, who has been seen in supporting roles for several years. Her nomination, coming after her performances among the principals of smaller pictures would be an indication of her increased audience appeal. Nancy Kelly placed eighteenth on the 1941 list, and her rise to seventh position this year may be attributed to her appearances in "To the Shores of Tripoli" and "Friendly Enemies." Donna Reed took eighth place on one year's work in films. Performances in less than half a dozen films, including "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," "Mokey" and Apache Trail," have served to win her the showmen's vote of confidence. For Betty Hutton the voters had but one picture, "The Fleet's In," but her singing and engaging comedy there made many enthusiastic admirers. Exhibitors made no suggestions here except "another Hutton picture," although that might mean another "Fleet's In," as well.

Honorable Mentions Evenly Divided

Winding up the top ten list is Teresa Wright, whose career in pictures has been as brief as it is unusual. Exhibitors who have not played 'Mrs. Miniver" or "Pride of the Yankees" have had but one opportunity to see her, in "The Little Foxes." But even here in support of fine performers with established reputations she won their special approval.

The next fifteen places, only a very few percentage points behind, went to seven men and eight women, the masculine minority again bunching near the top. A comparatively small number of votes would have placed Richard Whorf among the leading ten in the combined ranking, as he was in the circuit theatre operators' list. Janet Blair and Ann Miller were favorites with the independent theatre operators, just a few points separating them from the first division.

Nominees of 1941 Show Improvement

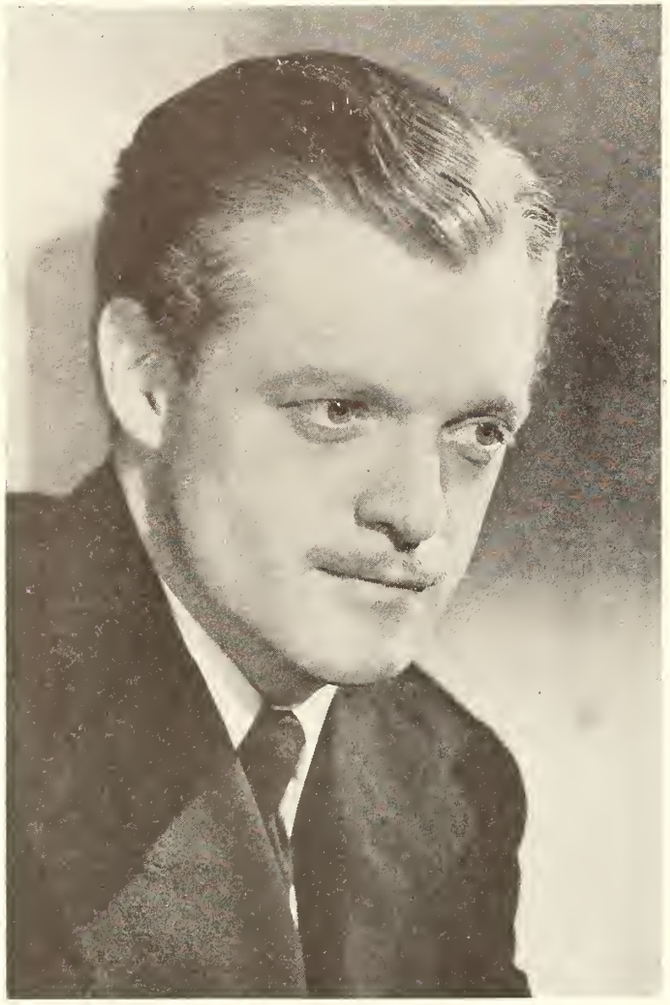
All players in this group were strong contenders, carrying at least 15 percent of the votes and drawing special comment from exhibitors who strongly urged that they be given greater opportunity to display their talents. Several names in this group, as well as a few among the top ten, were prominently mentioned in last year's poll. All of these improved their positions in the ranking, Eddie Bracken, John Carroll and Nancy Kelly moving to the higher list—and incidentally in the same order of favor. Ellen Drew and Gloria Jean gained better places, while James Craig, Philip Dorn and Brenda Joyce achieved the honor roll of fifteen this year. Others in the group, William Tracy, Jack Carson, Patricia Dane, Dana Andrews, Alexis Smith and William Lundigan, are new to the exhibitor.

A separate tabulation of the votes from theatre operators in Canada shows little disparity with the prevailing opinion in this country. The first six are, however, occupied by men and the last four by women. Eddie Bracken and Van Heflin change places in this count, and a newcomer to the listing, John Loder, achieves fourth place. This native Englishman is the only player on the Canadian list who does not place within the first fifteen in the combined ranking. Alan Ladd, John Carroll and Richard Whorf complete the top-heavy male contingent. Jane Wyman, Lynn Bari, Ann Miller and Nancy Kelly draw distaff honors. An analysis of the Canadian vote will be published in the HERALD next week.

The ten winners of 1941 were excluded from the balloting. Laraine Day has long since graduated from the "Dr. Kildare" series to featured dramatic roles and is now being prominently cast in important MGM productions. Rita Hayworth's achievement of stardom in the past year cannot be questioned after "My Gal Sal," "Tales of Manhattan" and Columbia's forthcoming "You Were Never Lovelier." Robert Preston has been proving his right to top male listing last year by his performances in "Reap the Wild Wind" and other Paramount pictures.

Ronald Reagan, whose wife, Jane Wyman, has this year won the second award in the family, has scored in "Kings Row," and "Juke Girl" with eight Warner assignments scheduled for the coming season. John Payne made good on the showmen's prognostication in six top assignments including "Weekend in Havana," "To the Shores of Tripoli" and the forthcoming 20th Century-Fox musical, "Iceland."

Jeffrey Lynn's present service with the armed forces has delayed his fulfillment of showmen's expectations. Ann Rutherford has left MGM's Hardy series for important roles in 20th Century-Fox productions including "Orchestra Wives" and "Whistling in Dixie." Dennis Morgan scored successes in "Captains of the Clouds," "In This Our Life" and "Wings for the Eagle" and is currently working on Warner's filming of "The Desert Song." Jackie Cooper, the Number Ten selection, proved his mature abilities in "Syncopation" and is scheduled for prominent parts in forthcoming RKO films.



Want Good Stars in Box Office Pictures

An analysis of the results sheds no light on the perennial question of whether pictures make stars or stars make pictures. Many of the players nominated for future stardom have come up through the less pretentious features. A few have made a strong impression in a single appearance. But the exhibitor seems to feel he knows box-office talent wherever he sees it and would like to see it given adequate opportunity in box-office pictures. The experience of the past year in the development of the "Stars of Tomorrow" chosen in 1941 has shown the soundness of his opinions and has assured him that his opinion, given proper expression, will be heard.

Top Ten

1. VAN HEFLIN. (MGM) A career of just five pictures has brought Emmet Van Heflin, Jr., formerly of Walters, Oklahoma, to the brink of stardom. A seafaring young man, he studied acting and tried brief roles between trips. After a varied career in radio, he won acclaim in "The Philadelphia Story" on Broadway and was given an MGM contract.

2. EDDIE BRACKEN. (Paramount) Born in Astoria, L. I., of a non-theatrical family, he was a child singer and then a stage bit player. At sixteen he tried Hollywood without success, returning East to join the stage company of Producer George Abbott. His appearance in "Too Many Girls" brought film offers and roles in "The Fleet's In" and "Sweater Girl".

6. LYNN BARI. (20th-Fox) Although the daughter of the Rev. Robert H. Bitzer of Roanoke, Va., Lynn Bari long cherished the goal of a screen career. She is a success story from the studio stock school, where she trained for two years. After roles in "Secret Agent of Japan" and "Moon Over Her Shoulder", she was prominently cast in "The Magnificent Dope".

7. NANCY KELLY. (20th-Fox) A screen veteran at the age of six, Nancy became a radio ingenue at 13 and a stage sensation in "Susan and God" three years later. Hollywood was quick to see her possibilities. Roles in "Stanley and Livingstone", "Private Affairs" and "Parachute Battalion" preceded her appearance as the girl in "To the Shores of Tripoli".

8. DONNA REED. (MGM) Born on a farm in Iowa, Donna studied to be a secretary at Los Angeles City College She finished her schooling but graduated to a Hollywood contract and featured roles in MGM pictures. She joined the Hardy family for one picture, "The Courtship of Andy Hardy", and has played important roles in "Mokey" and "Apache Trail".

Stars of Tomorrow

3. JANE WYMAN. (Warners) A Missouri girl of French-American descent, she decided on a Hollywood career while at Los Angeles High School. After trying a variety of professions, she got her break with Warners in "My Man Godfrey", and has continued on the way up, appearing as the romantic interest in "You're In the Army Now" and "My Favorite Spy".

4. JOHN CARROLL. (MGM) A singer and an actor, John Carroll has been an adventurer since he was ten. He ran away from New Orleans, his home town, and spent the next 10 years in deep-sea diving, working on freighters and finally studying for an operatic career in Italy. In Hollywood he has had roles in "Lady Be Good", "Sunny" and "Rio Rita".

5. ALAN LADD. (Paramount) Born in Hot Springs, Ark., Ladd moved to California at an early age. There he tried for a movie career via the production staff, earning money to enter a school of acting. Radio took him, however, and Sue Carol was so impressed she became his agent. She sold him finally for a role in "Joan of Paris", and then came "This Gun for Hire".

9. BETTY HUTTON. (Paramount) The "Blonde Blitz" grew up singing, working in restaurants in Michigan at fourteen, when she was adopted by the Vincent Lopez band. From there her style of singing made such an impression that the "Panama Hattie" role was hers, and Paramount signed her soon after to enliven "The Fleet's In."

10. TERESA WRIGHT. (Goldwyn) One of the Provincetown players, Teresa, a New York girl, skirted Broadway in touring companies until "Life With Father" settled down for a long run. Samuel Goldwyn saw her there and decided on her for the role of the daughter in "The Little Foxes". "Mrs. Miniver" and "Pride of the Yankees" followed her first screen success.

Critics Agree on Four Selections

Van Heflin, the leading candidate of the nation's exhibitors for future stardom, is a favorite of the critics as well. With Alan Ladd he was the most frequent nomination in the poll of motion picture writers for the country's leading newspapers. Teresa Wright, third in their ranking, and Eddie Bracken are the other players from the showmen's top ten who found favor with the press.

Completing the critics' listing are Michelle Morgan, Dana Andrews, Janet Blair, Philip Dorn, Paul Henreid and Richard Whorf, all of whom were mentioned prominently by showmen. The writers' support was spread among a field of 75 candidates, with the top three names receiving a preponderance of votes.

On the separate poll of newspaper critics' preferences last year the voters agreed on five of the exhibitors' choices. Rita Hayworth, Laraine Day and Ruth Hussey won both polls but in different order. Ronald Reagan and Jeffrey Lynn also were chosen.

INDUSTRY MUSTERS FORCES TO MEET WAR BOND QUOTA

Treasury Warns Trade of Difficult Task; Final Plans Completed

The motion picture industry this week turned its exploitation and showmanship organization to the sale of $1,000,000,000 in War Bonds during September. Its talent, energy and a great part of its manpower set out to prove to the Treasury Department that the billion dollar quota could be reached in spite of warnings that that amount in Bonds had not been sold in any single month since January, when the sales had the impetus of the Pearl Harbor attack.

In a publicity release on the eve of the campaign opening, Oscar A. Doob, public relations director of the drive, emphasized the difficulty of the task and said the experts were betting three to one that it couldn't be done. But he told the drive workers to ignore the official Treasury state and county quotas if they were lower than the industry's own and said that reports on sales for the last month indicated that it could be done.

Final plans were completed this week for the start of the drive. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will start the sales on the steps of the Treasury Building in Washington Monday, August 31st, following a luncheon at which he will be host to some of the actors who will start the Stars over America tours, Government officials and members of the industry's campaign committee. Newsreels and radio broadcasters will cover the event.

Stars To Leave from New York Sunday

The stars will leave from New York Sunday and will be guests of the National Press Club on their arrival in the capital. They will give a special broadcast for the men at the fighting fronts Sunday evening and after Monday's rally will start their individuaal tours. The star contingent will include Greer Garson, Hedy Lamarr, Irene Dunne, Ann Rutherford, Virginia Gilmore, James Cagney, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Charles Laughton and Edward Arnold.

Similar ceremonies are planned for San Francisco, Fresno, Dallas, Chicago, Chattanooga, and Philadelphia, starting points of the other Stars over America tours which will cover 300 cities, involving 21,000 miles of travel in 30 days. Each 10 days a new set of stars will take up the seven routes, representing the most complex one-night stand booking job ever undertaken by showmen. It is hoped that $300,000,000 in Bond sales will be reached by the stars. The complete routes and the stars scheduled for the first 10 days were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD August 22nd.

Two changes have been made in the star schedules. Hedy Lamarr will replace Irene Dunne for the first six days of Tour No. 6, starting at Philadelphia and including Newark, Trenton, Camden, New Brunswick and the shore resorts. Miss Dunne will take up the tour September 6th at Paterson and cover Passaic, Hackensack, New York, Bethlehem, Allentown, Easton, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. George Raft will accompany Herbert Marshall and Joan Leslie on the first two days of Tour No. 1 starting at San Francisco.

Slogans for the campaign were winging this week from the headquarters in New York with every release. "American Ranger Raiding Forces" were being organized by showmen throughout the country in answer to telegrams sent out last Friday; "Junior Commando" units were being formed; the period of the drive is to be called "Salute to Our Heroes Month" and the stars will urge everyone of the millions of fans they will greet to "Buy a Bond to Honor Every Mother's Son in the Service."

"Ranger," "Commando" Forces Organized

The Ranger Raiding Forces, newest unit idea, are to send "foraging" parties into every town and village of the country, using key cities as bases. They are being organized by exchange managers supported by salesmen, city and county exhibitor chairmen of the War Activities Committee, and city and county chairmen of the Victory Fund Committee and War Savings Staff.

The Junior Commandos are modelled after the Senior Commando Committee of industry executives who are concentrating on the sale of the F and G series Bonds, for a total quota of $33,000,000. The New York unit of the committee met at luncheon last week to hear talks by Richard C. Patterson, chairman of the New York State War Savings Staff and Joseph Hazen, chairman of the committee. James Cagney told the newly created customer's men of his experiences in selling bonds. Among those present were Nicholas M. Schenck, Barney Balaban, Spyros Skouras, Kenneth Thomson, Stanton Griffis, George J. Schaefer, Peter Rathvon, Arthur Mayer, Herbert Yates, Hermann Place, Martin Quigley, Gradwell Sears, Herman Robbins, Abel Green, Charles Francis Coe, Jules Brulatour and W. C. Michel.

At a Commando meeting in Chicago last week John Balaban, Illinois chairman, became the first of the Commandos to reach his $1,000,000 quota.

Detailed Instructions Mailed to Theatres

The national campaign committee publishes a bulletin reporting progress and ideas, the latest six-page edition of which was mailed Friday to 15,000 theatres. Detailed instructions for conducting rallies, service flag dedications and other daily events for the 30-day drive, together with numerous suggestions for special events, samples of available advertising, organization news, and directories of drive officials are included.

The War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department will print a full size, eight-page two-color bulletin covering the early phases of the drive on September 10th. An urgent call for photographs and stories covering local activities has been sent to all state chairmen, field publicity men anad others.

The cooperation of all newsreel companies was pledged last week at a meeting of the newsreel committee of the War Activities Committee in New York. Harry Goldberg, chairman of the screen promotion committee, plans national newsreel coverage of the spectacular phases of the September drive.

Newspaper Film Editors Assist

The motion picture editors of the daily newspapers throughout the country are enlisting to aid the campaign. Many have written columns praising the drive as the most important war effort so far undertaken by the industry. Many also are members of local publicity committees. In addition 13 fan magazines are contributing full pages of space, editorials and photo layouts.

The aid of the New York press was pledged at a meeting at the Hotel Astor last week at which Colonel Richard Patterson, chairman of the State War Savings Staff, and Max A. Cohen, chairman of the state War Activities Committee, explained the industry's plans for the month. The state quota is $160,000,000 of which $116,000,000 is to be sold in New York City.

National Screen Service is making 100-foot lengths of sound track carrying "Over There," by permission of Leo Feist, Inc., for exhibitors to use during the opening night salute while the colors are being carried from the theatre entrance to the stage. The tracks will be available for less than $2.

William McCarthy, business agent of the New York Bill Posters and Distributors Union, has volunteered the services of his members to post paper advertising the drive. Over 5,000 three-sheets and 2,500 one-sheets will be posted by the men employed by the circuits in the metropolitan area.

PAYS THEATRE BILLS WITH WAR BONDS

John Balaban, Illinois state chairman for the War Activities Committee and one of the Commandos for the September Drive, persuaded a debtor of the Balaban & Katz circuit to take full payment of his $12,000 bill in War Bonds. The circuit head now is persuading exhibitors to try paying all their September bills in War Bonds.

Another idea being tried in Illinois was originated by Jules Rubens, co-chairman for the state. He has sold two large companies blocks of Bonds which will be held until Christmas and used as holiday gifts and bonuses for employees.

LOCAL UNITS COORDINATING BOND CAMPAIGN EFFORTS

Record $1,007,000 Bonds Sold at Boston Auction; New York Rallies Held

Coordination of the national and local machinery set up for the September $1,000,000,000 War Bond drive was completed this week, and the state, county and committee chairmen reported all their forces ready for the campaign, in many cases with large backlogs of Bond pledges built up in advance for the opening.

Highlights of the week included a new record of $1,007,000 worth of Bonds sold through an auction at the Movie Stamp and Bond Booth on Boston Common; a pledge from Kansas farmers to invest 10 per cent of the receipts from their wheat crop of 7,500,000 bushels in War Bonds; plans for 15 rallies for 3,500,000 New Yorkers of foreign extraction; committee luncheons in many communities for which the guests paid from $100 to $500 for Bonds as the price of admission, and the subscription of $1,000,000 in Bonds by industry workers in Chicago.

In New York four big rallies, described as "sneak previews" of the industry campaign next month, were held Tuesday and Wednesday with Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, concluding their tour of the nation, as star salesmen. The comedians have sold more than $70,000,000 worth of Bonds. The rallies, arranged by Robert Weitman, managing director of the New York Paramount theatre, were held at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the Community Center in White Plains, the Bush Terminal Docks and on the Central Park Mall.

Special Publicity Unit Joins Doob

The Century circuit's annual autumn drive, usually held in September, will be postponed until after the War Bond campaign, officials of the circuit announced this week. Managers of the circuit have been instructed to concentrate all their efforts on the campaign.

A special squad of publicity men joined the staff of Oscar Doob, publicity director, to help supply information to the New York newspapers and wire services. They are Perry Charles and Halsey Raines from MGM; James Dunne, from the Rivoli theatre; Jack Yarnoff, Screen Publicists Guild, and Edward Schreiber of Warner Brothers.

As a prelude to the coming September drive, more than $1,000,000 in War Bonds was subscribed in Chicago last week within the industry. With the exception of three unions, all were personal pledges of individuals and not company commitments.

At a luncheon at the Blackstone Hotel last Friday, presided over by John Balaban and Hal Halperin, $500,000 in bonds was pledged by 26 Chicago exhibitor leaders. Later in the day, at a meeting in the Council Chambers of the City Hall sponsored by the Amusement and Recreation Division of the Chicago Commission on National Defense, 250 exhibitors pledged approximately $300,000 more. Miscellaneous pledges brought the figure over the million dollar mark.

As part of the Chicago campaign it is planned to hold a $1,000,000 luncheon in the Bal Tabarin of the Sherman Hotel on September 1st, admission to which will be $2,500. On September 3rd, a $1,000,000 supper will be held at the Ambassador East Hotel. Reservations will cost $5,000.

Sam Gilman, of the Loew organization in Harrisburg, Pa., has announced the organization of a Bond Caravan which will tour the country. A reconstructed auto trailer will be converted into an office from which the Bonds will be sold. All local exhibtors and managers have pledged themselves to purchase bonds at 12:01 A.M. September 1st to start the drive. A bandstand is being placed in front of the courthouse and daily stunts will be staged there during the drive.

Community Groups Aid in St. Louis

In St. Louis the Parent-Teachers Association, Better Films Council and the Child Conservation Conference are cooperating in the campaign. A total of $223,929 in Bonds and Stamps has been sold so far with many houses in the area still unreported.

A Junior Commando campaign is being organized by Pennsylvania exhibitors to aid the drive. Young boys and girls throughout the state will be organized to gather pledges. They will be given lapel buttons and a special show.

Ted Emerson, state publicity chairman for Nebraska, working out of the Tri-States Theatres offices, has mailed special press books, including suggestions for stunts and rallies, to every exhibitor in the area. In Omaha, a special event is planned for nearly every day of the month, in cooperation with civic groups and organizations of all kinds. Exhibitors and distributors in the area have amassed a backlog of pledges to open the drive.

With daily meetings in progress, and the Mayor, radio stations, trolleys, construction companies, organization bands, artists and other key men promising 100 per cent cooperation, Connecticut's September Bond drive promises to go way over the top. Chairman I. J. Hoffman and Harry F. Shaw, Robert Russell, city chairman, and Morey Goldstein and Timothy O'Toole for the exchanges, are exerting every effort to plan effective reception of stars, rallies, actual solicitation, new booths, parades, luncheons, and other sales inducements.

Connecticut Drive Shows Promise

R. J. Bennett of the Connecticut Company has contributed trolley dashers, trolley transportation for bands, artists and others appearing in parades and rallies, and street ballyhoo trolleys.

Hartford theatre managers and circuit executives attended a meeting at the Warner Regal Tuesday night to set up committees for the drive. Henry L. Needles, Hartford division manager for the Warner Theatres, and chairman of the Hartford WAC, presided at the meeting.

At Tuesday's meeting, representatives of Hartford's radio stations and newspapers pledged their support for the drive. Lou Brown, director of publicity and advertising for Loew's-Poli New England Theatres, Inc., discussed various methods to be used during September. Henry L. Needles presided at this event also.

Among those present were representatives from Hartford's theatres, radio stations, newspapers, and War Bonds and Stamps Connecticut sales staff. William Mortenson, managing director of the Bushnell Memorial, Hartford, during the meeting, pledged a $1,000 Bond. Maurice Shulman, managing director for Shulmans' Hartford Theatres, then pledged a $5,000 Bond on behalf of his father.

Among theatre men at the Tuesday meeting were managers from out-of-town, including Frank Weinstein, Eastwood, East Hartford; Hugh Campbell, Central, West Hartford; Joe Borenstein, Embassy, and Randy Maller, Strand, New Britain; John Matthews, Circle, and Jack Sanson, State, Manchester.

Kansas City Area Gets Off to Good Start

The Kansas City exchange area, Kansas and western Missouri, got off to a good start August 21st, for its participation in the drive. About 100 exhibitors and managers of the territory, representing 17 zones into which the Kansas territory had been divided and 13 zones of Western Missouri met at luncheon at the Hotel Muehlebach, with 50 local film men, including district and branch managers, salesmen and supply men. Each of the latter had been assigned to assist the zone representatives in carrying out the campaign in their respective sections. Elmer C. Rhoden, head of Fox-Midwest, Commando for the territory, presided. Arthur Mayer, assistant coordinator of the War Activities Committee, emphasized the national crisis, the honor shown to the industry in giving it leadership in this campaign and the opportunity for service by all members of the industry.

Mr. Rhoden outlined the steps so far taken; the organization of a committee with numerous subcommittees that met August 18th, the preparaion of a manual for use by zone committees.

Claud Morris, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploitation man for this territory, has been drafted as executive officer for the campaign organization. Mr. Morris also will be liaison between the general committee and the several Missouri zones.

Shortly after Bing Crosby and his party took over Victory Square in Seattle, before 15,000, the spectators responded by buying the greatest amount of War Bonds and Stamps in any day, $177,039, bringing the total since opening of the Square to $2,329,124.

The highest-priced luncheon in the history of Philadelphia, to be held September 1st at the Mid-day Club, will usher in the War Bond drive of the motion picture industry in Philadelphia. Admission to the luncheon, with Hedy Lamarr as the guest of honor, consists of a properly executed pledge to buy at least a $5,000 War Bond.

Abbott and Costello Sell $388,000

Paul E. Glase, manager of the Embassy theatre, Reading, Pa., and chairman of the drive at the 15 theatres in the city, reported that the total sales for the month of July were $41,299. During the 31-day period, $29,275 worth of bonds were sold and $12,049 in Stamps, bringing the total for the 15 cooperating theatres to $128,295.

Nearing the close of one of the most successful tours by stars on behalf of the sale of War Bonds, Abbott and Costello sold $388,000 worth of Bonds at a luncheon staged in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., August 22nd, under the sponsorship of the Joint Labor Victory Committee, composed of delegates of the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods. More than 400 attended the luncheon while thousands lined the route which the comedians were to travel coming from Bloomsburg, Pa., where they appeared the night before.

20th-Fox Opens Regional Meets In New York

First of a series of four regional sales meetings for Twentieth Century-Fox branch managers, bookers and salesmen were to start Friday morning when the eastern sales convention opened in the Hotel Astor with 75 representatives from the 10 eastern exchanges and 20 executives and department heads of the home office distribution department in attendance.

A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern sales manager, was to conduct the New York regional meeting. Spyros P. Skouras, president, and Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of sales, were to discuss selling problems for the 1942-43 season and present a survey of the product possibilities previously announced by the production organization for delivery this winter and spring. William J. Kupper, executive assistant to Mr. Connors, was expected to return from Los Angeles and San Francisco, where he has been concluding circuit deals, in time for the opening sales session.

Following the New York meeting similar regionals will be held in Chicago August 31st, September 1st and 2nd for representatives from nine exchanges; Dallas, September 3rd, 4th and 5th for six Southern branches and in Los Angeles, September 6th and 7th for the six far-western sales offices. William C. Gehring, western sales manager, will preside at these meetings.

With top 20th Century-Fox officials attending, representatives of the company from St. John to Vancouver met in Toronto Friday for a regional sales meeting at the Royal York Hotel.

New York executives attending included Mr. Skouras, Mr. Connors, Mr. Gehring, Mr. Smith, Aubrey Schenck and Ted Shaw. J. P. O'Loghlin, company head in Canada, led the Dominion delegation.

All-day sessions were followed by a screening of "Tales of Manhattan" in the evening. Visitors at the meeting included J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, Famous Players Canadian; R. W. Bolstad, FPC vice-president, and H. M. Masters, general manager, Odeon theatres.

The first issue of the March of Time which Twentieth Century-Fox will distribute under the terms of the contract recently signed by presidents of both companies, will be titled "The FBI Front" and is scheduled for lease September 11th. This subject will be known as Vol. 9, No. 1 and will be followed by the second release, as yet unannounced, on October 9th and a new subject released every fourth week.

Eastman Donates More Raw Stock

The Eastman Kodak Company last week donated 7,500,000 feet of 35 mm film to the War Activities Committee for prints of Victory Films for free distribution to theatres. Added to an original gift of two and a half million feet, the Eastman contribution to the WAC totals ten million feet of film. The donations were arranged through Jules E. Brulatour, Inc.

Start New War Film

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences last week ordered work begun on another War Department training film to be made at Republic studio. It is titled "The Cavalry Rifle Platoon."

Huston Promoted

Ralph Huston, formerly doing publicity on units at the Warner Studio, has been promoted to handle national feature and art service.

LATE REVIEW

Between Us Girls

(Universal)

Gangway for Another Barrymore

Diana Barrymore, daughter of the late John, herewith proves her right to be billed in lights as representative in her generation of all the tradition inherited with her name. Don't let her fledgling performance in "Eagle Squadron" temper your exploitation of this number, in which she tackles acting chores to test the mettle of the veteran and handles them in a manner to satisfy the most exacting of her forbears.

There are plenty more names to bill the picture with—Kay Francis, Robert Cummings and John Boles, plus Henry Koster as producer and director—but the burden of its success as entertainment is upon Miss Barrymore all the way, and she carries it with never a slip-up or stumble. A preview audience to which it was submitted without notice in the wake of "Pride of the Yankees" drowned out sections of dialogue with its laughter.

The screenplay by Miles Connolly and True Boardman opens with Miss Barrymore playing a stage scene as Queen Victoria, reveals her then as an actress aged 20 who, going home to visit her mother (Kay Francis) and finding that lady courted by a man who doesn't know her age, pretends to be a child of 12, to promote the match, creating complications of diversified and humorous kind before reverting to adulthood for purposes of romance.

The subject gives the star a 75-year range for her talents of portrayal, which she takes in stride, but is by no means a mere concoction of thespian hurdles set up for her to jump over. On the contrary, it's a solid and steadily dynamic comedy, with able performances from all members of the cast contributing to the whole. Don't let this one slip by without campaigning it to the limit.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, without notice to the cash customers, who, having come in to see "Pride of the Yankees" and enjoyed a good cry, found itself repeatedly in tears again from laughter that rose and fell like waves upon a seashore. Reviewer's Rating: Excellent.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Release date, September 5, 1942. Running time, 89 min. PCA No. 8717. General audience classification.

General Aniline Shows Loss

The General Aniline and Film Corporation, New York, Tuesday announced in its statement of operation covering the six months ended on June 30, 1942, net income of $1,292,247 after all charges, including $3,626,616 provision for Federal taxes on income.

The result is equivalent to $1.75 a share on the Class A stock outstanding and compares with $2,348,318, or $3.20 a share earned in the first half of last year when tax charges totaled $2,750,625. The company's profit from operations for the first six months of this year amounted to $5,084,787, compared with $4,998,-159 in the 1941 period. The net income before provision for taxes was $4,918,863 against $5,098,943.

Associated British Reports Profit

Associated British in London Tuesday reported operating profit of $6,320,000 for the fiscal year, an increase over last year of $1,091,-000. The net profit was $1,627,000, an increase of $858,000. A. G. Allen, chairman of the board, reported splendid recovery from air raids and said the public demand for entertainment was reasserting itself.

RKO New York Houses Are Realigned

Edward L. Alperson, general manager of RKO Theatres, on Monday announced a realignment of the circuit's houses in the Metropolitan New York area into three divisions for the purpose of closer supervision.

At the same time Mr. Alperson announced the appointment of Harold Mirisch in charge of film buying and booking for the entire RKO circuit.

Under the New York revision, Charles McDonald, division manager, and Michael Edelstein, district manager, will have the following theatres: Palace, 81st Street, 23d Street, 58th Street, 86th Street, Regent, 125th Street, Hamilton, Coliseum, Royal, Marble Hill, Jefferson, Alhambra, Colonial and Empire.

The Louis Goldberg division with John Hearne as district manager will consist of the Albee, Alden, Kenmore, Prospect, Greenpoint, Bushwick, Tilyou, Madison, Richmond Hill, Dyker, Orpheum, Flushing, Republic, Strand and Columbia, Far Rockaway, Park, Rockaway Park and Shore Road.

Russ Emde, division manager, and Edward Sniderman, district manager, will supervise the Fordham, Franklin, Chester, Pelham, Castle Hill, Yonkers, Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, White Plains, Park Hill and Strand, Yonkers; Newark and Union City.

Mr. McDonald, Mr. Goldberg and Mr. Emde will have headquarters at the home office, Mr. Edelstein at the Coliseum, Mr. Hearns at the Albee, and Mr. Sniderman at the Fordham.

Harry Mandel, director of advertising and publicity, has named Fred Herkowitz, Pat Grosso and Maurice Harris to the publicity department at the home office, and Ray Malone and Vincent Liguori to do publicity in the field. John A. Cassidy continues as general press representative in charge of RKO Theatres throughout the Metropolitan area.

J. Parker Read, Jr., Ince Associate, Dead

Funeral services for J. Parker Read, Jr., former producer and one time associate of the late Thomas H. Ince, were held Monday, August 24th, at the Forest Lawn Chapel in Los Angeles.

Mr. Read, who was 57, was stricken with a heart attack at his home in Los Angeles last week. He had not been active in the motion picture industry for several years. Recently he had been doing public relations work in California for the Coca-Cola Company.

His motion picture career started in Cuba in 1912 when he encountered Mr. Ince, who was on location for the Biograph company. Mr. Read gave up his job as a suspender salesman to join Mr. Ince as an interpreter, and later as his production assistant and promotion manager.

With Mr. Ince, Mr. Read moved to the Paramount-Lasky studios, where he became a producer in his own right. There he discovered and starred Louise Long. In the early 20's Mr. Read joined Mack Sennett, Mr. Ince, Marshall Neilan and other independent producers in the Associated Producers venture. He was also a producer for Paralta, and other early companies.

Following Mr. Ince's death Mr. Read spent several years in Europe and produced two French pictures at Paris.

Vote on Sunday Films

The City Council of Oxford, Ala., has set October 6th as the date for a referendum on Sunday motion pictures. The action was taken following a petition from exhibitors.

KEEPING HOUSES OPEN WILL BE DIFFICULT, WPB WARNS

See More Acute Shortage Problem but Promise to Prevent Closings

Keeping the theatres open and operating as the war progresses will become increasingly difficult, the War Production Board warned last Thursday.

Shortages will continue to develop and become more acute and "there just won't be any" critical materials or manufacturing facilities to make replacements parts for projectors, heaters, air conditioners and many other items of equipment, it said.

Every effort will be made, nevertheless, to keep theatres open by the allocation of substitutes and other temporary measures, the War Production Board promised at a meeting in Washington on August 20th with members of the Motion Picture and Speaking Stage Theatres Advisory Committee. It indicated that the Government was fully aware of the wartime morale value of the theatre industry and did not intend to permit any wholesale theatre shutdowns if they possibly could be avoided.

Committee Canvassed Material Situation

Meeting for the first time with Christopher J. Dunphy, chief of the Amusements Section; N. G. Burleigh, chief of the Services Branch, and other officials of the WPB and Office of Price Administration, the committee canvassed the materials situation, which they were told frankly is tough and scheduled to get tougher.

Neither Mr. Dunphy, Mr. Burleigh nor other officials pulled their punches in telling the exhibitors what was ahead. They indicated that their frankness in outlining conditions was a return for the ability the showmen have displayed to meet the emergency. Mr. Dunphy, through the committee, complimented the theatre industry highly for its salvage effort, its showing of Army, Navy and WPB films and its promotion of War Bond and Stamp sales.

The board, Mr. Dunphy said, wants to keep all theatres open for the duration of the war, but "as the war progresses we should realize that this will become increasingly difficult."

Under Mr. Dunphy's leadership, the committee surveyed problems confronting exhibitors, particularly in the fields of air conditioning, copper and fuel oil. Heating promises to be be the most immediately serious situation, it was indicated by an expert of the Office of Price Administration, who told the group that oil rationing was in sight for the eastern states. He said that theatres would be low on the list if it were imposed.

The OPA representatives urged that all oil-using theatres convert to coal if possible. He explained that grates have been made available for that purpose, although automatic stokers are harder to obtain.

Mr. Burleigh urged the committee members to use their influence to bring about the greatest conservation possible of raw materials, and to advise theatre owners generally that "we have just begun to fight and we have just begun to make inroads on civilian activities.

"You can be very valuable," he said, "in making it plain to everyone that the effect of curtailment orders and materials shortages on civilian activities is going to be much tougher from now on."

The committee was advised to tell exhibitors that available materials must be stretched as far as possible, and were warned that the Government would give no aid in obtaining non-essential items although it will make every effort to take care of basic needs. "The war situation requires that we get tough," Mr. Burleigh said.

Representatives of WPB's Air Conditioning, Copper, and Plumbing and Heating Branches discussed briefly their critical materials situation. All joined in the opinion that less and less materials will be available for the amusement industry. Substitution will be necessary.

Replacement Subject Of Discussion

The replacement situation was one of the major subjects of discussion, with members of the committee complaining of difficulties in getting needed parts. Mr. Dunphy explained the procedure for filing PD-1a applications for repair and maintenance materials for theatres and the PD-1x application which can be filed by supply houses to obtain small parts—but not capital equipment—for maintenance of a 60 to 90-day inventory, enabling theatre owners to be sure of getting parts for emergency repairs without delay.

Edward L. Kuykendall, president, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a statement following the WPB meeting, said that it had brought out that there is "much confusion as o the proper forms and methods of procedure for obtaining parts for the maintenance of theatres.

Kuykendall Asks Supply Firms' Aid

"Of course," he added, "we must accept the decision that we cannot hang out the 'business as usual' sign. Everyone of us must withhold selfish motives and apply ourselves to the job of keeping the industry as a whole, whether it be production or theatre operation, going as nearly normal as possible.

"In doing this the theatre supply people have a tremendous job to do." Mr. Kuykendall said. "During the past few months, it seems to me, they have not done all possible. I do not say this in a critical tone, it is merely to bring to the attention of both the theatre men and the equipment dealers, the fact that by whole hearted unselfish cooperation the task of each will be made easier.

"The theatre supply man owes it to himself and the industry as a whole to be informed and kept informed in order that he may individually advise with the exhibitor, some of whom are not conversant as to proper forms and procedures.

Sources close to the supply trade in New York expressed some annoyance at Mr. Kuykendall's remarks, pointing out that the mere filing of priority applications was a useless procedure in cases where needed materials or parts are not obtainable.

WAYS TO GET MOST FROM AVAILABLE FUEL

In order to make fuel this autumn and winter meet the heating requirements of theatres, exhibitors were urged, in the August 22nd issue of Better Theatres, to give their personal attention to the operation of their heating plants instead of depending upon the routine functions of staff members appointed to do such work. Writing in that issue, Carl F. Boester, prominent air-conditioning engineer, pointed out the following as things theatre management can do to supply adequate heat with minimum consumption of fuel:

1. Be sure that the entire heating and ventilating system is thoroughly clean, and kept clean, during the months of operation.
2. Fire the boiler intermittently instead of maintaining a fire and banking it during non-operating hours. According to this practice the fire would be started just soon enough before the first show to provide adequate heat by show time.
3. Make maximum use of the audience as a source of heat. When a large audience can be anticipated, principally due to the attractiveness of the current program, the exhibitor can expect to require less heat from his heating system than when business is likely to be relatively poor.
4. If the theatre is not well insulated, it should be before the heating season begins. Similarly, all heating system piping should be well covered with insulation that is in good condition. No priority rating is required for insulation materials.
5. Do not bring into the theatre any more outside air than is absolutely necessary to prevent disagreeable odors. Some states and cities have laws stipulating a minimum volume of air. Many of these laws are antiquated and require a larger volume than is really necessary for comfortable and healthful conditions.
6. It may be possible in some cases to install a water circulating pump which draws water out of one side of a boiler and introduces it into the other side to cause agitation of the water, thereby increasing the efficiency of the boiler.
7. With hot air systems there are instances in which the rate of heat exchange may be greatly increased by speeding up circulation of air through and around the furnace.

RAW STOCK ORDER BARS NEW FILM ENTERPRISES

WPB Preparing Quotas for Established Film Distributors Only

Limitation of raw stock consumption to the 1941 level will "freeze" not only the film for picture production but the structure of the industry as well, members of the producers' advisory committee to the War Production Board were told Tuesday by Harold D. Hopper, chief of the motion picture section.

Within the next two or three weeks, the committee was told, the WPB will issue a schedule of specific allocations of film to each company. It is expected to be ready before September 15th, and probably will closely follow the ratios agreed upon by the distributors in their voluntary conservation plans.

Applications for raw stock will be received only from the 11 established Hollywood distributors. This in effect makes it impossible for new companies to be established or for independent producers to secure film for pictures unless they are to be released through one of the 11 companies.

Independents may appeal the order, the committee was told, to secure films. But the WPB clearly indicated that it intended for administrative efficiency to limit the number of eligible film consumers primarily to the 11 that supply the bulk of film shown in U. S. theatres.

The companies which will be eligible for raw stock and through which all independent product will have to be released are M-G-M, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, RKO, Universal, Republic, Columbia, United Artists, Monogram and Producers Releasing Corporation.

Five Categories of Film Use Set Up

It was announced that the film-freezing order would apply to feature-company pictures only and that newsreel producers would be given all film they may need, although they also will be required to make applications for raw stock supplies to the War Production Board.

At the same time, it was disclosed, the producers will not be required to bear the burden of raw stock consumed in making prints for the Army and Navy theatres. Their number has greatly increased with the expansion of the Army and Navy, and such film will not be counted against the amounts allocated for commercial business.

It was also indicated that film used in the making of pictures by or for the Government will not be charged against the companys' allocations. Five categories of film use other than by the entertainment industry have been set up.

Two of these categories apply to the armed forces, one being for pictures made by the Army or Navy and the other for non-Government films made at the request of either service. The raw stock is to be ordered by the two services.

The other three categories cover pictures bearing on the war. One, those made by civilian Government agencies, with film to be supplied on the recommendation of Lowell Mellett as chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of War Information; the second, non-Government pictures bearing on the war, made at the request of a civilian agency; and third, non-Government pictures bearing on the war, not made at the request of a civilian agency.

Under these interpretations of the freezing order, it was said, the burden on the companies will be materially less than if no relief was given for the film consumed on behalf of the Government. But the industry was strongly urged to intensify its voluntary conservation program with a view to cutting consumption below even the 1941 figure, if possible.

Among those attending the conference were: Barney Balaban, Paramount; O. Henry Briggs, Producers Releasing Corp.; Norton Ritchey, Monogram; John J. O'Connor, Universal; N. Peter Rathvon, RKO; Herman Robbins, National Screen Service; William F. Rodgers, MGM; Joseph Hazen, Warners; Gradwell Sears, United Artists; Earl I. Sponable, Movietonews; James L. Wolcott, March of Time; Edward Peskay, Hal Roach Productions, and Claude Collins, coordinator of newsreels for War Activities Committee.

Studios Compiling Film Inventories

Meanwhile all companies were busy compiling inventories of film raw stock supplies to comply with the WPB order that they file reports within 15 days.

All companies with undeveloped 35 mm film, either negative or print stock, must file a complete inventory on the linear feet, and the type of film on hand at midnight, August 20th, when the order became effective. These statements must be sent to Mr. Hopper, Motion Picture Chief, Consumers Durable Goods Branch, Section E, War Production Board, Washington, on or before September 4th.

It was also learned in New York that the 11 distributors at the request of the WPB were compiling reports on all features released in 1941. Print departments report that they are listing all 1941 titles, their length, number of prints, and the type of film used. This will probably form the basis for allocations of film during the war under the WPB schedule.

Inventories of raw film stock on hand are being compiled principally at the studios.

No acute shortages were reported last week as the freezing order went into effect. It was learned that newsreels, and most of the other departments issuing prints with a time value, had sufficient stocks on hand to tide them over pending the clearance of their first applications to the WPB for new stock.

Several of the newsreels at New York last week were reported to have gone to print Thursday night, several hours earlier than usual, to avoid possible stoppage of their films in laboratories or at shipping points under the freeze order. Most of the reels had on hand, or acquired on Thursday, enough film to carry them for several weeks.

Product Trailers Not Affected

Mr. Hopper's statements before the meeting of the advisory committee on Tuesday "gave the distinct impression that we have no cause to worry about film supplies," one newsreel executive said.

Also clarified in the course of the week was the status of trailers.

WPB officials indicated over the weekend that the ban on advertising and commercial films does not apply to regular trailers for entertainment product. However, the major distributors and makers of trailers have agreed to impose a voluntary limit on their length. National Screen Service, and several other manufacturers, have also curbed their production of so-called sound trailers using new material rather than clips from the picture advertised.

The maximum trailer length for special pictures is 200 feet; for "A" pictures 150 feet and for the run of releases 100 feet.

Impending restrictions on 16 mm supply and the restriction of 35 mm to the established distributors appeared likely to hit the roadshow and independent reissue business almost as seriously as the advertising and commercial film industry.

WARNER THEATRES CONVERT TO COAL

The Warner circuit is converting all oil burners in its theatres to the use of coal. The circuit has purchased a coal supply for the winter and it is being stored in theatre basements now. In cases where no storage space is available in the theatre, adjoining yards have been rented. More than 100 theatres were involved in the change.

Warner Bros. Promotes Frank Armstrong

Frank Armstrong, who joined Warner Bros. home office publicity department last January, was named to the post of promotion manager by Mort Blumenstock, eastern director of advertising and publicity, it was announced by the company in New York Tuesday. Mr. Armstrong succeeds Wilma Freeman, who left to join United Artists.

Before coming to Warner Bros., Mr. Armstrong was associated with Arthur Kudner, Inc., and Erwin Wasey & Co., advertising agencies.

DISTRIBUTORS RUSHING NEW PRODUCT ANNOUNCEMENTS

Universal Lists 14 Films Until December; RKO Offers Block of Five

Product announcements, long delayed by the confusion over selling plans for the new season, were being rushed out by distributors this week to meet the traditional opening of the motion picture season on September 1st.

Universal on Tuesday announced 14 productions for release through December; RKO Radio announced a block of five for sale starting August 25th; and Warners announced trade show dates for its second group of five releases.

William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager of Universal Pictures Company, announced Tuesday the company's releases of pictures for the new season beginning in September and running through December.

"Between Us Girls," the first of a new season product, is already set for Labor Day release. "Arabian Nights," the first of four Technicolor productions which Universal will make this year will follow.

Included in the program will be:

BETWEEN US GIRLS, produced and directed by Henry Koster and starring Diana Barrymore and Robert Cummings, with Kay Francis and John Boles in the featured supporting roles.

ARABIAN NIGHTS, Walter Wanger production in Technicolor, starring Jon Hall, Maria Montez and Sabu. The currently publicized Acquanetta has a featured role in this picture.

FOREVER YOURS, starring Deanna Durbin with Edmond O'Brien in a featured role. This will be produced by Bruce Manning.

SHADOW OF A DOUBT, starring Teresa Wright with Joseph Cotton and MacDonald Carey in featured roles. This is a Skirball Production directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Jack Skirball is the associate producer.

WHO DONE IT? an Abbott and Costello with Patric Knowles, William Gargan, Louise Allbritton and Jerome Cowan in the supporting cast. This will be directed by Erle C. Kenton. Alex Gottlieb is associate producer.

CORVETTES IN ACTION, the first spectacular production of the pocket destroyers used by the Canadian Government in the patrol of the Atlantic life-line. This picture is being filmed in cooperation with the Canadian Government. In the cast are Robert Stack and Patric Knowles. Howard Hawks will produce and Richard Rosson will direct.

NIGHTMARE, starring Diana Barrymore and Brian Donlevy, to be produced by Dwight Taylor and directed by Tim Whelan.

PITTSBURGH, a Charles K. Feldman Group Production, will reunite the box office team of "The Spoilers," Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott and John Wayne. The picture will be produced by Robert Fellows and directed by Lew Seiler.

WHITE SAVAGE which will bring to the screen the starring combination in Walter Wanger's "Arabian Nights," Jon Hall, Maria Montez and Sabu. George Waggner is the associate producer.

SIN TOWN, starring Constance Bennett, Patric Knowles, Brod Crawford, Andy Devine, Leo Carrillo, Ward Bond and Hobart Bosworth. Ray Enright will direct. George Waggner is the associate producer.

Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson in SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VOICE OF TERROR to be directed by John Rawlins. Howard Benedict is the associate producer.

Three musicals have also been set, the first of which is GET HEP TO LOVE with Jane Frazee, Robert Paige, Peggy Ryan, Cora Sue Collins, The Jivin' Jacks and Jills and starring Gloria Jean and Donald O'Connor. The picture is directed by Charles Lamont.

The second of these is GIVE OUT, SISTERS with the Andrew Sisters, Dan Dailey, Grace McDonald, Charles Butterworth, Walter Catlett, William Frawley, Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan and The Jivin' Jacks and Jills. Edward F. Cline is the director.

The third is MOONLIGHT IN HAVANA, starring Allan Jones and Jane Frazee with The Jivin' Jacks and Jills, Horton Dance Group, Grace and Nicco. Direction is by Anthony Mann. Bernard W. Burton is the associate producer of these three musicals.

It was also announced that during this period of time Universal will release in addition to the regular featurette program, two special 30-minute featurettes, "Eagle Versus Dragon" and "Roar, Navy, Roar," both in Technicolor.

RKO Radio Sets Group of Five

Five pictures of RKO Radio's new 1942-43 program will be offered for sale in a block began Tuesday, August 25th, following the trade showing that day of "Here We Go Again."

"Here We Go Again" co-stars Fibber McGee and Molly, Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy" and features "The Great Gildersleeve," "Mortimer Snerd," Ginny Simms, Ray Noble and Band, and other popular radio entertainers. It was produced and directed by Allan Dwan.

Others in the first group and which previously have been trade shown are "The Big Street," Damon Runyon's production co-starring Henry Fonda and Lucille Ball; "Wings and the Woman," the new Anna Neagle picture which highlights the dramatic story of women in the Army. Co-starred with Miss Neagle is Robert Newton. It is a Herbert Wilcox production.

Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in "Mexican Spitfire's Elephant" and "Highways by Night," from the Clarence Budington Kelland story with Richard Carlson, Jane Randolph and Jane Darwell, complete the group. Release dates start with "The Big Street" on September 3rd and all will be released during September and early October.

Trade Shows for Second Warner Group

The second group of five Warner Bros. releases for the 1942-43 season will be nationally trade shown on September 17th and 18th it was announced last week by Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager. The pictures to be shown are:

"George Washington Slept Here," starring Jack Benny and Ann Sheridan.

"The Hard Way," starring Ida Lupino, Dennis Morgan, Joan Leslie and Jack Carson.

"Flying Fortress," starring Richard Greene.

"You Can't Escape Forever," starring Brenda Marshall and George Brent.

"The Hidden Hand," with Craig Stevens, Roland Drew, Elisabeth Fraser and Julie Bishop.

Two midwest meetings of Warner Theatre managers were conducted this week by Harry M. Kalmine, assistant general manager of the circuit, and other home office executives. The first conference took place Wednesday in Milwaukee, for the managers in the Wisconsin territory, and the second in Chicago on Thursday for the Illinois zone.

In addition to seasonal business matters, the meeting will discuss the "Yankee Doodle Dandy" openings in Warner midwest houses.

The Warner Canadian sales meeting, originally scheduled for August 24th and 25th in Montreal, has been postponed until about the middle of September.

Producers Releasing Corporation business is up 115 per cent over last year, and playdates in the last two months have increased 60 per cent, Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales, told the press on his return Monday from Hollywood. The P. R. C. sales chief reported many important bookings as indicative of the widening scope of the company's operations.

SPG Employment Plan Devised

The Representative Council of the Screen Publicists Guild of New York has approved an employment plan which provides for an immediate survey of the membership to determine employment status; a card file of unemployment members so that they might be informed without delay when jobs become vacant, and close co-operation on employment matters between SPG and other unions. Unit chairmen are to be made responsible for reporting openings at their companies, according to the plan.

The new scale of monthly dues is as follows: Apprentices, or those earning from $25 to $39.99 weekly, $1.50; Associates, or those earning from $40 to $64.99 weekly, $2.50; Publicists or those earning from $65 weekly up, $3.00; Members earning under $25 weekly to continue paying $1.00.

School Film Survey Is Released

A "Survey of Motion Picture Equipment in Elementary Schools in the United States," compiled by Nathan D. Golden, industrial consultant for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the U. S. Department of Commerce, has been released by the Department. The large book is bound in loose-leaf form and consists of 444 pages of tables listing the schools by states and counties, and indicating whether the school has its own equipment, the type of such equipment, and the type of equipment it can borrow.

Billings Opens 55th Street

Thomas Billings has reopened the 55th Street Playhouse, New York. The theatre, home of foreign films, has been closed for about two years.

McDowall in MGM Film

Roddy McDowall has been loaned by Twentieth Century-Fox to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the lead in "Lassie Come Home."

British Grosses Up 40%: Seidelman

Reports Theatres Doing Capacity Business; Was on Special Mission

With grosses up by as much as 40 per cent, British theatres are operating consistently closer to capacity than those in any other section of the world, Joseph Seidelman, foreign manager of Universal, disclosed last week. He returned from London via Clipper last week.

The screen, he said, "is the only real entertainment left to the English people." To get into the theatres they are waiting in long lines for as much as two hours, even at neighborhood houses, he reported. Although the last show starts at 6:30 P. M. so patrons can be home by 10 P. M. theatre business is still 30 to 40 per cent above pre-war levels. Two-hour daylight saving makes it possible for theatres to stay open until 9:30 P.M.

Mr. Seidelman visited London on a special mission connected with the organization of motion picture service for United States troops in Great Britain. American films are being distributed through a London exchange of the Army Overseas Motion Picture Service.

Organized London Branch of WAC

A London branch of the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry also was organized by Mr. Seidelman. It will consist of the British managing directors of the eight American distributors. Joseph Friedman of Universal is chairman.

The British WAC sub-committee will work with the U. S. foreign managers' division of the War Activities Committee. It will assist the War Department in providing the latest U. S. films for American soldiers stationed in the British Isles.

Escapist films are in heavy demand among British film audiences, Mr. Seidelman reported, praising Hollywood for its contribution of musicals and light comedies. After almost three years of war, with blitz on their doorsteps, Britons are "fed up" with heavy war and action dramas. "The funnier the comedy the better they like it," he said, pointing out that escapist pictures are far outgrossing war dramas.

Propaganda Pictures Government Task

Propaganda films are exclusively a Government function, Mr. Seidelman said. All programs must include at least one Ministry of Information subject. The best reels of this type are those using news material taken in action by military cameramen, he indicated.

The increase in theatre volume was attributed to the stringent rationing of most durable commodities, and a generally high wage level among British munitions workers. With coupons even more important than cash for the purchase of food, clothing and other essentials, Mr. Seidelman reported that working people in England are able and willing to pay the highest prices for seats in the theatre. This holds true in all areas.

By Staff Photographer

JOSEPH SEIDELMAN

Recent tax increases, with an advance in all ticket prices, hit attendance for about two weeks, but the theatre-going public quickly absorbed the difference, Mr. Seidelman told interviewers. Income to theatre operators has not increased under the new price scales, he said.

Discussions looking to a complete revision, and probable lifting of Britain's ban on revenue withdrawals are now underway, the Universal executive said.

He confirmed reports that R. C. G. Somervell, vice-president of the British Board of Trade, was en route to Washington with full authority to conclude an overall monetary agreement. If this is reached, Mr. Seidelman foresaw an end to the need of special film revenue pacts.

Universal has lost two exchanges in Britain, Mr. Seidelman said, but the practice of storing prints in suburban vaults held bomb losses to the damage to office space, furniture and files. The Government is making every effort to see that bombed theatres are restored to operation as quickly as possible if they are not damaged beyond repair. Government inspectors issue immediate priority ratings for essential replacement equipment.

Studio space is at a premium in Britain, with only the Denham lot in full operation, he said. Producers have booked its stages for many months in advance.

Although British film production is cut to almost 20 per cent of its pre-war volume the English still are sending pictures by air to neutral Sweden and Switzerland and to the dominions, he said. The United Newsreel, prepared by the five American companies, also is reaching neutral Europe via London, Mr. Seidelman added.

Marine Units See 'Wake'; 'Piper' Openings Set

A twin premiere at two Marine Corps bases was held Monday night for Paramount's film, "Wake Island," dedicated to American defenders of the Pacific Island. The openings were held at Camp Elliott, Marine base in San Diego, Cal., and at the Quantico, Va., base in the east. Leading newspaper and screen celebrities appeared at both showings.

A third and special preview was held simultaneously in Washington at the Marine barracks for officers of the Navy, Marine Corps and Navy Department officials.

Five simultaneous openings will be held on September 3rd in Los Angeles for "The Pied Piper," the Twentieth Century-Fox film which stars Monty Woolley. "Piper" will open at Grauman's Chinese, Loew's State, Wilshire, Four Star and United Artists theatres. Plans are being discussed for a special showing on September 2nd at Grauman's at advanced prices for the benefit of the Naval Aid Auxiliary Fund. After completing its first week at the five houses, the picture will be held over at the Four Star, United Artists and Wilshire.

Engagements of "Yankee Doodle Dandy" in 40 additional theatres, including eight RKO circuit houses, in September, were announced this week by Warner Bros. The film will play at an advanced scale of $1.10 evenings and 75 cents matinees. It will not be shown anywhere at less than the $1.10-75 cent scale until 1943, it was stated.

The next openings at Warner theatres have been set as follows: September 2nd: Warner theatre, Bridgeport; Warner, Torrington; Capitol, Springfield; Garde, New London. September 3rd: Capitol, Madison, Wis.; Troy, Troy; Warner, Wilmington; Bay, Green Bay, Wis. September 4th: Keeney's, Elmira; Empress, Danbury; Warner, Atlantic City (also at the Stanley, same city, starting September 9th); Warner, Reading; Strand, York; Capitol, Lancaster; Strand, Utica. September 5th: Delavan, Delavan, Wis.; Geneva, Lake Geneva, Wis. September 9th: State, Waterbury; Warner, Worcester. September 10th: Embassy, New Britain. September 11th: Earle and Ambassador, Washington. September 12th: Ohio, Lima; Ohio, Mansfield. September 13th: Ohio, Sandusky.

September 17th: Regent, Springfield, O.: Ohio, Canton. September 18th: Warner, Milwaukee. September 19th: Stanley, Baltimore.

The RKO circuit openings set to date include: Palace, Rochester; Orpheum, Des Moines and Strand, Marshalltown, Ia., September 17th; Orpheum, Sioux City, Ia., September 18th; Lincoln, Trenton and Iowa, Cedar Rapids, Ia., September 25th; Keith's Syracuse, October 1st; Grand, Dubuque, October 16th. Walter Reade's Mayfair, Asbury Park, opened the picture on Thursday of this week and Wilmer and Vincent's Colonial, Richmond, opened it on Friday.

Philco Net Drops

Net income of the Philco Corporation in the second quarter of 1942, after provision for estimated Federal and state income and excess profits taxes, amounted to $166,986 or 12 cents per share on the outstanding 1,372,143 shares of common stock, James T. Buckley, president, announced this week. This compares with net income of $402,835 or 29 cents per share in the second quarter of last year.

Completes Fingerprinting

RKO Radio's Hollywood studio this week completed the work of photographing and fingerprinting its employees, and has closed its citizenship identification offices.

EXHIBITOR UNITS WATCHING COMPANY SALES POLICIES

Trade Practice Committees Set Up by National and Regional Associations

With the United Motion Picture Industry's blocks-of-13 selling formula stopped dead in its tracks by the Department of Justice and distributors at liberty to sell in any manner they choose it appeared this week that exhibitor associations are planning a careful watch on all sales policies.

Even as salesmen for the five consenting distributors—MGM, Paramount, Warners, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox—were on the road this week with contracts for the first 1942-43 blocks both national and regional trade groups were setting up special trade practice committees.

The two largest national theatre operators' organizations, Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, both have served notice recently that they intend to keep a watchful eye on the prices, blocks, preferred circuit deals and playing conditions in the new season's contracts.

They have asked member theatres to report to the national headquarters any instances of what are felt to be unfair trade practices. These, it is indicated, will be dealt with on a national scale.

Asked End of "Nuisance" Trade Practices

M. A. Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh, president of Allied, keyed the organization's watchfulness policy as long ago as June, when he called on distributors to end "nuisance" trade practices, curb the number of special pictures at advanced terms, and to stop varying their individual policies. Subsequent resolutions in the Allied councils have called for specific studies of the special pictures situation, rentals and terms for the new season.

Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, last week in a statement expressing his disappointment over the rejection of the UMPI plan by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, warned the industry it was "sitting on a volcano."

"It does not require the Department of Justice or any agency for the producers to make a sincere and essential adjustment in their trade relationships with the exhibitors," Mr. Kuykendall said. "All they need is a desire of their own to make these changes: such as reasonable cancellations and selling in groups larger than five.

"Distributor interests know the answer now and exactly what to do. Will they use common sense or face another approach from the Department of Justice and continue to build exhibitor hatred?" he asked.

If changes are not forthcoming voluntarily in trade practices, the MPTOA head indicated, it inevitably will lead to organized exhibitor protests to the Government anti-trust agency.

The most forward of exhibitor movements to keep cooperative guard on exhibition interests during the new season meanwhile appeared to be the Allied Caravan, organized at Washington last week.

The Allied Caravan consists of a committee of exhibitor leaders which will tour all Allied regional associations during September to discuss ways and means of curbing increasing rentals, and remedying other trade problems. They will confer with directors of all local groups and meet with the members in each area at special mass meetings.

Following a meeting at Washington last Wednesday in the Allied offices, among Abram F. Myers, general counsel; Mr. Rosenberg and Sidney Samuelson, vice-president, it was announced that the caravan would visit the constituent Allied groups to "devise ways and means of resisting exhorbitant film rentals and unfair terms."

Schedule Arranged For Allied Visits

The touring committee will consist of Mr. Rosenberg, the national president; Mr. Samuelson, vice-president and head of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania; Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, and Colonel H. A. Cole, past president of Allied and Texas independent leader.

A full itinerary has been mapped for the caravan. One and two-day meetings will be held in each of the principal Allied territories and local leaders are urging members to attend at all costs.

The schedule follows:

Detroit, September 9th and 10th; Philadelphia, September 14th and 15th; Trenton or Newark, September 16th; New Haven, September 17th or 18th, or both days; Ohio (two meetings to be arranged by P. J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio ITO), September 22nd to 24th; Baltimore, September 25th; Milwaukee, September 28th, 29th; Chicago, September 30th; Pittsburgh, October 1st; Indianapolis, October 5th, and Dallas, October 7th and 8th.

Local boards of directors will meet during the morning of one-day visits by the Caravan, or on the first day of two-day stops. Meetings of independent exhibitors only will be held following the directors' sessions.

NEW MICHIGAN GROUP FORMED

In Michigan a new independent group to be known as Michigan Independent Exhibitors' Association, was formed last week to "combat the demands of producers for percentages and raised admission prices with a common front". It is understood that the new group, acting as a cooperative, will undertake collective bargaining and booking for members.

Fifty-eight theatres were represented at the first meeting last week and pledges of membership were reported from another 35. W. A. Cassidy of Midland was elected temporary president and Joseph P. Uvick, Detroit attorney, secretary.

Exhibitors Fight Midwest Duals

Exhibitor groups are hammering against double features in the midwest. Drives to curb or eliminate double bills are under way at the instigation of Illinois Allied, the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois and several other groups. They are reported finding a response in many quarters.

Seven more organizations pledged their cooperation last week in the Illinois Allied campaign. They brought the total to 13.

Postal cards asking the question: "What would be the difference in running time per week if your theatre ran a single instead of double features?" have been sent to exhibitors throughout the country with a message from Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, in which he states that his organization is undertaking a nationwide campaign toward the elimination of this "unnecessary, unproductive and currently unpatriotic evil."

Favorable Response Is Received

Favorable responses and pledges were received last week from William L. Ainsworth, president Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan; M. A. Rosenberg, president of national Allied, and Allied of Western Pennsylvania; F. E. Wetstein, president, North Dakota Theatre Owners Association; Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York; Roy Rowe, president, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina; Allied of New Jersey, and Edward G. Zorn, United Theatre Owners of Illinois.

At St. Louis Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO, has written owners and managers of all theatres in the territory soliciting their aid in eliminating duals.

Pointing out that a Federal ban on lengthy shows is inevitable unless exhibitors take the step themselves, Mr. Wehrenberg is reported to be drafting a voluntary plan to cut at least one hour from operations. Under it each theatre would agree to give two shows in the evening at 7 and 9:30, closing by 11 P.M. Theatres on an all-day basis, and houses with regular matinees, would also be asked to cut their daily time.

EXHIBITORS PUSH SALVAGE DRIVES FOR WAR EFFORT

Collecting Tons of Scrap; Blackout Tests Leave Grosses Unscathed

Exhibitor participation in the nation-wide collection of scrap metal, rubber and other materials needed for war production, continued this week, with both independent and circuit operators taking the lead in their communities to further the salvage campaign.

Nearly a ton of scrap metal and 350 pounds of waste rubber were collected by 29 theatres in the first week of the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company's salvage drive which began last week, designed especially for children. Minimum requirement for admission was one pound of scrap rubber or five pounds of scrap metal. The campaign will be climaxed September 5th with a Victory Day salvage morning matinee at the Fox, Missouri and St. Louis theatres in that city, where prize winners will be announced.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of Fanchon & Marco, reported this week that the number of prizes to be awarded to the youngsters had been increased to 1,000, about 500 of which were expected to be contributed by local merchants.

Three tons of scrap were collected during a special matinee at the Capitol theatre in Danville, Pa., this week when 762 children attended. Admission was four pounds of salvage material. At the Capitol in Bloomsburg, Pa., a capacity audience of 4,000 children brought in 4,000 pounds of scrap at a matinee. Proceeds from the sale of the material were contributed to the local USO.

30 Tons Collected in Philadelphia Area

Last Friday, the Des Plaines theatre at Des Plaines, Ill., operated by the H & E Balaban Corporation, sponsored a "Scrap the Jap" matinee in cooperation with the local Office of Civilian Defense. Admission for children was two pounds or more of scrap metals, rubber or rags.

More than 30 tons of metal were collected by 136 theatres in the Philadelphia area through special matinees staged during the month of August, it was reported by exhibitors there this week. The collection exceeded the quota of 300 pounds average per theatre, it was estimated.

"Rubber matinees" to aid the Government drive for salvage were being conducted in all 40 houses of the Randforce Amusement Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., the company announced this week. About 10,000 pounds were collected at matinees in five theatres last Wednesday, according to Erwin Gold, general manager.

In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., more than 3,000 children attending matinees brought six tons of salvage material to the Orpheum, Family and Penn theatres. The Salvation Army collected the scrap and the proceeds were donated to the USO. Similar shows also were held at the State and Rex in Nanticoke, the Capitol in Hazleton and the Palace in McAdoo, Pa.

Following the Army dimout regulations which went into effect last week on the entire Pacific Coast, and which also prohibit night exterior shooting by Hollywood studios for the duration, no adverse effects at the box office were reported from exhibitors in the affected area. For the duration, street lights at night are prohibited, no intense ground lighting, such as is used in baseball parks, will be allowed and other exterior illumination including theatre marquee lights must be shielded. The order affects the entire seaboard from Canada to Mexico and extends 200 miles inland from the coast.

Grosses Unaffected by New York Blackout

New York's 40-minute surprise blackout Tuesday night, the longest held thus far, had only slight effect on Broadway box offices, theatre managers reported. Ordered by the Army without advance notice, the city-wide test began at 9:25 P.M. and ended at 10:11 P.M. Ticket sales in Broadway houses, it was said, either dropped off slightly or were at a standstill during the blackout, reviving after the all-clear signal.

Last Tuesday night's surprise blackout in Washington, D. C., had no damaging effect on theatre business, according to exhibitor reports. Coming at 10 P. M., when box offices were closed or about to close, the raid test created no problem for theatres, it was said. A few houses with box offices still open, sold some tickets to persons ordered off the street. The blackout was the longest the capital has had to date.

Another surprise blackout, the same night, this one covering Pennsylvania and New Jersey, beginning at 9:30 and lasting 25 minutes, reportedly had little or no effect on theatre business. The test was the largest undertaken in the country, officials of Office of Civilian Defense reported.

Connecticut Blackout Test Planned

Connecticut's State Defense Council announced this week that a test blackout will be held during the first week in September which will affect 44 towns in the western part of the state. Approximately 100 theatres are located in the area. The time and date of the alert will not be announced, but incidents are being planned to test civilian defense services.

Included in the blackout area will be all of Fairfield County, except Greenwich, Stamford, Darien, Norwalk, Westport, Fairfield, Bridgeport and Stratford; Southbury and Middlebury in New Haven County; all of Litchfield County and Hartland in Hartford County. The Merritt Parkway and towns in the dimout area will not be included.

Two practice blackouts, spaced two weeks apart, are scheduled shortly for Knoxville, Tenn., and the surrounding area.

Western Pennsylvania had its first daytime air raid drill on Wednesday, preliminary regulations for which were announced earlier by the Allegheny County Council of Defense. Theatres were forced to stop selling tickets at the start of the test and also were asked to admit persons to lobbies for shelter and to prevent those in film houses from leaving the premises until after the "all clear" was sounded. All business except war plants suspended activities for 15 minutes when the nine-county area sought cover under simulated conditions of enemy bombing. The drill lasted from 1:45 to 2 P. M. Three night tests, one of them a surprise, previously had illustrated the strength and the errors of blackout preparations. Theatre trade and other after-dark amusement enterprises were not adversely affected during the night drills, it was said.

Form Speech for Theatre Managers Devised

To avoid any confusion which might arise in the event of an air raid alarm, the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association has issued a form speech for theatre managers to deliver if an actual raid occurs. The form was prepared by George W. Erdmann, secretary of the association. Managers are instructed to place a copy near the stage so that it can be picked up without delay. The text follows:

"We have just received a U. S. Air Raid Signal. Upon orders from the Office of Civilian Defense, everyone is cautioned to remain calm and keep his seat until we receive the all-clear signal. You will not be permitted out on the sidewalks. Our program will proceed as usual. Do not worry about members of your family. They will be provided shelter by air raid wardens and police wherever they may be. Employees of this theatre are trained in air raid precautions. We will inform you as soon as we receive the all-clear signal."

BRANDT THEATRES SCRAP QUOTA 250,000 POUNDS

This week 108 Brandt theatres in New York participated in a scrap drive to reach a goal of 250,000 pounds of rubber and copper. Harry Brandt will turn over the entire collection to the City of New York.

BRITISH EDUCATIONAL FILM EXPANDING DESPITE WAR

Film Institute Reports Increase in Schools, but Supply is Problem

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Beneath the smoke clouds of battle, in direct contrast to the grimmer operations of war, certain groups of the British community continue to pursue the purposes of peace. Not negligible among these visionaries, with both eyes on the world of tomorrow, are the guardians of the educational motion picture.

A report issued by the British Film Institute, state-supported body existing to stimulate the film in its more academic and artistic reaches, indicates that whilst the bombs have been bursting and the men going forth to war, whilst the motion picture industry has been striving to adjust itself to the abnormality of war conditions, educational work has been going on, and efforts successfully maintained to preserve and fertilize the results of that work.

Most significant conclusion of the report, which deals with a mission undertaken by a traveling officer covering the whole field of British education, is that despite the dislocation of the war and the havoc wrought by evacuation, by bombing and by the translation of civilians into service men and women, the use of the motion picture in British schools is once again on the up and up.

More Apparatus Is Now in Use

More educational authorities are availing themselves of the film as a teaching instrument, more apparatus is in use generally, and the teachers using it, taken all 'round, are more proficient in operation.

The preservation of the educational motion picture in the face of war, the increasing demand for apparatus and films, coupled with the present period of non-production, save for military ends, suggest a vast post-war stimulus and the extension of the market for educational motion pictures and apparatus. Production of educational films of course, currently is halted, and practically all the manufacture of cameras, projectors and attendant apparatus is diverted to such channels as the Army Film Unit and parallel organizations.

Despite the general improvement in the educational film situation, there remain certain obstacles which have yet to be cleared up before progress can be complete and unhampered. It is the judgment of the British Film Institute, examining the tour of their officer and assessing its results, that, although the Board of Education is doing its reasonable utmost to further the use of the motion picture in schools, there remain laggards among the local education authorities, that even the enthusiastic among these sometimes show the need for technical guidance, on such matters as architecture and technical equipment, that there is a divergence of practice as regards finance, some authorities owning apparatus and others merely hiring it, some covering all the cost of films shown, others leaving it to the schools.

Travelled 10,000 Miles on Mission

Last year they obtained the release from the R.A.F. of B. E. Gillett, their educational representative, financed him, and sent him forth to implement the findings of their 1940 report. Now Mr. Gillett, back from his labors, with 12 months' touring and campaigning behind him, has given judgment on the present state and conditions. Ten thousand miles may not be many, measured in terms of American traveling. They are considerable in English terms. Ten thousand miles Gillett traveled, visiting 80 different education authorities, 19 teachers' training colleges and 58 schools.

Now, having delivered himself of the considered judgment that things are better than they were in 1940 and improving still, he puts forth practical ideas which are considered imperative if the goodwill and the present enthusiasm are to be translated into material progress.

Training of Teachers Called Inadequate

Nor is the training of teachers in the use of films adequate, or for that matter, properly organized. There is a lack of centralization and indeed of consistency in the availability and provision of films for the schools which wish to use them. None the less, that there is an all-around increase in the use of the film in the classroom, and an improvement in the way it is used, is notable, particularly in the face of war conditions.

When war broke out in 1939 the use of the screen as an educational instrument was increasing. Between 1933 and 1939 the number of projectors in schools rose from a mere 100 to well over 2,000. The impact of war inevitably injured the movement, left wounds from which it will obviously take some time to recover. Evacuation, with its complete dislocation, the closing down of schools and the sudden swelling of numbers in the reception areas, the calling of teachers to military service, the halting of production; all these things had a drastic and immediate effect.

Schools Expand Use of Films

From that state of affairs recovery has begun, and is continuing, so that now the tendency is to greater use of the screen in schools. The organization of the British Film Institute blessed it both financially and otherwise in that body's endeavor to keep the flame burning and where possible to spread and multiply its light. In 1940, with the war at its nastiest, and in the face of extreme difficulties, four missionaries, trained educationists all, set forth across Britain to wage a campaign for the keener use of the screen in education.

They found that Senior and Secondary schools were the greater users of the film, that towns rather than rural districts were more alive to the medium, that film hire was too high, that the range of films available in certain subjects was limited; that there was a lack of collaboration between producers and teachers, that regional libraries were lacking, and that there was insufficient training of teachers.

The Institute's hot gospelling goes on.

Regional Libraries Urged for Supply

Not least of improvements sought is in the training of teachers in the use of the motion picture as an educational medium. Refresher courses in training colleges, as well as the inclusion of visual education in regular curricula are suggested.

Film supplies remain another problem to be solved, not so much the question of the supplies alone, as their arrangement and distribution. At present commercial concerns, the Central Film Library, etc., are the sources whence the schoolmaster draws his films. The Institute urges regional libraries.

A conference of manufacturers and users of educational films and apparatus is suggested, too, to help forward the post-war period of production with criticism and an assessment of current weaknesses and difficulties.

Swords into ploughshares may yet find a modern equivalent in Bren guns into motion picture projectors.

BRITISH CIRCUIT HAS RECORD PROFIT

A record net profit of £279,099 (approximately $1,125,000) after all deductions was reported by Provincial Cinematograph Theatres for the year ended January 31, 1942. The company, which is a member of the Gaumont British group, owns directly or through its subsidiaries 120 theatres, dance halls, restaurants and cafes. The profit compares with £179,762 (approximately $725,000) earned for the preceding year.

A dividend was maintained at 15 per cent of the £500,000 ordinary capital.

MGM Signs Wolfgang Reinhardt

MGM signed Wolfgang Reinhardt, son of theatrical producer and director Max Reinhardt, to produce "Next of Kin," a film about war wives which is to star Joan Crawford. For several years Mr. Reinhardt was an associate producer at Warner Bros.

IATSE in Move to End Permit Plan

Chicago Union Asks Walsh Aid in Eliminating Old System of Maloy

by F. LANGDON MORGAN
Chicago Bureau

The "permit system," operated for more than 20 years by the Chicago Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local 110, will soon be at an end, it was promised by Richard F. Walsh, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, during a visit to Chicago last week. Mr. Walsh announced on Monday that Felix D. Snow IATSE sixth vice-president, and Frank Stickling, IA representative from the Elgin, Ill., local, had been appointed to assist officials of the operators' union to determine the permit men who shall be elected to full membership in the local.

Meanwhile, meetings between exhibitor and circuit representatives and the union's wage scale committee were postponed to Thursday.

The permit system was an idea of the late Tom Moloy, czar of the local for many years, who was killed in 1935. Originally it was a device to protect the jobs of regular operators who were ill or on vacation but was abused. These men were given temporary permits to work and for the privilege paid 10 per cent of their earnings into the union treasury. Many of the men have worked for 20 years and more on permits without becoming regular members of the union, their monetary contributions amounting too much more per year than if they paid regular dues. Members have estimated that the annual take under the permit system was about $200,000.

Motion Carried To Open Books

Three months ago a membership committee was formed, under the chairmanship of Robert Burns, operator of the Chicago theatre, to work out details toward admitting some of the permit men to regular membership. A motion to open the books was carried two weeks ago at a membership meeting, and it was decided to allow 155 permit men to membership. But who of the 214 working under temporary permits would be selected was another problem.

Because difficulty was being encountered in determining which permit men would be entitled to become regular members, Peter M. Shayne, the local's president, and other officers requested Mr. Walsh to take a hand in the situation in order to avoid charges of favoritism.

After Maloy was shot in 1935, the union was operated for several months by the International, of which George E. Browne was then president, and Willie Bioff and Nick Circella were international representatives. Before a slate of new officers were elected this group issued many permits to men new to the union, Mr. Shayne said.

Under Walsh's plan all of the 214 permit men would be voted upon individually by the membership, of which there are 417 at present. It is possible, Mr. Shayne indicated, that all of the permit men would be admitted to membership as there are more than 730 regular jobs within the jurisdiction of the Chicago local.

Strike Threat Crisis on Coast Abates

The strike threat crisis over the Screen Office Employes Guild negotiations for wage scales for Los Angeles exchange workers abated at midweek with indications that an amicable settlement would be reached.

A compromise on minimum wage scales for various classifications of office employes was offered to Guild representatives by Pat Casey, producer-distributor labor contact, who asked for an additional 24 hours from the 6 P. M. dealine Tuesday as he was unable to contact various industry representatives because of the Election Day legal holiday, it was said.

If the issue was not settled by Wednesday night, both sides were to go to arbitration, but with the understanding that efforts would be made to work out satisfactory minimums before proceedings actually started.

Previous negotiations in New York had failed and earlier this week a studio strike had seemed inevitable.

Present at the New York conferences were Herbert Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions; Glenn Pratt, business agent of SOEG, and Benjamin Nostram of the union.

In New York, the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, CIO, filed petitions Monday with the National Labor Relations Board for designation as collective bargaining agent for clerical employees at the Republic and Consolidated Film Industries home offices. The NLRB last Friday granted the SOPEG petition for a collective bargaining election at the United Artists' home office. No date was set for the vote.

Union Adopts "No Strike" Policy

A "no strike" policy was adopted at a membership meeting this week of Laboratory Technicians Union, Local 702, IATSE, following what was described by union officials as a "wildcat" strike at the De Luxe Laboratories in New York last week. The union pledged itself not to strike for the duration of the war and to call upon the War Labor Board for decisions in the event of an impasse with any company. Negotiations for a contract will be resumed shortly with DeLuxe, a union official said.

A new union for film exchange office workers was organized in Philadelphia late last week by the IATSE following a meeting at the Broadwood Hotel. As reported in Motion Picture Herald of August 22nd, the union will be known as Local F-7, the "F" designation being a new one created by the IA for white collar exchange employees.

Officers elected were: Esther Rudo, president; Emma Culbertson, vice-president; Mildred Rudo, secretary, and Anne McBride, treasurer. Ferd Fortunato, president of Exchange Workers Union, Local B-7, organized the new local. Local F-7 claims a majority at all Philadelphia exchanges with the exception of Universal, where clerical employes have been organized under the CIO banner for many years.

The United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, is also conducting an organizational drive in Philadelphia among the same employees, and observers believe that a jurisdictional fight is brewing.

Fred Jackman, president of the American Society of Cinematographers, was in New York last week from the west coast for conferences on a projected amalgamation of the ASC with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Following a meeting with Ed Brown, IBEW president, Mr. Jackson said he would report back to the ASC membership on the coast. He also said the ASC already has an IBEW charter for its Local 1318 in Hollywood. The ASC currently is engaged in a jurisdictional dispute concerning first cameramen with Local 659, IATSE.

Fire Prevention Week Scheduled

Fire Prevention Week this year as every year will be held during the week in which October 9th, the anniversary of the Chicago Fire, occurs. This year the war has given Fire Prevention Week unusual significance, it is said. For the first time, the sponsors of Fire Prevention Week are being joined by the U. S. Office of Civilian Defense, which is charged with civil protection in wartime.

According to a survey, 45.3 per cent reduction in fire losses for the cities reporting is shown during Fire Prevention Week, the week preceding and the week following.

Denies Dismissal of WB Stockholder Suit

A motion by Warner Bros. to dismiss the stockholders' suit brought against the company and its officers and directors to compel repayment of funds paid to George E. Browne and Willie Bioff, convicted former officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, has been denied by Charles B. McLaughlin, New York supreme court justice. He held that the complaint set forth a cause of action.

Holdovers Indicate Box Office Strength

"Mrs. Miniver" Leads List; Successful Season in 1942-43 Forecast

With the 1941-42 season drawing to a close, the number of holdover runs reported in key situations on current product reflected the generally healthy status of the nation's box offices and from all indications forecast a successful 1942-43 season, observers believe. Holdovers reported on current releases also indicate box office acceptance of stellar attractions far above the end-of-summer fare of former years.

Leading the list of record runs and box office grosses is MGM's "Mrs. Miniver," which recently closed a 10-week holdover at Radio City Music Hall, New York, playing to 1,500,000 persons and grossing $1,031,500. MGM reported over the weekend that every population bracket from 25,000 to over 1,000,000 contributed new attendance and gross records for the film, which starred Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon.

In 125 situations, "Mrs. Miniver" had a lead of 78 per cent better business than "Honky Tonk," MGM's money-maker in those spots last season. It was 40 per cent better than "Boom Town," which played the same situations at advanced admission prices. In a total of 14 scattered cities, in its fourth week, "Mrs. Miniver" doubled the business of "Honky Tonk" for a similar period, according to the company.

In Chicago, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee, which are in the 500,000 to 1,000,000 population brackets, the picture has long passed competitive grosses over five and six-week runs, some all-time high records, others dating back to 1935, it was reported. In smaller spots, the film achieved unprecedented results. For example, MGM pointed out that in Watertown, N. Y., with a population of 33,385, "Mrs. Miniver" was in its fourth week there, a long record for any town of this size. In Lynchburg, Va., the film hit 298 per cent of average business, and in Ogden, Utah, with a population of 43,600 an unprecedented 367 per cent of average was registered.

Achieved Records In Small Spots

In Scranton, Pa., the picture shattered a record at the Strand, according to Willard Matthews, manager, who announced that more people saw it than had seen any film at that theatre in more than five years. "Miniver" was booked for a two-week run there, but was switched to the Comerford Theatre for its third week.

At the Empire theatre in London, the film was held over for its sixth and final week, last week. In St. Louis, it played five weeks at Loew's, causing a rearrangement of booking of nine theatres which played behind Loew's and which were running the revival of Charles Chaplin's "The Gold Rush." The theatres now playing the Chaplin picture are the Ritz, Esquire, Varsity and Norside. The United Artists office in St. Louis reported that "the reception is astonishing." It will be shown later at the Uptown, Empress, Avalon, Ozark and Will Rogers.

"Yankee Doodle" Grosses Good

"Miniver" opened on Thursday at Loew's State, New York, and last Thursday at Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn. It will play five Schine houses in Rochester for a week starting September 10th, at increased prices. The theatres are the Liberty, State, Monroe, Riviera and Madison.

Other holdover and gross reports for the week include:

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros., began its 13th week last Friday at the Hollywood, New York. Warners reported that late August and September opening dates for the film in 40 additional houses, including eight RKO circuit theatres, will be at an advanced scale of $1.10 for evening performances and 75 cents for matinees.

"Holiday Inn," Parmount, ended its third week at the Paramount, New York on Monday night with an estimated gross of $77,000, and will be held for six weeks.

"Bambi," Disney-RKO, was held for a second week at the Radio City Music Hall and drew an estimated $57,000 for the first week.

"Pied Piper," Twentieth Century-Fox, was held a second week at the Roxy, New York. It grossed an estimated $30,000 last Saturday and Sunday and was expected to end its second week with $67,000.

"Pride of Yankees" Holds Up Well

"The Pride of the Yankees," Goldwyn-RKO, now in its seventh week at the Astor, New York, drew an estimated $15,000 for the first four days of its sixth week.

"The Gay Sisters," Warner Bros., now in its third week at the Strand, New York. The company reported that of the first 28 bookings of this film, which was released August 1st, more than two-thirds already have been held over for extended playing time.

"Moscow Strikes Back," Artkino, now in its second week at the Globe, New York, grossed an estimated $17,000 the first week and drew $6,500 over last weekend.

According to MGM, "Somewhere I'll Find You," co-starring Clark Gable and Lana Turner, equalled "Mrs. Miniver" business in six test engagements opening August 19th and was 25 per cent better than last season's Gable-Turner vehicle, "Honky Tonk." The new MGM release surpassed "Miniver," it was said, in the trio of engagements where a parallel scale of prices was maintained. The company also reported that "Gone With the Wind," the David O. Selznick production, which had third runs in the Chicago territory, brought in "record business." Twenty Class C theatres showed the film last week.

New York Stage Season Starts

A new Broadway stage season is at hand. On Monday, "I Killed the Count," an Alec Coppel mystery, will be presented at the Cort theatre. The Brock Pemberton production of the Bentham-Williams comedy, "Janie," is scheduled for Henry Miller's theatre soon after September 6th. September 14th is tentatively set for the date on which the Guthrie McClintic production of "The Morning Star," starring Gladys Cooper, will open at the Morosco theatre.

Meanwhile many old season hits are scheduled to close and go on tour. Among these are "Priorities of 1942" at the 46th Street theatre, which will give its last Broadway performance Sunday night, September 6th, and go on tour with Lou Holtz, Willie Howard, Argentinita, Gene Sheldon and Phil Baker in the cast. It is scheduled to open Labor Day at the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia.

"Porgy and Bess," the Cheryl Crawford revival at the Majestic, is in its last four weeks. It will open in Rochester September 28th, the first stop of a nationwide tour.

The new 1943 edition of "Ice Capades," which opens at Madison Square Garden September 4th with a cast of 110, has had its run extended to September 20th, with a one-day lapse, September 10th, to allow for the USO benefit fight program.

Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" is due to end its run at the Broadway theatre September 26th, after which it will go on tour.

Alexander Named to Columbia Post

Sidney G. Alexander, former vice-president of Weiss and Geller, advertising agency, has joined the Columbia advertising department as an assistant to David Lipton, advertising and publicity director. Weiss and Geller handle the Columbia account.

175 TRADE REPRESENTATIVES ON UMPI TAX COMMITTEES

Located in 54 Exchange Areas, Units to Keep Watch on Legislation

Approximately 175 industry representatives, chiefly exhibitors, in 54 trade areas of the country, have been appointed to the tax committees named by the United Motion Picture Industry, the UMPI organization announced this week.

The listing announced was complete with a few exceptions. The committees, set up by the UMPI committee of the whole during its deliberations in New York were designed to make a continuing study of legislative matters in each area, with a view to preventing the enactment of legislation inimical to the best interests of the industry as a whole.

State chairmen have been appointed for each group by selection of the committee members themselves. Several of the larger states have two or more sectional committees.

Circuit Helps RAF Fund

Arthur Moss, general manager of Associated British Cinemas Circuit, announced in London Monday that the circuit had collected a total of $125,000 for the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund.

Signal Corps Unit In Special Branch

Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck this week announced that the War Department has authorized the affiliation of the 834th Signal Photographic Detachment, and has assigned this Signal Corps unit to the Special Services Branch of the Army.

Lieutenant Colonel Frank Capra has been named commanding officer of this detachment, to be composed chiefly of ace motion picture industry directors, writers and technicians for the purpose of producing a series of educational and training films exclusively for the use of the armed forces.

The 834th Signal Photographic Detachment will be stationed at the Twentieth Century-Fox Western Avenue studio, which has been leased to the War Department for the duration at a rental of $1 per year. It will be an "affiliated unit" sponsored by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Extend Campaign to Eliminate Giveaways

Following a successful two-week test in the 125th Street area of Manhattan, east of Lenox Avenue, it has been decided by independent and circuit operators to extend the campaign to eliminate games and giveaways in the Washington Heights area of Manhattan.

All games and giveaways were dropped in the 125th Street neighborhoods by agreement and no loss of patronage was observed. As a result, it was determined to experiment in the Washington Heights section with an eye to eventual citywide elimination. The West side of 125th Street probably will be the third area to be tested, it was said.

The desire to permit exhibitors to concentrate on bond sales, scrap collections and the like was given as the reason for the move. Improved grosses generally have made the action possible at this time, it was said.

Bingo Out of Chicago; Back in Atlantic City

All Chicago theatres playing Bingo or similar games last week were ordered by the police to stop. Theatres using the game were estimated to number 75. Theatre games were prohibited by city law, but had been allowed because of issuance of War Bonds and Stamps as prizes.

Bingo "parlors" returned to Atlantic City last week, for the first time since August, 1941. The city approved application of George Ruty to operate one, upon payment of $3,000.

Ambassador Books Bands

The Ambassador, first run house operated by Fanchon & Marco in downton St. Louis, will inaugurate a name-band policy at the theatre September 15th, the first band to be Alvino Rey with the King Sisters. Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of the circuit, said the stage shows are in response to the demand by service men attending the circuit's houses. A special midnight show will be held Fridays, designed especially for soldiers.

Extend Bonus Plan

Bonus payments by Warner Bros. to dependents of employees in military service have been extended to take in the personnel in the company's Canadian branch offices. Approximately 750 Warner employees from the home office, exchanges and theatre departments, but exclusive of the studio, were in active service as of August 15th.

Stewart Now Pilot

Lieutenant James Stewart, film star, is now a bombardier pilot at the Albuquerque Army Air Base. He will fly training planes, officers at the field said.

Schines Unable To Dispose of Theatres

The Schine Circuit is having difficulty disposing of theatres under the Federal court agreement by which the Government agreed not to prosecute its anti-trust suit for two years, it was indicated this week in a report filed by Willard McKay, Schine counsel, in Federal court in Buffalo.

The report, covering the period from July 19th, asserted that $3,500 deposited in connection with the proposed acquisition of the leasehold of the Viv theatre, Corbin, Ky., has been returned to M. K. Murphy by the Corbin Theatre Company.

Mr. McKay said the matter was discussed informally with Judge John Knight upon a renewal by Mr. Murphy of his request for return of the deposit. Mr. Murphy after making the deposit, said he was not interested in acquiring the property.

"Since that time," the report said, "neither Mr. Murphy nor anyone else has evidenced any interest in the reacquisition of the leasehold on the Viv." Mr. McKay said the Schine defendants are still negotiating with various persons with respect to the State and Appalachia theatres, Appalachia, Va., and expect shortly to meet with one of the interested exhibitors in an effort to dispose of them, but no offer has been made.

The report concluded: "The consenting defendants have continued the efforts of the theatres covered by the temporary order not previously disposed of and have corresponded with a number of persons, for the most part real estate brokers, with respect to said theatres. It appears, however, most of the inquiries have been motivated by curiosity rather than any real interest in acquisition of theatres. On August 12th the consenting defendants sent out a number of letters to persons with whom they had previously been corresponding in an effort to obtain some tangible proposal with respect to said theatres, but up to the date of this report the only replies received are entirely general.

Astor Sets Deal

Jack Auslet and J. Weigand have closed a deal with R. M. Savini, president of Astor Pictures, for the distribution of Astor Pictures Corporation product in the New Orleans territory. Mr. Auslet is a former Pathe manager in New Orleans and for several years was associated with the company in Kansas City. Mr. Weigand is head of Commerce Pictures Corporation, producers of industrial films.

Report Korda to Go to London

Reports persisted from London that Sir Alexander Korda, United Artists partner, and newly knighted British independent producer, was planning to branch out on his own. A recent visit to New York was said to have netted "substantial" financing for Mr. Korda from new sources. One was described as a bank. The other as two individuals close to the picture business. One source identified them as Louis B. Mayer and William Goetz.

Sir Alexander's British mission reportedly was to plan at least one British production, perhaps a modernized version of Tolstoi's "War and Peace," and to liquidate British obligations. Discussions of new financing were scheduled with the Prudential Assurance Company of London, it was said.

New York heard that Mr. Korda had in mind projects for the independent release of his pictures, and the distribution in the United States of other British product.

SEC Approves Atlas, Warner Stock Changes

Acquisition in June of 10,100 shares of Radio Keith Orpheum common stock by the American Company, Jersey City, N. J., and 500 shares of preferred stock by the Atlas Corporation, Jersey City, has been reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Philadelphia.

The SEC report on June transactions of film corporation officials, directors and stockholders in the securities of their corporations showed that at the end of the month the American Company held 300,230 shares of RKO common stock and the Atlas Corporation had 981,323 shares of common, 327,812 warrants for common and 52,071 shares of preferred.

Also in RKO, the commission reported the sale of 200 shares of common stock by L. Lawrence Green, director, who held 50 shares at the close of the month.

Second largest single transaction reported was the purchase by Albert Warner of 1,200 shares of Warner Brothers common stock, giving him a total of 103,848 shares in that class and 14,884 shares of preferred, while the third largest transactions were in Loew's, Inc., in which David Bernstein, vice-president, was reported to have disposed of 850 shares of common stock held through a corporation which at the close of the month still had 27,250 shares, and 850 shares were reported disposed of by J. Robert Rubin, vice-president, leaving him with 7,465 shares.

Sizable transactions also were reported in Paramount Pictures, where Stanton Griffis, director, executive committee chairman, purchased 600 shares of common stock through his N. Griffis Trust and a similar amount through the Trust UW W. Griffis. At the close of the month, Mr. Griffis held 4,800 shares direct, 3,000 through the F. K. Griffis Trust, 4,000 through the N. Griffis Trust, 6,000 through the Trust UW W. Griffis and 5,400 through the T. G. LaTouche Trust.

The last reported transaction was in Loew's Boston Theatres, where Loew's, Inc., purchased another 48 shares of common stock, giving it a total of 119,321 shares.

Reports of the holdings of persons becoming officers or directors of registered corporations included one showing that Thomas J. Connors, vice-president, held 100 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock when he was elected an officer in that company June 18th.

Vaudeville Bookings Open; Shows Scarce

Vaudeville bookings in 17 theatres for a total of six weeks unbroken playdates are available in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia theatres, according to Sidney Marke, agent, with shows scarce.

Set solidly for the circuit is Joe Carson's 28-person production show, including a five-piece band that doubles on stage and in the pit. Harry Berry's 17-person unit, including a six-piece girl orchestra, is being lined up for the same route.

Bergen in Alaska

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy this week traveled to Alaska to entertain troops. They are starred in RKO's forthcoming "Here We Go Again."

"Manhattan" at Advanced Price

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Tales of Manhattan" will play in certain key territories at advanced admissions. This was decided after test runs in 11 theatres in six Coast cities.

PLAN CINEMATOGRAPHIC WEEK IN MEXICO

Preparations are being completed for the staging of Second National Cinematographic Week in Mexico at dates in October that have not yet been set, but which probably will include October 12th, called the "Day of the Race" in Latin America. There will be pageants, processions, fiestas and special programs in all theatres. The week will have a wartime tinge. Proceeds of performances at which picture stars will appear will be used to found a fund for the purchase of a plane for the Mexican Army Air Service.

NAM Sponsors Release Of Two-Reel Subject

The National Association of Manufacturers, through its Group Cooperation Committee, headed by Henry Abt, secretary, currently is releasing on a state rights basis a two-reel subject, "American Anniversary," produced for the manufacturers' group by Paramount Educational Division of Paramount Pictures.

The National Industrial Information Committee, headed by J. Howard Pew of the Sun Oil Company, sponsored production of the subject on behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers, with an avowed goal of 4,000 theatres. In the Washington territory alone, according to Ted Schull, of Peerless Distributing Company, more than 180 bookings already have been arranged for the film which is loaned without charge to the theatre. "American Anniversary" was directed by Leslie Roush.

Troop Entertainers Arrive in Britain

Al Jolson, Merle Oberon, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins and Pat Morison arrived in London Monday and were given a cocktail reception with press representatives under the auspices of the U. S. Army General Headquarters for the European Theatre of Operations.

They comprise the first of regular contingents which will go to Britain at intervals to entertain U. S. troops and British factory workers.

Guild Delegates Will Attend Labor Meeting

The Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood has appointed delegates to attend the 43d annual convention of the California State Federation of Labor. They are Noel Madison, Walter Abel, Charles Trowbridge, Pat Somerset, Louis Jean Heydt, Edward Arnold and Kenneth Thomson.

The convention will be held at Long Beach, beginning September 21st.

NAB To Intervene in Suit

The National Association of Broadcasters will ask to intervene in the Department of Justice suit against the American Federation of Musicians as a "friend of the court." The suit will be heard in Chicago Federal court on September 16th.

Joins Evergreen Circuit

Donald Condon, formerly assistant district manager for the Army Motion Picture Service, has been appointed booker for Evergreen State Theatres in Seattle, succeeding Jack Rosenberg, who has enlisted in the Coast Guard.

Mexico Seeks to Make Raw Film

by LOUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The possibility of Mexico overcoming the grave problem of the scarcity of raw film for pictures and becoming self-sustaining in that regard is seen in reported plans of General Juan Francisco Azcarate president of Mexico-Espana Films, S. A., a producing company with several successes to its credit, to develop, with a syndicate of financial and technical associates, a factory to produce raw film. General Azcarate, former commander of the Mexican Army Air Force, recently returned from Germany, where he had been interned for some time. He had been Mexican Minister to Berlin.

This proposition, according to report, will involve an investment of between $1,250,000 and $1,500,000. It is contended that this plan is practicable because Mexico is rich in three principal ingredients of raw film—silver, cotton and cellulose. General Azcarate is expected to start his factory before the end of this year.

Leading producers are informed that the United States Government has approved the shipment to Mexico of 7,800 rolls of raw film, considered enough for about 40 films. This shipment, it is expected, will allow this country to produce about 80 pictures in 1942, the most Mexico ever has made in one year.

Army Relief Show Advance $50,000

Advance ticket sales for the Army Emergency Relief show to be held at Madison Square Garden September 30th, this week passed $50,000, it was announced by the committee. The Army Relief Fund also is expected to net close to $5,000,000 from stage and motion picture versions of the Irving Berlin show, "This Is the Army." All profits from the screen version will be turned over to the Fund by Warner Brothers, the producer.

The amusement industry division of the American Field Service Ambulance Corps, headed by Neil Agnew, has announced postponement of its drive for ambulance funds to the second week of October. The delay was decided upon so as not to conflict with the industry's September War Bond Drive.

Pierce Appointed Aide to Poynter

Warren Pierce in charge of the San Francisco office of the Office of War Information, has been appointed assistant to Nelson Poynter, Hollywood liaison for Lowell Mellett, head of the Motion Picture Bureau of the OWI. Mr. Pierce previously was editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Goldman Promotes Garfield

Al Garfield, manager of the News theatre, Philadelphia, has been promoted to assistant to Lyle Trenchard, general manager of the William Goldman circuit in eastern Pennsylvania. Norman Cohen is now manager of the News.

Named MGM Booker

John Mayer, cashier, has been named chief booker at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange in Pittsburgh, succeeding Max Shabason, who has entered the Army.

Heads Delft Theatres

Hugh S. Gallup, formerly general manager, has been named president of the Delft Theatres, Inc., Detroit, succeeding the late Morgan W. Jopling.

RKO RADIO STARTS SEASON WITH BACKLOG OF 14 FILMS

Eight of 14 Produced Since Koerner Assumed Post as Studio Chief

RKO Radio had 14 completed pictures in its backlog at the weekend. In studio parlance a picture is completed and in backlog between the time when the cameras stop turning and the date when the projector places the article on the screen at a trade show, press preview or both.

(Paramount has a backlog of 30 pictures, MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported in the issue of August 22nd, page 33.)

Eight of the 14 pictures in RKO-Radio's backlog are features produced during the four months since Charles W. Koerner took command of production to substitute for the vacationing Joseph I. Breen, whose subsequent resignation made the substitution permanent.

The other six are Tim Holt westerns, produced in some haste prior to the star's induction into the Army.

Asked for an expression of policy with respect to the eight features produced under his sponsorship, and the others that are to follow them, the studio executive who came to this post via a 27-year career criss-crossing the continent in the field of exhibition, independent and circuit, said, "I am just trying to give exhibitors the kind of pictures I always wanted the companies to give me."

Wants Product with Sales Factors

Invited to break that down a bit, he said, "An exhibitor wants product with sales points in it. A merely pleasant, entertaining picture, with merely competent actors in it, isn't what he or his public want. He needs product that has names in which the public is interested, or sometimes a subject with enough novelty or timeliness to make it stand up without them. I'm trying to make pictures that will make the exhibitor glad to see our salesman when he calls on him, instead of telling him to please go away and let him alone because he's already got more morely pleasant product than he can use."

At least two and at most three of the eight features produced under the Koerner regime stack up as A product, on points, by his definition or any other.

Top Talent Set For McCarey Film

"Once Upon a Honeymoon" tops the list. It provides showmen with the names of Ginger Rogers and Gary Cooper for their marquee lights, and with those of Albert Dekker, Albert Basserman and Walter Slezak to round out the copy. It's the work of Leo McCarey, producer-director, ("Awful Truth," "Love Affair") from a script by Sheridan Gibney (Academy Award for "Pasteur") based on a story by both of them. It's about a former Broadway strip tease artist and a broadcasting reporter who find themselves in Europe and caught up in the whirl of events prior to, during and after the bombing of Warsaw. Unless the experts fore and aft of the camera bungled in a manner to which they have been unaccustomed for years, this looms as a hit.

"Seven Days' Leave" Big-Scale Musical

"Seven Days Leave" is the big-scale musical that started filming and was given wide publicity as "Sweet or Hot," the title switch coming after George A. Gallup polled the populace and reported the slightly esoteric musical terminology less than a box office blessing. It supplies showmen the name of Victor Mature, which has proved a magnet for whatever reason under any title, and those of Lucille Ball, the Great Gildersleeve, Ginny Simms, the Les Brown and the Freddie Martin orchestras, plus the "Truth or Consequences" and "Port of Missing Heirs" radio programs, as munitions of merchandising. Produced and directed by Tim Whelan, the subject is linked to the war by the uniforming of the hero, and the scene is New York, the time now. Plenty of sales points there.

"The Navy Comes Through" is that Borden Chase story which the Saturday Evening Post broke one of its traditions to print a second time. Hollywood interprets that as proof of story value. Pat O'Brien, George Murphy, Jane Wyatt and Max Baer are the somewhat strangely assorted names to bill it with and the production is by Islin Auster, direction by A. Edward Sutherland. Hollywood trade talk predicts for it a future beyond the promise of the talent roster.

Backlog Thins Out, Budgets Lower

Below this level the backlog thins out, in ratio with the budgets of course.

"Ladies' Day" is a try in the direction of baseball interest and figures to benefit from the circulation of "The Pride of the Yankees." The picture, from a stage play by Bertrand Robinson and Bob Considine, takes Lupe Velez out of her "Mexican Spitfire" character and injects her personality into the relatively placid lives of some big league ball players. Other names are Eddie Albert, Max Baer and Patsy Kelly. A comedy all the way, its appeal and gross depend upon a variety of intangibles defying forecast.

"Seven Miles From Alcatraz" relies upon its title and the names of James Craig ("Kitty Foyle") and Bonita Granville ("Syncopation") to attract trade. It's a melodrama portraying the reformation of a criminal who escapes from Alcatraz to a lighthouse seven miles distant and stumbles upon Nazi plottings which he manages to frustrate. None of the back-of-camera names suggest top billing.

"Cat People" is a venture on modest budget into the realm of psychiatry and the supernatural, with sex at core of a legend brought up to date from Balkan folklore. It presents Simone Simon ("All That Money Can Buy") as a girl who marries Kent Smith (Broadway stage actor) but declines to consummate the marital relationship until she has rid herself of the obsession that if she does so she will turn into a panther and destroy her husband as her mother did before her.

A psychiatrist who tries to handle the case persists to the extent of attempting familiarities and is found slain in a manner suggesting a panther killed him, the girl being found dead finally in a panther's cage and her body thereafter taking on the form of a panther. The off-screen personnel has nothing to its credit, on any kind of budget, indicating ability to produce this type of material in a style to satisfy any but the audiences that shop for shudders and ask no questions.

Conway Introduced For "Falcon" Role

"The Falcon's Brother" is the number in the Falcon series of melodramas in which George Sanders, who departs the Falcon role after this, introduces Tom Conway, his brother in fact, as his brother in fiction, who will carry on the series hereafter. Extra pressure has been applied to make it the topper in the Falcon series, with a view toward starting the new star off in high gear, which argues for a result to please the regulars and possibly add new ones.

"Army Surgeon" has timeliness and a linking-together of the first and second world wars plus the names and talents of James Ellison, Jane Wyatt and Kent Taylor, competent performers. It's a Bert Gilroy production, directed by Edward A. Sutherland, therefore doubtless a workmanlike job under budgetary circumstances.

The six Tim Holt westerns continue the rousing adventures of Jack Holt's son astride a horse with Cliff Edwards alongside astride another and tossing in a tune every now and then while right is being done by honest ranchers, honest miners and so forth. All were produced by Bert Gilroy and the titles are, "The Avenging Rider," "Singing Guns," "Red River Robin Hood," "Pirates of the Prairies," "Son of the Saddle" and "Gun Law."

Honor Leo Jacobi

Leo Jacobi, for 25 years a member of the Warner Bros. New York sales organization and recently promoted to branch manager in New York, was honored by his co-workers at a surprise dinner in the College Room of the Hotel Astor Monday night. Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, headed the list of those in attendance.

Eisenbergs Get Posts

Samuel Broidy, Monogram distribution chief, has appointed Frank Eisenberg manager of the Minneapolis exchange recently acquired by the company. Benjamin Eisenberg has been named branch manager in Chicago, the appointment having been made by Irving Mandel, president of the branch.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

Academy Screens Cream of Shorts

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences offered its second monthly screening of outstanding short subjects at the Filmarte theatre last week before a goodly crowd. The attendance outnumbered that attracted to the first monthly screening and out-applauded it.

If doubt of the interest in the short subject as an institution of entertainment had been entertained by the sponsors of these screenings, it was dispelled.

Eleven short subjects were screened. Six of the subjects were, wholly or in part, of war coloration. Two of these were subjects for the use of the armed forces and not for public exhibition. One of these was the hit of the program. Five of the subjects were cartoons.

In the order of their presentation, the subjects were:

"Terror of the Midway." This is a Superman subject, having to do with the hero's rescue of his girl friend from animals which break loose when a circus burns, and established a suitable low point of entertainment to the subjects which followed.

"Community War Chest." This is a fund campaign trailer prepared for theatre use this autumn with Marlene Dietrich, Edward Arnold and George Raft discussing persuasively the virtues of the plan to group solicitations in a single drive for contributions.

"Victory Vittles" is a Pete Smith subject in Technicolor, MGM, in which Polly Patterson whips up out of low-cost materials a meal which had the audience drooling for a helping.

"The Duck-Tators" is a Leon Schlesinger cartoon, Warners, lambasting Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini in terms that the youngest child in the audience will have no difficulty in comprehending.

Captain Wheless Tells Story of Exploit

"The Greatest Gift" is a somewhat underdone MGM Miniature featuring Edmund Gwenn as the juggler in the old tale of the beggar whose gift to the Virgin Mary wins recognition denied his presumed betters. The tale, nobly told in many forms, is hardly shorts material, and the handling is a demonstration in maltreatment.

"The Man Angle," Paramount, is an address and demonstration by Robert Benchley in the matter of what's-wrong-with-women. Not his best, it pleased the men present immensely, nevertheless.

"The Olympic Champ" is Walt Disney (RKO Radio) in one of his more inspired moods, depicting the history and character of the Olympic Games with The Goof demonstrating. It was roundly applauded.

"Preparation of a Sand Table" is an Army training film of absorbing interest, but you've got to join the Army to see it.

"Woodman Spare That Tree" is one of Columbia's Color Rhapsody series, featuring a fox and a crow, and a bit of sheer delight

"Beyond the Line of Duty" is a long short presenting Captain Sewett T. Wheless as himself in an account of his career from cow punching through Air Corps training to command of the Flying Fortress in which, as President Roosevelt told the world via radio, he bombed his objective while surrounded by Jap planes which followed him for 75 miles. Produced by Gordon Hollingshead and directed by Lewis Seiler, with narration by Ronald Reagan and President Roosevelt, the film is among the finest to come from the Warner staff.

"The Blitz Wolf," MGM is Fred Quimby, executive producer, at his best in the field of cartoon, and a subject which had the audience screaming.

Eclipse for Premieres

Typewriters wept out last week the news of the passing of the gala premiere as an institution of entertainment, exploitation and etcetera in this land of its nativity.

The "premiere-plus-fixin's" was born of and for "The Covered Wagon" in 1923. The picture throve and the premiere accordingly.

In the 18 years of its thriving the premiere luxuriated violently, variously and for the most part profitably. It came to be regarded by exploitation men and press agents as a dependable instrument for (1) starting a big picture off with a bang that would be heard as far as press services carry or (2) making a dud sound like a giant cracker long enough to fool first money into the till.

Last week's last-of-the-premieres was for "Pride of the Yankees." First of the last premieres was staged by United Artists' George Glass a year ago for the picture called "New Wine." The site was Cucamonga, where the new wine hereabouts comes from, and the same flowed freely, as did the sad news about the ending of these affairs, all this netting some millions of words of newsprint displacement but, somehow, neither ending the practice of premieres nor doing much for the picture in a sales way.

Next was staged three weeks ago for "Tales of Manhattan." The reason for calling the "Pride of the Yankees" premiere the last was the dimout regulation now governing this part of the country.

Nobody keeps books on these matters.

There'll be another along, with new fixin's any minute now.

(LATER: Columbia has announced a premiere of "Talk of the Town" on August 29th; Twentieth Century-Fox has announced the priemer of "The Pied Piper" on September 2nd.)

UPHOLD CLEARANCE ZONES; REMAND NEW ORLEANS CASE

Appeal Board Finds Boundary Fair; Arbitrator To Judge Run Offers

Two precedent-setting decisions on some run and clearance principles were handed down by the Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration system this week on appeals from the Chicago and New Orleans tribunal.

The Chicago system of zoning and clearance was upheld by the Appeal Board in its 34th decision, overruling the finding of Thomas C. McConnell, arbitrator, that the clearance of the suburban Sun theatre in Wheaton, Ill., should be keyed from rural Aurora, Ill., rather than from the Loop first runs. All five distributors were defendants.

For the first time the board sent a case back to a local tribunal in the New Orleans ruling. It upheld the award of T. W. Bethea, arbitrator, directing RKO and Warners to offer some run to the suburban Lakeview theatre and reversed his dismissal of Paramount, holding that that company also should offer some run.

It then remanded the case to the arbitrator to determine if the runs and conditions offered by the distributors were in accord with the purposes of Section VI. The action was taken under Section XVII and XVIII of the rules of arbitration which permits the Appeal Board to remand a case for further action.

Mr. McConnell's award in the 13th Chicago case was completely overruled by the Appeal Board. In May he found unreasonable the five-week clearance of the Arcade theatre in St. Charles, Ill., over the Sun theatre, operated at Wheaton by George T. Vales, cutting it to 24 hours. The Sun is now keyed in the C pre-release week of the Chicago system. The St. Charles theatre is in a rural clearance zone keyed off Aurora.

Condemns Chicago Release System

His award vigorously condemned the Chicago release system and threatened to upset the entire suburban release structure.

The Appeal Board in overruling it found that the present arrangement had been in effect for more than 10 years, that the Wheaton house was not preceded by any other theatre in the same county and found no basis in the slight degree of competition with St. Charles to disturb the existing arrangement.

"Nor do we think the award of the arbitrator is of any real benefit to the Wheaton theatre," the appeal judges wrote. "Should the defendants grant to the theatre in St. Charles a contract clearance of 24 hours over Wheaton, it would make Wheaton wait until St. Charles played before it could play. But Wheaton can now play irrespective when St. Charles plays, and actually does play some pictures ahead of St. Charles."

The award may not affect the playing position of Wheaton in C pre-release week because the contracts of all of the defendants with the York theatre in Elmhurst, which is clearly more competitive with Wheaton than St. Charles, provide that Wheaton shall not play prior to C pre-release week.

"The defendants have the right under Section VIII to so contract. If Wheaton's playing position were advanced, therefore, as the arbitrator apparently intended it should, it would result in giving Wheaton a run ahead of Elmhurst, something which is beyond the power of an arbitrator in a Section VIII proceeding," they said.

"Furthermore, a clearance of 24 hours in favor of St. Charles over Wheaton would subject Wheaton at the same time to clearances in favor of theatres in two separate and distinct areas, a result which this board has held to be unreasonable (Matter of Alvin, No. 17, Jan. 22, 1942)."

The board granted that cases may arise where the clearance between two theatres in the outer edge of two different zones is unreasonable, but said it was not the case in the Wheaton action, commenting:

"Every clearance area must of necessity have a boundary and the runs and clearances in one area should not be dependent on the runs and clearances in any other area. In the Aurora and Chicago areas the defendants in their contracts have so provided, and in our opinion they have established the western boundary of the Chicago area at as fair and logical a line as any that could be adopted." Costs were charged to the complainant.

Theatre Denied Run, Appeal Board Finds

In the New Orleans case the board found that Paramount, RKO and Warners had clearly denied a run to the Lakeview, from its opening on January 28, 1942, until April 15, 1942, when the United Theatres circuit's Beacon theatre was opened two blocks away. Now, it said, the defendants have the right in each license to decide whether the Lakeview or Beacon is to have the prior run.

But it remanded the case to the arbitrator, directing that he "receive and consider the offer of a run to be made the complainant by the defendants and the terms and conditions thereof, to determine whether such are calculated to defeat the purposes of Section VI."

It recommended a careful record in subsequent proceedings of operating factors, costs, etc., for the two theatres and all facts necessary to the arbitrator to determine whether "in case a prior run and clearance are granted to the Beacon over the Lakeview, the terms and conditions, especially the clearance, are under the existing circumstances such as are calculated to defeat the purpose of Section VI."

These terms and conditions, the board said, must be consistent with fair dealing, having due consideration to the conditions to which they are to be applied.

"While an arbitrator is powerless under the decree to require the defendants to grant complainant a run prior to that of the chain theatre to which a run had been granted before it was even completed, nevertheless arbitrators are empowered to require that the terms and conditions under which a run is granted shall afford fair treatment to complainant. Otherwise the purpose of this section will be defeated," the board warned.

Costs were assessed against the three defendants.

Boston

The clearance complaint of the Princess Amusement Company, operating the Middleboro in Middleboro, Mass., against all five distributors, was dismissed by Garrett S. Hoag, arbitrator, on August 20th. He ruled that the theatre had not proved that the 14-day clearance of first runs in Brockton, Boston, Taunton, Onset, Buzzard's Bay, Wareham, Plymouth and Bridgewater were unreasonable, nor that the Middleboro was not in competition with them. Costs were divided between complainant and distributors. It was Boston's 10th case.

Indianapolis

The fourth and fifth Indianapolis cases, clearance actions of the Eaton and Marlene theatre companies for the Rivoli and Emerson theatres have been withdrawn. Paramount, Warners, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox were defendants.

St. Louis

The 14th complaint in St. Louis was filed last week by the Webster Groves Theatre Corporation, for the Ozark in suburban Webster Groves, against Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO and Warners.

Four St. Louis Amusement Company theatres were named as interested parties. They are the Hi-Pointe, Richmond, Maplewood and Shady Oak. The complainant seeks pictures no later than the Hi-Pointe, seven-day, second run house, and reasonable clearance over the others.

The Community Theatres Company won its clearance complaint for the Beverly theatre against RKO, Warners, Paramount and 20th-Fox and the St. Louis Amusement Company Monday when Claude O. Pearcy, arbitrator, found it competed with the Shady Oak, rather than Wellston or Victory theatres. He set a one-day margin after the Wellston. MGM was dismissed. Defendants must pay costs.

MGM has been dropped from the clearance complaint of the Marre theatre, St. Louis, after a settlement had been reached.

Chicago

Declarations of intervention have been filed in the Madlin theatre clearance case, Chicago No. 19, by the Bernice Theatre Corporation, operating the Four Star theatre, and F. D. Gazzolo, operating the Imperial theatre.

Dallas

C. F. O'Donnell, arbitrator of the sixth Dallas case on Monday amended his award to Eddie Joseph's Texas theatre, in Bastrop. He set a clearance of 15 days after first runs for second and 15 days after second for third runs. The original award on July 16th keyed third runs at 30 days after firsts.

New York

The Stilson Realty Company operating the Cameo, Astoria, L. I., won an award in New York's 36th case from Vincent J. Malone, eliminating clearance of seven days by the Interboro circuit's Hobart theatre, Woodside over the Cameo. Costs were charged to the five defendants and intervenor.

Oklahoma City

Ray H. Russ filed the fifth Oklahoma case, a specific run action on Monday for the Camera theatre, Stillwater, Okla. He charged Paramount and RKO refused him first run, held from 1935 to 1940, in favor of the Griffith Amusement Company. The Aggie, Campus and Mecca are named.

Set "Bambi" Release

Walt Disney's "Bambi," cartoon-feature based on Felix Salten's best seller, is being released nationally this week by RKO Radio.

Inter-American Unit Expands Film Staff

Mervyn Le Roy Joins Coast Office; He Will Supervise Work on Scripts

The motion picture staff of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs is being augmented with Hollywood's professional film making and executive talent, it was disclosed this week by Francis Alstock, director.

The additions are in line with a recent reorientation of the U. S. agency's film program from cultural and educational subjects to reels with a direct anti-Axis propaganda content. Plans now are under way for a greatly expanded program of original production under the Coordinator's auspices.

Short subjects will be produced in Hollywood from ideas suggested by Washington and South American sources through the office headed by Nelson Rockefeller. They will be made by the major studios on a cost plus basis and, if suitable, distributed throughout South America in both commercial 35 mm and 16 mm non-theatrical versions.

Mervyn Le Roy this week joined the staff of the Motion Picture Society for the Americas, Hollywood agency for the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. He will work with Jack Chertok, MGM short subjects producer, who is to supervise Hollywood production of Inter-American short subjects.

Major Studios to Produce Shorts

Mr. Le Roy, on part time loan from MGM, will supervise direction of the scripts prepared for the Government agency. They are to be assigned among the eight major studios and will be produced with top line direction, talent and technical skill, Mr. Alstock said.

In the east Carl MacDonald, executive in the Warner Brothers foreign department, has been granted a leave of absence to go to Washington as an assistant to Mr. Alstock. He will serve as an administrative aide in the films division of the office of Inter-American Affairs and will assist with distribution problems.

Other Hollywood members of the Inter-American staff include Kenneth Macgowan, Twentieth Century-Fox producer, who will continue as head of the non theatrical production division in New York, and Philip Dunne. Mr. Dunne, author of the screenplay for "How Green Was My Valley," and other pictures, is in charge of story preparation for the coordinator's theatrical short subjects program.

Mr. Alstock said that no successor had been named to the post of administrator of the Motion Picture Society for the Americas vacated recently when David Hopkins entered naval service. Walter Wanger is president of the Society.

Technical Experts To Visit Mexico

The Coordinator's office also is sponsoring a visit to Mexico by five industry technical experts who are to advise the Mexico City industry on U. S. production and laboratory procedure. They are to make a survey for the Rockefeller office also on the equipment needs of the Mexican industry. The Coordinator is understood to have more than $1,000,000 available to aid in the development of native Latin American production.

The group included Edmund Bertram, chief engineer of the De Luxe Laboratories in New York; Sidney Bowen, Twentieth Century-Fox production manager; Victor Christensen, supervisor of cost control at Twentieth Century-Fox; William Fender, studio manager for Charles R. Rogers Productions, Inc., and Frank Fouce, who operates a California circuit of Spanish language theatres.

William Murray, former European chief for Movietone News, is now in Rio de Janeiro for the Coordinator to develop Brazilian news camera crews under the supervision of the Department of Press and Propaganda. He will send back newsreels and short subjects.

Aircraft Identification Film Series Started

Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, this week announced the start of a series of 12 films on identification of Army aircraft, each one dealing with a different type of Army plane.

The films will be produced for the Research Council by the Walt Disney Studio, under the direction of Erwin Verity, assisted by Robert McCormick, with Carl Nater, unit manager; Andy Anderson, director of photography, assisted by Ernie Smith; John Hersch, layout man, and Henry Gottlieb, in charge of grips.

Loew's Transfers Connecticut Managers

Several changes have been announced for the Loew's circuit in the Connecticut area. Theodore Teschner, manager of the Bijou Theatre, in New Haven, goes to Toledo, Ohio, as manager of the Esquire, and will take over the New State there on its completion. Mr. Teschner was given a farewell party before his departure. Sidney Kleper succeeds him at the Bijou.

William Brownstein, former assistant at the Majestic, Bridgeport, succeeds Mr. Kleper at the Poli, Hartford, while Dorothy Peddle, cashier of the Poli, Bridgeport, moves up to assistant at the Majestic.

Canada Release Deal Closed

Oscar Hanson, president of Pioneer Films, Ltd., has entered into an agreement with Ray Lewis, who distributes American and British product under the name of Alliance Films, for the physical distribution of all product which has been released by Alliance in Canada, and for a new program of pictures. The agreement covers a number of years.

Mr. Hanson, in addition to Pioneer Films, operates Sterling Films, Ltd., a 16mm company releasing Paramount and other product. Pioneer's home office is in Toronto, with branches in St. John, N. B.: Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Calgary.

Mr. Hanson is currently releasing "Birth of a Baby" and "Charlie Chaplin's Festival." Other releases will include "Too Many Women," "Orders from Tokyo" (formerly "I Give My Life") and "Spellbound" from the English novel "The Necromancers" by Hugh Benson.

Montreal Trade Board Forms Film Unit

A film service committee, with F. I. Yearwood as chairman, has been formed by the Montreal Junior Board of Trade, to counteract subversive propaganda, and to encourage and educate Canadians to do their part in a strong, united war effort.

Formation of the committee was proposed by the program committee, which advocated that the Board create a library of motion picture films which could be shown widely to stimulate and crystalize Canada's contribution to the war effort. It was suggested that these films could be drawn chiefly from those of the National Film Society, covering many phases of the United Nations' war efforts and various educational fields.

Mexico City Houses Show Summer Gain

Theatre business in Mexico City is reported to be about 25 per cent better than it was last summer. Trade observers there say that the improvement has resulted from better economic conditions brought about by Mexico's definite stand in the war and intensified industrial and agricultural production.

To Discuss War at SMPE

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, chairman of the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, announced in New York this week that Lester B. July Tax Total At $12,484,881

Federal admission tax collections hit a new peak in July, with a total of $12,484,881 reported by the Internal Revenue Department for the month.

Collections for the period were more than $900,000 above the $11,550,144 recorded in June and $5,700,000 above the $6,760,861 of July, 1941, it was announced.

Amusements throughout the country generally reaped the benefit of the improved business indicated, as receipts in the Third New York (Broadway) District showed a drop from $1,703,492 in June to $1,678,230 the following month.

Broadway collections on box office admissions dropped from $1,571,313 to $1,569,288, but most of the decline was registered in admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, which dropped from $119,598 to $101,642, and on permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, which dropped from $2,465 to nothing. Collections on tickets sold by brokers increased from $9,002 to $10,353, and on tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price, from $1,113 to $2,948.

The July collections brought total admission tax receipts for the first seven months of this year to $78,344,903, nearly $33,000,000 above the $45,408,414 received in the same period last year.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, four were approved for general patronage and eight were listed as unobjectionable for adults. One of the latter, "Jungle Siren," is a re-classification from Class B, following revisions.

Warners Will Reopen Mastbaum September 4th

Warners will reopen the Mastbaum theatre, Philadelphia, on September 4th. It will have a first run policy. Closed for many years, the 5,000-seat house was last operated by the circuit with a stage show policy, and was directed by the late S. L. "Roxy" Rothafel.

Maurice Gable, circuit district manager, will supervise operation of the theatre. Albert Reh, manager of the Stanley theatre, will be house manager of the Mastbaum. George Balkin, manager of the Aldine theatre, will move to the Stanley and Roy Robbins will move from the Karlton to the Aldine. Abe Goldsmith, manager of the Waverly theatre, neighborhood house, will manage the Karlton.

Named UA Branch Head

Carl Leserman, general sales manager for United Artists, announced in New York Tuesday the appointment of C. W. Allen as manager of the company's New Orleans branch. Mr. Allen for 17 years had been with RKO, recently as manager of that company's Omaha branch. He replaces C. E. Peppiatt, who resigned.

Gilbert Leaves RCA

Howard Gilbert of the RCA Manufacturing Company's public relations staff, has left that company to join the publicity department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Mr. Gilbert has been active in promotion work on behalf of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. He assumes his new post September 1st.

Radio's Salary Level Gained During 1941

Both employment and salary levels in the broadcasting industry were higher last year than in 1940, it was reported this week by the Federal Communications Commission.

On the basis of figures filed by the three national and five regional networks and 817 standard stations for the week of October 12, 1941, the commission found a total of 23,666 persons employed full time, an increase of 2,020 over 1940, while the weekly payroll of $1,138,249 showed an increase of $121,883.

The average pay of executives of the national networks increased $7.15 in 1941 to an average of $258.83, but the average for non-executives dropped 14 cents to $57.41, it was shown. On the regional networks, executive pay increased $45.95 to an average of $137.57, while the pay of other employees increased $6.81 to $48.39. The eight networks accounted for 4,009 full-time employees.

The individual stations employed a total of 19,567 full-time workers, executives receiving an average of $89.46, an increase of $5.04 over 1940, and others receiving $38.88, an increase of $1.13. There were 2,426 executives and 17,141 other workers.

Another analysis of station wages showed that executives of clear channel stations averaged $140.48 and other employees $51.13 per week; on regional stations executives averaged $104.75 and other employees $39.38, and on local stations executives averaged $60.77 and other employees $27.75.

Station wages also varied between the densely populated and lower-population regions, it was found. Eighteen clear channel unlimited time stations in the northeastern region employed an average of 80 persons per station, who received an average of $62.40 per week, while eight similar stations in the southeastern region averaged only 58 persons per station and paid them $39.38.

In addition to full-time employees, the industry had 3,978 part-time workers during the week of October 12th, who were paid $122,775. Of these, 3,424 persons, who were paid $84,767, were employed by the stations and 554, who were paid $38,008, by the networks.

Loew's State Theatre Observes 21 Years

The Loew's State theatre, New York, celebrated its 21st anniversary last Saturday. The celebration began with a week of special attractions last Thursday.

The Thursday night celebration featured presentation of a birthday cake by regular customers to the actors. Actors who were present at the opening 21 years ago were invited to attend. They included Eddie Cantor, Irving Berlin, Lou Holtz, George Jessel, Georgie Price, Dorothy Gish, Gloria Swanson, Ina Claire, Paul Whiteman, Sophie Tucker and Bill Robinson.

Halt Outdoor Theatre

A temporary injunction has been granted in the Allen County Common Pleas Court, at Lima, Ohio, restraining Horace and Eunice Shook from further operation of a nearby outdoor theatre, on petition of six residents of the vicinity who charged that the theatre was a nuisance and interfered with their sleep.

Exhibitors Aid War Show

Chicago theatre operators are helping to publicize the Army War Show which will be held at Soldier Field, September 2nd to 12th, by running free trailers on their screens and distributing handbills.

In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box-office performance of product—providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.

Columbia

MEET THE STEWARTS: William Holden, Frances Dee—Ran this with "Paris Calling" with fairly good results. It hasn't much drawing power but it pleased very well. It is all humor and very nicely done. One person said he did not like it but I cannot see why. Personally I got a lot of chuckles out of it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, August 12-13—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town.

TWO YANKS IN TRINIDAD: Brian Donlevy, Pat O'Brien, Janet Blair—Believe it would have pleased more if it hadn't been quite so loud and raspy with a little more feminine appeal. Played Friday, Saturday, August 7-8—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FINGERS AT THE WINDOW: Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—An excellent, entertaining picture which held our audience spellbound. Lew Ayres is going to be missed in pictures. Sold this for a church benefit, mid-week, and they cleaned up—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage

MAISIE GETS HER MAN: Ann Sothern, Red Skelton—Maisie carries an awful load with this support they gave her, Red Skelton. For some reason our audiences can't see him, for when a new comedian comes up (and they are so rare) we hear plenty, if they like him, but we have not had a ripple on him, from anyone, except unfavorable. They like him on the radio, some say, not on the screen. He has no line at all. Maisie is popular here, and she carried the picture. Neither I, nor the audience could see that she got any help from Skelton. I know that he elicited no laughs. This is not a personal knock, it is the audience reaction to his efforts. It is very thin on scenario also.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

NAZI AGENT: Conrad Veidt, Ann Ayars—The lack of star draw was made up by an entertaining story, well acted roles and good production. Conrad Veidt is perfect in his role. Fair business on a Friday and Saturday, doubled with Twentieth Century-Fox's "Mad Martindales"—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RIO RITA: Abbott and Costello—Dust off the booking records, boys, and make room for this one; it's hot in entertainment and crowd-gathering qualities. Lavishly produced and without a dull moment, it will please the audience and get you money. Played on a Friday and Saturday to excellent business, doubled with "On the Sunny Side," from Twentieth Century-Fox—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S NEW YORK ADVENTURE: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan. Here is a series that has been going a long time, one a year, and still popular. Each one is about the same, but it seems that we all like to go into the world of make-believe, so the monk, Chester, Johnny and Maureen come around once a year, and do nice business, with the monk almost stealing the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Depending on your type of patronage, this can be either a great picture or a flop. We hit the middle stride on this and probably this was due to the stars, rather than the appeal of the story, title or production. Well made and filmed in sepia, it ought to be played if for no other reason than the wonderful performances and direction. Played on Sunday and Monday to fair business—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson—This is small town stuff, and it should get a big play there. We were surprised at the turnout, as the playdate on this picture was very late due to its being late in getting started in this territory. An excellent audience picture for small towns. Played to very good business on a Thursday, Friday, Saturday playdate. Doubled with Gene Autry in "Heart of the Rio Grande." Played July 23-25—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Paramount

THE FLEET'S IN: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—Just what the doctor ordered. It is pictures of this type that bring out the extra patrons and satisfy after you get them. Holds interest throughout. Played Sunday,, Monday, July 26-27—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Bob Hope, Madeleine Carroll—We agree with Hope, she's our favorite blonde. But the picture surely disappointed from the box office angle. Good story and held interest throughout. Played Sunday, Monday, August 9-10—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REAP THE WILD WIND: Paulette Goddard, John Wayne, Ray Milland—For 15 years I have been snatching tickets and watching the screen and this is the first picture I have ever looked at through matinee and three nights, seven performances, and liked it better every time I saw it. You can shoot the works on this at advanced prices and look the patrons in the face coming out. Not as long as GWTW but nearly as good, regardless of what some critics have said. Played Sunday-Tuesday, August 2-4—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town-country patronage.

REAP THE WILD WIND: Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard—At advanced admissions this broke three records, biggest gross at these admissions, biggest Saturday in history, and biggest two-day business. Well worth considering even in small towns. We had decided to pass it by; but when others told us how they did, we could no longer ignore the signal that here is one of the big money shows of this season. Excellent business, and glad to say our people liked it and didn't grumble at the scale. Personally, I don't like to advance admissions, as people will be led to believe that only when we raise admissions do we have a sock picture. Played Saturday, Sunday, August 15, 16—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: Brian Donlevy, William Holden, Ellen Drew—Very odd, but entertaining. Of course it was all impossible but it had an element of suspense because no one could figure out how it would all end. Played Wednesday, Thursday, August 12-13—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SWEATER GIRL: Eddie Bracken, June Preisser—Collegiate murder mystery—good music in it. Played on general payday here and it drew nicely. People satisfied with picture. Played Wednesday, Thursday, August 12, 13—Joe Humphries, Palace Theatre, Lansford, Pa. General patronage.

TWILIGHT ON THE TRAIL: Bill Boyd, Brad King, Andy Clyde—Just another Cassidy Western, but that isn't saying that it did not please. Our Western fans seem to like them all. Played Friday, Saturday, July 24, 25—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

HOME IN WYOMING: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—For two pictures previously I noted a drop off in gross and I feared Autry was slipping. He came back strong and is again "home" in any rural town he plays. Played Sunday, Monday, August 9, 10—N. J. Keenan, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Rural patronage.

JOAN OF OZARK: Judy Canova, Joe E. Brown—Good picture and good business. A swell show for small towns. Played Wednesday, Thursday, August 12, 13—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Donald M. Barry, Alan Curtis, Fay McKenzie—Played mid-week with "Russian Front." Gave it the works in exploitation and did a surprisingly good business. Played Wednesday, Thursday, July 29, 30—Joe Humphries, Palace Theatre, Lansford, Pa. General patronage.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Fay McKenzie, Don Barry—This ought to be played in every village and city of the country. Well-made picture with plenty of suspense. What is lacking in star draw is made up in story which abounds in action and suspense. Be sure to play up the title big as that is what you have to sell. We did very good business on a Thursday-Friday-Saturday playdate on this. Played July 16-18—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING: Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen—I played this late but the kids enjoyed it on Friday and Saturday. Played August 14, 15—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MAD MARTINDALES, THE: Jane Withers, Marjorie Weaver—No dice, Jane is washed up, and that is too bad. She has been a good little trooper. Twentieth Century-Fox just made too many pictures of both her and Shirley and that satiated the public and militates against her as a star seemingly.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

MAGNIFICENT DOPE, THE: Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Lynn Bari—Good picture and good business. Picture starts off slow but has plenty of comedy in the latter part. Played Sunday, Monday, August 9, 10—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SONG OF THE ISLANDS: Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, Victor Mature—Coloring excellent, dances good, acting adequate. Despite late play date, grossed well. Give preferred play date. No plot to speak of, no especially catchy songs, but just one of those things that click. Played Wednesday-Friday, July 29-31—N. J. Keenan, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Rural patronage.

THROUGH DIFFERENT EYES: Mary Howard, Don Wood—Little mystery drama which got by on Family Night. Played Tuesday, August 11—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CORSICAN BROTHERS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Ruth Warrick—Costume movie—outdated theme —'nuff said. Played Sunday, Monday, August 2, 3,— N. J. Keenan, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Rural patronage.

Universal

DRUMS OF THE CONGO: Stuart Erwin, Ona Munson—This is worth a playdate if you double feature. We played it with a very tardy showing of "Roxie Hart." It won't prove the best picture you'll play this season, but it will entertain them and get their minds off other things. Played Wednesday, Thursday, July 29, 30, to good business—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PARIS CALLING: Randolph Scott, Elizabeth Bergner—Ran this with "Meet the Stewarts" with fairly good results. Here is a very good anti-Nazi drama that does not have much drawing power but pleased those that came. It is surprisingly well done and won praise from many of my "hardest-to-please" patrons. Personally I was very pleasantly surprised with it. Plenty of action and suspense. Played Wednesday, Thursday, August 12, 13—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre,, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town.

SPOILERS, THE: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne—Good action picture, even for small towns. Good cast, well produced and with Rex Beach's name, you couldn't ask for more to hill your show. This did fair business for a Sunday-Monday-Tuesday playdate in hot July weather. Played July 26-28.—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT: Humphrey Bogart, Kaaren Verne—Very good thriller except that it was too long and toward the close it dragged. Played Wednesday, Thursday, July 29, 30—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GAY SISTERS, THE: Barhara Stanwyck,, George Brent—Swell show. Drew well. Thought it would be a feminine draw hut it was liked hy all. Played Sunday-Tuesday, August 9-11—Joe Humphries, Palace Theatre, Lansford, Pa. General patronage.

JUKE GIRL: Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan—The two stars are hot, hoys, so don't waste any time getting this set for showing. This did a smash business on a Sunday-Monday playdate, with a little summer rain to help. It will maintain your audience's interest the entire way. There's not a dull moment in it, and it probahly will prove more entertaining than many another so called "big" picture. Played Sunday, Monday, August 2, 3—Thomas di Lorenzo, New Paltz Theatre, New Paltz, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Paramount

LET 'EM GO ALIVE: Sportlights—Worth while sport reel dealing with strange fish in Florida.—E. M. Freiburger. Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE A SAP, MR. JAP: Popeye the Sailor—A really good Popeye cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Victory Films

KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Victory Films—The song, "Keep 'Em Rolling" is sung while scenes of industry are shown. Audience is invited to sing with words on the screen. Mine must have sung mentally as I heard not a peep out of them. It is well done. It lasts three minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

UNITED CHINA RELIEF: Victory Films—This two-minute trailer says what it has to say and stops. It is mostly titles and stills.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

FONEY FABLES: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GLEN GRAY AND BAND: Melody Masters Bands Good Musical reel.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAYBE DARWIN WAS RIGHT: Broadway Brevities—Well, to say the least it was different! And quite entertaining but we never should have played it on Sunday. It's a short for Saturday.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neh. Small town patronage.

MEN OF THE SKY: Technicolor Specials—A swell two-reel suhject in color showing aviators in the service. Many favorahle comments on it. Some said it was better than the feature.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SQUAWKIN' HAWK, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Average cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger. Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHO'S WHO IN THE ZOO: Looney Tunes Cartoons—If another cartoon is produced trying to create funny expressions by various animals, we certainly will not use it. This had only one laugh and that seemed strained.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre,, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Radio Listening Seen Gaining

Radio listening for the first two weeks of August was greater than during the same period last year, according to the C. E. Hooper Survey, New York.

The "Continuous Use of Radio Index" was at 20.3 per cent, up .3 per cent from the July report and up 3.1 per cent from August, 1941. The "Network Program Index" is 6.5 per cent, down .2 per cent from a fortnight ago but up 1.3 per cent over the same period last year. During the first fortnight of August, 55 programs showed losses from the July 30 report, 39 showed gains and seven were unchanged.

Walter Winchell led the network shows with 17.5 per cent. Others, in order, were Kay Kyser, 13.2; "Mr. District Attorney," 12.3; Frank Morgan, 11.7; "Information, Please," 11; Rudy Vallee, 10.9; "Star Spangled Vaudeville," 9.8; "Take It or Leave It," 9.8; "Kraft Music Hall," 9.7; "Your Hit Parade," 9.6; "How'm I Doin'?" 9.4; "Saturday Night Serenade," 9; "Adventures of the Thin Man," 8.9; Major Bowes, 8.7, and "One Man's Family," 8.5.

Report Third of Radio Sets in Evening Use

One-third of all radio sets in the country were in use, on the average, during each half-hour between 7 P. M. and 11 P. M. in the evening on every weekday evening during the winter, according to the annual report of the Co-operative Analysis of Broadcasting for the year ended April 30th, last.

On Sunday evenings, 38.6 per cent of the sets were tuned in each half-hour. The low point of radio listening was Saturday evenings, according to the report.

Named RKO Manager

Roy F. Branon has been promoted from salesman to branch manager at the RKO Radio exchange in Charlotte, succeeding J. B. Breecham, who recently was named branch manager in Washington.

OBITUARIES

Alice D. Miller, Author, Dies

Alice Duer Miller, author, died August 22nd in her apartment in New York following an illness of eight months. She was 68.

Author of several successful novels, plays and motion picture scenarios, Mrs. Miller probably achieved wide fame through her poem, "The White Cliffs." Since its appearance in 1940 more than 200,000 copies have been sold in this country and more than 100,000 in England.

Her reaction to Hollywood, where she passed a good deal of time in recent years, differed considerably from that of many authors.

Mrs. Miller said of Hollywood: "All these people are highly trained, intelligent, expert and, like every one I have ever seen connected with the 'movies,' vital to an incredible degree. They are interested—just as you are—in getting the best possible story, and will do anything to help you."

Many of Mrs. Miller's novels were made into successful motion pictures or plays or both. "Gowns by Roberta" was a Broadway hit musical as "Roberta," with the aid of Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach. "Manslaughter," probably the most exciting of her serialized novels, became an equally exciting motion picture. "The Charm School" started as a novel, then, in succession, a play and a film.

Marion Lucas, Brother Of Arthur, Dies

Marion Lucas, 62, postmaster at Savannah, Ga., and brother of Arthur M. Lucas of the Lucas and Jenkins Circuit, died in Savannah August 16th following a protracted illness. He had been associated with his brother in the management of theatres a number of years ago but later was concerned with the theatre operations only in an advisory capacity.

Mr. Lucas had been postmaster at Savannah since 1913, serving under five Presidents. Prior to becoming postmaster he had been city editor of the Savannah Morning News. His newspaper career had extended over approximately 15 years prior to that.

J. W. Denman, Aide to A. H. Blank, Dead

Jesse W. Denman, 50, former secretary-treasurer of Central States Theatre Corporation, died at his home in Des Moines August 16th of a heart attack. He resigned his theatre post a year ago to become financial advisor to A. H. Blank.

Mr. Denman also owned theatres at Clarion and Eagle Grove, Ia., and operated a real estate business at Des Moines.

Max Hirschfeld

Max Hirschfeld, 80, who for a decade conducted Broadway musical productions for Florenz Ziegfeld, Victor Herbert, the Shuberts, the Frohmans and Charles Dillingham, died August 17th in Knickerbocker Hospital, New York.

George Pankey

George C. Pankey, 56, who began his screen career with Tom Mix in 1913 with the Selig Polyscope Company, died in Grangeville, Idaho, August 18th. In addition to acting he was an assistant director.

John Ritchie Muir

John Ritchie Muir, former district manager of Famous Players Canadian, and former owner of the Dominion theatre in Victoria, B. C., died in Vancouver August 17th.

Norton Mears of RCA Dead

Norton A. Mears, vice-president and general purchasing agent of the RCA Manufacturing Company, died in a Philadelphia hospital August 19th after an illness of several weeks.

In charge of RCA purchases since he became associated with the company in 1934, Mr. Mears held one of the most important positions in the company. He was in charge of the raw material supplies for the RCA factories now totally converted to war production.

Mr. Mears was a native of Elkhart, Ind., and made his home in Marlton, N. J. Prior to joining RCA he had held executive positions in stores and purchasing departments with several railroads, and was vice-president and general manager of the Chicago Forging and Manufacturing Company.

He was a member of the Philadelphia Purchasing Agents Association. He is survived by his wife, the former Ann Agnes O'Hara, and a brother, Robert, of Yonkers, N. Y. Funeral services were held in Mount Sterling, Ill.

Lefebvre, Montreal Exhibitor, Dies

Eugene Lefebvre, 62, manager of the Theatre Francais in Montreal, died Monday morning of a heart attack at Ileperreault, near Montreal. He had spent more than 30 years in the theatre business, 20 with United Amusements Corp., Ltd., operators of the Francais.

Mr. Lefebvre had been manager of several Montreal theatres, including the Rivoli and Plaza, and the Granada in Sherbrooke. For many years he had served the Canadian industry as consultant in cinema matters.

Roy Weagant, Radio Inventor, Dead

Roy Alexander Weagant, 61, electrical engineer and inventor, died August 22nd in Sherbrooke Hospital, Sherbrooke, Quebec. Mr. Weagant was a consulting engineer and patent expert for the Radio Corporation of America. He formerly was chief engineer of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company and vice-president and chief engineer of the De Forest Radio Company.

Fred Schaefer Dies

Fred W. Schaefer, 64, Chicago theatre owner and exhibitor, died at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital there August 22nd of a heart ailment. He was president of Schaefer Brothers Theatre Company and formerly was associated with the Jones, Linick and Schaefer company.

Fred Fritz

Fred Fritz, 40, owner of the Oxford theatre, Oxford Junction, Ia., and the What Cheer theatre, What Cheer, Ia., was injured fatally recently when the truck he was driving was struck by the Milwaukee Railroad's Hiawatha streamliner at a grade crossing near Oxford Junction.

John Hobble

John L. Hobble, 56, author of several screenplays and the Broadway play, "Daddies," died August 15th in Hollywood.

George Whitney

George A. Whitney, former exhibitor in Springfield, Mass., died in Los Angeles August 14th.

William O'Brien

William H. O'Brien, 66, former film salesman, died in Old Orchard Beach, Me., August 17th.

Allan Sears

Allan D. Sears, 55, screen actor, died in Hollywood August 18th.

IN THE COURTS

Sues Union for Voting Rights

Philip Trainer, projectionist and a member of Local 516 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators and Stage Hands Union of Chester, Pa., has filed suit against the IATSE in Federal court, Philadelphia, to compel the union to restore his full rights in Local 516.

The complainant claimed he had been without voice and vote since January 7, 1938, when he signed an agreement with the local to that effect on condition he be reinstated. The agreement was to continue in effect until the members of Local 516 by unanimous vote agreed that the complainant should have voice and vote.

The agreement was the answer to a petition for reinstatement which followed expulsion from the union in October, 1937, the complaint said. Mr. Trainer charged that he received no notice of the expulsion trial and that he was deprived of his right to produce witnesses and answer the charges.

He charged that following the expulsion, he was deprived of employment and was compelled to apply for home relief.

Dewey Wrigley, IATSE cameraman, expelled by the American Society of Cinematographers, this week filed suit in Los Angeles superior court for reinstatement in the ASC.

He charges the ASC was arbitrary in ousting him for accepting an assignment on a Twentieth Century-Fox film at a Utah location. Mr. Wrigley charged he was given no hearing after the ASC board expelled him on the grounds that he accepted work without its approval.

Du Pont Ordered to Show Records

Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation last week was ordered by Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind to submit all its records and books on the cost of manufacturing film raw stock from 1925 to 1936 to Pathe Laboratories, Inc., for inspection.

The order was granted in the suit for $610,000 damages brought by Pathe against Du Pont in which the defendant is charged with breaching a contract made in 1925 which allegedly provided that Du Pont would supply Pathe with its entire raw stock requirements at cost plus 30 per cent. The claim is made that the defendant overcharged on film and in 1936 refused to continue selling unless it obtained an increase of one cent per foot.

Sues Over Ejection

Following the recent binding over to the grand jury under $250 bond of Elmer Fritz and Grant Wooley, operating the Lyric theatre, in Urbana, Ohio, by a Negro patron who charged racial discrimination, a suit for $10,500 has been filed against Chakeres Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Springfield, Ohio, by Christine Stanhope in behalf of her 12-year-old daughter. She charged that the girl was forcibly ejected from the theatre by an usher when she refused to change her seat to another section of the house.

Booking Agency Sued

Marcus Loew Booking Agency, operator of Station WHN, New York, Samuel Faust, WHN employe, and Central Advertising Service, Inc., were named defendants last week in a $10,000 damage suit brought by Edward R. Block. Plaintiff contends that he lost Barricini, Inc., candy manufacturer, as an advertising account through the influence of the defendants.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

CONCERNING SHOWMEN

The authenticity of this story is beyond question. So is the remedy, in the opinion of many; but sometimes the majority doesn't rule.

The manager of the theatre which ran a matinee and then closed down until 7:00 o'clock was in the habit of eating his dinner during the hours when the theatre was closed. His boss called one night when he wasn't there and thereupon issued an edict that someone must be in the theatre at those hours when it is closed.

So the manager arranged to wait until 6:45 when his staff was all on duty and there were plenty of people around to answer the 'phone. Then he had his dinner. But the boss didn't like that, either. "You should be on the floor when people are coming in."

The manager, respectful of authority, still felt he had to eat; so he had his dinner served to him in his office. The boss sat with him one evening but was annoyed when a lady who had lost a glove came in to the manager's office and apologized for disturbing him during dinner. "It looks bad; you can't eat in your office" was the ukase of the czar.

Unfortunately, there is no satisfactory end to this story. The manager kept on eating but he lost plenty of weight worrying about what the boss would think of next.

An outstanding piece of exploitation comes from C. T. Spencer, manager of the Capitol theatre, Hamilton, Ont. It's a full page ad, reproduced elsewhere in this section, on behalf of "Mrs. Miniver", sponsored by the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce, with the names of the members in small type their only credit. The copy is commended to the attention of showmen, especially with a view to making the same tieup on War Bonds as Spencer did.

Some of the top-ranking showmen of the country were brought to New York last week by Paramount's advertising and publicity director, Bob Gillham, to discuss plans for merchandising "Wake Island". The results so far surpassed the expectations of Mr. Gillham as well as the theatremen and other Paramount advertising and publicity men that further meetings will be held on other pictures.

Practically every section of the country was represented and each theatre delegate gave his or her views on how the picture should be sold. What will be successful in New England, in Harry Browning's opinion, would be of no value for Chicago, said Bill Hollander. What Jimmy Nairn of Famous Players thought would be useful in Canada might be of no interest to Helen Garrity in Salt Lake City. What Alice Gorham found useful in Detroit failed to intrigue M. M. Rubens of Great States. And so it went.

It was your editor's privilege to greet some of his old friends in the group and to meet some new ones.

The results of this meeting can be of value to all theatres playing "Wake Island". Other showmen can cash in on the campaigns used in their territories.

The Quigley War Showmanship Award is but another reason for the showman to follow the calendar of September events suggested in this section last week. Although we cannot ourselves dispose of the Award, it seems safe to say that any showman who follows this calendar 100%, and besides adds a few fillips of his own, should be among the leading candidates for the honor.

But even if there isn't in your opinion a chance of winning that Award (and you really have no basis for the opinion) it is the patriotic duty of every showman not only to his country but to the industry and to himself to exert his utmost efforts to sell Bonds in September. Aside from the obvious duty of any American to his country, the showman should remember that the very existence of the industry and therefore his job might depend on the extent to which the Treasury Department's aims are realized in September.

We commend to your attention Herbert Graefe's idea for selling War Stamps and Bonds at the Wisconsin Rapids theatres in Wisconsin. Next to the booth from which Bonds and Stamps are sold by wives, daughters, mothers, sisters or sweethearts of servicemen is a large plaque. On this is placed a picture of the husband, son, sweetheart, father or brother of the particular girl who is manning the booth at that moment. A sign reads, "This is my son who is in our fighting forces. Buy Bonds and Stamps and help win the war so he can return to me soon". That's the kind of fillip that may sell just those few more Bonds and Stamps that will put your territory over its quota. Herb invites you to adopt his idea; that's why he sent it to the Round Table.

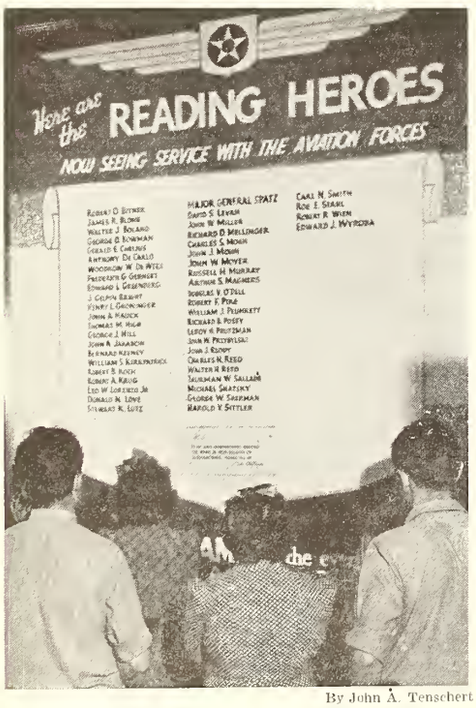
SMART SELLING



Here's the latest in Exploitation ideas used by Leading Showmen

This striking front was used by Sam Gilman at Loew's Regent, Harrisburg, Pa., for his engagement on "Somewhere I'll Find You."

This hand-painted sign strikes a novel note. Lloyd Rollins of Smalley's Theatre, Hensonville, N. Y., conceived and executed the idea.

By John A. Tenschert

The little card at the bottom of this sign in the Astor Theatre, Reading, Pa., says, "If we have inadvertently overlooked the name of your relative or acquaintance, please tell us. Lester Stallman, manager."

No, this is not cheese cake. But it was to attract your eye to the contest to find the most beautiful sarong girl run by Ted Kirkmeyer at the Egyptian Theatre, Ogden, Utah. All contestants are employees of the theatre.

Dale Danielson used this alligator and placarded cage for the engagement of "Jungle Book" at the Dream Theatre, Russell, Kansas.

Steve McManus put a novel sign on his marquee when he ran an all-laugh show at the Bayview, Toronto.

Here's a view of the three girls Marlowe Conner put on the street, to ballyhoo the engagement of "The Gay Sisters" at the Capitol, Madison ,Wis. Note the cards suspended around their necks urging purchase of War Bonds.

Pollock Lands Contest On "Talk of the Town"

To usher in his date on "The Talk of the Town" at Loew's, in Rochester, Les Pollock landed a contest with the Sun on "What prominent persons in Rochester are "The Talk of the Town?" A full-page layout with the contest angle incorporated throughout the page was also promoted. For his street stunt, a girl with a sandwich sign, reading, "The Talk of the Town" covered the downtown area.

One of the leading milliners featured a window display of the latest hats surrounded by stills with "Talk of the Town" copy. For a teaser gag, cards were planted on light posts in the city and suburbs reading: "Hush! Don't let America's War Secrets become the Talk of the Town." In addition, 5,000 teaser stickers with gummed labels were placed in empty store windows, on automobiles, etc., with copy: "Have you heard (small swing type) "THE TALK OF THE TOWN?" (both Gothic).

For a lobby stunt, Pollock used a four-foot dummy telephone with a hanging placard reading "When this phone rings next Thursday, it will be 'The Talk of the Town.'" (See photo.)

Krolick Ties Radio To "Moontide" Date

The mystery melody program on Station WHEC featured a contest in which guest tickets to "Moontide" were offered in connection with a tune guessing stunt arranged by Art Krolick at the Century theatre, in Rochester. Spot announcements over WSAY plugged the companion feature, "It Happened in Flatbush." The first thousand women patrons attending opening day were given photos of Jean Gabin, this was announced in ads, lobby display and special stories.

A special screening was held in advance for workers who sold defense stamps in the theatre lobbies and resulted in news story breaks and story and art in the society section. Twelve ladies were chosen and interviewed for their reaction to the new star. As a street gag, a 10-foot telescope was constructed and placed at various busy points in downtown areas asking people to take a free look at Rochester's newest and brightest star. Appropriate copy written in the telescope, sold the star and the picture.

Serialization Sells "Angel" for Longo

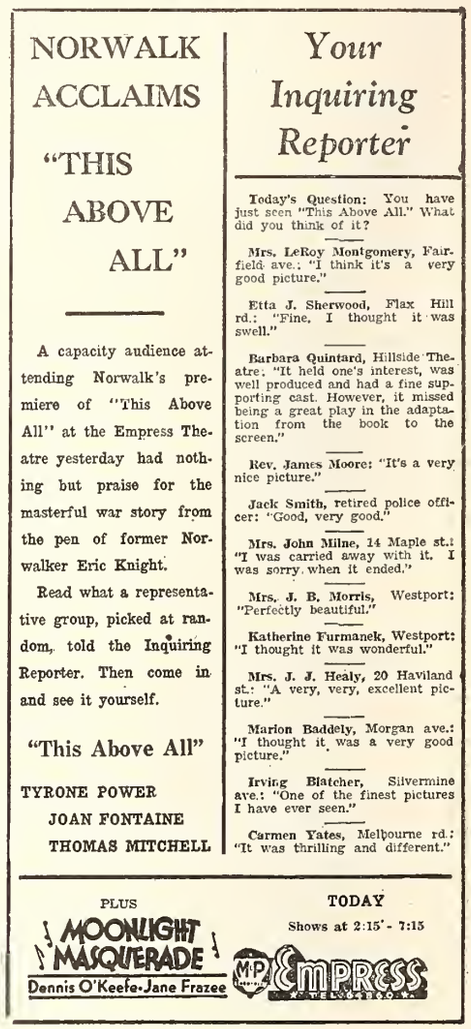
Joe Longo at Loew's State, in Boston, planted a three-day serialization of "I Married An Angel" in the Boston Globe with picture, theatre and playdates credits included. Longo also invited 25 Eddys and MacDonalds to be the guests of the theatre on the opening day, the stunt landing several stories in the papers. A teaser ad campaign also aided in putting over the engagement.

Selling Points
ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

ORCHESTRA WIVES (Twentieth Century-Fox): This picture makes a strong point of its music and therefore it would be well for the exhibitor likewise to make it a cardinal factor in selling. There are a number of recordings of the popular songs from the picture; Glenn Miller, who appears in the film with his orchestra, has made a recording of each of four songs. Distributors of Victor records are set to break cooperative campaigns day and date with the theatres' openings. The press book has a list of distributors who can be called upon for assistance. Among the plans is the distribution of 1,500,000 post cards by record stores to their customers. If these can be synchronized with playdates and the playdates added, the theatre will have an excellent means for advertising. This is a picture for the jive fans; it might be well to emulate the example of Don Kuhn at the Palms State, Detroit, who had a couple dancing in the lobby as a part of his campaign on "Syncopation". Another way to interest the jive fans would be a contest in which they are asked for their nicknames for each of an orchestra's instruments. For newspaper readers, a jive glossary would be an interesting sort of contest with prizes for those who correctly define the greatest number of terms. The title of the picture suggests a connection between orchestra wives, golf widows and so on. Another radio angle is to get spot broadcasts on the nights when Glenn Miller's program goes over CBS. Since this broadcast is sponsored by Chesterfield, a tieup can be arranged with tobacco shops in which Carole Landis, who has posed for a Chesterfield ad and who appears in the picture, can be featured.

PANAMA HATTIE (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): Being a musical, the picture immediately suggests the use of the songs as one of the leading methods for exploitation. They can be plugged through music stores, using the covers in the windows and on counters, over the radio and in hotels and night clubs by persuading the orchestra leaders of the merit of the songs as well as the picture. Ann Sothern as Panama Hattie makes an appealing figure, so it might be a good bet to have a life-size standee of her in the lobby and offer to take a picture of any man who wants to pose with his arm around Panama Hattie. Dress a girl up like Panama Hattie and announce her itinerary in advance. Those who walk up to her and say, "You're Panama Hattie and you are appearing at the State Theatre beginning Tuesday", are awarded a prize if they repeat the phrase exactly. It might be feasible to run a contest for the best imitation of Panama Hattie with the finals on the stage the night of the opening. If there is unlimited telephone service in your community, have a girl telephone subscriber announcing that she is Panama Hattie and will be at the State, etc. Bellboys paging Panama Hattie in hotel lobbies and restaurants would excite curiosity. Some of Panama Hattie's wise cracks have been put on stills which will make an intriguing lobby display. Fans, ventilated hats, hat checks and imitation palm leaves, all properly imprinted, are available as giveaways.

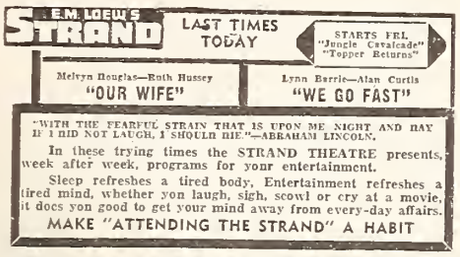


Paramount brought the advertising directors of the various theatre circuits in which it owns an interest to New York last week for a discussion on how to sell "Wake Island". The photo above shows some of the conferees at luncheon: clockwise around the table—Harold Martin of Lucas & Jenkins; George Hoover of Paramount Theatre Enterprises, Miami; Robert M. Weitman, managing director of the Paramount Theatre, New York; Leon Netter of the home office; Emmet Rogers of Wilby-Kincey and Leonard H. Goldenson of the home office.

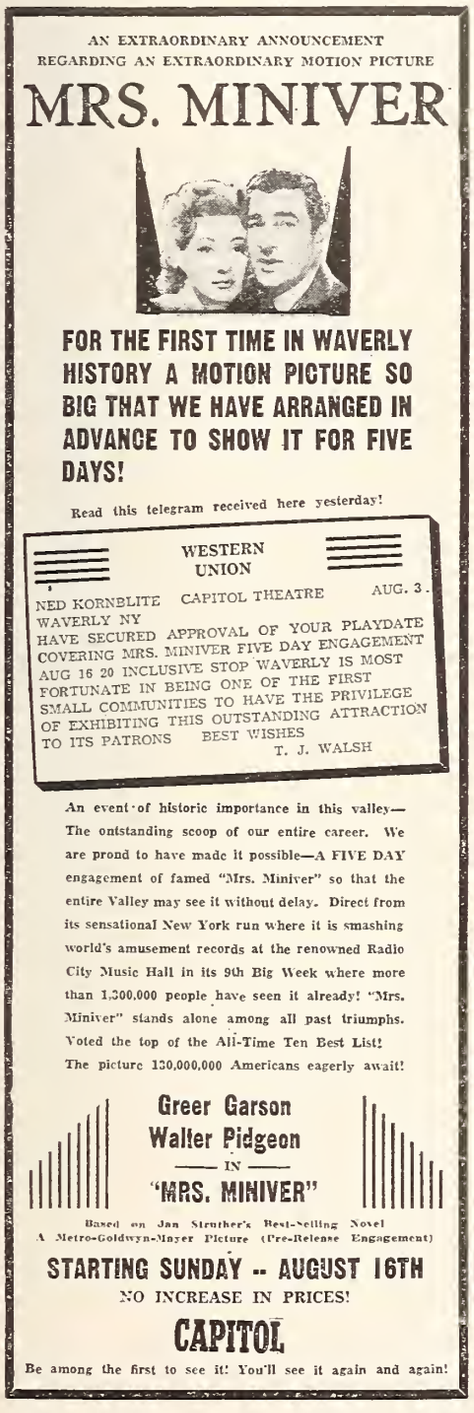
NOVELTY ADS

Some Unusual but none the less Useful Newspaper Ideas

These slugs can be spotted in newspaper advertising during the coming month. They were prepared by Ernest Emerling's department of Loew's theatres but are available to anyone for the asking.



The local paper's Inquiring Reporter was tied up in this two col. ad used by Al Hamilton for the second day of "This Above All" at the Empress theatre, South Norwalk. Eric Knight, author of the story, formerly lived in Norwalk and Al got that into the ad, too.



This gratis ad, one of two, eight columns wide, appeared in the Cincinnati Times-Star opposite the regular weekly Disney "Bambi" cartoon strip. E. V. Dinerman of RKO theatres in Cincinnati made the tieup.

This is the culmination of a big campaign put on by Art Krolick, in Rochester. Note the "hurry, hurry" angle.

Eddie Selette, now at the Strand, New Bedford, Mass., has to use a minimum of space to get into the paper. So, once a week he uses an institutional ad like this.

Bud Kornblite at the Capitol theatre, Waverly, N. Y., used the telegram of confirmation on his print as part of his ad on "Mrs. Miniver". Note that the fact that the picture was in its ninth week in Radio City proved of importance 300 miles away.

W. P. Stone, manager of the Sunset theatre, Asheboro, N. C., gave a big play to a Disney short in this two col. ad. The names of two residents of Asheboro are in the ad. They receive passes; the idea is to make everybody read the ads looking for their names.

Loew's ad on "Panama Hattie" is adaptable for either single or double feature theatres. Note that single feature theatres mortise out the word "plus", while the double billers delete everything else in the box and set the name of the second feature in type. The appeal to buy Bonds is from the group on the opposite page.

This ad (actual size) was used in the Chicago papers by Balaban & Katz on the night of the first scheduled blackout. Bill Hollander's department prepared it.

"Miss Annie Rooney" Sold On Local Boy Angle

Taking advantage of the appearance of a local boy in Shirley Temple's new picture, "Miss Annie Rooney," Manager William S. Canning of the Interstate Empire Theatre and Manager Fred Weldon of the Center theatre, who took Canning's place while the latter was on vacation, both in Fall River, Mass., built their entire campaign around the fact that the Fall River lad, Roland Furtado, known in the movies as Roland Dupree, was one of Shirley's two boy friends in the picture. Canning and Weldon grabbed some valuable publicity in feature stories and pictures in The Herald News.

Longo Plants Serialization On "They All Kissed the Bride"

Joe Longo for his advance on "They All Kissed the Bride" at Loew's State, in Boston, planted a four-day contest in the Boston American with art and a story each day. In addition, the special feature "Four Ways to Kiss a Bride" was landed in the Sunday Advertiser before the regular showing of the picture.

A series of florists windows were promoted using scene stills from the picture with credit card included as part of the display. Spot announcements were also had over two local radio stations each day for five days preceding the opening.

Earle Holden, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, obtained some Spanish moss, well known in the deep South, to enhance the effect. The photo shows how it was used.

Miss Bridgeport Chosen on Stage of Loew Theatre

The bathing beauty season is nearly over up in the north, but there are plenty of showmen in the south who might profit by Morris Rosenthal's experience at Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn.; and those in the north might take a leaf out of Morris' book and this leaf out of this book for next year's bathing beauty contests.

It's an annual affair with Morris, so he dug up the pictures of last year's Miss America and her court and ran them in the newspaper along with the announcement that there would be a contestant from Bridgeport to be chosen at the Majestic.

An added twist this year was that each week for four weeks, in addition to selecting Miss Bridgeport and two alternates, another contest was sponsored to select a Miss Junior Bridgeport from talented girls from five to nine years of age.

The girls were selected by volunteer judges chosen from the audiences; they were guided in their selections by the applause of the crowded houses.

Each week the newspaper announced the winner of the contest and carried a picture of her as well. After the finals when the winners for each week were judged for the selection of Miss Bridgeport, Morris obtained practically a whole page of publicity on Miss Bridgeport with pictures of her at home as well as at the beach.

Of course, the entire affair was sponsored by a store which sold bathing suits, so a mannikin stood in the lobby for four weeks dressed in a bathing suit and with appropriate placards alongside.

Goldstein's Summons Gag Aids on "Tortilla Flat"

As a teaser to help exploit "Tortilla Flat" at the Cameo theatre, in Rochester, Joe Goldstein distributed heralds in the form of a summons. The front page read: "Summons. Court of Amusement and Entertainment. State of Pleasure. 1942 Docket. Fine for failure to appear $1,000 worth of fun and thrills."

The inside spread continued: "You are hereby commanded, all excuses and delays set aside, that you appear at the above mentioned court and thereby enjoy a full evening of entertainment that will warm the cockles of your heart when you see," etc. The back page featured a small cut of a minute man with copy: "At your service day and night. Buy Stamps and Bonds at the Cameo."

Stearn Injects Contest Angle In "Gone With the Wind" Ad

Effective was the double truck promoted ahead of "Gone With the Wind" at the Manring, in Middlesboro, Ky., by Harry D. Stearn and Ken Carter. Each merchant's ad featured a part of a scene still and a contest angle was brought in through the offer of guest tickets to those cutting out the pieces and correctly assembling the parts. Catchline across the two pages read: "The Merchants of Middlesboro Celebrate with Outstanding Events the Arrival of 'Gone With the Wind'".

Baseball Coach Receives Trophy In Providence

Excellent newspaper breaks were accorded the premiere of "Pride of the Yankees" at the RKO Albee, in Providence through the efforts of Bill Morton and George French, who effected a tieup with the Providence Amateur Baseball League, whereby one of their former players, Andy Coakley, coach at Columbia and the discoverer of Gehrig, would be presented on stage with a cup by the League in memory of the great player. At the same time, the League also presented trophies to their outstanding baseball players.

The stunt landed a three-column cut of Coakley and the head of the Amateur League in the Sunday Journal, plus half a column story on the presentation made from the stage of the theatre. Events of the presentation were aired on Station WEAN as a 15-minute program from the Albee stage. The cups and trophies presented were displayed in a downtown store window with appropriate credits. During the presentation ceremonies, a localite was introduced from the audience, who has the bat that Babe Ruth used when he hit his 59th consecutive home run. This too was good for a break in the papers.

Builds Up Teresa Wright

Another original plant was a story and stills in the Sunday Journal illustrating Teresa Wright as she looked when she appeared in "Our Town" on the stage of the Albee some three years ago and as she appears now in 'Pride of the Yankees." The stunt was good for two large cuts and a half a column of copy. Cashing in on the reviews given Teresa Wright in "Mrs. Miniver," in the theatre's original ads, her billing was enlarged and she was given the title of "Sweetheart of Mrs. Miniver."

Sports commentators on local stations were furnished with different stories daily, a full page of photos was landed in the roto section of the Sunday Journal and an intensive newspaper ad campaign with reserved seat mail order blank was used in some 15 suburban papers. There was also a scene mat and story used with each insertion.

Fitzpatrick Lands Co-ops On the Andrews Sisters

For the personal appearance of the Andrews Sisters at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., Ed Fitzpatrick promoted a full-page of cooperative ads from a local record shop, each of which carried a cut of the girls. The lower half of the page was devoted to copy to the effect that the girls would appear at the store to autograph record purchases.

Ball Club Cooperates on "It Happened in Flatbush"

For "It Happened in Flatbush" at the Riviera, in Rochester, Jack Hamilton and Bud Silverman got in touch with the local International League Baseball Club, the Rochester Red Wings and they promised a personal appearance on the Saturday showing of the film. The men will also be used in connection with the War Bond Sales.

The Chamber of Commerce of Hamilton, Ont., took this full page ad to not only express its opinion of "Mrs. Miniver" but to sell War Savings Certificates. C. T. Spencer, manager of the Capitol Theatre, reports this as the outstanding business-getter of the many exploitation ideas he used. Eames & Co., one of the firms mentioned in the ad, dedicated one of their half hour radio shows to the picture, doing away with all commercials, Spencer reported. He also had 50 window displays.

Druker Ties "This Above All" To Local Bond Drive Contest

To launch his date on "This Above All" at Loew's State, in Memphis, Maurice Drucker tied in with the local competition sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the local daily to choose "The Girl We Fight For." Drucker purchased one hundred dollars worth of bonds in the name of Joan Fontaine and Tyrone Power to count as votes for the first two entries in the contest.

The paper came through with art work and reprinted the wire received from the stars which read: "Have just been informed through our Memphis representative that the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Press-Scimitar are undertaking a splendid new bond sale promotion. We want to help. Buy the first bonds in our names and give the votes to the first two nominees."

Fendley Issues Checks On "The Bank of Entertainment"

Dubbed a "happiness check" was the unique herald in check form distributed by J. N. Fendley ahead of his latest Abbott & Costello picture at the Martin Theatre, in Roanoke, Ala. The check, drawn on the "Bank of Entertainment, Hollywood, Cal.," was made payable to everyone in Roanoke in the amount of one million laughs and was signed by Abbott and Costello. These teaser checks are reported to have attracted the anticipated attention.

Round Table Guests

The Round Table had the pleasure last week of entertaining a number of its members. Some of those on the distaff side were among the visitors. At the right are Alice Gorham, in charge of publicity for United Detroit Theatres, and Helen Garrity, who occupies the same post for Intermountain Theatres in Salt Lake City. Directly below is Bud Kornblite, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Waverly, N. Y., a regular Round Table contributor. Below, center, is James R. Nairn, director of advertising and publicity for Famous Players Canadian, with headquarters in Toronto. At the far right, below, is Jane Meisel, assistant to Knox Strachan, who directs advertising and publicity for Warner Bros. in Cleveland.

THE RELEASE CHART SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

The Major and the Minor

(Paramount)

Top Notch Comedy

Billy Wilder has collaborated with Charles Brackett on a screenplay of engaging novelty and directed herein a comedy which should delight audiences of this or any other season. "The Major and the Minor" gives the varied talents of Ginger Rogers wide play, surrounding her with an excellent cast of supporting players, and the result is diverting entertainment.

The "Major" of the title is an officer returning to his post at a military academy after a futile try for active service. The "Minor" is Ginger Rogers. Finding herself a few dollars short of fare to Iowa from New York, where the wolves have been constantly at the door, she adopts the expedient of being "12, next week" for a half-fare ticket. Accident and a pursuing conductor bring her to the compartment of Ray Milland, the Major, where his fiancee finds her in the morning. "Little Susu" is obliged to present herself at the academy to demonstrate the obvious innocence of the situation. There she stays to spend the weekend with the worldly-wise cadets of 15 or so, to fall in love with the Major and to discover the unpleasant character of his fiancee.

The disguise, which is penetrated only by the conductor and a 12-year-old scientist, must be maintained to avoid a scandal, and Susan proceeds to Iowa, where her attempt to present herself as her own mother does not fool the pursuing Major.

Arthur Hornblow, producer, has not relied solely on the impersonation for humor. There is Robert Benchley, too, as the last straw in New York, and a great troop of cadets, including Frankie Thomas, Jr., Charlie Smith, Raymond Roe and Larry Nunn, whose education of Susu affords some of the picture's bright spots. Ray Milland is an ingratiating Major and Rita Johnson is admirable as his fiancee. The young biologist, Diana Lynn, gives another effective performance.

This is not unsophisticated comedy, but the situations which it develops should have wide appeal, and the careful presentation keeps well within the bounds of good taste.

Here We Go Again

(RKO Radio)

Radio Talent Parade

Designed to attract and entertain radio listeners, this amassing of microphone personalities presents them in material which is practically an extension of their several and varied air wave programs.

It opens with Fibber McGee and Molly at home in Wistful Vista doing and saying the things they do on their network show. Later they join their intimates, Gildersleeve, Wimple and Mr. Uppington, elsewhere, in somewhat less typical adventures but in character.

Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, later also Ray Noble and band, pursue separate courses to the same destination and converge with the McGees upon a story which is no more strain upon the imagination than most radio comedy material. Ginny Sims is an additional entry, singing some and figuring in a romance with Bergen.

Exploitation possibilities declare and define themselves. Song numbers by Mort Greene and Harry Revel satisfy requirements. Produced and directed by Allan Dwan, the picture is purposefully and necessarily episodic, many of the sequences being virtual skits and many of them clicking for laughs. Paul Gerard Smith, who wrote the story and collaborated with Joe Bigelow on the script, displayed judgment in restricting the material to the kinds of stuff the radio stars are in the habit of handling.

Previewed at the Hill Street theatre in Los Angeles, where a metropolitan audience laughed heartily in spots, indicated approval generally. Reviewer's Rating: Good. — WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Release date, not set. Running time, 76 min. PCA No. 8507. General audience classification.

The Glass Key

(Paramount)

Politics and Gangsters

A good cast has done its best with this material which starts out as a gangster picture, turns into a murder mystery and again becomes a gangster film before its conclusion. The leading players, whose recent performances should enhance their standing at the box office, seem to be in some doubt at times just what their attitude should be.

The story is principally concerned with Brian Donlevy, an uncouth politician; his sister, Bonita Granville; the daughter of his political ally, Veronica Lake, and her brother, Richard Denning. Donlevy falls in love with Miss Lake while Bonita long has been enamored of Denning. But the latter becomes involved with gamblers and after Donlevy remonstrates with him, the former is suspected when Denning is found dead. From that point the picture involves the desperate attempts of Alan Ladd, friend of Donlevy, to extricate him from what appears to be "a bum rap" although Donlevy admits to the crime with a lack of sincerity indicating that he is shielding someone. There are sundry goings-on involving opposing factions in political rows, a corrupt newspaper proprietor who commits suicide and the apparent subjugation of the district attorney to the whim of the gangsters. All ends well quite remarkably and romance blossoms between Ladd and Miss Lake.

The picture's direction by Stuart Heisler might have been smoother. Some of the scenes have an insincere ring. Fred Kohlmar, associate producer, has assembled a cast whose recent work has been outstanding—Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake in "This Gun for Hire," and Brian Donlevy and William Bendix in "Wake Island." Jonathan Latimer wrote the screenplay from a novel by Dashiell Hammett, best known for the "Thin Man" stories.

Previewed at the Paramount home office projection room before an audience of professional reviewers. The comedy scenes were well received but the rest was taken without noticeable reaction. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—BOB WILE

The Old Homestead

(Republic)

Comedy with Music

This should be just down the alley of the fans of homespun humor. Featuring the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, and a capable supporting cast of Dick Purcell, Jed Prouty, Anne Jeffreys, Maris Wrixon, Robert Conway and Linda Brent, "The Old Homestead" presents "Elviry" as the mayor of a small town and her husband as the chief of police. A crime wave starts and the mayor makes a deal with a city gangster to clean out the local criminals, thinking that when that is accomplished she can rid the town of a new crop of crooks. However, she becomes implicated in the mess herself, but her husband manages to straighten out matters.

Three songs are used in the film; "Dig, Dig, Dig for Victory," "In the Town Where I Was Born," "The Ferris Wheel."

Frank MacDonald directed from an original screenplay by Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, and did a creditable job. Armand Schaefer was the associate producer.

Wildcat

(Paramount)

Oil Melodrama

This is a mild melodrama that never quite reaches the goal obviously set for it. That goal was suspense, the kind to keep the audience on its toes as the "wildcatters" have one misfortune after another in bringing in their oil well.

The cast is adequate. It includes Richard Arlen, Arline Judge, William Frawley, Buster Crabbe, Arthur Hunnicutt and Elisha Cook, Jr. William H. Pine and William C. Thomas were the producers and Frank McDonald directed.

Arlen plays a penniless oil man who puts on a big front with an expensive car and big talk. With a hitch-hiker, Elisha Cook, Jr., that he picked up, Arlen sets out to drill for oil, obtaining the necessary money and equipment through his impressive talk. The trouble commences at once. Cook dies in an accident at the derrick, which brings Arline Judge to the oil camp posing as the dead man's sister in order to claim his 50 per cent in the well.

The trouble continues and just when it seems likely that Arlen will have to abandon the well, the oil comes in. To climax matters a raging oil fire serves to bring Arlen and Miss Judge together at the end.

Enemy Agents Meet Ellery Queen

(Columbia)

Spies Tracked

Ellery Queen, who as a fictional detective enjoys a considerable following in book form, here in the person of William Gargan becomes involved in what appears to be a case of smuggling, and which develops into the tracking and trapping of a gang of Nazi spies.

The picture opens with action and a good measure of suspense, develops murder mystery elements and a portion of excitement, but degenerates into a sailor and Marine fracas with the spies, which wrecks the interior of a club which is the spy front, and tends to weaken the conclusion of the film.

In support of Gargan are Margaret Lindsay as Queen's secretary and fiancee; Charley Grapewin as Queen's father, New York police inspector, and Gilbert Roland and Sig Ruman among others.

Eric Taylor prepared the screenplay from a story by Ellery Queen, and James Hogan directed. Ralph Cohn was producer and Rudolph Flothow associate.

An audience at the Central theatre on Broadway, New York, on a weekday afternoon gave the film reasonably close attention and appeared moderately entertained by proceedings. Review's Rating: Fair.—CHARLES S. AARONSON.

Release date, July 30, 1942. Running time, 64 min. PCA No. 8555. General audience classification.

King of the Stallions

(Monogram)

Wild Horse Spectacle

All the appeal four-footed and winged creatures have on the screen is put into Edward Finney's "King of the Stallions," a story of wild horses and animals shot almost entirely in Crater Canyon, California, and Monument Valley, Arizona. Impressive scenery, backed by the appearance of what seems to be thousands of wild horses, makes the picture unusual.

However, in its acting, writing and direction, the picture falls short. The dialogue at times is pointless and the acting is found wanting. The human cast consists of Chief Thundercloud, Ric Vallin, Princess Bluebird, Dave O'Brien, Chief Yowlachie, Ted Adams, Sally Cairns, Gordon Demain, Forrest Taylor and Joe Cody. The animal cast is headed by Nakoma and Paint, two trained horses.

The plot has rustlers stealing horses from ranchers and Indians alike by using a trained stallion to run off the mares. The whites and Indians blame each other, but the trouble is solved when an Indian youth captures a wild stallion, trains it and uses it to kill the rustlers' stallion.

Finney directed as well as produced. Arthur St. Claire and Sherman Lowe adapted the original by Roger Merton.

Previewed at the Monogram projection room in Hollywood. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—V. K.

Release date, September 11, 1942. Running time, 63 min. PCA No. 8253. General audience classification.

Hawhai ..... Chief Thundercloud

The Goose Steps Out

(Ealing-United Artists)

Espionage Extravaganza

Herein comedian Will Hay—one of Britain's Ten Best—makes his bow as a joint director of his own comedies. He remains a comedian. Nothing in the piece offers evidence of directorial deftness or novelty, or indeed of anything beyond that there seems to be a shortage of directors.

Hay is a popular personality on screen, stage, and occasionally on radio, and this, despite its war-like flavour and subject matter, offers the laughter-hungry audience a full measure and brimming over of the star's particular line in humour. It is exclusively native comedy, and at that, of the elementary brand, which appeals to the indulgent rather than the discriminating. Hay is one of the few British names which sell motion pictures here, and this will be sold by the exhibitor on the star. It hardly measures up to the standards of the American market, nor does its style of humour seem other than local.

Hay—known here as the schoolmaster comedian—is a schoolmaster who is sent to Germany to conduct espionage on a secret bomb laboratory. The fun revolves around his adventures with the Gestapo and Nazi big shots. He educates the German boys in British customs, steals a bomb from the lab and finds it empty, and finally escapes with some anti-Nazi boys via an official, pilot-less Luftwaffe plane. The last sequence is the lengthiest in the film, and is handled on traditional lines of slapstick.

Through all this Hay gabbles and gesticulates in his familiar schoolmaster character. He is not off the screen for more than a few of the 7,000 feet, registers passages of his established tongue-twisting dialogue, and builds one eyebrow lifting sequence around instructing the Nazis in what is popularly considered an obscene gesture.

None of the supporting cast is a top liner but Raymond Lovell and Frank Pettingell are stout enough troupers to make something of their Nazi roles. The camerawork is the most notable technical quality.

Slipped into a West End theatre in London for trade show purpose, the film undoubtedly raised laughs in the less expensive seats, laughs in touching contrast to the stony silence of the ritzier regions.—Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—AUBREY FLANAGAN

SHOCK TROOPS FOR DEFENSE (Brandon Films)

America Calling

A national defense subject, this is one of the "America Calling" series, produced by Thomas J. Brandon and released by Brandon Films, Inc., New York. It is concerned with the Auxiliary Fire Fighters and is primarily a recruiting film, to stimulate participation in the civilian defense program. Gregory Abbott is the narrator. The subject was made in cooperation with the Film Bureau, Civilian Defense Office of Greater New York.—P. C. M., Jr.

SCRAP FOR VICTORY (Brandon Films)

America Calling

Another in the "America Calling" series produced by Thomas J. Brandon, this defense subject seeks to stimulate general salvage activities in the home. For this purpose a family of four is presented. Father, mother, daughter and son all have odds and ends of things made of rubber, tin, cloth, etc. When the call reaches them they each go about the house collecting scrap. The subject then goes on to show how the scrap is reclaimed and to what uses it is being put. The film was made in cooperation with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office of Greater New York. Gregory Abbott is the narrator.—P. C. M., Jr.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES

CLEAR FOR ACTION (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Refugee Drama

PRODUCER: Victor Saville. Directed by Richard Thorpe.

PLAYERS: Robert Taylor, Charles Laughton, Brian Donlevy, Walter Brennan.

SYNOPSIS

It was in behalf of this enterprise that Richard Rosson had gone to Europe on that expedition which found him, although it was denied at the time, aboard the ship that brought British Prime Minister Winston Churchill to his Atlantic rendezvous with American President Roosevelt, although this has nothing to do with the picture. The picture is an accounting of the bringing of children from Europe to the United States, by way of removing them from war danger zones, and the background footage acquired on that expedition is expected to give the production a high degree of authenticity.

THE FALCON'S BROTHER (RKO Radio)

Crime Story

PRODUCER: Maurice Geraghty. Directed by Stanley Logan.

PLAYERS: George Sanders, Tom Conway, Jane Randolph, Charlotte Wynters, Gwili Andre.

SYNOPSIS

George Sanders bows out of the Falcon series with this one, introducing his real life brother Tom Conway, as his reel life brother. Conway will work in the remainder of the series. It is the first of the Falcons for the new season, and the detective continues his fight against crime. A plot of Nazi agents to assassinate a Latin American goodwill envoy is foiled.

COUNTER ESPIONAGE (Columbia)

Lone Wolf Mystery

PRODUCER: Wallace MacDonald. Directed by Edward Dmytryk.

PLAYERS: Warren William, Eric Blore, Hillary Brooke, Thurston Hall, Fred Kelsey, Forrest Tucker, Matthew Boulton, Kurt Katch, Morton Lowry, Leslie Denison.

SYNOPSIS

The Lone Wolf, played again by Warren William, is operating in London in war time. He is still hunted by the American police and sought by German agents. The "air blitz" permits many unexpected encounters and escapes as Michael Lanyard locates the vital defense plans of the city in enemy hands.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SLEPT HERE (Warner Bros.)

Comedy

PRODUCER: Jerry Wald. Directed by William Keighley.

PLAYERS: Jack Benny, Ann Sheridan, Charles Coburn, William Tracy, Joyce Reynolds, John Emery, Franklin Pangborn, Hattie McDaniel, Percy Kilbride.

SYNOPSIS

George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart made some Broadway history with this comedy, and the quality of their humour, save for such shadings as are indicated by the stellar presence of Jack Benny, is retained in the film version. It's about a woman fond of antiques, but knowing little about them, who buys a house because George Washington is supposed to have slept there once, and discovers, to the astonishment of sundry other characters in the picture, that such is indeed the case.

WHITE CARGO (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Tropical Melodrama

PRODUCER: Victor Saville. Directed by Richard Thorpe.

PLAYERS: Hedy Lamarr, Walter Pidgeon, Frank Morgan, Barnwell Fletcher.

SYNOPSIS

Apart from some juggling of racial strains, for purposes of circumventing the Production Code rule against presenting miscegenation in pictures, this is being filmed in close conformity with the stage play from which it derives its title. It presents the problem of the white man in the tropics, victim of climate and alcohol, who resists the lure of the native girl who wants to become his wife in his, her, anybody's or nobody's variety of marriage.

STREET OF CHANCE (Paramount)

Mystery Drama

PRODUCER: Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Jack Hively.

PLAYERS: Burgess Meredith, Claire Trevor, Sheldon Leonard, Jerome Cowan, Adeline DeWalt Reynolds, Frieda Inescort, Louise Platt.

SYNOPSIS

This is another murder mystery with a psychopathic angle. Burgess Meredith is a victim of amnesia who is shocked to find himself wanted for murder. He can remember neither the act nor the circumstances, and even the name under which he is supposed to have been living is totally unfamiliar. Claire Trevor is co-starred in the film.

MANILA CALLING (Twentieth Century-Fox)

War Drama

PRODUCER: Sol M. Wurtzel. Directed by Herbert I. Leeds.

PLAYERS: Lloyd Nolan, Carole Landis, Cornel Wilde, James Gleason, Martin Kosleck, Ralph Byrd, Charles Tannen, Ted North, Elisha Cook, Jr.

SYNOPSIS

In a story of frail but determined resistance to the Japanese in the Philippine Islands, a group of American civilians, joined later by a dancehall girl, hold out in a broadcasting station, although without hope of rescue.

AMERICAN EMPIRE (Paramount)

Western Epic

PRODUCER: Harry Sherman. Directed by William McGann.

PLAYERS: Richard Dix, Leo Carillo, Preston Foster, Frances Gifford, Robert Barrat, Jack LaRue, Chris-Pin Martin, Guinn Williams.

SYNOPSIS

A drama based on the authentic history of Texas, before it was admitted to the Union, features Richard Dix as hero and includes Preston Foster and Frances Gifford as the romantic interest. The story is of outdoor action, political intrigue and combat, western-style.

THE DESPERADOES (Columbia)

Western

PRODUCER: Harry Joe Brown. Directed by Charles Vidor.

PLAYERS: Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes, Edgar Buchanan.

SYNOPSIS

This is Columbia's first Technicolor production. A story of the old West, it is being shot for the most part in the Zion National Forest, Utah. The capture and taming of wild horses, the outlawry of the pioneer days are woven with romance. In preparation for the filming, the studio has had 600 wild horses rounded up.

THE DARING YOUNG MAN (Columbia)

Comedy

PRODUCER: Robert Sparks. Directed by Frank R. Strayer.

PLAYERS: Joe E. Brown, Marguerite Chapman, Claire Dodd.

SYNOPSIS

Joe E. Brown, enacting the role of a champion bowler, gets entangled with Nazi spies and kegles them into the hands of the law, after various slapstick interludes.

MY HEART BELONGS TO DADDY (Paramount)

Romantic Comedy

PRODUCER: Sol. C. Siegel. Directed by Robert Siodmak.

PLAYERS: Richard Carlson, Martha O'Driscoll, Cecil Kellaway, Frances Gifford, Florence Bates, Mabel Paige, Velma Berg.

SYNOPSIS

The popular song of a few years back lends its title to the story of a college professor, played by Richard Carlson, forced to entertain a pretty widow (Martha O'Driscoll) and her small child who manages to upset the household and provoke embarrassing speculation outside.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES and information

ARABIAN NIGHTS (Universal)

Romantic Melodrama, in Color

PRODUCER: Walter Wanger. Directed by John Rawlins.

PLAYERS: Maria Montez, Jon Hall, Sabu, Leif Erikson, Edgar Barrier, Thomas Gomez, Turhan Bey, Billy Gilbert, John Qualen.

SYNOPSIS

This is a narrative, told in Technicolor, of two brothers, played by Hall and Erikson, who fight each other for the hand of Scheherazade (Maria Montez) and the throne of Bagdad. The studio describes it as a "romantic melodrama" and says it will not be depicted as a fantasy. There is a prologue and an epilogue, with the narrator of the tale, the Chief Eunuch, telling six harem inmates the story of long ago.

THE OX-BOW INCIDENT (20th Century-Fox)

Early Nevada

PRODUCER: Lamar Trotti, who also wrote the screenplay. Directed by William A. Wellman.

PLAYERS: Henry Fonda, Mary Beth Hughes, Dana Andrews, Marc Lawrence, Henry Davenport.

SYNOPSIS

Taken from Walter Van Tilburg Clark's novel of the same title published in 1940 which received considerable attention, the story deals with life in Nevada in 1885 but treats of the outdoor action material in an unusual manner. It is a portrayal of the lives of members of a lynch mob which hanged three innocent men because circumstantial evidence held them to be rustlers and murderers.

THE ROAD TO MOROCCO (Paramount)

Musical

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Paul Jones. Directed by David Butler.

PLAYERS: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Anthony Quinn, Dona Drake, Vladimir Sokoloff, Mikhail Rasumny.

SYNOPSIS

The gay and tuneful road traveled by Crosby, Hope and Lamour leads this time to North Africa where scriptwriters Frank Butler and Don Hartman and composers Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen contrive and embellish another fanciful adventure.

THE FOREST RANGERS (Paramount)

Western in Color

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Robert Sisk. Directed by George Marshall.

PLAYERS: Fred MacMurray, Paulette Goddard, Susan Hayward, Albert Dekker, Eugene Pallette, Lynne Overman, Regis Toomey, James Brown, Clem Bevans, Rod Cameron.

SYNOPSIS

Filmed with the cooperation of the United States Forest Service, the picture offers the spectacular background of the giant redwoods for the story of a Ranger and two girls, with incidental forest fires and outdoor action. The story is by Thelma Strabel.

THEY GOT ME COVERED (Goldwyn-RKO)

Comedy

PRODUCER: Samuel Goldwyn. Directed by David Butler.

PLAYERS: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Phyllis Ruth, Donald MacBride, Byron Foulger, Marion Martin.

SYNOPSIS

Hope plays the role of a foreign correspondent who is "scooped" on the story of Germany's invasion of Russia. Returning to Washington where most of the story's action takes place, he becomes involved in an espionage tangle, two romances and numerous other complications. Miss Lamour enacts the role of head of the Washington office of the syndicate for which the correspondent works. David Butler who directed the Hope-Lamour duo in Paramount's "Caught in the Draft" is guiding this.

REUNION (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

War Melodrama

PRODUCER: Joseph Mankiewicz. Directed by Jules Dassin.

PLAYERS: Joan Crawford, John Wayne, Philip Dorn, Ann Ayars, Reginald Owen, Albert Basserman, John Carradine.

SYNOPSIS

This is a pre-Pearl Harbor story of two Americans, the woman an art student and the man a newspaperman, caught in Nazi-occupied Paris. The pair, enacted by Joan Crawford and John Wayne, aid refugees sought by the Gestapo to flee the country. The adventures are fraught with danger in view of their suspicions that one of their close acquaintances is a Nazi agent.

SEVEN DAYS LEAVE (RKO Radio)

Musical

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: Tim Whelan.

PLAYERS: Victor Mature, Lucille Ball, Freddie Martin and Band, Les Brown and Band, Peter Lind Hayes, Marcy McGuire, Mapy Cortes, Harold Peary.

SYNOPSIS

Radio's "Court of Missing Heirs" gives this musical its impetus and setting. A young man in the Army hears on that program that he's the missing heir to millions. His buddies make up a fund to defray his expenses to New York and his superiors give him leave to go. He is taken on a round of night clubs (which brings up the participation of Freddy Martin and Les Brown and their respective bands in the picture) and radio broadcasts, discovers that there are sentimental obstacles to his acquisition of the millions and meets, of course, the girl with whom he works out his problems.

THE DESERT SONG (Warner Bros.)

War and Music in Technicolor

PRODUCER: Robert Buckner. Directed by Robert Florey.

PLAYERS: Dennis Morgan, Irene Manning, Gene Lockhart, Faye Emerson, Jack LaRue.

SYNOPSIS

Famed for years for its music score, as performed on both stage and screen, this romantic adventure story of the singing masked hero of the desert has been brought up to date to the extent of giving effect to the present global war, instead of the original uprising of the Riffs, as its martial factor.

CHINA GIRL (20th Century-Fox)

War Melodrama

PRODUCER: Ben Hecht. Directed by Henry Hathaway.

PLAYERS: George Montgomery, Gene Tierney, Osa Massen, Myron McCormick, Victor McLaglen.

SYNOPSIS

Written as well as produced by Ben Hecht, this story concerns an American-born Chinese girl who returns to China to take part in the conflict with the Japanese. A romance develops between the Chinese girl and an American aviator who joins the Flying Tigers and is killed.

BELLS OF CAPISTRANO (Republic)

Western Special

PRODUCER: Harry Gray. Directed by William Morgan.

PLAYERS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Virginia Gray, Joe Strauch, Jr.

SYNOPSIS

This, Mr. and Mrs. Exhibitor, will probably be the last of the Autry specials from Republic for the duration, for following this, he goes into the Army Air Corps as a sergeant. Given a high budget treatment, the picture concerns rivalry between two rodeos touring the country, one of them headed by Autry who joins it because he is down on his luck and the other using cut throat methods to eliminate competition and take it over.

YOUTH ON PARADE (Republic)

Musical

PRODUCER: Albert Cohen. Directed by Al Rogell.

PLAYERS: John Hubbard, Martha O'Driscoll, Ruth Terry, Tom Brown, Charlie Smith, Richard Langley.

SYNOPSIS

A university starts a new system of education, identifying students' examination papers only by numbers. The pupils gang together and create a mythical student, by pooling their scholastic efforts and taking a spurious number. When the college announces that the person with the number is a "genius," the collegians engage a New York actress to pretend she is the student and complications go on from there.

MR. BLABBERMOUTH (MGM)
Two-Reel Special (A-305)

This is the first of five short subjects which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is making at the request of the Government. It is a two-reeler depicting the effect of rumors on the fighting morale of the people. It shows how idle chatter by a loyal but misguided citizen can do more harm to a nation at war than the work of a deliberate saboteur. It supplies facts and figures to be used as a yardstick for measuring the values of stories about our country's weaknesses and the enemies' strength.

Release date, August 8, 1942 19 minutes
